THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF ROSSLYN,
M.W. Past Grand Master of Scotland, and

THE GRAND MASTERS OF MANY FOREIGN LODGES.

LONDON: BRO. GEORGE KENNING, 198, FLEET-STREET.

PREFACE TO THE ELEVENTH VOLUME.

With the close of 1878, and the commencement of a new Volume of the Freemason, the Publisher begs to thank his numerous friends and patrons for their kind and consistent support. He cannot but feel much justifiable pride in the remembrance both of the early origin and subsequent progress of the Freemason, and he begs to assure an ever-increasing circle of readers, that in the future, as in the past, the Freemason will honestly and honourably seek to commend itself more and more to the consideration and confidence of the Craft. With these few words he offers to them the 11th volume of the Freemason, with a grateful memory, and with fraternal good will.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, 21st ult., at White Swan Hotel, High-street, Deptford. There were present Bro. J. J. Pakes, W.M.; G. T. Limn, S.W.; R. Harman, J.W.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., Sec.; G. Harvey, S.D.; J. G. Vohmann, J.D.; W. A. R. Harris, I.G.; G. Andrews, P.M., D.C.; and several others. The W.M., Bro. J. J. Pakes, in his able manner initiated Messrs. George Hill and J. Stanley into Freemasonry, passed Bro. Weston to the Second Degree, all the work being well done. On motion duly made, seconded, and unanimously resolved, "That a letter of condolence be sent to Mr. William Myatt, the father of Bro. W. Myatt, P.M., who had died since the last meeting of the lodge." The lodge was closed, and adjourned to Thursday, the 24th January,—to meet at five o'clock. There was no banquet. The father of the lodge, Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., Sec., wished the members a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, which was re-echoed by all present.

CHAUCER LODGE (No. 1540).—The regular meeting of this well-established lodge was held on Wednesday, 26th ult., at the Bridge House Hotel, High-street, Borough, Southwark. Bro. E. S. Stidolph, W.M., presided. Punctually at 4 o'clock p.m. he opened the lodge. He was supported by Bros. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M. and Secretary; T. J. Hooper Wilkins, P.M.; H. Faiza, S.D., and others. The work, done in an admirable manner, was the initiation of Mr. C. J. L. Sandilands and passing Bro. Hall to the Second Degree. Some business was deferred until the next regular meeting. There was only one visitor present. The W.M., Bro. E. S. Stidolph, in his usual genial manner presided at the festive board. The brethren after a few hours of enjoyment separated, wishing each other a happy New Year and many of them.

FALMOUTH.—Love and Honour Lodge (No. 75).—The brethren of the premier lodge of the Province of Cornwall, celebrated the festival of St. John on Thursday, the 27th ult. The members of the Craft assembled at the Masonic Rooms, Royal Hotel, at three o'clock in the afternoon, when the W.M. Elect, Bro. Harry Tilly, was duly installed as W. Master. The ceremony was ably performed by W. Bro. W. F. Newman, P.M., P.P.S.G.D. After the installation, the W.M. appointed and installed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year: W. Bro. A. B. Harris, I.P.M.; Bros. W. L. Fox, S.W.; Joseph Wallace, J.W.; W. Bro. W. F. Newman, P.M., P.P.S.G.D., Treasurer; Bros. R. N. Rogers, Secretary; W. D. Rogers, S.D.; Edward May, J.D.; E. C. Carne, jun., D.C.; F. D. Broad, Org.; W. Bro. W. H. Dunstan, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; I.G.; Bro. Samuel Collins, S.S.; W. Bro. T. Webber, P.M., P.G.J.D., J.S.; W. Rusden, P.P.T.; Tyler; W. Bro. T. C. Polglase, P.M., P.M.R., D.C., Steward, C. M. A. and B. Fund. The brethren afterwards dined together, and a most pleasant evening was spent.

MIDDLETON.—Imperial George Lodge (No. 78).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place on Thursday, December 27th, at the Assheton Arms Hotel. The lodge was opened at 2.45 by the retiring W.M. (Bro. G. Bradbury), supported by the following officers:—Bros. W. Percival, S.W., W.M. elect; F. Fothergill, J.W.; H. Heywood, P.M., Treas.; J. Hatton, Sec.; J. Kent, Tyler. There was a large attendance of members of the lodge and visitors. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read by the Secretary and received confirmation. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the W.M. elect (Bro. W. Percival) was then presented by Bro. Heywood for the benefit of installation. After the usual charges had been read by the Secretary, the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, when all the brethren below the rank of Installed Master withdrew. A board of Installed Masters was then opened, and Bro. J. Wood, Prov. G.A.D.C., assisted by Bros. G. Bradbury and H. Heywood, placed Bro. W. Percival in the chair of K.S. On the re-admission of the brethren, the working tools in the several degrees were presented, and the newly-installed W.M. was saluted in ancient form. The W.M. appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year, and they were duly invested by Bros. J. Wood and H. Heywood:—F. Fothergill, S.W.; John Hatton, J.W.; G. Bradbury I.P.M.; H. Heywood, P.M., Treasurer; S. Hewitt, Sec.; J. Millhouse, S.D.; P. Lawton, J.D.; T. H. Yoxall, I.G.; J. Wood, P.M., D.C., P.G.A.D.C. "Hearty good wishes" were accorded by Prov. Grand Lodge of Cheshire, and from Lodges 44, 325, 1357, 1218, 163, 1077, 1086, 1387, 1034, 219, 1219. The lodge was then called from labour to refreshment, when the brethren adjourned to the banquet table and under the presidency of the W.M. partook of a sumptuous dinner, which was served by Mrs. Harrison in her usual excellent style. The first toast on the list, which was that of "The Queen," was proposed by the W.M., Bro. Percival, who said that he need say little in commending that toast to the brethren. Masons were of all men the most loyal, and he called upon the brethren to respond heartily to the toast. The toast was enthusiastically received. "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales" was then proposed by the W.M., and "The Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," by Bro. Bradbury, I.P.M., and both received hearty and cordial recognition. Bro. H. Heywood in proposing "The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro G.M.," paid a well deserved tribute of praise to his lordship for the assiduity and zeal with which he attended to his Masonic duties. Bro. Wood proposed "Lord Skelmersdale and the rest of the Grand Officers." His lordship was extremely popular in Lancashire, for he fulfilled his duties with energy and zeal. The next toast, "Lieut. Le Gendre[N. Starkie]," was proposed by Bro. Heywood, who spoke in high terms of his genial manners, his urbanity and the wonderful influence he exercised on all matters relating to the Craft. He was a thorough worker, he had the interests of Masonry at heart, and he was well respected by the Masons of E. Lancashire. Bro. Dyson proposed "G. Mellor, Esq., and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers," and said he was sure the brethren would drink the toast with great heartiness. All were aware of the admirable manner in which he performed his duties in spite of his infirm state of health. He was well known to the brethren and highly respected by them. Bro. Bradbury, in proposing the toast of "The W.M.," said it afforded him very great pleasure to do so. He could assure the W.M. of the hearty support which he would receive from the brethren. The exalted position he occupied was not a bed of roses. It was a pleasant thing to be the W.M. of a lodge such as theirs, but it had its labours and anxieties. He especially urged upon the newly invested officers to qualify themselves thoroughly for the parts they filled. They would then be able to render to their W.M. that hearty support which he was entitled to receive at their hands, and would materially lessen his labour and anxiety. The toast was received with great enthusiasm. Bro. Percival, W.M., in responding expressed his deep sense of the honour they had done him in drinking his health in such a cordial and unanimous manner. He also thanked them for the honour they had done him in placing him in that chair. No. 78 had now been in existence a century and a quarter and he felt it to be a great distinction to have been elected by the brethren to preside over the deliberations of the lodge. It would be his endeavour to perform the duties of his office during the ensuing year in such a manner as to equal his predecessors, and in conclusion he wished the brethren might each and all enjoy "a happy new year." The W.M. then proposed the toast of "The I.P.M., Bro. Bradbury, and said he could assure him that he had left many pleasing memories behind him. He had now the respect and esteem of the brethren, and he was empowered on their behalf to ask his acceptance of a Past Master's jewel. He might observe that every brother had subscribed towards the purchase of that jewel, and it would remind him of the good will and kindly feeling which was felt towards him by every member of the Imperial George Lodge. He trusted he might long continue to wear it in the lodge, and that it would be handed down to his posterity. Bro. Bradbury in responding said, for the very kind and flattering manner in which his health had been proposed and received by the brethren he sincerely thanked them. He felt that he scarcely deserved all the kind expressions which the W.M. had said about him. The W.M. had spoken of his valuable services; he could only say he had done the best in his power, but without the cordial support of his officers his year of office would have been a failure. With respect to the handsome jewel which the W.M. had just presented him with, he thanked them sincerely for the good feeling towards him which it exhibited. It would be prized by his posterity when he was no more, but he trusted the Great Architect of the Universe would spare his life so that he might spend many more happy evenings with them in the lodge. Bro. Wood proposed "The Masonic Charities," and testified to the good which had been done by them in the past. He drew attention to the East Lancashire charities, the funds of which were increasing. The remaining toasts were "The Visiting Brethren," responded to by Bro. Schofield, "The Newly-invested Officers," responded to by Bro. Fothergill, and the Tyler's toast, which concluded the business of the evening. During the evening Bros. Greenwood, Lister, and W. H. Dumville enlivened the proceedings with appropriate songs and glees, which were much enjoyed. The visitors' list included the names of Bros. Simpson, P.P.G.D., Cheshire; J. Southworth, 1034; R. Davies, 1387; J. H. Greenwood, 163; W. T. Schofield, 219 and 1219; T. Nowell, 163; R. Abraham, 1086; H. Clausen, 1077; W. Yates, 678; J. M. Percival, 1219; G. H. Needle, 1458.

BRIDGWATER.—Perpetual Friendship Lodge (No. 135).—On Thursday afternoon, the 27th ult., the annual meeting of the brethren of the above lodge was held at the Royal Clarence Hotel. Bro. John C. Small, late J.W., was duly installed W.M. for the ensuing year, the ceremony being performed by Bro. R. C. Else, the D.P.G.M. The customary banquet afterwards took place, and was largely attended.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—On the afternoon of the 26th ult., the celebration of the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, and the installation of the Worshipful Master of the above lodge, took place in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, St. Leonardgate, in the presence of a large number of the Craft. Bro. Jeremiah Jowett was duly installed as Master by Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B. of E., Installing Officer, who went through the ceremony in a very effective and impressive manner. The following brethren were appointed and invested as officers of the lodge for the ensuing year, viz: Bro. R. Taylor, I.P.M.; E. Cardwell, S.W.; W. Warbrick, J.W.; James Hatch, Treas.; John Hatch, Sec.; J. J. Crookell, S.D.; John Atkinson, J.D.; J. R. B. Pilkington, I.G.; Gregson and Johnson, Stewards; and A. K. Allinson, Tyler. The brethren afterwards adjourned to the King's Arms Hotel, where the banquet was provided, and the style in which the viands were placed on the table reflects the greatest credit on the management of that old and well-known establishment. Bro. Jowett presided, being supported right and left by Past Masters W. Hall, T. Atkinson, Fenton, R. Taylor, James Hatch, John Hatch, Kelland, King, Simpson, C. Hartley, Heald, Acton, T. Jackson, J. Taylor, and others. On the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal, patriotic, and Masonic toasts were proposed and ably responded to. The harmony of the evening was much enjoyed, and very ably contributed to by Bros. Bond, Aldous, Joseph Barrow, Bayley, and Sumner, the former of whom sung, for the first time, an original song of his own composition, entitled "Old England is mine for ever." The menu card used at the banquet was Lake's Miniature Mason Apron Menu Card, which was greatly admired by the brethren, not only as a novelty, and for the neatness and finish of style, but also for its appropriateness at a banquet of this description.

WIGTON.—Two St. John's Lodge (No. 327).—The installation festival of this old lodge was held on Thursday, the 27th ult. There is always a pleasure in visiting the Wigton Lodge, from its many happy associations. Founded in 1809, its original number was 619, which is engraved on a curious ram's horn snuff mull; and the next numerical designation was 406, which is borne on the banner of the lodge, now positively in rags and tatters, as we saw it waving in the breeze from the windows of the Lion and Lamb Hotel. The late Right Hon. Sir James Graham, M.P., was initiated here, and subsequently was Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland, whilst the great statesman signalled his admission to light in the lodge under notice by presenting it with a set of firing glasses, which are used to this day. Admiral Graham, Sir James Graham's brother, was likewise initiated in the Wigton Lodge, as also was the late Bro. Stephen Blair, Prov. Grand Master of East Lancashire. Then there is a curious circumstance connected with the name of St. John's Lodge, as the original title is "Three Saint John's," from the coincidence of the three leading charter members rejoicing in the Christian name of John. But to proceed with the business of Thursday, the 27th ult. The lodge was summoned for twelve o'clock, but it was quite one before the door was tyled. There were present the following members:—Bros. W. H. Hoodless, P.M., in the chair, through the unavoidable absence of Bro. Joseph Lazonby, W.M.; Police Supt., John Robinson, S.W., and W.M. elect; W. J. Carrick, J.W.; H. Bewes, P.M., Treas.; Jos. Johnston, Sec.; Dr. H. C. Pritchard, I.G.; Thos. Richardson, P.M. and P.Z., Tyler, P.P.G.A.D.C.; J. Lemon, P.M. and P.Z., P.G. Treas.; John Gate, P.M., P.P.G. Reg.; Jos. Pearson, P.M.; T. M'Mechan, P.M.; Jos. Bowman, P.M.; John Harris and J. M'Adams. The visiting brethren were Bros. W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119, P.G. Sec., and Installing Master of the day; G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, P.P.G.J.W.; Geo. Kirkwood, S.W. 962; D. Reece, I.G. 962; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. 1002, P.G. Organist; W. F. Lamonby (Freemason); Jas. Black, W.M. elect 1002; John Halloway, 1002. The lodge having been opened in form, Bro. Gibson subsequently took the presiding officer's position, and performed the ceremony with his accustomed impressiveness. Bro. Robinson, the new W.M., afterwards appointed his officers, and they were invested as follows:—Bros. J. Lazonby, I.P.M.; W. J. Carrick, S.W. and Sec.; Jos. Johnston, J.W.; H. Bewes, P.M., Treas.; John Harris, S.D.; Dr. Pritchard, J.D.; J. M'Adams, I.G.; T. Richardson, P.M., Tyler. The addresses to the officers were delivered by Bro. Kenworthy, and Bro. Lewthwaite presided at the organ. After the lodge had been closed, the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet. Bro. J. Robinson, W.M., presided, faced by Bro. W. J. Carrick, S.W. The cloth being drawn, the Chairman gave in succession the toasts of "The Queen," "The Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," "H.R.H. the M.W. Grand Master," "The M.W. the Pro Grand Master, the R.W. the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers." Bro. Lemon next proposed "The Health of the Earl of Bective, M.P., R.W. Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland, which was received with the usual warmth. He (Bro. Lemon) said he had the honour to give the health of a nobleman who ruled over the destinies of the Province of Cumberland and Westmorland with so much signal success. They could not be but struck at the rapid strides made by Masonry during the last few years in the two countries, more especially during the ten years Lord Bective had presided over them. Their Prov. Grand Master lived under a concatenation of circumstances by which he could not only boast of being the head of large and increasing numbers, but good men, also (Applause.) It was a good sign when they could find men of rank and opulence who were willing to enrol themselves amongst the Masons, not to benefit themselves, but to benefit others. He thought they were therefore deeply indebted to noblemen like Lord Bective for coming amongst them, and thus exemplifying the Grand principles, "Fear God, Honour the Queen, Love the Brotherhood." Bro. Hoodless next gave "The R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Colonel Whitwell, M.P., and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present" which he coupled with the names of Bros. Gibson, Kenworthy, Lemon, Lamonby, Lewthwaite, G. Gate, and Richardson, all of whom replied. Bro. Lazonby then proposed the Chairman's health in very complimentary terms, and Bro. Robinson in response proposed the I.P.M., who likewise returned thanks. The Chairman gave "The Installing Masters," Bro. Gibson and Kenworthy, who acknowledged the compliment. "The Visiting Brethren," from Bro. Lemon, elicited replies from Bros. Black, Kirkwood and Reece. Bro. Kenworthy proposed "The Newly nominated Officers," all of whom returned thanks. Bro. Gibson proposed "the Masonic Charities," and in doing so said that their institutions were a great means of proclaiming to the world a portion of the good Freemasons do. Nothing could come up to their schools, two which were perfection in an educational sense. Then again, a Wigton brother now was reaping the benefits of the Benevolent Institution in his old days; and some days since, he (Bro. Gibson) had a letter from Bro. Terry, intimating that the papers of the widow of a Whitehaven brother, were correct, and her petition would be placed before the committee at their next meeting. The husband of the old lady mentioned was made a Mason in Lodge 119, Whitehaven, twenty-five years ago, and he proved a very zealous Mason, was held in high esteem by the brethren of his lodge, and for a few years served as Tyler of 119. His widow now kept the rooms of the Masonic Hall, and it was hoped she would be successful in her candidature for the annuity of the Benevolent Institution. The Prov. Grand Lodge decided to support her at the forthcoming election, and he (Bro. Gibson) hoped every lodge would also support her. (Hear, hear.) They would require to secure her about 800 votes, and the total in the province was about 140, so that a most strenuous effort would be required. He strongly urged on every lodge in the province to follow the example of Sun and Sector Lodge, Workington, the members of which had adopted a system, which consisted in subscribing 2s. each per month, and so soon as enough money was raised a ballot was taken, and the winning number constituted a life-vote for whatever institution the member who drew it chose to elect. By this means they were steadily securing a number of votes, and such system, if carried out, would redound to the credit of any lodge. He added that Bective Lodge, 1532, Carlisle, was organising the system. He concluded by saying that Cumberland and Westmorland had had a good share of the benefits arising from the charities, more than he thought they were justly entitled to. Bro. Reece, of Lodge 962, explained that they had already about 17 votes from the system; alluded to, and he added that some members were giving votes to their wives and eldest sons. Bro. Carrick, on behalf of Lodge 327, intimated his willingness to set the scheme floating in his own lodge, and would commence with himself. The Tyler's toast, brought a very enjoyable afternoon to a close about seven o'clock. Bro. Lewthwaite presided at the pianoforte, and songs were contributed by Bros. Carrick, Kirkwood, Lamonby and Black.

BODMIN.—One and All Lodge (No. 330).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 27th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Bodmin, when the W.M. elect, W. Bro. W. Rowe, was installed by the retiring W.M., W. Bro. T. Hawken, P.G. Steward, in a very able manner, supported by the following Board of I.M.'s:—W. Bros. F. J. Hext, P.P.G.S.W.; Capt. Colvill, P.P.G.S.W., and Treasurer; J. Crang, P.G. Steward; J. Dennis, P.P.G. Steward; A. C. Sandoe, and F. Parkyn, 856, Lostwithiel. At the close of the installation the W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Hawken, I.P.M.; B. Adams, S.W.; J. G. Vincent, J.W.; W. Colvill, Treasurer; W. H. Angwin, Secretary; Jones, S.D.; Trevorton, J.D.; T. H. Spear, I.G.; B. G. Derry, D.C.; H. Jacobs, Org.; Gatty, S. Stwd.; J. F. Pagen, J. Stwd.; and Carroll, Tyler. W. Bro. Crang, P.M., was elected Steward of the C.M.A. and B. Fund. At 5 o'clock the brethren repaired to Bro. Sandoe's, where they partook of the usual banquet. The following brethren from neighbouring lodges were present:—Bros. W. F. Parkyn, W.M. 836; W. P. Smith, W.M. elect 856; Martyn, S.W. 1529; Cox, S.D. 1529; Pearce, 1529; and Wallace, of No. 1, Cork. After the banquet the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and heartily responded to, and a very pleasant evening was passed.

MARYPORT.—Lodge of Perseverance (No. 371).—On Friday 28th ult. the brethren of Lodge of Perseverance, 371, in connection with Whitwell Lodge, 151, Mark Masters, held at the same place, celebrated the Feast of Saint John by a soiree musicale and dansante, to which were invited their wives, daughters, sisters, and sweethearts. The festivities were held in the spacious and well appointed Masonic Hall, which, in addition to its conventional decorations, was handsomely embellished with evergreens, flags, &c. The attendance was very numerous, and the brilliancy of Masonic paraphernalia, was closely rivalled by the handsome costumes of the ladies. The entertainments opened at half-past six o'clock with a bountiful and well-served tea, which being cleared away, dancing commenced, whilst at intervals songs and duets were contributed by several of the brethren, and one or two ladies. Dancing however, is not to everyone's taste, and those unhappy individuals had ample opportunity to while away the evening in the seductive influence of the "Imperial game of Napoleon." In fact, the whole affair was quite a happy family party, worthy of the festive season, and the members of the two lodges at Maryport are to be congratulated and complimented on the success of so enjoyable an innovation, in which those "near and dear to them," can participate the proceedings wound up at about four a.m. with Sir Roger de Coverley. This is only the second occasion of the festival, and we trust that next season it will be imitated by other lodges in the province of Cumberland and Westmorland. To attempt an enumeration of those present would be both laborious and invidious, as amongst the couple of hundred or so ladies and gentlemen present, not a few might be overlooked, suffice it to mention, that Bro. J. Smith, Organist of both lodges, and P.P.G. Org., had charge of the musical arrangements whilst Bro. W. Armstrong, P.M. 371, P.P.G.D.C., was M.C.

HAYLE.—Cornubian Lodge (No. 450).—The annual festival of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated by the brethren of Cornubian Lodge 450, Hayle, on Thursday the 27th ult. The lodge was opened about noon by Bro. Gilbert B. Pearce, the W.M., who proceeded to install the W.M. elect for the ensuing year, Bro. William Husband. In this ceremony he was assisted by Bro. N. J. West, P.M. and P.P.G.R., and supported by Bros. Joyce, W.M. 318; T. B. Williams, W.M. 1272; and a large number of the brethren of the lodge. The newly-installed W.M. appointed as his officers for the ensuing year Bros. Gilbert B. Pearce, I.P.M.; H. H. Trevithick, S.W.; B. Spray, J.W.; Rev. George Kennedy, Chaplain; Frank R. Harvey, Treasurer; John P. Smith, P.M., Secretary; N. J. West, P.M., Director of Ceremonies; T. Mills, S.D.; J. Polglase, jun., J.D.; L. L. Ross, Organist; W. J. Jordan, I.G.; Bros. Bawden and Vivian, Stewards; and Bray, Tyler. The brethren then repaired to the White Hart Hotel, where an excellent banquet was provided by the hostess, Miss Oliver. They were joined by Bro. John Thomas, W.M.; John Focking, P.M.; and W. H. Tressider, S.W. 589, Redruth; W. H. Kinsman, W.M. elect; James Lovell, jun., Secretary No. 121, Penzance, and other visiting brethren, the total number present being 64. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were ably given and eloquently responded to, the W.M., Bro. Thomas, 589, and Bro. Williams, 1272, both making very appropriate remarks on several subjects that just now are of peculiar interest to Freemasons. The latter referred to the suggestion made by Freemasons in France of their desire to expunge from their ceremonies all reference to the Deity, and contended that to do this would be to undermine the foundation on which Freemasonry rests. A most pleasant evening was spent, and it will be remembered as one of the largest and most interesting of the annual festivals of this most successful and flourishing lodge.—Western Daily Mercury.

WHITEHAVEN.—Lewis Lodge (No. 872).—The St. John's festival of this lodge was held on Wednesday afternoon, the 26th ult., in the Masonic Hall, Dukerstreet. There was a large attendance of members, as well as brethren from other lodges. The W.M., Bro. Cowman, opened the lodge, there being also present the following Past Masters, viz., Bros. W. Gill, Spittal, Atkinson, Huddleston, Kenworthy, Gibson, Barr, and Sandwith, belonging to Lodges 119 and 872. Bros. Kenworthy, P.P.G.J.W., and Gibson, P.G. Sec., were the Installing Masters, and discharged the duties of their respective offices in an admirable manner. Bro. Thomas Bell, having been duly installed, appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. F. Hodgson, S.W.; J. Pav, J.W.; J. Spittal, Treasurer; R. Twentyman, Secretary; J. Winter, S.D.; J. Jackson, J.D.; J. Cooper, Organist; A. Hardie, I.G.; J. Salisbury, Tyler; V. P. Bawlin, and T. Ellwood, Stewards. The lodge having been closed in form, the brethren repaired to the banqueting room, where an excellent spread awaited them. The chair was occupied by the W.M., Bro. Bell, supported right and left by P.M.'s of 872 and 119. The following was the toast list:—"The Queen and the Craft," by the Chairman; "The Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," by the Chairman; "The M.W.G.M., the Prince of Wales," by the Chairman; "The Pro G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Officers of Grand Lodge," proposed by Bro. Atkinson; "The R.W.P.G.M., M.P., the Earl of Bective," proposed by Bro. Gibson; "The D.P.G.M., Bro. Whitwell, M.P., and the rest of the Officers of P.G.L." proposed by Bro. Spittal, responded to by Bro. Gibson and others; "The Newly-Installed W.M. of Lewis Lodge, 872, Whitehaven, Bro. Bell," proposed by Bro. Cowman, responded to by Bro. Bell; "The W.M. and P.M.'s of Sun, Square, and Compasses Lodge, 119, Bro. Paisson," proposed by Bro. Huddleston, responded to by Bro. Alsop and others; "The Retiring Master of Lodge 872, Bro. Cowman," proposed by the Worshipful Master, responded to by Bro. Cowman; "The Past Masters of Lewis Lodge," proposed by Bro. Alsop, responded to by Bros. Gill, Spittal, and others; "The Installing Masters, Bros. Kenworthy and Gibson," proposed by Bro. Atkinson, responded to by Bros. Kenworthy and Gibson; "The Newly invested Officers of 872," proposed by Bro. Kenworthy, responded to by Bros. Hodgson, Ray, and others; "The Visiting Brethren," proposed by Bro. Spittal, responded to by Bros. Barr, Sandwith, Fletcher (Barrow), and Smallwood (Harrington); "The Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. Barr; "All Poor and Distressed Masons," proposed by the W.M.

LISKEARD.—Saint Martin's Lodge, (No. 510).—The annual meeting of the St. Martin's Lodge took place on Thursday 27th ult., St. John's Day. The lodge was opened at 4 p.m., and after the confirmation of the minutes, the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. J. Beaglehole, S.W., was proceeded with, the ceremony being impressively performed by the I.P.M., Bro. John F. Childs, P.G. Reg.; who was supported by the following board of P.M.'s:—R. Hooper, P.M.; R. Coath, P.M.; R. A. Courtney, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; T. White, P.M., P.P.G.S. of W.; J. W. Chegwidan, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; W. Polkinghorne, P.M. 1151 P.P.G.Std.; G. Barnes, P.M. 1164, P.G.P.; S. Mitchell, P.M. 699, P.P.G.Std. H. Pole, W.M. 1164; and J. Rawling, W.M. 1071. After the installation the W.M. appointed and invested his officers for the year, viz.:—Bros. J. F. Childs, I.P.M.; W. Nettle, S.W.; J. Harris, J.W.; the Rev. W. Fookes, Chaplain; T. White, Treasurer; R. A. Courtney, Sec.; O. Colmer, S. D.; W. Sargent, J. D.; E. Venning, Organist; W. Hocken, D.C.; J. U. Hill, I.G.; T. E. Moon, and A. Heathman, Stewards; R. Penwarden, Tyler, Bro. W. Nettle, S.W., being unanimously appointed Steward to the C.M.A. Fund. The accounts of the Treasurer were passed, and the sum of £10 voted to the funds of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for the Widows of Freemasons. During the year the lodge had also made grants of £10 10s., to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; £10 10s., to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; £2 2s. to the C.M.A. Fund; and £50 in reduction of the debt due on the building; the Saint Martin's Chapter also subscribing the sum of £10 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons. At 6 p.m. the brethren adjourned to Webb's Hotel, and sat down to a sumptuous repast, presided over by the W.M. On the removal of the cloth the loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given and responded to, interspersed with some capital songs and music, rendered by some of the brethren, which added considerably to the enjoyment of the evening.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The Christmas meeting of this lodge was held in the lodge rooms, at the Swan Hotel, Bedford, on Wednesday, the 26th ult., when there were present Bros. W. Rhys Williams, M.D., P.A.G.D.C., W.M.; Capt. Colburn, S.W. Coombs, J.W.; Rev. C. Breerton, R.D., Chap.; Prior, M.D., P.M., Treas.; Ald. Sergeant, P.M., Sec.; Ald. Bull, J.P., P.M., Steward; Cookson, P.M., acting I.P.M.; Billson, P.M., acting S.D.; Thody, J.D.; Carter, I.G.; and Reynolds, Tyler; whilst amongst the brethren present were Bros. H. Young, Allen, Jarvis, Ayres, R. Boughton-Smith, and others. A son of a former member of the lodge was proposed as a joining member, and a resident in the neighbourhood for initiation. There being no further work, the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment, fifteen sitting down to an excellent supper. A pleasant evening was spent, enlivened with the capital singing of Bros. Sergeant, Cookson, Allen, Young, and Jarvis.

SLEAFORD.—St. Botolph's Lodge (No. 588).—The installation meeting of this little lodge took place as usual on St. John's day, when the Rev. Bro. W. Lynes, P.G.C. attended, and acted as Installing Master. The following are the officers appointed: Bros. R. Thorpe, W.M.; W. Stringer, S.W.; R. Wildgoose, J.W.; T. J. Tomlinson, P.M., Secretary; C. V. Jackson, S.D.; G. Bellamy, J.D.; A. W. Lambert, Organist; W. Hipkin, I.G.; and T. Chapman, Tyler. Bros. Hildred, P.M. 272, and J. T. Hartman, Org. 469, were present as visitors. The banquet took place at the Bristol Arms after the lodge was closed, when the usual Masonic toasts were given, and a pleasant evening was spent under the presidency of the newly-installed W.M.

LAUNCESTON.—Dunheved Lodge (No. 789).—The annual meeting of the above lodge was held on Thursday, 27th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Launceston. The W.M. elect, W. Bro. Thomas Pomeroy Trood, was installed by W. Bro. D. H. W. Horlock, P.M. and P.G.S.W., supported by the following board of I.M.'s:—W. Bros. Rev. G. Ross, P.P.G.C.; J. Hawkins, P.G.J.D.; C. G. Archer, P.P.G.S.; P. F. Simcoe, P.G.S.; W. T. Parson, P.P.G.S.; F. Couch, P.M. 789. At the close of the installation the W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—W. Bros. G. Ross, I.P.M.; C. Parsons, S.W.; E. Trood, J.W.; Rev. W. S. Sloate-Evans, P.P.G.C., Chaplain; H. M. Harvey, Treasurer; J. Hawkins, Secretary; J. Kittow, S.D.; W. Andrew, J.D.; T. C. Langdon, I.G.; P. F. Simcoe, Steward to Masonic Charities; E. Wilcocks, S.S.; B. Parsons, J.S.; J. Fidler, Tyler. The business being concluded, the brethren adjourned to their dining-hall, and partook of an excellent banquet, provided by the custodian, Bro. J. Fidler. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 27th ult., there being present Bros. R. Robinson, P.M. and Treasurer, in the chair; Isaac Evening, S.W.; Dr. Dodgson, P.M. as J.W.; T. Bird, S.D.; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. and Sec. (Freemason); W. Shilton, P.M., as I.G.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; Jas. Black, W.M. elect; T. C. Robinson, Capt. F. R. Sewell; H. Peacock, R. Harrison, and J. Fearon. The W.M., in the chair, having read the notice convening the meeting, which was a resolution for the admission of two candidates, Messrs. Thomas Armstrong and John Towers, they were balloted for, unanimously accepted, and duly initiated into Masonry. The lodge being closed in form, a lodge of instruction was held.

ST. GERMANS.—Lodge Eliot, (No. 1164).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms on Thursday, the 27th ult. The W.M., elect, Bro. Henry Pole, was installed by Bro. G. Barnes, P.M., P.P.G. Purs., assisted by Bros. J. B. Kerswill, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., and John Childs, W.M. Lodge 510. At the close of the installation the following brethren were appointed as officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. F. S. Hawke, S.W.; John Oates, J.W.; George Barnes, Treasurer; William Petrick, Secretary; Francis Johns, S.D.; Richard Broad, J.D.; P. O'Dogherty, I.G.; John Hawke, Tyler; and S. Johns, Organist. At the close of the lodge the brethren, with many other brethren from Liskeard, Saltash, St.

Martins, and Looe, repaired to the Eliot Arms, where an excellent banquet was provided by the hostess (Mrs. Jenkins). After the usual toasts had been given and a very pleasant evening spent, the meeting closed at 10 o'clock.

SLAITHWAITE.—Colne Valley Lodge (No. 1645).—This lodge held its annual Festival of St. John's on Wednesday, the 19th ult., at the Lewisham Hotel, and was well attended by brethren from Lancashire, Saddleworth, Meltham, and Huddersfield, who seemed anxious to honour a young lodge which deserved so well of the Craft. Commencing only twelve months ago with nine members, it has increased to thirty-one good and true Masons who have followed the first W.M. into the Craft, knowing that in so faithful a guide no danger would ensue, neither have they been mistaken, for all have expressed their keen delight at the good fellowship which has been found in addition to the greater aims, dignity and worth of the science. The meeting on Wednesday was at three o'clock. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been passed, Mr. Peters was balloted for and afterwards duly initiated by the W.M., Bro. George Haigh. Bro. Samuel Sugden, the W.M. elect, was then presented and duly installed by Bro. Varley, Huddersfield, who did his work well. A number of other brethren were invested with collar and jewel of their respective offices. After the business of the lodge the room was rearranged, and a splendid spread set out for the company by Bro. Wood, who had done all he could to give and deserve satisfaction. At the festive board sat at the head of No. 1 table the newly appointed W.M., with him Bro. G. Haigh, the I.P.M. The loyal and patriotic toasts were given with Masonic honours, and when about the middle of their ceremonies Bro. Derbyshire, S.W., got up and presented Bro. G. Haigh with a most beautiful Past Master's jewel, which had been freely subscribed to by every member of the lodge, for the kindness, urbanity, and brotherly affection by which Bro. Haigh had welcomed every young member, for the zeal he had displayed on behalf of the lodge, and for what he had done for Masonry in the Colne Valley. Bro. Jno. Sugden, an old friend, had the pleasing duty of investing Bro. Haigh with the distinguishing badge, which had on the front the simple yet beautiful words "Brotherly love," and on the back "Presented to Bro. George Haigh, the first W.M. of the Colne Valley." As Bro. Haigh had not the slightest idea of what had been done on his behalf, he exhibited a little embarrassment, and assured the brethren that this kindness would be remembered as long as he lived.

Royal Arch.

TRURO.—Royal Cornubian Chapter (No. 331).—At the last meeting of this chapter, five pounds was voted towards the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, of which the R.W. the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, P.G.M., is the Steward for the Province of Cornwall. We are pleased to hear that more than £300 will be placed at the Earl's disposal. M.E. Comp. J. Bray was invested by Comp. Anderton, P.Z., as 1st Principal, and Comp. J. P. Rogers, as 3rd Principal; Comp. W. Lake, the 2nd Principal elect, was unavoidably absent. The other officers invested were Comps. J. H. Ferris, E.; W. D. Rogers, N.; R. Carter, P.S.; T. Oliver, jun., 1st A.S.; J. B. Champion, and A.S.; E. T. Carlyon, P.G.S.E., Treasurer; J. T. Hawken, Registrar; and W. Rooks, Janitor.

TYWARDREATH.—Unity Chapter (No. 1151).—At a meeting of the members of this chapter, E. Comps. the Rev. Dr. Treffry, Z.; William Tonkin, H.; Captain Hugh Colville, J.; presiding as the three Principals, it was proposed by E. Comp. Rev. Dr. Treffry, and seconded by the other two Principals, that the sum of £10 should be placed in the hands of E. Comp. Hughan to purchase a Life Governor's vote in the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, making £20 in all from the chapter for this year. The St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 1151, and Westmoreland Encampment of Knights Templar, meeting at the place, recently voted £10 each, thus making a total of £40 for Tywardreath, which sum is to be placed on the list of the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, as Steward for Cornwall, in February, 1878. So far over £300 has been promised in the province, which is certainly a creditable amount in one year, but as it is only recently that large amounts have been subscribed, and as at present at least £150 is being received annually from the institution on behalf of Cornish annuitants, it is evident that much larger sums than those mentioned should be raised annually by the lodges and chapters in Cornwall.

Mark Masonry.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—The January meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday last, at the Masonic Rooms, Little Britain. Brethren present: Bros. E. H. Thiellay, W.M.; Dubois, S.W.; Stephens, J.W.; H. C. Levander, P.M.; Treas.; George Kenning, P.M., Sec.; Wilkinson, and D'Almaine. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for Bro. Herbert Santer: the result being in his favour, Bro. Santer was advanced to the degree of Mark Master. It was proposed by the Treasurer, seconded by Bro. Wilkinson, and carried, that the future meetings of the lodge be held at the Freemasons' Tavern. The lodge was then closed. The brethren dined together at the Holborn Restaurant.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The "New Year's Treat" to the aged inmates of the Asylum of this Institution at Croydon was given on Wednesday last, when several brethren and ladies who take a warm interest both in the success of the Institution and the comfort and happiness of the annuitants, made the journey to Croydon to see the inmates, and afford them a few hours' entertainment at the opening of the year 1878. Among the party were Bro. James Terry, Secretary of the Institution; George Knill, Collector; Thomas Cubitt, P.G.P.; W. W. Morgan, G. Ward Verry, G. H. Webb, C. J. Perceval, C. Daniel, H. Massey (Freemason), W. H. Hall, J. Newton, W. H. Main, F. C. Cox, R. Pearcey, J. Frock, E. G. Legge, E. Bowyer, R. H. Halford, J. A. Farnfield, J. Constable, Dr. Strong, Honorary Surgeon to the Institution, Messrs. G. Recknell, F. T. Tubbs, H. Dines, E. H. Dines, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. Constable, Mrs. Bowyer, Mrs. Perceval, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Strong, Mrs. Verry, Mrs. Halford, Miss Terry, Miss Talmage, and Miss Constable.

The company arrived at their destination shortly before two o'clock, and on reaching the Institution were conducted to the dining hall, which they found very tastefully arranged with Christmas "welcomes" on the walls, Masonic insignia, and well executed national arms. The tables were laid out with Christmas cheer, some excellent hot-house plants lent by Dr. Strong, and a plentiful supply of bonbons. The party was a large one, so large indeed that the capacity of the hall was sorely tried, and for the full enjoyment of such a pleasant meeting required a further extension. However, the company, although hoping that before another New Year the Craft will see fit to enlarge the chamber, set all difficulties on one side and entered heart and soul into the proceedings of the day. Dr. Strong took the head of the table, supported on his right by Bro. Norris (Warden), and on his left by Mrs. Terry; while the vice chair was occupied by Bro. James Terry. The other visitors attended to the comforts of the annuitants, and were unremitting in their endeavours to make them comfortable, exertions which appeared to be highly appreciated by the old people. When the heavier portion of the repast had been disposed of, that great institution, the Christmas pudding, which had been specially prepared by Mrs. Strong for the occasion, was introduced, and although, of a size that would gladden the heart of the most voracious schoolboy home for the holidays, very quickly disappeared. At the close of the repast all the old ladies were presented with a pound of tea, and all the old brethren with a pound of tobacco, sent as usual by Bro. William Hale, and before the annuitants adjourned to their residences, Dr. Strong first proposed "The Health of the Queen," the patroness of the Institution, patroness of the Craft, and mother of the M.W.G.M. When this toast had been honoured Dr. Strong proposed the health of those friends who provided the entertainment, and said that there might be some persons present who were not aware that these annual gatherings, and all the good things provided did not come out of the funds of the institution, but were voluntary gifts. One brother sent the tea, another the tobacco, another the wine, and such nice things as would warm the annuitants' toes before going to bed. For those who did not prefer these articles there was another little article provided, bearing a likeness of Her Majesty. Therefore to these brethren who had furnished such articles, and the good cheer that had just been partaken of, he proposed the thanks of the company by drinking their health. Dr. Strong, after this toast had been drunk, proposed "The Health of Bro. Norris, Warden." The worthy Chairman said he was not an Irishman, and as a true and loyal subject of Her Majesty, was not a Home Ruler; but he was going to ask the company to drink the health of the Home Ruler of those who were residents of this Institution, Bro. Norris, the Warden. He was sure that to all those who had the pleasure and happiness of being under Bro. Norris's sway not the least pleasant portion of this gathering was to see him occupying the position he had occupied for the last two or three years. All the company trusted that he might be spared to them for some time longer. At one time it was thought that Bro. Norris was the oldest Mason in England; but another brother had lately had, he would not say the impudence, to come forward, but he had come forward and said he was a month older in Masonry than Bro. Norris. But Bro. Norris was tough, and as long as his constitution would hold out he (Dr. Strong), would promise to endeavour with God's blessing to do his best to enable Bro. Norris to survive the other brother who claimed the older Masonship. They would now drink Bro. Norris's health, with the heartiest good wishes for his long life and strength to be Warden of the Institution. Bro. Norris, in reply, tendered his sincere thanks for Dr. Strong's kind expressions and the warmth of the company's response and only wished he was deserving of half the good expressions that Dr. Strong and the kind friends around him used towards him. With this the old people adjourned for a short time to their homes, where they were visited by the ladies and brethren; and after tea an evening entertainment was provided, in which Mr. Frank Thornton, Miss Terry, Mrs. Strong, Dr. Strong, Miss Strong, Messrs. Dines, Miss Talmage, Bro. John Constable, and Miss Constable took part, and in which there was some excellent singing and music. Dissolving views, representing a journey "Round the World in Ninety Minutes," were given by Bros. Legge and Newton, and a negro entertainment by Messrs. Dines and Miss Talmage. Mr. Frank Thornton sang a good patter song, "Coming of Age," "Don't ask me to give up Flo," and gave some lively imitations of a showman. Miss Terry, besides accompanying on the piano in markedly finished style, sang with equal ability the song, "I love new friends," and Miss Strong gave an admirable performance on the violin. Bro. John Constable and Dr.

Strong also added to the amusements of the evening by singing, and Mrs. Strong and Miss Constable likewise performed on the piano with great ability. Altogether the entertainment was admirable, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the company. Refreshments were served at intervals during the evening, and before the party separated at ten o'clock, Bro. Constable rose and said that all present highly appreciated the efforts that had been made to amuse them, but there was one to whom they were all very much indebted, Dr. Strong, whose efforts on behalf of the old people were so well known. He would not dilate on his many virtues, but he was sure the brethren all loved and respected him, as he (Bro. Constable) himself did. He proposed three hearty cheers for Dr. Strong, and the partner of his life. Dr. Strong, after the cheers had been vociferously given, thanked Bro. Constable for what he had said. When Bro. Constable began to speak he (Dr. Strong) had no idea he was going to couple his name with the compliment. He thought that Bro. Terry was about to be the object of his remarks, as to him was due all the honour Bro. Constable showered on him (Dr. Strong). It was Bro. Terry who looked after the Institution from year's end to year's end, and it was Bro. Terry who initiated these entertainments. If the company, therefore, would allow him (Dr. Strong) he would now propose "The Health of Bro. Terry." Bro. Terry in reply said it was a source of great gratification to him to have had something to do with getting up this entertainment, and if it added to the comfort of the old brethren and ladies in the Institution he was amply repaid for any trouble he might have been at. His greatest delight was to come down to Croydon and do something for them. They had been kind enough to acknowledge the services of himself, his wife, and family, and he thanked them very heartily for so doing. In return he wished them most heartily a happy and prosperous New Year, and he hoped to have all the brethren's best services for the next festival of the Institution on the 13th February. It was highly gratifying to him that for the first time in the history of this Institution it stood No. 1 for 1877 on the list of donations and subscriptions. The Girls' School received £11,800 in the year, the Boys' £14,300, and the Benevolent Institution £16,427. That would gratify all the brethren, because it would enable the committee to take on a larger number of annuitants. Within the last four days, however, there had been nineteen additional petitions in, and therefore he hoped that at the festival in February the brethren would again strongly support the Institution. The visitors then bade good-night to the annuitants, and returned to town in the special saloon carriage kindly provided by the South Eastern Railway Company.

Public Amusements.

STRAND.—This being the season almost entirely devoted to pantomime and extravaganza, it was but natural that the oldest established house in London for this legitimate form of dramatic entertainment should supply its patrons with a new burlesque in the place of Messrs. Reece and Farnie's somewhat dry "Champagne," which has done duty for some little time. Also it was but natural that Mrs. Swanborough should entrust Mr. Burnand, the popular author of "Black-eyed Susan," with the work in which he had proved himself to be so thoroughly at home with. "The Red Rover, or I Believe You my Buoy," is the title of Mr. Burnand's latest edition of a nautical tradition, as he terms it in the bill, and certainly no expense nor trouble has been spared by the management in doing justice to the title. In addition to such old favourites as Messrs. Marius, Cox, Penley, and Miss Lottie Venne, we have Miss Rachel Sanger, who upon this occasion makes her first appearance at this Theatre. Of the trifle itself, perhaps the least said the better—that it amuses the audience is beyond doubt—that it bored us is equally true, but then we are not great lovers of burlesque, and are inclined no doubt to be captious, and have scarcely recovered, perhaps, from our late Christmas festivities—save the mark. Of the acting, all the ladies and gentlemen engaged exert themselves with earnestness and success. M. Marius is exceedingly clever in his impersonation of the excitable pirate, and the way in which he sings "Keep it dark" makes amends for much exaggeration. In the last scene Miss Sanger, as the fascinating lieutenant, of course is charming—she could not be otherwise—and Miss Venne again proves what a valuable acquisition she is in a burlesque company. Of the others, Messrs. Cox and Penley make the most of their parts; the former as "Guinea," and the latter as the hapless tailor, "Homespun." The burlesque is preceded by the successful comedy "Family Ties," by the same author.

FOLLY.—The new Christmas novelty entitled "A Night of Terror" at this house is a decided success. It is admittedly an adaption from the French, but it has been so cleverly worked for the English stage by Messrs. Wyndham and Matthison that it is thoroughly English in tone. It would be most unfair to tell the story, if indeed it could be done, except on the stage, for more than half the pleasure of the audience consists in witnessing the wild, extraordinary, impossible, but irresistibly laughable surprises wrought out of the many incidents and complications of the piece. At this time of the year when the inclination of sensible people is to find enjoyment, a large portion of which should consist of merriment, there is not another place of amusement in London where that enjoyment and merriment can, with such certainty, be found as at "The Folly." The acting throughout is excellent. Miss Munroe and Miss Violet Cameron vie with each other in making wholly attractive and charming their respective parts, and Messrs. Hill, Howson, Murray, Day and Ash-ford have, perhaps, never appeared to better advantage in any piece of a similar nature. We have only one fault to find with the songs and the incidental music, of the former there are too few, of the latter too little.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR IN CORNWALL.

The distinguished and chivalric United Religious and Military Orders of the Temple, and of St. John, of Jerusalem, Palestine, Rhodes, and Malta, which are so far connected with Freemasonry, like the Order of Charles XIII., of Sweden, that all the members must be Masons, are likely to be revived in Cornwall, we understand, under the able guidance of Sir F. M. Williams, who has been appointed Provincial Prior in the room of Lord Eliot, now Earl St. German's, who resigned some time since. The Prince of Wales is Grand Master, Her Majesty the Queen is Patron of the Order, Lord Skelmersdale is Great Prior nominate of England, and has been installed in succession to the late Earl of Shrewsbury. The Duke of Connaught is Great Prior of Ireland, the Earl of Charlemont is Great Marshal, the Hon. Judge Townshend, Arch Chancellor; Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Arch Registrar; Lord Dunboyne, Standard Bearer; Viscount Newry, Grand Master's Banner Bearer. Amongst the Knights Grand Cross are the Prince of Wales, the Emperor of Germany, the King of Sweden, the Crown Prince of Germany, Crown Prince of Denmark, Prince John of Glucksburg, the Earl of Limerick, &c. A preceptory of Knights Templar meets at Tywardreath. H.R.H. the G.M. has, we understand, been pleased to make Bro. Emra Holmes, collector of H.M. Customs, Fowey, a Knight Commander, in consideration of his services to the Order. Mr. Holmes is the author of "Notes on the United Orders of the Temple and Hospital," published some time since in the pages of the Freemason, and of a volume of "Tales, Poems, and Masonic Papers."—Western Daily Mercury.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—Since our last notice of late acquisitions in the department of MSS. in the British Museum other additions of value have been made, of which the following is a summary:—Church Service books are represented by a small library of English use; a book of Horae for the use of the Monastery of St. Bridget of Syon, and a parish priest's Manual, also of English use—all of the fifteenth century. The Manual is always a service-book of interest, containing as it does those occasional offices for baptism, marriage, visitation of sick, and burial, in some of which fragments of English appear; and this example is a fine one. The Leabhair ri Maolconaire is a collection of legends, poems, &c., in Irish, written in the sixteenth century. Irish MSS. are not too numerous in this country, and we are, therefore, glad to see this volume placed in the national collection. Written in English are a small volume of Gospel lessons, illustrated by tales in verse, of the fifteenth century, and a long roll of Bible history of the same period, a translation of the Latin compilation of which so many copies are to be found; the English version is rare. Another roll which has been added to the collection also deals with Biblical and mediæval history in the form of pictorial designs by an Italian artist of the fifteenth century. But perhaps what will attract more attention is the Diary of Cardinal York, contained in upwards of 20 volumes, and covering the years 1758-1805, together with several volumes of correspondence, and papers relating to the Sobieski family. It should be remembered that the Cardinal's inheritance of the Stuart papers long ago found its way into the Royal Library at Windsor, and that, therefore, we must not look for material for English history among this collection, which is presented to the museum by the Hon. Mrs. Otway-Cave. That the literary remains of the late George Smith should rest under the roof where he made a name as an Assyrian scholar is appropriate. The trustees have purchased his working note-books, which are believed to contain much valuable matter. Another noteworthy purchase is that of the papers connected with the Shakespeare forgeries by Ireland, which, in the form of correspondence of the elder Ireland and cuttings from contemporary papers, give a full history of the affair. A good deal of early English music has also been collected, and includes, in addition to several volumes of compositions of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, an interesting MS. of airs, chants, and other pieces composed by Tallis and collected by Thomas Mulliner in the sixteenth century, and also several volumes of oratorios and other works by Dr. William Crotch. The collection of manuscript music in the department is beginning to be respectable. That so little attention should have been paid to this class of MS. by librarians of former times is, we think, as much the fault of the public, who cared not for such things, as of officials, who perceived them. Of miscellaneous volumes the following may be noticed:—An inventory of the King's "Wardrobe Stuff," hangings, carpets, bed furniture, &c., at Windsor and Westminster, 34 Hen. VIII. to 1 Edw. VI.; Lectures of Dr. John Rainolds, Dean of Christ Church, in answer to Bellarmine, 1590; the Muse Boreales, or Iter Boreale of Robert Eedes, Dean of Windsor, of the seventeenth century; a household account-book of the family of Archer of Essex, 1600-1624; a narrative, in French, of Charles the Second's coming to Rouen, in 1651, by J. Samborne; scientific voyages by Edmund Halley in 1698 and 1701; a small volume of notes of monuments and inscriptions in London churches, by Peter Le Neve; a rate-book of Dartford, 1727-1785; a collection of Whig or Anti-Jacobite ballads and songs, 1688-1747; a volume of ancient Scottish poems, 1725; letters of Thomas Warton to Edmond Malone, 1781-1790; collections relating to Burcot, Worfield, and Bridgnorth, county Salop; and journals of missions to Siam by Dr. Richardson, 1829-1835.—Academy.

Masonic and General Tidings.

At the last meeting of the Invicta Chapter Sovereign Prince Rose Croix, H.R.D.M., Ill. Bro. Magnus Ohren, 31st, was installed M.W.S. of that chapter, held at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden-square, London. The Installing Officer was the Ill. Bro. W. Hyde Pullen, 33rd.

Messrs. Spottiswoode have issued a most interesting book, entitled "Bonn to Metz." It is an account of how two English gentlemen travelled from Bonn to Metz in six days on bicycles. The book is written by one of the daring travellers, C. F. Casella, Esq., and proves that he can drive his pen as easily as he can his bicycle. The account is given in fluent, graceful English, and will well repay the perusal.

Owing to the liberality exhibited by the members of the Shakespeare Lodge, No. 99, an extra entertainment is in store for the children of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls at their "Twelfth Night Treat" on Monday next.

THE MASONIC INSTITUTIONS.—We have much pleasure in announcing that the following are the correct totals of the amounts received by each institution during the year 1877: Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, £16,308 8s. 11d.; Royal Masonic Institution for Boys £14,369 14s. 9d.; Royal Masonic Institution for Girls £11,800.

The visit of the Prince of Wales to Hamilton Palace next month is to be private in character, and mainly intended for the purpose of giving His Royal Highness a few days' shooting over the Hamilton demesne, the covers of which have not yet been drawn this season.

Bro. John Derby Allcroft, W.M. Lodge 1657, will lay the foundation stone of St. Paul's, Old Ford, on Friday next, the 11th inst.

ANOTHER HONOUR TO R.W. BRO. W. J. HUGHAN, OF TRURO.—We have to congratulate our esteemed and valued R.W. Bro. William James Hughan on the very handsome compliment paid to him on the 30th November, by the Franklin Lodge (134), Philadelphia, by his election as an honorary member of that lodge, and this compliment is the more valuable as by a decision of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania on the 5th ult., such an honour cannot be again conferred on any brother residing in England.

At the annual meeting on the 17th ult., of the famous "York Lodge," No. 236, the members elected seven brethren honorary members, the first time, we believe, in the history of the lodge that any in the Craft have been so distinguished. The first so honoured is Bro. William James Hughan, of Truro, author of "History of Freemasonry at York," "Memorial of the Masonic Union of 1813," &c. The remaining six are Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, M.A., of London, editor of the Freemason and Masonic Magazine; Bro. J. G. Findel, of Leipzig, author of the "History of Freemasonry;" Bro. D. Murray Lyon, of Edinburgh, author of the "History of the Lodge of Edinburgh from A.D. 1599," &c.; Bro. Æ. J. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar of England; Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary of England; and Bro. George F. Fort (of Camden, New Jersey, U.S.A.), author of the "Early History and Antiquities of Freemasonry." The "York Lodge" is the custodian of the archives of the extinct "Grand Lodge of all England," many of which are very valuable. The ancient "charges" in rolls (on paper or parchment), date from the sixteenth century, and traditionally Freemasonry had been worked in York for many centuries earlier, the "Fabric Rolls of York Minster" making mention of a "lodge" in the fourteenth century, and in all probability the "grand assemblies" were held in that ancient city from A.D. 926.

INDIAN FAMINE.—The Mansion House Fund now amounts to half a million, and an intimation to this effect was despatched by telegraph to her Majesty and by letter to the Prime Minister. During the day the following Royal Message was received at the Mansion House: "Sir Thomas Biddulph, Osborne, to Sir Thos. White, late Lord Mayor.—The Queen is much gratified at the magnificent result of the Mansion House collection. Bro. W. F. Smart, accountant, of 16, Basinghall-street, took his son into partnership on Tuesday last, the 1st January, 1878, from which date the firm will be Wm. F. Smart and Son.

On Tuesday night the annual dinner of the Oxford Druids was held at the Town Hall Oxford. The chief speakers were Bro. the Earl of Jersey, who responded for the House of Lords, and Sir William Harcourt.

A ROYAL PARDON.—Laurence Walsh, of the 1st Brigade of Royal Artillery, was tried by a general court-martial on the 11th of last month, charged with having written letters of a seditious character to Patrick Herliby, at Cork, and was sentenced to two years' penal servitude. Her Majesty has now remitted the sentence, in consideration of the prisoner's youth.

At the customary monthly meeting at the Trinity House on Tuesday last, Bro. Thomas Brassey, M.P., was, on the initiative of the Court, admitted and sworn in as a younger brother of the Corporation. This compliment has been paid to Bro. Brassey in consideration of his services to the mercantile marine of the country, and of his personal efficiency as a practical and skilful navigator.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—Advrt.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

It has been decided that the Twelfth Night Treat to the children of this school who remain during the Christmas holidays shall take place on Monday next, at 4 p.m., at the schools, St. John's Hill, Battersea Rise.

It was resolved at a meeting, on Wednesday, of the Scottish Corporation to appoint a committee to consider what steps should be taken for carrying on the business of that body in future, owing to the destruction of its hall in Crane Court by fire.

PRIORY LODGE, No. 1000.—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 20th ult., a report of which will appear in our next.

The customary annual ball of the Cripple Gate Pension Society will be held on Wednesday, the 30th inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel. Particulars may be obtained of Bro. U. Knell, Hon. Sec., 20, Fore-street, City.

The Order of the Golden Fleece has been bestowed by the Emperor Francis Joseph, on Count Andray, to whom the decoration was transmitted on Wednesday last.

Mr. Stanley, the African traveller, was entertained on Tuesday evening last, at Cairo, at a grand banquet given in his honour by Bro. Sir George Elliot, Bart, M.P. The principal English and American visitors and residents, and a considerable number of Egyptian Pachas accepted Bro. Sir George's invitations, and this Anglo-American New Year's Day entertainment turned out one of the most brilliant and noteworthy incidents of the Cairo season.

A CORNISH CENTENNIAL.—A Centennial meeting was recently held, in commemoration of the old Cornish language, at St. Paul, near Penzance, the last person who spoke Cornish having been buried in the churchyard of that parish in 1877. Cornish is almost the only European language which has died out in modern times. Perhaps the only part of Europe in which a similar centenary might be held would be the interior of Russia. The meeting at St. Paul was held in the National School-room. After tea had been served Mr. W. C. Borlase briefly explained how the ancient Britons were driven by the Saxons to Wales proper, and to West Wales, or Cornwall, where they kept up their ancient language; he also stated that no relics of the Cornish language earlier in date than the 13th century had been as yet found, although Welsh literature had been well known from a remote period. Mr. Borlase then read letters from the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, the Bishop of the Diocese, Sir J. St. Aubyn, M.P., Professor Rhys, and others, expressing their interest in the subject. On the conclusion of Mr. Borlase's address, the Rev. W. S. Leon Szirma, vicar of Newlyn (a part of the parish of St. Paul), gave an explanation of the position of Cornish in the Aryan family of languages, and remarked that European languages being like a chain of which Cornish was one link, that link was of much importance to philologists. The unity of the European languages was shown by example, taken from the commonest words, such as three, father, mother, &c., which are similar in most European languages. The Cornish language belonged to the Celtic division; it was nearest to the Breton and Welsh, and was like the Irish, the Manx, and the Gaelic. The rev. gentleman then gave a summary of the relics of Cornish literature, especially referring to Beauman's "Menesech," a drama describing the life of St. Menesech of Camborne, and the final struggles between heathenism and Christianity in West Cornwall. After referring to the other miracle plays, the "Origo Mundi," the "Passio Christi," the "Resurrectio" (with the death of Pilate and the Ascension), and, finally, Jordan's "Creacon," of 1611, the speaker described the gradual decline of the language before the English, from the period when, as at Buryan in 1336, the vicar of St. Just had to translate the sermon of the Bishop of Exeter to the Buryan congregation, down to the time when, in the Lizard region, and in the parishes of St. Paul and St. Just, in the Land's End district, the old Cornish alone was spoken, and then at length died out at Mousehole. The event, the speaker said, was not altogether to be regretted. It was an expensive luxury for a people to be bilingual, but the language ought always to be of interest to Cornishmen, as it still affected the Cornish dialect. Several other gentlemen having spoken, the proceedings were closed with "God save the Queen."

We have received a copy of "Freemasonry, its two great doctrines, the existence of God, and a future state," by Bro. Chalmers I. Paton, a review of which will appear next week.

"Masonic Songs" ('Freemason' office) is a little volume of ditties, set to popular airs for use at banquets, which are fairly good. What has become, by-the-by, of all the ceremonial music written by Mozart—himself no mean brother of the Craft? "Der Zauberflöte" alone would show his depth of Masonry."—Whitehall Review.

"All members of the Masonic body—and it includes every class of society—will welcome 'The Cosmopolitan Masonic Pocket Book for 1878.' To those who are in the habit of travelling it is invaluable, since it gives all the Masonic knowledge which can reasonably be desired. Besides a pocket book of full and general information, and to a Mason should be preferable to all others."—Berrow's Worcester Journal.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—A fair trial is all that is asked to prove the sterling and superior merits of this Ointment, and to demonstrate how much more successful it is in curing old ulcers, inveterate sores, disfiguring eruptions, than any other application. When properly used it lessens the inflammation which invades parts adjacent to the wound or ulcer, whereby much local pain is immediately assuaged, and, in the course of an hour or two, the most satisfactory result invariably follow, which will steadily advance to a thorough permanent cure. Not only do outward ulcerations, wounds, and blemishes yield to Holloway's preparations, but also those ever present pests of winter—sore throat, diphtheria, catarrh, cough, and neuralgic pains.—Advrt.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

THE BOAR'S HEAD DINNER AT OXFORD.—"H." writes to the Times:—"In your interesting account of the Boar's Head Dinner, annually celebrated at the Queen's College, Oxford, it is stated that the origin of the ceremony is somewhat obscure. It may interest many of your readers to learn that the custom or ceremony, of which the serving up of the Boar's Head at the Queen's table on Christmas-Day is also a survival, was formerly a universal custom in all England, and that its origin dates back to Pagan Anglo-Saxon rites, and to ancient Germanic rites in general. The most complete account of this origin, founded on full research, appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine for January of the present year, from the pen of Karl Blind, under the title of 'The Boar's Head Dinner at Oxford, and a Germanic Sun-God.'"

We extract the following from the "Mirror" of about fifty years ago, a periodical which was then in the field against the Gentleman's Magazine as a repository of curious, and antiquarian information:—"Sir,—Passing the village of Hornchurch, near Romford, last Christmas Day, my attention was attracted by a crowd of villagers rallying forth into a field near the church, led by a man dressed in a farmer's frock, with the head of an animal on the top of a long pole, with an orange in its mouth, which I learnt afterwards to be the head of a boar. I enquired of a person whom I met the meaning of so novel a sight, and he informed me that it was wrestled for every Christmas Day by the peasantry."

M. SARDOU.—The "Theatre" states that this week M. Victorien Sardou will read a new comedy to company at the Théâtre du Vaudeville. Madame Victoria Lafontaine, at the express request of the author, has been engaged to play the principal part.

ENGLISH TAPESTRY.—Her Royal Highness Princess Louise, with the Marquis of Lorne, paid a visit on Thursday week to the Royal Tapestry Manufactory at Windsor, of which her Royal Highness has lately become a vice-president. She was received by the director (Mr. D. Henry), who conducted her through the various work-rooms to inspect the tapestries in progress for Her Majesty the Queen, the Duke of Argyll, Mr. Christopher Sykes, &c., and a series of panels being made for Messrs Gillow and Co., and intended for the Royal Commission-house in the Paris Exhibition. Her Royal Highness also visited the stained-glass works lately established near the tapestry manufactory.

ART AND OCTROIS.—French art has been employed on many odd subjects, but none of these has surpassed in strangeness that which is represented in the picture painted for the Municipality of Paris—to wit, "Un Tableau Symbolisant l'Octroi de Paris." M. Jobbe-Duval, known by certain huge canvasses in various public buildings in Paris, is the enterprising artist whom fate has chosen to symbolize the Octroi of Paris.—Athenæum.

DR. CHARLES MACKAY.—On Thursday week, at St. James's Hall, a testimonial was presented to this well-known writer. Mr. Colin Rae-Brown, who presided at the meeting of subscribers, explained the circumstances which had influenced the committee originating the subscription. A work now about to be published entitled "The Gaelic Etymology of the English Language" had occupied more of Dr. Mackay's time than had been anticipated, and prevented him from following literary work more immediately remunerative. It was therefore decided that a fitting time had arrived for an appeal to Dr. Mackay's friends to show their sympathy and appreciation of his work. The result of this appeal had been the sum of £770, including £100 subscribed by "The Clan Mackay." Dr. Charles Mackay returned thanks for the high compliment paid to him.

THE PLEASURES OF HOPE.—On Friday last, the statue to Thomas Campbell, the poet, was unveiled, in George-square, Glasgow, in the presence of the Lord Provost and magistrates, in official robes, and a large crowd. The ceremony was performed by Dr. James Campbell, who said that Campbell was a native of Glasgow, and that his "Pleasures of Hope" would last while the English language was spoken. The artist is Messman. This is the eleventh statue in George-square.

A SUCCESSFUL SAVINGS BANK.—The 62nd annual report of the Liverpool Savings Bank which has just been issued, shows that at the close of the financial year £1,735,753 was due to 60,072 depositors. During the year 13,216 new accounts were opened, 3,896 old accounts reopened, and 12,511 accounts closed. The deposits, including transfers from other savings-banks, were £676,235, and £474,403 was added to depositors' accounts or interest. The withdrawals and transfers amounted to £581,719. The bank possess a surplus of £5,333 over the amounts due to depositors, and in addition to a surplus fund of £10,000, its total funds being upwards of a million and three-quarters sterling. The business is a growing one, the amount due to depositors now being about £80,000 more than in 1866. As compared with last year 2,472 more accounts were opened and 2,261 more were closed, while £43,471 more was received and £23,452 paid away, and 27,027 more transactions were made. The amount due to depositors increased by £142,918 in the year. Branches have been opened at the north and east ends of the town, and these have been much appreciated.

A PLANTAGENET TOMB.—The interesting and beautiful monumental tomb, at King's Langley, Church of Prince Edmund of Langley, Duke of York, fifth son of Edward III., has been removed to a chapel expressly built for its reception, and the Queen has been graciously pleased to grant £40 from the privy purse towards placing a stained glass window in the chapel to the memory of the Prince, Her Majesty's ancestor.

METROPOLITAN PAUPERISM.—The following is a return of the number of paupers (exclusive of lunatics in asylums and vagrants) on the last day of the third week of December, 1877:—In-door, adults and children 40,160; out-door, adults, 26,381; children 16,547—making the total of both in-door and out-door paupers, 83,098. The corresponding total in 1876 was 83,694; in 1875, 88,169; and in 1874, 96,589. The total number of vagrants relieved in the metropolis on the last day of the third week of December was 778, of whom 571 were men, 171 women and 37 children under 16.

The Leeds Mercury states that William Shipman, of Riple, has completed his 100th year. He worked for the Butterley Company, he was ninety-seven, and he now keeps a toll bar near Golden Square. He was for some years engaged in military service, and has been a man of steady habits and temperate living. He has been thrice married, and is at present in possession of all his faculties.

THE CITY CHORAL SOCIETY.—Mr. G. W. Martin, we are informed, has received promises of support from most of the City authorities in his endeavour to provide within the City the means of enjoying the study and practice of high class music for those engaged in City warehouses and offices. The choir will number about 500 voices, and an instrumental band, selected from gentlemen engaged in the City, will be immediately organized. A series of concerts will be given in the Guildhall, if permission is granted, in aid of charitable institutions. The meetings of the Choral Society will be held once a week.

ST. CLEMENT'S, EASTCHEAP.—On January 1st., the new memorial window of Thomas Fuller, the Church historian, Bishop Pearson, the author of the "Treatise on the Creed," and Brian Walton, Bishop of Chester, editor of the "Biblia Polyglotta," was unveiled in the church of the united parish of St. Clement, near Eastcheap, and St. Martin, Orgar, of which the Rev. W. J. Hall is the rector. The window was unveiled at 1 o'clock in the presence of a large congregation, and Alwood's "Te Deum" in F was afterwards sung by the church choir. The Venerable Archdeacon Hessey subsequently delivered an address. He said they had met for a ceremony, simple indeed, but unless he greatly misinterpreted it, fraught with no ordinary interest, the ceremony of unveiling a work of ecclesiastical art, which their eyes told them was in the best taste, and executed with consummate ability. Two of the men whose memory they had met to honour—Thomas Fuller and Bishop Pearson—were lecturers in the church which till the Great Fire of London occupied the site of that building. He then referred briefly to their work, and quoted the words of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, as to the character of Fuller, and of Dr. Bentley as to Bishop Pearson, whose "very dress was gold." Referring to Bishop Walton, the Venerable Archdeacon said the "Biblia Polyglotta" was the performance of his life. Many obstacles stood in the way of its accomplishment, but he was greatly aided in it by Pearson, whom he succeeded as the Bishop of Chester. Learned as these three men were, they were content to lay all their learning at the foot of the Cross, and devote their talents, splendid as they were to the saving of souls. The address was followed by an anthem, the words from St. Luke, ii., verse 8 and following.

SPELLING REFORM.—It is expected that the memorial of the School Boards asking for a Royal Commission of Inquiry in regard to spelling reform will be presented to the Educational Department about the end of January, and that it will be supported by another deputation composed principally of philologists. When the memorial of the London Board was first proposed 101 provincial Boards gave in their adhesion, including many of the largest towns in the kingdom. This number has now increased to 130. Among the recent additions are Brighton, Hull, Swansea, Cardiff, Southampton, Worcester, and Wakefield. Some of these, however, though desirous of inquiry, do not fully endorse all the points of the London memorial, while Birmingham has adopted a memorial of its own with the same practical object.

FOUCAULT'S PENDULUM.—Our readers may recollect the experiment made in 1860, at the Pantheon in Paris, by the learned Leon Foucault, upon the pendulum. A great metallic globe, which hung by a fine wire from the summit of the dome, demonstrated that the oscillation movements of a heavy mass, freely suspended in space, remain independent of the rotation of the earth. The pendulum swung very slowly in consequence of the length of the wire, and at the end of each oscillation a point attached to it ate away by degrees a little wall of sand placed there for the purpose of showing the apparent alteration in the plane of oscillation. This experiment, by which—as we may say—the world can be seen to move round, is to be repeated in the Exhibition of 1878, with such new arrangements as can make it comprehensible to the crowd. The pendulum will be 300 kilogrammes in weight, and will hang from a wire 70 metres long, the object of the experiment is to instruct the public in a visible physical phenomena.—Medical Press and Circular.

ART COMPETITION.—There will be a competition in April in connection with the Science and Art Department of the Committee of Council on Education, South Kensington, for prizes offered by Messrs. Watherston and Son for designs for a loving cup. Three prizes of £50, £30, and £20 respectively, are offered for the three best designs for a three-handled cup, with cover, to be used at a loving-cup. It must be 15 in. high, and illustrate the Biblical story of the Labourers in the Vineyard. The competition is limited to candidates—British born—who are, or have been, bona fide students of schools of art recognised by the Science and Art department, and who have since 1867 taken a third grade prize, or a higher prize in the national competition of that Department.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.—A marked improvement has been effected since Sandringham has belonged to its present Royal owner in the matter elementary education. Formerly, except at Sandringham and Dersingham, there were no schools of any importance; but through the liberality of the Prince and Princess of Wales there are now school-rooms at Sandringham, Dersingham, West Newton, and Wollerton, with excellent teachers. The Princess of Wales takes the liveliest interest in the welfare of the schools and the progress of the children. Each recurring anniversary of her Royal Highness's birthday is marked by a treat to the children of the schools, at each New Year's-eve the Princess distributes cloaks and caps, &c. This year the annual treat could not be given at the usual time, owing to the prevalence of a contagious disease in the neighbouring villages, and so it was postponed till yesterday. A tent having been erected in front of the Hall, the children of the schools of Sandringham, Dersingham, West Newton, and Wollerton, were soon after noon marched up to the Royal residence, and the Princess, accompanied by the young Princes and Princesses, distributed the cloaks, &c.; after which the children had tea. Prince and Princess Christian arrived on Wednesday at Sandringham on a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales.

FEDERICO RICCI.—Letters from Venice announce the death, on December 10th, at Conegliano in the Province of Venice, of Federico Ricci, the well-known composer of opera bouffe. He was born at Naples in 1809, so that he was sixty-eight years of age. His light operatic compositions are still among the most popular in Italy. The chief among them are "Crispino e la Comare," "Corrado d'Altamura," "Un duello sotto," "Una Follia a Roma," "Griselda," &c. His last work of this class was "Rolla." His Venetian popular songs and ballads are much esteemed. Ten years ago Ricci was Professor of Music at the Imperial Conservatory of St. Petersburg. He subsequently resided at Paris and Trieste; but the last years of his life were spent in great retirement at Conegliano. It is pleasant to know that his fame was not barren, but brought him a considerable fortune; to the last, however, he was incorrigibly eccentric. He had always a great affection for Trieste, where his first successes were achieved, and where he lived for many years. By his direction he has been buried there.

LIFEBOAT WORK IN 1877.—During the year which has just closed the lifeboats of the National Lifeboat Institution on different parts of the coasts of the United Kingdom rescued 841 lives, besides saving 35 vessels from destruction. In the same period the Lifeboat Institution granted rewards for saving 200 lives by fishing and other boats, making a grand total of 1041 lives saved last year mainly through its instrumentality. Altogether since its foundation the society has contributed to the saving of 25,400 shipwrecked persons, for which services it has granted 978 gold and silver medals, besides pecuniary rewards to the amount of £54,000. The storms of last November will long be remembered for their frequency and violence, and the noble services of the institution's lifeboats, which saved nearly 300 lives in that month alone. After performing these services some of the lifeboat's crews returned home absolutely exhausted—in some cases many of the men's lives were actually despaired of for several days afterwards. It should be mentioned that the operations of the National Lifeboat Institution now cover the whole coasts of the British Isles, and that, with the exception of a score or so of lifeboats which belong to Harbour Trustees and other local bodies, the whole of the lifeboats of the United Kingdom belong to the National Institution. The list of services here summarized is the best claim of this institution to continued sympathy and support.

AFRICAN EXPLORATION.—A short announcement has lately reached England concerning the Albert Nyanza, in Central Africa, which will not fail to interest many of your readers just now. It relates to a recent exploration conducted by an officer in the service of his Highness the Khedive, and is to the following effect:—"Colonel Mason has been round the Lake Albert in a steamer, and corroborates the fact of its being 'a comparatively small land-locked lake.'"

The Address in answer to the Speech from the Throne will be moved in the House of Lords by the Earl of Wharncliffe, and seconded by the Earl of Loudoun

The Freemason,

A NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

It is with every feeling of the kindest concern that we offer to our numerous readers, in all parts of the world, the customary, though heartfelt, good wish of a "Happy New Year." If even the Freemason were not, as it is, running the race of legitimate success, our duty would indeed be the same, but as it is, we feel especially bound with the arrival of another new year to tender to our very many friends and zealous supporters, grateful thanks and heartfelt good wishes. At such a moment of time the intersection of that narrow line which separates 1877 from 1878, just when we leave the past known and familiar, and enter the future, hidden in ignorance and mystery, it is that the mind grows thoughtful and the heart expands. For after all, say what we may, we are all "members one of another" here; we cannot live isolated lives if even we would, for none of us, to use well-known and sacred words, "liveth to himself," and none of us "dieth to himself." We all inherit sympathies, being mingled with those of others, and the chain of existence if composed of many links, is yet so admirably and curiously contrived that we all form part of one great and consistent whole. Indeed it is this very secret of our mortal striving which seems to have baffled the speculations of scientificists and the conclusions of philosophers. It is this mystery of our race which presents such a wondrous enigma to the mere man of this world, to him who only contemplates humanity and the world, from an utilitarian, from a necessitarian, from a sceptical, from an unbelieving point of view. Despite all the follies and all the sins of mankind, notwithstanding dark treachery and darker baseness, yes, and not forgetting the alienations, the animosities, and the heartlessness of mankind, there is, so to say, a great warm heart of humanity which beats on, nevertheless, amid all change, all trials, and all evil, and which binds us and blends us all with one another here. It is this golden link, and all but electric flash of sympathy, which pervades the mighty brotherhood of us children of the dust, which, too often ignored, so often unappreciated lends such a charm, such a romance, and such a reality to the pervading struggles, the onward hopes of mankind. Like a great army, humanity seems marching on, and if stragglers are here and there falling out of the ranks, if that mighty host has great difficulties to contend with and serious obstacles to surmount, yet it is still moving on. And we as Freemasons, who are ever universal and humanitarian in scope and existence, feel strongly how that Time which leaves us, and yet confronts us with each departing Old and supervening New Year, has a message to us all alike, replete with interest and improvement. It is this, a lesson of sympathy for all men! Our great brotherhood, our signs and symbols, our literature and our lodges, are now all over the world, and with all these things, also speaks one unvarying and unwavering message of peace and good-will. Above the estrangements and divisions of the human race, above war's evil echoes and corruptions, above terrible crimes, yes, and above even all, the fierce, fell, senseless, hatred of Adam's race, Freemasonry, like a good genius would announce a kindly "Eirenicon," for the angry, the warring, the severed, and the suffering mankind! When then, we wish a Happy New Year to all our kind readers, we trust also that 1878 may be a Happy New Year for all our brethren and sisters in the flesh. May war's sad ravages cease, may its painful wounds be healed, in the supremacy of uniting, restoring and gladdening peace; and may 1878 indeed prove a Happy New Year to all for whom we care, to all our friendly patrons, and for theirs; may it be a Happy New Year above all to this seething world of ours, and aid to lighten the load and dispel the clouds, in some measure, of ignorance and bloodshed, of folly and of crime.

WHAT WILL 1878 BRING TO FREEMASONRY.

This is a question difficult to answer, and to some extent surrounded with doubt and debate. We do not think that in Great Britain, or America, or Canada, we need, however, have much difficulty in giving a response to this question, alike hopeful and cheering. Everything seems to prophesy a peaceful year, and much Masonic prosperity. We should indeed be glad if we could think that our lodges would exercise a little more consideration and discretion as to whom they admit into their inner life. At this moment it is not too much to say, that we are proposing for and balloting and admitting candidates "wholesale," without any regard to any other fitness than that which consists in an ability to pay the entrance fees. We do not wish to exaggerate the state of things, but we feel bound at the beginning of a New Year to express our strong sense of the need of caution and carefulness in this respect. It may all seem a trifling matter, and one hardly worth notice, but this unscrupulousness of admission has in it the seeds of great evils to the entire Craft. Abroad we fear that the prospect is dark and discouraging, and murky clouds seem to hang over French Freemasons and other continental bodies. We are apparently on the eve of a great struggle. To use the language of an American journal we have now, "Vaticanism in a New Role," we have to deal with the intolerance of Scepticism, the infallibility of unbelief. It is very curious as a fact, per se, how history repeats itself, and how from two opposite points of view, the very antipodes of faith and acts, ultramontaniam and unbelief, the same persecution is preached, the same persecution is practised. Rome condemns our loyal Brotherhood because we admit non Christians and non Roman Catholics. Unbelief condemns us because we will assert our belief in T.G.A.O.T.U., and require all who join our order to profess the same. It has been quite evident to those who have watched carefully the course of French Freemasonry during the last eventful years, that this new step is neither unexpected or unforeseen. The French Grand Orient has been gradually running down an inclined plane, since that evil hour when it revolutionized the order by organizing the Conseil de l'Ordre and dispensing with a Grand Master. It is now a mutilated and incomplete Grand Lodge, imperfect in its organization and not constituted legally, according to all Masonic precedent. We pass over the sad days of the Parisian Commune, and the mess French Freemasons got into. The only thing that saved French Freemasonry then from universal condemnation and isolation was the fact of the impotence of the Grand Orient itself. As a body it was not mixed up with those ridiculous and deplorable transactions, though many of its members individually were, and it was felt better on all hands not to punish the Grand Orient for the faults of others, especially as strictly speaking it dissolved itself. The ruling spirit of French Freemasonry in Paris, was then the late Bro. Massol; he it was who started "the Morale Independante," which practically does away with everything; he it was who led the crusade against the Bible and all religious teaching; his resolution of 1869 is the one carried in 1877; and there can be little doubt but that following his policy, openly avowed, to do everything by degrees, the ascription "A la Gloire du Grand Architecte de l'Univers" is doomed ere long to disappear also. French Freemasonry even now and much more then will have but fulfilled the prophesy of Monseigneur Dupanloup, who stated that certainly it would not remain "Deiste," but must become "Atheiste." Bro. Findel has sought in our pages to contend that this result has nothing to do with Atheism and the like, but those who are behind the scenes, and none know it better than the eminent Bro. St. Jean himself, are quite aware that "pour le moment," let us hope it is only "pour le moment," the "libres penseurs," and the "esprits forts" have gained the upper hand in French Freemasonry. If any of our brethren will study the original discussion some months back, (not the last sitting), and read the speeches of Bro. Behr and others, they will see what is the real state of the case, and what is the strong prevailing apprehension of many good brethren and true, among the French Freemasons themselves. We cannot accept any Jesuitical apologies or casuistical pleas of mitigation, knowing as we do the facts of the situation, but must once again condemn, with sad forebodings for the future, the recent suicidal act of the Grand Orient of France. Let us hope that other foreign Grand Lodges will avoid so great a blunder. We repeat that we regard the position of foreign Freemasonry in 1878 with many grave apprehensions.

THE "FREEMASON" IN 1878.

Not quite ten years ago, the Freemason first appeared in the literary world, a little bantling, timid, nervous, and unfledged. Like the young bear of the old story, "it had all its troubles to bear." It was at first, if a labour of love, yet a "venture" of some doubt and no little delicacy. It appeared in one sense at a propitious time. Masonic literature, after many struggles, which reminds one of the little "farthing rushlight" of ballad celebrity, was in a very hopeless way, owing, we fairly must admit, to the apathy and indifference of the Craft. It is just possible, too, that Masonic literature was in itself to blame not a little, in that we who remember those more ancient hours, can recall how too much, far too much, of personality marked the utterances of the day, the normal existence of the Masonic press. At least such was the complaint we often heard then, and the reason assigned why a Masonic paper could not be better supported, and we can only suppose that more stirring times, and more exciting questions than those which greet us now, called forth a less restrained exercise of the Masonic pen. But be that as it may, the Freemason appeared the Freemason has continued to appear, the Freemason still appears, and the Freemason prospers. Of course, its course has not always been easy sailing; it has had its ups and downs, its seasons of sunshine and its storms. But still it is a very remarkable success. Stated and upheld by one publisher, with no aid and no subscription list, subsidized by no committee, the organ of no clique, it has simply appealed to the open court of Masonic criticism, judgment, and fair play. It has antagonized none, assailed none, envied none, opposed none. It has never condescended to resort to personality or partizanship, it has never bandied words, it has taken notice of no insinuations, and has laughed at all malevolence. And here it is to-day, holding a position never held by a Masonic journal before, and rapidly increasing in the confidence and support of a most friendly body of friends and patrons. Just now, the Freemason is read all over the world. Its news is repeated, its articles quoted in many Masonic journals, and we have been long and still are truly sensible of the favour and sympathy with which our modest lucubrations are received and commented upon, especially in such Masonic journals as the Keystone, and the New York Dispatch in America. And, therefore, the moral we wish to draw is this, suitable and seasonable at the beginning of a new year, that success in Masonic literature, like all other things, though it cannot be guaranteed to any as a certainty, will as a general rule accompany straight-running, plain sailing, fair dealing, accompanied by a manly sense of independence, and a zealous effort to offer a good article in the open market of trade and barter. To revert to an old truism of political economy, we require free open trade, and we cannot thrive on a system of artificial protection, or hurtful "drawbacks." No doubt in literature there is a special consideration: "does the demand need the supply?" which can only be answered by experience. Masonic literature is a very exceptional literature, we admit, and many are its difficulties, but we are inclined to be hopeful. We see, as we think, manifest signs of improvement, and we certainly may congratulate ourselves on these two facts—first, that had it not been for our publisher, Freemasonry in England would have been for years without a literature at all, and, secondly, that he has created a literature which is alike effective and expanding. To the Freemason must in great measure be fairly ascribed that encouragement which has been given to the archæological and historical study of our antiquities and annals. If in fairness we must not omit here reference to an older journal, once ably conducted by our old friend Bro. Henry G. Warren, yet who, remembering the discussions and discourses since 1869, but must feel how much is due to the ever open pages of the Freemason. The Freemason has set its face against that personality which disgraces Freemasonry, and that indiscreet publication on ritual questions, which offends justly so many good Masons. It has been unsurpassed for the support it has tendered to our great charities, and while it has never forfeited its thoroughly independent character, it has supported, and always will support, with loyalty and devotion, our Royal Grand Master and the lawfully constituted Masonic authorities. Recalling its past, and realizing its present, it appeals with confidence to its increasing circle of friends to-day while it seeks, not unfairly, to justify the zealous efforts of its publisher, and to point to even still greater success in its efforts to please, to instruct, to inform, to edify the Craft.

TIME.

Who has not heard of that little word Time! which yet sums up in itself one of the greatest mysteries of all. For time is alike immeasurable, unexplicable, unrestrainable, and unknown. It is, and it is not. It passes away, and it lives again. It seems to leave us, and yet it is never-ending. It has no commencement, no close, no "beginning of years or length of days." And yet time is the creation of T.G.A.O.T.U., the Divine Creator, and will also one day be swallowed up in eternity. But until that better hour dawns on our weary and waiting world, Time constitutes one of the most remarkable of facts, for the appreciation and realization of mortal man. For Time, curiously enough, is both the season of his joys and the limit of his sorrows. It gives him all he counts most dear, and robs him of all he cherishes most; it is at the same time the cradle and the grave of his personal existence. There is, perhaps, nothing more mysterious, more solemn, more full of marvel and awe, when we come to consider it, than Time. It has seen the rise of Oriental Dynasties, and witnessed the mysterious history of the Hebrew race; it has looked down on the growth of Grecian culture, and watched the march of Roman legions. During its progress the dark night of the darkest ages has yielded to the influence of art, and intelligence, and civilization, and religion, and in all the long annals of Time has the history of our race been written on its stormy pages with an adamant pen, in indelible characters, and with undoubtable certainty. What struggles, what contests, what wars, what revolutions has old Time beheld, and how before its cold and callous gaze have kingdoms and empires come and gone, risen to pre-eminence, and faded like a dream! But yet, though this be so, it is perhaps more in the way in which Time bears on us individually, that we feel its flight and enter into its reality. Time is, Time was, to all of us. Its years succeed to years carefully and silently. We almost doubt at times the accuracy of the fact, the verity of the occurrence. It seems, for instance, but yesterday that we were young, strong, active, surrounded by dear friends, gifted with pleasant gifts, starting on our journey, training for our race. Alas! how Time has sped on halcyon wings, since youth with its grace or maturity with its power, were our privilege and our possession! Alas! how few of us there are who must not feel that Time past has for us all but a melancholy and an upbraiding voice. We might have been so different, from what we are, and yet we are not; we might have done so much better than we have done; we might have been so much more useful citizens of Time than we have been. To most of us, if not all of us, Time always seems to speak in a voice of mingled pathos and sternness. But Time also has for us all a special utterance of tenderness and sympathy. It recalls to us our own life, hushed voices, vanished forms, the near and the dear

the grace of childhood, the true love of maturity, the silvery hair, the placid features of old age. What a wonderful record is that which Time brings for all of mortal mould, of the wreck, of the drift, of the salvage, of the seaweed which line our shore of life. There is a voice from out of the very depths of the past hours of Time which tells us not only that we are all mortal, but that Time which gives us happiness, destroys it also with un pitying mien, and that our whole being is, so to say, summed up in, bound up with the memory of joys which have flitted, of loving friends, pleasant faces, no longer at our sides. But Time does not stop here; if it did, poor feeble comforter, it must ever be, as indeed it is, amid the griefs which affect, the cares which devour, and the hopes which startle us all. But Time is ever passing on, through its own destructive reign, through its own inherent decay, despite its autocratic authority, to that great eternity of our moral being, which lies dim and awful, beyond the "Silent Sea." That is the great secret and hope of Time. Its separations are not eternal, its sorrows are not incurable. No, there is a Great Day of final appeal, a court of lasting award, when all these things shall be put to rights. The hasty sentence, the perverse judgement, the obloquy, the ill-fame of time may yet be but a pathway to an altered condition of all things in another and a better world, and Freemasons who remember the teaching of our goodly ceremonial, will always be glad to remember that the undying and imperishable will yet outlive the passing and the special attributes of Time. Yet when the "fashions of this world" has at last reached its limits, Time has after all but prepared the way for the reign, the laws, the life, the outcome of Eternity.

FREEMASONRY IN 1877.

When the three Masonic Charitable Institutions closed their office doors yesterday afternoon the amount of subscriptions, donations, &c., received during the year 1877 reached the total sum of £42,627 8s. 11d. Of this sum £16,411 19s. 5d. had been received by the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged, Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons; £14,315 9s. 6d. by the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and £11,900 by the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. In 1876 the total amount received by the three Institutions was £39,600, out of which sum the Boys' School were the largest recipients, the Benevolent Institution taking the second place. The latter Institution, however, in 1877 heads the list with a sum larger than that ever yet obtained by any one of the Masonic Institutions. The Girls' School, which in 1876 and 1877 was the lowest on the list of subscriptions, is the oldest of the three Institutions; the Boys' School is the next in age; and the Benevolent Institution is the youngest by nearly half a century. The Girls' School boards, clothes, and educates 162 girls, and will during the present month admit 25 more; the Boys' School boards, clothes, and educates 186 boys, and is about to take in a larger number; and the Benevolent Institution has now on its books 145 aged Freemasons receiving annually £40 each, 130 widows receiving annually £32 each, and 13 widows receiving annually half their late husband's annuities, or £20 each."

We are pleased to transfer this extract from the Times of January 1, 1878 to our pages, as not only a very gratifying announcement in itself, but as a tribute from a non-Masonic paper, to the value and reality of our ancient and benevolent Craft.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The first meeting of the Board of Stewards was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday, at 4 o'clock, when a large number assembled. 189 Stewards were announced by Bro. Terry. Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., was elected Chairman; Bro. Edward Cox, Treas.; and Bro. James Terry, Secretary of the Board of Stewards. The amount of deposit was fixed at £2 2s. and the necessary arrangements entered into. A full report of the meeting will appear in our next. The next meeting will take place on the 24th January!

THE LANDMARKS OF FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

In the Landmarks of Freemasonry are laid down the fundamental principles of our Craft, together with the ground-plan of the entire edifice.

Our Landmarks consist in:

1. Axiomatic symbols which combine the outward and visible truth of geometrical axioms with the inward and spiritual truth of their symbolic nature. These, before all things, inculcate belief in God, the source and Creator of all things visible and invisible, the Immortality of the Soul and the Concord and everlasting Harmony between Nature and Religion, Science and Faith.

2. The architectural features of the lodge; the two pillars on either side of the entrance, their signification; the fixed objects within the lodge and their due bearings.

3. The opening and closing of the lodge, together with the knocks, signs and words of the St. John's degrees, and the consecration of a lodge with corn-or-bread, salt, oil, and wine.

4. The relative places in the lodge of the W. Master and the two brother Wardens and, consequently, of the three Orders of Architecture and the three great lights they bear.

5. The symbolic signification of the builders' tools, derived from their real practical use, and their position in the lodge.

6. The Master's key and the symbolic signification of numbers together with the derivation thereof.

7. The Masonic virtues.

8. The Masonic greeting.

9. The Abacus of the G.A.O.T.U., the holy Bible.

To illustrate these Landmarks and impress them on our minds the old charges have been drawn up and printed for the use of the brethren, together with the Book of Constitutions, and these, though not Landmarks, are the canon and written law of Freemasonry.

Yours fraternally,

VERTI.

PINE'S LIST OF LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In looking over the Masonic Review, Cincinnati, U.S.A., I notice in the September number, page 344, a correspondent of the Masonic Record of Western India writes:—"I have in my possession a very interesting relic of Freemasonry, in the shape of 'a list of regular lodges according to the seniority and constitution; printed for and sold by J. Pine, Engraver, Little Britain, and in Aldersgate-street, and bears date 1719, fifty-four lodges are mentioned.'" Knowing how earnestly you, yourself, and Bro. W. J. Hughan, are searching for these interesting relics of Masonry, I trust this excerpt may be of service to you. Perhaps, you two might be able to get some further information of importance on this subject from the Masonic Record of Western India.

Yours fraternally,

GEO. R. HARRIOTT,
P.G.M. Wigtown and Kirkcudbright.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the Scottish "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Since my last letter to you on this subject the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Committee of Scotland have practically endorsed the decision of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. The Grand Lodge of England has unanimously referred the matter to a committee, to show that they do not act hastily but deliberately, and to enable the French Lodges that have remained true to the Order an opportunity of emancipating themselves from the sentence to be passed on the Grand Orient and its adherents. In like manner, the Grand Committee of Scotland has taken up the question, and will report on it in February. It is particularly to be noticed that the meeting of the Grand Lodge of England was unusually crowded, showing how important the question was considered by the members of the English Craft. May our meeting in February be as large and as unanimous.

Yours fraternally,

GEO. R. HARRIOTT,
P.G.M. Wigton and Kirkcudbright.

THE ORDER OF MALTA.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—An anonymous correspondent, under the nom de plume of the Marquis of Carabas, K.G., and who asserts that he is a member of the Order of Malta, is justly severe in The Times of the 24th inst. upon those who assume styles and titles to which they have neither right nor claim, but since he includes among such pretenders a lamented friend whose death appeared in your obituary of the 19th inst., making an attempt to disparage the high character of an honourable man, and at the same time a covert attack upon a body with which I am officially connected, I must ask you to grant me the opportunity of a reply to him. As Secretary of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, I confirm the announcement made in your columns that the late Richard Woolfe, F.S.A., was the Registrar of that confraternity, and I take occasion to express the regret with which I am compelled to vindicate the character of one who was truth and uprightness itself, and above all suspicion of being in any sense of the word a pretender.

But as the remark of your anonymous correspondent—who evidently wilfully ignores the real position of the Order of St. John in England—may lead to some misconception in the minds of your readers as to the legitimacy of the claims of that body and its relations to the (Roman Catholic) Order of Malta, I must ask you to give publicity to the following extract from a protest lodged in 1874 by the English Langue of the Order of St. John in the Lord Chamberlain's Office, in reply to attacks which have been made from time to time by the Roman Order of Malta upon their Protestant confreres:—

"That although the Grand Priors of Italy and Germany may, as alleged, be the only sections of the Order which are in communion of jurisdiction and obedience with the Roman Council, yet this fact in no manner interferes with the lawful existence of those sections of the Order which are not also in such communion and obedience. That the Order lawfully exists in Russian Priors of the Greek Church, in Brandenburg, and England, professing the Protestant faith, and that communion with and obedience to the Roman Council is not necessary to its validity in any of these countries, or in any other State in which it may have lawful being."

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,
E. A. H. LECHMERE, Secretary and Receiver of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England.

Rhydd Court, Upton-on-Severn, Dec. 26.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—The practice of assuming styles or titles seems to me on the increase. People seem not to realise the inconvenience to the community at large of such a practice. Within a few days I have noticed the following instances:—A rev. clergyman of the Established Church appended to his name the letters, "O.S.B." (Order of St. Benedict). Every one knows that this is a Catholic religious order which has existed for some 14 centuries, has its own officers, and is in every respect as well defined a body as, say, the Benchers of Lincoln's-inn, with their society, or the three battalions of the Rifle Brigade. Then, I read in The Times last week a letter from a gentleman who appended to his name the style of "Apostolic Prothonotary." Here again the College of Prelates bearing this title is one of the most ancient corporations of the Roman Court; I look in vain in the official list for this gentleman's name; in other words, it is a fancy title which he has bestowed on himself, as words sometimes gain or lose a letter, "for the sake of euphony," I suppose. Again in your obituary one day this week I read the demise of a very respectable member of a learned society who is declared to have been Registrar for many years of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, in England. Being a member of this Order, commonly called the Order of Malta, which has its own officers and official lists, I beg to say that no such person belongs or ever did belong to it. Where is this sort of thing to stop? Is it competent for me, for instance, to style myself a Master in Chancery, a Colonel in the Coldstream Guards, or a Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, although as a fact I have none of those honourable dignities? Perhaps you may deem my inquiry worthy of a small space in The Times. If we are to assume what titles we please and describe ourselves as members of any honourable body to which we do not belong, I have no hesitation in choosing the titles which most attract me, and signing myself, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

THE MARQUIS OF CARABAS, K.G.

[In commending these letters to the notice of all our readers we wish to say that as regards the historical point raised by our worthy Bro. Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, we should like to have some historical evidence on the subject. What are historically the facts of the case as respects the perpetuation and continuation of the Order of St. John in England?—Ed.]

ASYLUM FOR FATHERLESS CHILDREN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you kindly allow me to ask any of your readers who may happen to be subscribers to the Asylum for Fatherless Children at Reedham, Surrey, to give me their votes for Arthur Thomas Mitchell, aged 10½ years. He is the son of the late Mr. William Mitchell, printer, Sudbury, Suffolk, who died from a painful internal disease about two years ago. The applicant is one of four children, (one of whom is a cripple), all entirely dependent upon their mother, who is a most respectable person, and who carries on a small business as a dressmaker. The case is one well worthy of support, and, as in consequence of the boy's age it must be his last application, the old proverb, "bis dat qui cito dat," is perfectly true in this case. I shall be most happy to supply any further information that may be required.

I may mention that Mrs. Mitchell is a Congregationalist, and that the case is warmly supported by the Rev. J. Hollier, Congregational minister at Sudbury, as well as by the rector, Canon Molyneux, and several other well-known persons in the neighbourhood, and that I shall be glad to receive any proxies with which I may be favoured, not later than the 12th January.

Believe me, yours very faithfully and fraternally,

CHARLES J. MARTYN, P.G.C.,
Rector of Melford, Suffolk, and Rural Dean, D.P.G.M. for Suffolk.

Dec. 31st., 1877.

ANTIQUITY OF INSURANCE.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—I am much indebted to "Cantab" for his drawing my attention to the earliest note of insurance, which is to be found in ancient Indian literature. The point with which I intended to deal in the portion of my lecture on the Talmud referred to was the introduction of the practice of insurance into Europe. I find that several authorities are quoted by Mr. Hendriks in his contributions to the history of insurance—viz., the Florentine historian Giovanni Villani, Cleirac, in his "Les us de Coutumes de la Mer," and the great French "Encyclopédie." These fully confirm the statement I made, that insurance was introduced in Europe by the Jews; and I quoted the interesting passage from the Talmud (Babylonia, p. 116) to indicate the probable source of that valuable invention.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,
HERMANN ADLER.
Bayswater, Dec. 26.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

Will you grant me space to ask if any brother will render this a really "Happy New Year" to a "distressed Mason," by finding him some occupation of trust, for which he is well fitted in every respect, and for the proper discharge of the duties of which his friends will give substantial guarantees?

He has been a manufacturer in a large way of business, but the depression of trade has overcome him.

Fraternally yours,

WM. TEBBS.
P.S.—All particulars will be given in answer to replies, addressed to the Rev. William Tebbs, Ashwick Lodge, Caterham Valley.

CHRISTMAS CARDS.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—We have to face a new great "social evil." At a quarter past four on this Christmas Day at Clifton, the postman is just delivering his morning letters at the house I am temporarily staying at. In other words, the legitimate correspondence of the country has been delayed seven hours in order that cartloads of children's cards may be delivered. We are a curious people. The habit of sending wedding cards, based upon a sensible object, is being rapidly thrust aside; and yet the whole population—men, women, and children—seems suddenly to have given itself up to the stationers and fancy shops and their endless variety of Christmas and New Year's cards. People sit down with pen in hand, and envelopes and postage-stamps before them, and bring up from the depths of their inner consciousness the names of people of whom they know little, and for whom they care less, to address, in order to swell out the total number they may despatch, as forming a ground of boasting. On the other hand, the number received by the individual and the family are recounted with a zest and pride marvellous for its childishness. We shall have a repetition of this disarrangement of the postal service on New Year's Day. Valentine's Day is a "flea-bite" to it. I dare say that some will say that this complaint is very cynical and very morose. Not doubting that in many cases the sending of cards may serve a very useful purpose and represent genuine regard, I maintain that it has now become a huge national plaything, which has definite evils and inconveniences in its train. It is like the "Boat-race," and the "Harrow and Eton match," and will, I trust, disappear as suddenly as "spelling bees" and most of the rinks. When Mary Ann the maid can boast of as many Christmas cards as her mistress or the young ladies, it will soon go out of favour. Meanwhile, if the present fever continues, I commend it to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as affording a clue to a very productive tax. It would beat the Match Tax, at all events.

Yours obediently,

M.P.

Clifton, Bristol, Dec. 25.

[We quite endorse the graphic complaint of "M.P." to the Times.—Ed.]

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to your correspondent "Lex," in your issue of the 8th ult., you state that a Chaplain, not being a P.M., would nevertheless sit on the dais to the right of the W.M.

Supposing the Treasurer not to be a P.M., would he equally sit on the dais? and if so would both these principles hold good in a Mark as well as a Craft Lodge.

Yours fraternally,
A W.M. Designate.
[In a Craft Lodge the Treasurer does not necessarily sit on the dais.—Ed.]

DANGERS OF THE ST. BERNARD.—The Swiss Times says that on the 25th of November, five travellers started about 1 p.m. from the Cantine of Proz for the Great St. Bernard. Snow was falling thickly and a violent north wind was blowing it along in blinding clouds, still, notwithstanding the remonstrances of the proprietor of the cantine, they determined to continue their journey. Night overtook them at the bridge of Mudry, about an hour's distance from the convent. Three of the party soon after became so exhausted that they were unable to proceed, but the others started out for the hospital, where they arrived about 3 a.m., having mistaken their way and wandered about several hours in the dark. The monks immediately set out for the rescue of the other three, taking with them their dogs and a good supply of restoratives, and after some hard work they succeeded in discovering them—one dead, and the legs and arms of the other two frozen. One of the two survivors died shortly after his removal to the hospital, but the other is in a fair way to recovery. Calamities of this kind are likely to become more frequent on the St. Bernard, as the Cantine of Proz, which forms so welcome a shelter for travellers, is about to be closed, the Government of the Canton Valais having refused to continue the payment of the annual subsidy for its support.

Reviews.

"La Chaine d'Union."

We are happy to note and to inform our brethren that this interesting French periodical, so ably edited by Bro. Hubert, has distinguished itself by its clear and decided views of the extreme folly of the last revolutionary act of the Grand Orient of France. We do not mean to say that Bro. Hubert and ourselves agree perhaps in every particular, but we are pleased to find that he accepts our general view of the situation, that Freemasonry is neither atheistical nor sectarian, and that the recent change by the Grand Orient of France in their Constitution, on the absurd plea of toleration, is as jesuitical as it is peurile.

"The Garden Oracle for 1878." Edited by SHIRLEY HIBBERD.—Gardeners' Magazine Office, 11, Ave Maria Lane.

We have received and read this "Horticultural Year Book" with pleasure and interest. It is a most valuable book for practical gardeners and unpractical amateurs, and the careful reader will find it most worthy of his attentive consideration. To all who value a garden—and no more pleasurable and healthy enjoyment exists,—we commend this little work because it is for all who busy themselves in garden work, a very useful vade mecum. We have often thought how much better people are employed looking after their pansies, and roses, and carnations, to say nothing of geraniums, and tending their Marie Louise, their Louise Bonne, their Josephine de Malines, and even their Bishops' Thumbs, for instance, than mixing themselves up in much of the noise and folly and deception of the great Vanity Fair of human life. But as we do not wish to bore our readers with too much philosophy at this season, we stop here. We are among those who like both flowers in our garden and fruit trees on our walls, and we confess to have a great weakness for flowers and fruit. And we can realise no greater enjoyment than to see how our "Noblesse" "oblige" or our "Royal George" behaves, to watch the grapes in our hothouses, the apricots and nectarines on our hot walls. Indeed we have often found Masonic teaching in the contemplation of the careful cultivation of our fruit trees, keeping before us that it is always well to remember that other things require training besides trees, and that this life of ours is a training and a cultivation, not for the luxuriance of blossom only, but also for the perfection of fruit. We grow, however, so didactical and so sentimental that we will close our remarks. We recommend the "Garden Oracle" to all who wish to study and realise the progress of the season and the development of floricultural life.

"Angels and Men," by WILLIAM SMITH.—Nisbet and Co., 21, Berners Street.

No one can say that we do not live in a poetically inclined age, for ours just now is a "plethora" of poetic lucubrations of countless kinds. Indeed, it is a very remarkable fact in itself, this production of poetry, which is going on at a rapid rate amongst us. We do not say that all the poetry we have to run over is of the same standard, for there is "poetry and poetry," as we all know; and though no doubt much that comes forth into publicity is not read at all, there is a residuum which is undoubtedly very striking and very real. As long as the world lasts tastes will differ and opinions vary as to what is interesting and effective in poetic efforts, and the question, "What is Poetry?" seems capable of more than one answer, for it is quite clear that the admirer of Longfellow, for instance, may not feel himself at home with Swinburne; the reader of Lord Houghton may not care much for Rossetti; the disciple of Præd may doubt Browning, and the believer in Tennyson may shake his head at Chomondeley Parnell; he who believes in John Keble may not realise Edgar Poe. And yet we venture to think that the great academe of poetry may well include these various classes, as it is indeed a fair champaign, and presents, as it were, before our wondering eyes a marvellous growth of goodly trees, differing in species, size, and value. We therefore ask for toleration as regards our poetic writers of to-day, as we belong to that eclectic school in respect to poetry which can read Matthew Arnold and enjoy Frederick Locker; which can sympathise with Austin Dobson, and the Boudoir Ballads, while we equally wonder at Mr. Morris, and delight in the promise of numerous writers among the "oi polloi" of poetry. For poetry seems always to be a great school of toleration and development. It is idle to lay down a standard and say none are poets who do not come up to it. We might as well proclaim "Paradise Lost" as the ne plus ultra of poetic excellence, and excommunicate Butler, Dryden, Pope, Cowper, Gray, or proclaim our faith in Klopstock's "Messiah" and ostracise Geibel and Platen, and Heine, and Strachwitz, and Zeidlitz, and Chamisso. If in anything we ought to keep clear of mouthing dogmatism, it is as regards poetry. We therefore think that though "Angels and Men" may appear to some uninteresting and overstrained, it is a little book worth some study and some consideration. Of course a poem in four books in blank verse is a serious undertaking, especially in an age of cursory and careless reading. But the passages we have dipped into, here and there, (let the reader note our honest avowal), we are much pleased with, as much as most unlike some of the polished utterances of the hour, they are neither full of scepticism nor irreligion. They neither suggest doubt or palliate immorality. The writer has clearly a facile flow of words, and a pleasant adjustment of ideas, and we agree with him in his view of man's lifelong conflict, his needs and his aids, his hopes and his dangers, his safety, his rest, and his reward. The work is dedicated to the Poet Laureate, and will, we doubt not, be read and admired by many of our brethren.

"A Book of Episodes," by J. M. Chanson; Dean and Son, Fleet-street.

We took up this little work with interest, we put it down with astonishment. We had stumbled upon a new language, new ideas, new emotions, new sympathies. The five episodes which make up this wonderful little volume are respectively entitled "The episode of Farnham Priory," "El Santo Rosario," "Clytemnestra and Agamemnon," "John Mainwaring fecit," "The last Cruise of the Concordia." Three of them are all equally affecting, equally moving, and equally awe-inspiring. We are told on first-rate female authority, whose exactness we do not doubt, that we have in these episodes the vernacular of our young men, the language in which they condescend to make love and to enquire for a "cigar," or to politely request an harmless infusion of B. and S. It is always pleasant in this dull world of ours to find some "new delight," some unexpected emotion, and we confess that the perusal of this book of "Episodes" has opened out to us a new region of thought, experiences and language. We say nothing of the plots of the episodes, of the stories per se, the teaching they offer, the "moral" they convey. They are something so peculiar that we cannot possibly criticize them on any ground of analogy or normal construction. They remind us strongly of certain "peny dreadfuls" which we are assured are eagerly perused by our young men, such as the "Bounding Panther of the Ceaseless Prairie," the "Lone Virgin of the Cannibal Islands," the "Vindictive Monk of the Deserted Monastery," and "the Midnight Visitor of the Ruined Chateau." We should not so much object to the thrilling narratives, and the weird tales, the actual horrors and the suggested sensationalism, because we know that unfortunately such is the taste of the hour, and though too we deem such a profusion of mystery awe and crime, a mistaken use of the imaginative power and a decided injury to morals and good taste amongst us. But we do most loudly protest against the grammar; it is unlike anything we have ever read before. Sentences there are without a verb, though with plenty of adjectives and notes of exclamation; paragraphs also abound in which it is impossible to say which is the predicate, which the subject. Indeed, there are places in which we can find nothing but mysterious hyphens and alarming notes of admiration.

Now we do not wish to seem to be too severe, but we feel strongly that such a peculiar use, such a stringing together of words can only end in positive barbarism, in a fearful retrogression of our "English tongue." But having said this, we may add that if any of our readers want plenty of romance and plenty of the emotional, if they want to sup off horrors, and be alternately excited and depressed, we certainly admit that they can easily be satisfied by reading this Book of Episodes. We shall not be even unprepared to hear that the book is much read, and more thought of, for it is "bizarre" enough to please any one. But as candid reviewers we have expressed our opinion honestly, manfully and in good faith.

We add one little sentence as an illustration of what we deem pure nonsense and incorrect English:—

"He had been many years away—changed as he was none knew him till he told." Told what? It seems the writer wishes to convey the idea, that he told the retainers, (young men's word for servants), that he was the brother of course of the "murdered one!" for the terse writer goes on to say—"But when he told," (again we ask what?) "all these retainers of the place rejoiced."

Is this English? We venture to say, No!

We may add that "Clytemnestra and Agamemnon" can hardly properly be called sensational, or the Last Cruise of the Concordia either, though in both the grammar is equally defective, according to our recollections of Lindley Murray.

"Bicentenary Memorial of the Lodge, Canongate, Kilwinning, 20th December, 1877."

We have received this most interesting little memorial. So interesting do we deem it, that we have written to learn if we can get permission to reprint it for the information of our English Freemasons in the "Masonic Magazine," with the facsimiles, as we could not dilate upon it here to our satisfaction without greatly exceeding the normal modest limits of reviews in the Freemason.

ROMAN CATHOLIC OPPOSITION.

The evidence is continually accumulating which indicates the bitter hostility of feeling entertained against Masonry on the part of the Roman Catholic Church. High Papal authorities, including even the Pope himself, put forth their proclamations against the Institution, and pronounce anathemas upon every Roman Catholic Freemason. A stern discipline is sought to be enforced against any followers of the Church who may be rash enough to enrol themselves members of the fraternity. So it is, the priest refuses to give the dying Mason the consolation of the rites of the Church until he has renounced Masonry; and so it is, if the Catholic Mason dies without abjuring the Institution, he will be most likely to be denied Christian burial according to the forms of the Church in which he had membership. Two cases in point have recently come to light,—one in this country and one in England. In the latter case the man was a devout Catholic no less than a faithful Mason. He was an excise officer and of good reputation; dying suddenly no opportunity was given to demand recantation of him as the price of extreme unction. When, however, the family of the deceased sought to arrange for his burial in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, and requested the parish priest to officiate at the funeral, they were met by the reply that the man who had died was a Freemason, and therefore could not be buried in consecrated ground. Canon Walker, the priest in charge, said that it was contrary to the rules of his Church to inter a member of any secret society; and he seemed by no means unwilling to use the occasion to show his own hostility to Masonry, and to make clear the position occupied by the Church he represented. A Protestant clergyman was called in, and the service of the Church of England was read over the deceased Catholic, who was buried as a heretic in consecrated ground—his only offence being that at the time of his death he was a Mason in good and regular standing.

It hardly seems possible that such bigotry and intolerance should be manifested in these latter days, or that the Roman Catholic authorities should carry their opposition to Masonry to such an extent. But other evidence is not wanting to prove the bitter and undiminished hostility of Papacy to the Craft. The allocutions of Pius the Ninth may not be quite so severe, as to how the Church shall deal with Masons, as were the proclamations of some of his predecessors. Threats of the Inquisition may no longer be fulminated, but the spirit of the present Pope, as shown in the papers he has put forth—the Bulls and Edicts regarding Masonry—is as hard and intolerant as was the temper of Clement himself. The Roman Catholic authorities and leaders are all in accord on this subject. Priests, teachers, editors—all join in misrepresenting the character and purposes of Freemasonry, and in denouncing members of the Catholic Church who may seek to affiliate with the Craft. Thus the Catholic Universe deemed itself justified in ridiculing the recent Templar gathering at Cleveland, and indulging in sneers at the manifestations made by the Order in religion's name. Men of all classes, professions, and faiths decorated their residences on the day of the great display in the Forest City; only Roman Catholics kept their houses closed and put forth no sign of greeting. Just now the Boston Pilot is severely exercised because the civil authorities have asked the Masons to dedicate the soldier's monument in Boston. It seizes the occasion to cry out against the Order and to influence its readers, and, so far as possible, the Roman Catholic community, against the Institution. This is to be expected. Papacy was never tolerant. Its genius is in the line of illiberality, restraint, persecution. It will allow no secrets among its followers that the Church cannot penetrate. It will recognise and approve no organisation that it cannot control. Its opposition must be counted upon, first, last, always.—Freemason's Repository.

Mulum in Barbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

A CURIOUS MASTER MASON'S CERTIFICATE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A day or two ago a friend and brother of mine showed me a parchment document, in MS., a little less in size than half a sheet of foolscap, which he had turned up in rummaging amongst a lot of family papers. The document in question bears the following:—

"Fleece Lodge, in Barnstable, No. 281.
"To the Right Worshipful the Master and Wardens of every perfect regular constituted Lodge.

"This is to acquaint you, and all true and faithful Brethren, that Richard Browne, the barer hereof, was rais'd to the degree of a Master Mason, in our Lodge, the 27th of December, 1765; and, as a sober, worthy, honest Brother we recommend him, and as one may do honour to the Craft. Sealed with our Lodge Seal, the 6th January, 1766, A.M. 5766.

"John Peters, Mr.

"J. Place, S.W.

"George Rooke, J.W.

"Awth. Pagé, P.M.

"Richard Rooke, Secretary."

The red wax of the seal, I may mention, is almost defaced, and is impressed on a strip of corded ribbon, probably a light blue at one time, but now faded. I have before heard of travelling certificates being presented to brothers in the old times—is this one? Fleece Lodge, No. 281, also, I find does not exist in Barnstable; but in its place is Loyal Lodge, No. 251, founded in 1783. Perhaps some old member of the latter can say when Fleece Lodge collapsed.

Yours fraternally,

DRYASDUST.

WHAT IS A FREEMASON?

Is a question very often asked.

I will tell you what he is like and what he is? He is like a fox for cunning, a dove for tameness, a lamb for innocence, a lion for boldness, a bee for industry, and a sheep for usefulness. A word on each: he is cunning enough to become a man (i.e. a Freemason); he is tame enough to continue one; he is innocent enough to deserve to be one; he is fierce enough to be worthy of being one; by contributing like the bee in summer for winter he continues to be one; and like a sheep he is not only doing good to himself, but to those who may be acquainted with or dependent on him. Nay! he is a dutiful child, an affectionate parent, a tender husband, a faithful servant, a good master, a peaceful neighbour, a loyal subject, a wise king, a just ruler, and a true friend; full of affection to his brethren, faithful to his friends, generous to his enemies, warm with compassion to the unfortunate, self-denying to little private interests and happiness; magnanimous without being proud, humble without being mean, just without being harsh, on whose word we can entirely rely, whose professions of kindness are the effusions of his heart, one in fine, whom, independently of any views of advantage, we should choose for a superior, could trust as a friend, and could love as our brother from the same parent. "This is a Freemason according to Freemasonry."

Yours fraternally,

A BROTHER.

FREEMASONRY IN SCOTLAND.

The annual meeting of Mother Kilwinning Lodge was held on the 21st ult. in the hall of the lodge. There was a large muster of brethren, Bros. R. W. Cochran-Patrick of Woodside, Depute Provincial Grand Master for Ayrshire, presiding. The lodge having been duly opened in the first degree, and some routine business transacted, the following office-bearers were unanimously appointed:—Colonel Murr, M.P., R.W.M. and Provincial G.M. for Ayrshire; Sir James Fergusson, Bart., Past Provincial Pro. G.M.; Patrick Burns, D. M.; J. Carruthers, S.M.; R. Montgomerie, M.P., Proxy Master; J. A. Ferguson, P.S.W.; John Tweed, P.J.W.; J. Gibson, S.W.; J. Gillespie, J.W.; Revs. J. Gillespie, W. Lee Ker, John Sime, and Alexander Inglis, Chaplains; Robert Wylie, Secretary; John Winton, Treasurer; Robert Aird, S.D.; George Jack, J.D.; William Purves, S.S.; W. Paterson, J.S.; James Crawford, B.B.; John Armstrong, jun., architect; C. Aitken, I.G.; C. Breckenridge, Tyler.

Bro. Wylie read a letter from the Rev. George Lakeman (a member of the lodge), dated Portsoy, December, 14, stating that he was somewhat pained that he had to call attention to the recent action taken by the Grand Orient of France in having struck out of its preliminary declaration the words which express belief in the existence of God and the immortality of the soul. He looked upon this as a great calamity. He had observed that the Irish Grand Lodge had promptly passed a resolution regretting and strongly protesting against the action of the French Grand Orient in this matter; and he understood that the Grand Lodge of England had appointed a committee to report upon the subject. Bro. Lakeman thought that Mother Kilwinning ought not to remain silent, because, were she doing so, it would give colour to the assertion sometimes made that Freemasonry was only an empty shadow, without substance or form—without a meaning. He therefore suggested that the Mother Lodge should pass a resolution in words similar to the following:—"That we, the members of the Mother Lodge of Kilwinning, beg respectfully to call the attention of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to the unfortunate step which has been taken by the Grand Orient of France, whereby a belief in the existence of God and the immortality of the soul is expunged from its fundamental principles, and to express the hope that some step will be taken by which the Freemasons of Scotland may give expression of the sorrow they feel that their brethren and friends should have so acted." Bro. Lakeman further said that between seventy and eighty French lodges had protested against the change, and he submitted that Mother Kilwinning Lodge ought to do all in their power to support these lodges in the stand they were making for the right.

Bro. Cochran-Patrick agreed that they should take the action suggested in that letter, for no doubt the Grand Orient had struck at the very foundation of Masonry when they made such a change. He had found in Denmark, Sweden, and Norway that the Lodge Mother Kilwinning was regarded with great respect, and he believed that any resolution which she passed on the step taken by the Grand Orient would have great effect. He proposed a resolution in the terms suggested in the letter, and thought that a copy should be sent to the Grand Lodge of Scotland and Grand Orient of France. (Applause.)

Bro. J. G. Halket seconded the resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

The Lodge Mother Kilwinning celebrated their annual festival in the evening, and was visited by large deputations from the following daughter lodges, headed by their respective Masters, namely, St. Andrew's, Kilmarnock, 126; St. Andrews, Irvine, 149; St. John (Kilwinning), Beith, 157; Thistle and Rose, Stevenston, 169; Blair, Dalry, 290; and Neptune (Kilwinning), Ardrossan, 442. A most happy and enjoyable evening was spent.

SWEDENBORGIAN RITE IN LIVERPOOL.

On Wednesday, the 19th. December, the first lodge under the beautiful ritual, viz: The Royal Oscar Lodge and Temple, No. 9, was consecrated by the P.G.M. for Lancashire, Bro. Major George Turner, at the Compton Hotel, Church Street. After the consecration Bro. Thomas Clark, P.M. 673, 673; and holding many other offices in Masonry, was duly installed as the first W. Master, and the following officers were appointed to their respective positions: Bros. W. T. May, P.M., 673, and 1393; as S.W. Thos. Roberts, P.M. 673, as J.W.; John Lloyd, P.M. 249, M. of C.; J. Wood, (Freemason) Registrar R. Pearson, P.M. 673, Treasurer; W. Brackenbury, Secretary; H. Marshall, Chaplain; Lewis Herman, Marshall; D. Jackson, S.D. H. Burrows, W.M. 673, J.D. John Hughes, P.M. 220, Standard Bearer; John Atkinson, Sword Bearer; John Seddon, Herald; John Lolly, Senr. Steward; James Sampson, 2nd. Steward; W. J. Haleham, 3rd. Steward; and Thos. Smyth, Pursuivant. After the initiation of John Seddon by the W.M., the brethren adjourned to refreshment, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Allusion was made by the P.G.M., Bro. Major George Turner, and the W.M., to the spirited and very successful manner in which the lodge had been established, and which promises to be the largest and best worked lodge in the province, being only started within the present month, and already a large number of brethren have joined. It was expected that the splendid jewel of the Order would have been ready for the members, but no doubt the Masonic jeweller having it in hand will complete it before the forthcoming Annual Ball.

Obituary.

BRO. RICHARD WOOLFE.

Bro. Woolfe was descended of an old family formerly seated at Madeley, in Shropshire, where one of his ancestors, a Roman Catholic gentleman of that name, afforded a refuge and hospitality to King Charles the Second, fleeing from his signal defeat at Worcester, in 1651. The deceased gentleman had lately changed the orthography of his name—originally "Woof"—to "Woolfe." Bro. Woolfe was Town Clerk of Worcester and as such, possessed ample scope for the pursuit of local history and antiquities in the large collection of MSS. and printed records confided to his keeping. These he not only carefully examined himself, but willingly afforded facilities for others to inspect who were engaged in the same pursuit. We are assured by Mr. Noake that the deceased Bro. greatly assisted him in the preparation of his recently-published work, entitled "Worcestershire Relics," which fact is gracefully acknowledged by the author in the dedication of the volume to him.

Bro. Woolfe's great and principal work, however—performed during his time of office of Town Clerk—was in collecting and arranging all the municipal records, books, maps, documents, and pictures in the possession of the Corporation, with such interesting additions as he could procure, either by purchase or the free contribution of the citizens, and compiling a catalogue of the same, which was printed in the year 1874. This was a work involving great labour and some personal sacrifice, which, however, was cheerfully undergone by Bro. Woolfe for the benefit of the city. The Corporation at his request made a grant for constructing a strong room for the reception of this valuable collection. He also presented them with an oil portrait of Charles II., to be hung in the Council Chamber.

Bro. Woolfe, who devoted a good deal of spare time to historical, archaeological, and genealogical studies, was a fellow of the Antiquarian, of the Royal Historical, and other literary societies, to whose transactions he occasionally contributed some interesting papers. He was one of the original founders of the Worcester Architectural Society and the Archaeological Club, contributing papers to the latter, some of which were subsequently printed, including one on "The Seal and Arms of the City of Worcester," a statement of "The personal expenses of Charles II. in the City of Worcester, 1651," also a description of the portraits in the Guildhall.

Bro. Woolfe was an active and esteemed member of our Masonic Order, contributing to the lore of the society, to the recognition of its principles, and the advancement of universal brotherhood. He had filled the offices of W.M. of the Worcester Lodge, 280, and First Principal of St. Wulstan's Royal Arch Chapter, besides important offices in the Provincial Grand Lodge of Worcestershire. He was one of the founders of the St. Amand Encampment of Knights Templar, meeting in Worcester, of which he was the first Eminent Commander. As a Deputy Provincial Grand Commander of the Order he was corresponding Secretary in the dominion of Canada, with the rank of Past Provincial Grand Commander. He had also filled the chairs in other superior grades of Freemasonry, and was a member of the 32nd Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite. He took a leading part in promoting the Masonic testimonial in the shape of a superb stained glass window in the Cathedral to the late eminent Bro. Joseph Bennett; and in the other painted window there presented by the Grand Lodge of Worcestershire. In these, Bro. Woolfe's acquaintance with the arts of antiquarian design, and his thorough imbue with, and profound appreciation of, the mysterious and science-teeming emblems of Freemasonry enabled him to render the most efficient service.

Bro. Woolfe joined the Order of St. John in 1867, and up to the time of his illness he took the greatest possible interest in its charitable work. In 1869 the diet system of relief, which had been employed with regard to convalescent patients of some of the London hospitals, was introduced by the order into Worcester. From that time many of the convalescent patients of Worcester Dispensary have received relief in the form of nourishing food, by which means a large number of persons recovering from sickness, who are depending on their toil for their daily bread, have been enabled to return to their work sooner than otherwise could possibly have been the case. In this labour of love for his poorer brethren Bro. Woolfe took a most active part, as he recognised in the system one of the best means of employing the charitable funds of the Order to which he was so devotedly attached. As far as his services in this direction are concerned, his loss is irreparable. But it was not only in Worcester that his services to the Order were so valuable and highly appreciated by the members. From the intimate knowledge which he had of the history of the Order, and in consideration of other special qualifications which he possessed, he was selected in 1872, by the Chapter of the Order in England, to fill the important post of Registrar, an office in which his legal, historical, and general knowledge were of the highest advantage. His loss in this respect will be deeply regretted.

The funeral of the deceased gentleman took place at the New Cemetery, on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 20, at one o'clock. Prior to that time there gathered in the walk leading to the chapel a number of friends of the late Bro. Woolfe, and when the cortege arrived at the gate, the following procession was formed: Freemasons of Worcester, Magistrates and Corporation, members of the legal profession, members of the Board of Guardians, and members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, followed by three mourning coaches, the hearse, two mourning coaches, and the private carriages of Bro. Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart, M.P., R. Padmore, Esq., and R. Smith, Esq. At the entrance to the chapel, the procession divided, and the coffin was carried in. There the first part of the funeral service was performed by the Rev. T. W. Wood, curate of Hawley Castle, and one of the Chaplains to the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, the proper psalms being sung by the Cathedral choir, and also the hymn "Days and Moments Quickly Flying;" Mr. A. J. Caldicott presiding at the harmonium. On emerging from the chapel, the order of procession was reversed, the members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem taking the first position immediately after the choir, who sang "Jesus lives, no longer now," the Worcester Freemasons bringing up the rear. At the grave, which was a bricked one, the Rev. Oswald Mangin Holden, Vicar of Gailey, Staffordshire, and also a Chaplain to the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, concluded the solemn service, and amid signs of profound grief, all that was mortal of one so well known and so universally beloved was committed to mother earth. The coffin was composed of oak, with brass mountings and mediæval brass furniture. The plate bore the following inscription: "Richard Woolfe, born 15th December, 1821; died 16th December, 1877." It was covered by a very handsome violet pall, having a Passion cross the whole length and width, and upon which was laid an eight-pointed cross of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Loving hands had constructed many beautiful devices in flowers, and there was scarcely room to place them all on the coffin.

The following is a list of the pall-bearers.—C. C. W. Griffiths, Esq., R. W. Roberts, Esq., London; Alfred Powell, Esq., Richard Smith, Esq., F. R. Jeffery, Esq., S. G. Purchas, Esq., H. Caldicott, Esq., Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart., M.P. The mourners were: S. P. Richards, Esq., J. G. Richards, Esq., Wolverhampton; E. S. Sanderson, Esq., W. M. Woolf, Esq., (cousin), Mr. C. W. Griffiths, Mr. A. George, Mr. H. Caik, and Mr. F. Simms, Worcester. Among those who were present and took part in the procession were, as representing the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, General Sir John St. George, K.C.B., Sir Brooke Kay, Bart., Lieut.-Col. Gould Weston, F.S.A., (librarian); Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart, M.P., (secretary of the Order), the Rev. P. M. Holden and Rev. T. W. Wood (chaplains of the Order), and E. S. Sanderson, Esq. Letters of apology for non-attendance were received from several members. The Mayor (F. Dingle, Esq.), the Sheriff (W. Holland, Esq.), Ald. Woodward, Longmore, Josiah Stallard, John Stallard, M. Jones, Councillors Bosward, Harrison, Noake, Airey, Davies, Roberts, Lechmere-Pugh, R. E. Barnett, W. Stallard, and Foxwell; Revs. R. Catley, D. C. Preedy, T. L. Wheeler, J. B. Wilson, J. Hamilton Davies, Messrs. J. V. Stallard, Baldwin, Baylis, Woodward, Butler, Holland; G. W. Bentley, T. G. Hyde, R. P. Hill, Canning Hill, C. E. Beck, F. Corbett, H. Corbett, W. Allen, C. Pickock, W. P. Hughes, J. Tree, W. W. A. Tree, H. Crisp, S. M. Beale, W. W. Cawley (Malvern), T. Bates, Hilary Hill, H. W. Budd; J. W. Isaac, D. W. Barker, R. W. Binns, H. Rowe, M. Power, Felton, C. Higgs, T. M. Hopkins, J. W. Stone, T. Hobbs, F. Lingham, W. Sanders, J. Close, H. Charge, H. Walters, J. H. L. Jones, J. Rutland, J. W. Weldon, W. Underwood, F. N. Gosling, W. Stephens, Horton, Jones, Roberts, and H. George, were among the large concourse present.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD.

The annual and ancient custom of serving up a boar's head at Queen's College, Oxford, was observed with all due ceremony on Christmas-day, when the public were admitted, as in former years, to witness the interesting ceremony. The boar's head, which was provided by the College Manciple, Mr. William Horn, was a splendid specimen of the species, weighing between 60lb. and 70lb., and was decorated with the proverbial "bays and rosemary," surmounted with the College arms, flags, &c. Shortly after 5 o'clock a procession of singing men and choristers, headed by the Rev. Sackett Hope, Chaplain of Queen's College, entered the hall, followed by the trophy on a silver salver, carried on the shoulders of two serving men, chanting the following carol, arranged by Dr. Hague, a former distinguished musical member of that society:—

"The boar's head in hand bring I
With garlands gay and rosemary,
I pray you all sing merrily,
Qui estis in convivio.
Caput apri deferō
Reddens laudes Domino."

"The boar's head, as I understand
Is the bravest dish in all the land;
When thus bedecked in a gay garland
Serve it cum cantico."

"Our steward hath provided this
In honour of the King of Bliss,
Which on this day to be served is,
In Reginensi Atrio."

Mr. Hope rendered the solo part to good effect, which was intensified by the excellent combination of voices in the chorus.

On reaching the high table, the dish was deposited, and on the departure of the public, the resident members of the College partook of dinner, the boar's head forming one of the principal dishes.

The origin of the ceremony is somewhat obscure, but there is no doubt it has been observed for a period of 500 years, one authority quoting 1350 as being the probable year of the first festival. Mr. Pointer, in his Oxonienis Academia, remarks, in reference to the ceremony, that "It is in memory of a noble exploit, as tradition relates, by a scholar (a Tabard) of Queen's College in killing a wild boar in Shotover Wood." (The wood still remains, being an elevated and lovely spot a mile or two from Oxford, frequented by pedestrians and lovers of the picturesque.) Having wandered into the wood, which was not far from Oxford, with a copy of "Aristotle" in his hand, and being attacked by a wild boar, who came at him with extending jaws intending to make but a mouthful of him, he was enabled to conquer the furious animal by thrusting the "Aristotle" down his throat, crying "Græcum est!" The animal, of course, fell prostrate at his feet, was carried in triumph to the College, and no doubt served up to an old song in memory of the noble exploit. But this is only tradition, and no date is given when the custom was first observed. Ant. A. Wood, writing in 1660, says it is an "Antient custom as old as 'tis thought as the College it self, but no reason to be given for it."

PRESENTATION TO BRO. ROBERT WYLIE.

On the 21st. Bro. Robert Wylie, J.P., Kilwinning, was presented with a purse containing 250 sovereigns, and a handsome epergne, as also a gold watch, chain, and brooch for Mrs. Wylie. Bro. Wylie has for a long period taken an active interest in matters tending to promote the welfare of the ancient town of Kilwinning, and, being a Freemason, he has been, and still is, one of the most energetic and respected members of the Mother Lodge of Scotland. The gifts with which he was presented were given in token of the high esteem in which he is held by all classes of the community, and in recognition of his Masonic and public services. At four o'clock a dinner was held in the Eglinton Arms, at which there were about 100 gentlemen present. Mr. R. M. Cochran-Patrick of Woodside occupied the chair, while Messrs. George Brown of Burnside and J. M. McCosh of Dalry officiated as croupiers. Amongst those present were—Rev. Mr. Taylor, Kilwinning; Rev. Henry Reid, M.A., Irvine; Rev. George Philp, Saltcoats; Provost Paterson, Irvine; Messrs. J. A. Ferguson, Glasgow; James Dickie, Town-Clerk of Irvine; J. G. Halkett, banker, Saltcoats; Henry Leck of Hollybush; William D. McJannet, Irvine; Arthur Guthrie, Ardrossan; and H. M. Hight, Irvine. The usual constitutional toasts were proposed from the chair, and duly honoured. Mr. H. M. Hight proposed "The Lord-Lieutenant of the County" (Earl of Stair), and Mr. James Hendrie gave "The Lord of the Manor" (Earl of Eglinton), which were cordially responded to.

The Chairman then said—It has often puzzled foreigners who have come to study the history of this country to account for the comparative immunity which we have had from those social and political convulsions which have occurred in various countries once at least in every generation, and sometimes oftener. Various theories have been propounded to account for this. One distinguished economist has satisfied himself that our freedom from revolution depends upon the custom widely prevalent amongst us of giving public dinners. (Laughter.) Another, not quite so well-known, but no less able writer, has defined the Scotch to be a committee-making people, and has found in our very common practice on all occasions of calling a public meeting, and then appointing a chairman with almost despotic powers, and afterwards the nomination of a small committee to do the real work, a social parallel to that practical blending of monarchy, aristocracy, and democracy which so happily characterises the British Constitution. And yet a third—perhaps more distinguished, and certainly better known than either of the others—believes that we owe the calm course of our history to the fact that there has always been in this country a large and cultured class who having leisure, have preferred instead of devoting their time, money, and energies to the pursuit of pleasure, devoted these to the prosecution of useful public ends, without the hope of any other recompense or reward than the consciousness of doing a right and a good thing for their fellow-men. (Applause.) I venture to think that the proceedings which have culminated here to-night might have afforded an example of each of these ingenious theories. We have held our meetings, appointed our committees, and discussed a very good dinner, and we have in our friend and guest of this evening, a conspicuous example of that valuable class who are always ready to come forward with their time and energy for the promotion of public ends. (Applause.) For more than 20 years Bro. Wylie has taken an active and prominent part in every movement which had for its object the welfare of this ancient place. As a county magistrate, as a director of the district poorhouse, as a member of the various local boards—in every capacity in which he has acted Bro. Wylie has taken an active part in the promotion of useful things, but it is prominently as a member of the ancient body of Freemasons that Bro. Wylie is most widely known. (Applause.) From the first day of his initiation he has enthusiastically identified himself with the Province of Ayrshire and with Mother Kilwinning. (Applause.) There is hardly an office in the lodge which he has not fulfilled, and filled well and worthily. I have the best reason for believing and saying he has, during that long period, not to his own knowledge, missed one business meeting. (Applause.) In times of Masonic prosperity, in periods of calm repose, and in times of adverse reaction, Bro. Wylie has ever done the best a man could do for the interest of the Craft and Kilwinning. (Applause.) I am sure I shall be corroborated by all the brethren present when I say that in this great and important Province of Ayrshire, during the last twenty years, Masonry has made a most extraordinary progress; and I am sure I will not be exceeding the truth, or going beyond what is within the personal knowledge of many here present, when I say that much of that progress is due to the genuine enthusiasm, the ever-prudent tact, the inviolable good temper, and the genial courtesy of Bro. Wylie. (Applause.) It is not surprising, then, that under these circumstances a very wide feeling should prevail that some recognition should be made of those public services, and accordingly a movement was set afoot some time ago, which has resulted in the very handsome testimonial which I am now about to hand to Bro. Wylie, and I am sure that, valuable as that testimonial is, it will be valued by him not so much because of its intrinsic value, but as representing the sincere regard and respect of a very large circle of friends. Turning to Bro. Wylie, the Chairman said—Now, sir, in handing to you this most beautiful gift, I am sure I express the earnest desire of everyone to-day when I say we hope you will for a long time continue to discharge towards Mother Kilwinning and this district those offices which have won you such a large circle of friends. (Applause.) The Chairman then asked Bro. Wylie to accept of the 250 sovereigns and epergne, as also a gold watch, chain, and brooch for Mrs. Wylie, and concluded by calling on the company to drink the toast of "Bro. Wylie, and his Fireside."

The toast was enthusiastically responded to.

Bro. Wylie, in reply, said—I rise to thank you, or rather to attempt to thank you, for the great honour you have conferred upon me this evening in presenting me with such a magnificent testimonial. We have the highest authority for saying that out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh. It is not less true that the heart may be too full for words, as mine is now, for any words at my command must altogether fail in expressing the gratitude I feel for this crowning act of kindness towards Mrs. Wylie and myself. I have to thank my friend, your distinguished chairman, for proposing my health in such eloquent terms, though I well know and felt that his words of praise far exceed any merits of mine. Whatever I have been privileged to do in a public capacity or in connection with the ancient guild to which many of us belong has been to me a labour of love, and its own abundant reward. This magnificent gift testifies that I have done something you considered deserving of recognition, and it will be a further strengthening of my hands, if years are given me, for further work. The chairman has fittingly told you the cause of this outflow of friendliness and brotherly love towards me. Much of it, I daresay, is due to my late candidature for the office of Secretary in the Grand Lodge of Scotland. And here, perhaps, I may be permitted to state that it was only after the most urgent solicitations by many of my warmest Masonic friends throughout Ayrshire and in Glasgow that I allowed myself to become a candidate. My candidature, as you are aware, was unsuccessful. That I was in a large measure the cause of my own defeat, it is unnecessary now to explain. From all parts expressions of regret and sympathy came to me, followed and attested by kind deeds, which have culminated in this splendid gift. It has, indeed, some significance in being presented on an anniversary of the Mother Lodge, although I am aware that many friends far and near have contributed to it who do not belong to the Masonic Craft, which makes me value it all the more highly, and I cannot help expressing specially to them my deep sense of gratitude. I cannot refrain from mentioning by name one gentleman who has been singularly zealous in its promotion. I refer to my friend, Mr. Ferguson, whose kindness of heart and liberality of sentiment are so well known to all his friends. Before sitting down, allow me again to thank you for this splendid epergne, and the sovereigns accompanying it. My friends have not been forgetful that money answereth all things. The gift of this valuable gold watch and brooch to Mrs. Wylie I have great pleasure in acknowledging in her name. I need scarcely say to those who know her that the manner in which she has borne with me the burden of life has enabled me, as I could not have done otherwise, to devote so considerable a portion of my time to public work. These gifts will ever be most highly prized and handed down as heirlooms in our family.

Several other toasts followed.

The epergne bore the following inscription:—"Presented, with a purse and 250 sovereigns and gift to Mrs. Wylie, by a large circle of Masonic and other friends to Robert Wylie, Esq., Prov. Grand Secretary for Ayrshire, and Secretary of Mother Lodge, in appreciation of long and valuable services to Masonic and other institutions connected with Kilwinning, in testimony of their regard for him as a brother and friend.—Kilwinning, 21st Dec., 1877."

FREEMASONRY IN AUSTRALIA.

We take the following from the "Australian Freemason":—

It affords us great pleasure to give insertion to the following communication forwarded to us by our D. Grand Secretary:

Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C.,
16th August, 1877.

Dear Sir and Brother,—I have the pleasure to hand you herewith the patent of your appointment to be District Grand Master of New South Wales, in succession to Bro. A. T. Holroyd, resigned, an office which you have already held with so much credit to yourself and satisfaction to your brethren in the district, that they again desire you to resume your sway over them. I sincerely trust that your efforts in the cause of Masonry may be as successful now as they were on a former occasion, and that health and strength may be granted you to carry out the duties of the office, as formerly, for the general benefit of the Order.

I have the honour to be, yours truly and fraternally,
JOHN HERVEY, G.S.

John Williams, Esq.,
Right Worshipful District Grand Master for N.S. Wales.

PRESENTATION TO W. BRO. F. B. DAVIDSON.

Every Mason who knows our brother is conscious of his Masonic diligence, earnestness, and industry. For a quarter of a century our brother has been sedulously employed in the erection of a Hiram's Superstructure. And it is no wonder that now and again we hear of brethren showing their appreciation of the important services which our distinguished brother has rendered to the Craft. The D. Grand Master, E.C., R.W. Bro. John Williams, has graciously been pleased to appoint our brother "District Director of Ceremonies" in the Grand Lodge, and the Most Ex. Z., and companions of Zetland, R.A. Chapter, 390, E.C., at their last annual convocation presented him with a beautifully illuminated address, which reads thus:—

"To Francis Burnard Davidson, Esq.—Dear Sir and Excellent Companion,—We the Companions of the Zetland Royal Arch Chapter of Australia, No. 390, E.C., desire, on the occasion of the completion of your twentieth year of service in the important office you have so efficiently and honourably held in this chapter, to convey to you the expression of our esteem for you as a gentleman and a Royal Arch Mason. And in testimony of our appreciation of the courtesy, integrity, and zeal which have ever characterised your long service in connection with us as a member of our chapter, we beg to present you with this address, and hope that it may be the pleasure of the Most High to so dispose events that you may long be spared to be amongst us. On behalf of the chapter, we remain, dear sir and companion, fraternally yours, William Webster, Z.; N. J. Robinson, H.; and E. Kirchner, J."

We have learned with pleasure that such is the fraternal esteem in which our brother is held that for the last twenty years he has been annually elected to one of the highest offices in a lodge which includes among its members many gentlemen of distinction, and his election for the twenty-first time was chosen as a suitable occasion for acknowledging his valuable services to the Order, and the courteous and generous demeanour which he has always exhibited in his relations with his brethren.

We cordially join in the fraternal wishes and prayers of our fellow-companions that our brother's "bow may long abide in strength and the arms of his hands may be made strong by the hands of the Mighty God of Jacob."

ZETLAND LODGE, 655, AND THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

Zetland Lodge, 655, E.C., has voted the sum of £5 on behalf of the famine-stricken in India. We humbly think that the commendable and truly Masonic example of this lodge should be followed by all the lodges in the colonies, and that the sum or sums so raised should be sent as a "Masonic Fund" from the Masons of this colony or other colonies by our respective District or Provincial Grand Masters. "The Profane" will then know that Masonry is not "a delusion" or "a phantom," but that it is an Order of Love, Relief, and Truth. Of "the three tenets" of a Mason's profession it may be said that Truth is the Column of Wisdom, whose rays penetrate and enlighten the inmost recesses of the lodge; Brotherly love, the Column of Strength, which binds us as one family; and Relief, the Column of Beauty, whose ornaments, more precious than the lilies and pomegranates that adorned the pillars of the porch, are the widow's tear of joy and the orphan's prayer of gratitude. Let all the lodges then, act as the sanctuaries of relief worthy of the "Widow's Son."

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

PRESENTATION TO DR. BOOR, W.M.—On Tuesday, Oct. 23, the members of the Southern Star Lodge presented their Worshipful Master, Dr. Boor, with a handsome Masonic jewel, and an address expressive of their respect, admiration, and affection. In presenting the latter, the S.W. observed that the pleasure was not altogether unmixed. He regretted the necessity of reverting to the vexatious circumstances that had called for this expression of sympathy and confidence, but it being a Masonic duty to stand by and support a brother in need, by the act of the lodge on this occasion it was proved that the brethren are true to their obligations. He referred to the report of the Royal Commission, now before the Parliament, and said that if that report meant anything, and its plain Saxon English was not misunderstood, this was a case in which the Masonic attribute of justice must yet be satisfied. He then read the address, to which was affixed ninety signatures, and presented it, with the jewel, by the hands of the S.D., calling on the lodge to salute their esteemed Master and brother, and to join in the wish that he may live long to wear that jewel with honour to himself and the Craft, and with satisfactory reminiscences of this assembly. The strong feeling in this matter was manifested in the fact that on no previous occasion had such a large assemblage of Freemasons met in that hall. Among numerous visitors were—George Pierce, Esq., P.G.M. of N.Z., Irish Constitution, Rev. G. T. N. Watkins, P.M.; Mr. Charles Bright, and others.

The number of deserters from the Army advertised in the Police Gazette during 1877 has been 7,500, being 260 below the total for 1876. A large proportion of the aggregate is, as usual, made up of desertions over and over again of the same individuals, and it also includes many absentees who are recaptured or voluntarily return to their duties.

H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, S.G.W., has forwarded a cheque for £100 to the Mayor of Cork, to be distributed amongst the local charities.

Mr. Albert Jones, the mimic and ventriloquist will give an entertainment, in character costume, at the "Twelfth Night Treat" of the Girls' School, on Monday next.

The Gardeners' Chronicle hears that the Horticultural Club proposes to migrate to the Temple Club in Arundel-street, Strand, close to the Temple Station.

WHY WERE YOU MADE A MASON?

We propose to interrogate a number of brethren as to why they were made Masons. Some might expect that the similarity of their replies would render it requisite for us to narrate to the reader but a single answer. It is true that all did give the same reply at one period of their lives; all signed a similar petition, and made the customary declaration, which it is not necessary for us to repeat here; but we propose to renew the inquiry after the lapse of some eight or ten years, and to get, if possible, an honest answer.

Bro. Backus has been a Mason for fifteen years, and from our intimate knowledge of his Masonic life (which has been invariably distinguished for diligent attendance at lodge, and conscientious performance of every duty imposed upon him) we felt confident that his reply would be ingenuous and satisfactory, and it is. He says that he was made a Mason for two reasons—because he was from youth a seeker after knowledge, and he was strongly impressed with the belief that the mysteries of Freemasonry would unveil to his mind wisdom that he could not attain in any other manner. This was his first reason. His second was, that he had always understood brotherly love was a distinguishing characteristic of Freemasons, and he was anxious to belong to a brotherhood in which each member unselfishly aided another, when in distress of mind, body, or estate. He admitted that he had some curiosity to learn the forms and ceremonies of the Craft, but this curiosity was altogether subordinate to the two reasons just given.

It is needless to say that Bro. Backus is entirely satisfied with Freemasonry, for, in his own language, "it fills the bill"—not its own bill, for it has none, but the one which he arranged for it in his own mind. The fraternity issues no posters to entice entrants. It forbids solicitation for membership. One must confess, however, that sometimes when a new lodge is started, with perhaps a dozen or twenty members, and the first night of meeting discloses that there are eight or ten applicants for initiation, it does look as if the entire body of the new lodge had been out with life and drum beating up recruits. Of course they were not, but, we repeat, it looks so. The enthusiasm of members of new lodges is so unbounded, that they omit no opportunity to laud Freemasonry in general, and their own lodge in particular, and the result is a rush in that special direction.

Bro. Smirky has been a Mason for two years, but he is now seen so infrequently at the lodge, and takes so little interest in the Craft, that we have some doubts as to whether he remembers why he was made a Mason. On asking him the question, however, we find he knows right well, and he feels sore over his knowledge. He shall speak for himself. "I joined the Masons because I imagined them to be a lot of 'hail fellows, well met,' always ready for a jollification, conferring the degrees more for their own sport than for the edification of the initiate, and never closing a meeting without a banquet. I soon found out, however, how awfully I was mistaken. I never saw a more solemn set of fellows, and I would as soon go to church as to a lodge. I was made a Mason for fun, and there is no fun in Masonry—to speak of."

Bro. Solomon contradicts both Bro. Backus and Bro. Smirky. Some men are walking dictionaries, Bro. Solomon is a walking Bible. He is a man of one idea. He ignores the present, and lives only for the future. He joined the Masons because he had read that the Holy Bible was the first Great Light in Masonry, and he was glad to support a society founded on such a principle. He was mistaken in thinking that Freemasonry was one-ideal, like himself. As soon as he became a member of the Craft, he found that it encouraged festivities and banquets, and often went from labour to refreshment. That was enough to ruin it in his estimation. He is now a Mason only in name, just as Bro. Smirky is, but for quite a different reason.

Bro. Curus was made a Mason to see what there was in it, and his testimony is that it is as hollow as a drum. Bare curiosity prompted his application, and as soon as it was satisfied, he had no further use of the lodge. He had no interest in it, and never attended it. Of course he was not going to pay six dollars a year for dues for nothing, so he sent in his resignation, procured a dimit, and buried it in the bottom of his trunk. That is practically the end of Bro. Curus as a Mason, and there are no mourners.

The Rev. Bro. Free was made a Mason gratis. It was the custom of his lodge to receive clergymen without a fee; if it was charged in the first place it was donated afterwards. Bro. Free thought a great deal of Masonry for the first year, but when December came around, and he received a bill for dues, he was horrified. He was made a Mason because he was invited to do so, without cost, and he soon let his brethren know that if they did not intend to remit his dues annually, he would leave them in disgust; and he did. It was the opinion of most Masons that that lodge was served right. Charity Masons are dead wood in Masonry. He who sets out in life as a Masonic pauper, expects to be sustained as a pauper all of his life. The lodge which remits an initiation fee throws away its mysteries upon an unappreciative brother. We rarely value that which costs nothing. Bro. Free was made a Mason because a friend asked him, and promised that the lodge would forgive him the initiation fee; but because it would not forgive him perennally his dues, he is now suspended for N. P. D. Served him right; and the lodge ought to be suspended too, if it persists in making Masons gratis.

We do not believe that the reader was made a Mason for any except legitimate reasons, for the bare fact that he takes and reads a Craft newspaper to a large degree substantiates his Masonic character. Bro. Free, Bro. Solomon, and Bro. Smirky were never known even to borrow a Masonic newspaper to read, but every brother who loves the fraternity, loves its literature, and feels a pride in encouraging its dissemination among the Craft.—Keystone.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

JOPPA LODGE (No. 188).—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held on Monday at the Albion, Aldersgate-st., when Bro. Lewis Lazarus, W.M., presided. Bro. Cox was passed to the second degree, and G. J. Wyman was initiated, both degrees being admirably worked by the W.M. Bro. E. P. Albert, P.M., P.G.P., then presented to Bro. Lewis Lazarus, Bro. Joan T. Miller, the W.M. elect, and Bro. Lewis Lazarus impressively installed Bro. Miller in the W.M. chair. The Board of Installed Masters, which numbered 20 brethren, included the names of Bros. Hyde Pullen, Thos. Cubitt, John Boyd and Col. Shadwell Clarke. The officers appointed were Bro. Speigal, S.W.; Hyman, J.W.; E. P. Albert, Secretary; Bro. Campion, S.D.; Baker, J.D.; Isaacs, I.G.; Genese, D.C.; Benjamin, Steward; and Black, Steward. The sum of £5 was voted to the list of Bro. Speigal, S.W., who was deputed by the lodge to act as Steward at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The W.M. then rose and addressing Bro. Lewis Lazarus, I.P.M., said:—I have invested all the officers whom it has been my privilege to nominate. You, Worshipful Sir, claim your rank of P.M. as a right, and no words of mine can add to your dignity. But a very pleasing duty now devolves upon me, and in the name and on behalf of the Lodge of Joppa I present you with this P.M. jewel as a mark of the esteem and regard in which you are held by your brethren. May your valuable life be long spared to wear this jewel, which I have no doubt you will with honest pride, and may it be handed down in your family as a heir-loom from generation to generation. I could say a great deal more as to your excellent working, and the satisfactory manner in which you have discharged your important duties, but I shall reserve what I have to say on that subject to a later period of the evening, when I am sure the brethren will honour with heartiness the mention of your name. I thank you on my own behalf for your most excellent rendering of the ceremony of Installation, which I can assure you has left a deep impression upon my mind, with a lively sense of the great cost of time and labour the mastering of it must have entailed upon you. Bro. Lewis Lazarus, in returning thanks for the presentation, said he could not find words which would adequately express his feelings. He had received much kindness from the brethren, and it would be his constant aim to do all in his power to promote the interests of the lodge. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren, to the number of 168, adjourned to the banquet table, and under the presidency of the W.M., partook of a sumptuous repast, provided by Bro. Jennings. After banquet the usual toasts were proposed, and after that of "The Queen and the Craft," had been duly honoured, the W.M. proposed "The Grand Master." In the course of his observations on this toast he said the whole Craft felt justly proud that the heir to the throne of this mighty empire filled the important position of Grand Master of Freemasons. It was a matter for much congratulation that Masonry had made such great strides under His Royal Highness's rule, and he thought that the more the Order increased the better it would be, provided the brethren admitted worthy men; for if Freemasonry was, as the brethren believed it to be, founded upon the purest principles of piety and virtue, surely it should be encouraged to grow. Moreover, every brother who introduced a candidate conferred a great and lasting boon upon him. In giving the toast of "The Pro Grand Master, &c.," the W.M. said that those who were entitled to attend Grand Lodge (and there were a great many then present), must be witnesses the dignified, effective and courteous manner in which the duties were performed by the Earl of Carnarvon. He would for one moment refer to the proceedings at the last Grand Lodge when in a powerful speech which should be read by every Freemason, the Pro and Master referred to the recent action of the Grand Council of France. The brethren never need fear losing any of their ancient landmarks whilst Masonry possessed such champions in the Earl of Carnarvon. Ignore T.G.A.O.T.U., they destroyed the whole fabric of Freemasonry. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B., replied. Bro. L. Alexander, replying to the toast of "The Benevolent Fund of the Lodge of Joppa," said that he had that day attained majority as an Installed Master. He also said that the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge now amounted to £1400, and was invested in consols. The W.M. in proposing

"The Health of Bro. Lewis Lazarus," I.P.M., said he need not remind the brethren of the Lodge of Joppa how admirably Bro. Lazarus had worked the ceremonies during his year of office; but it was not only the members of the lodge but visitors had had that evening an opportunity of witnessing the grand ceremony of installation executed in a masterly and perfect manner by the I.P.M. It must be a source of much gratification to P.M. Lazarus that the brethren appreciated his merits, a fact which was abundantly clear by the presentation of the P.M.'s jewel with which his breast had been adorned that evening. Bro. Lewis Lazarus in reply said that having already addressed the brethren in open Lodge it would be simply superfluous for him to detain them now by making a long speech; and the greatest satisfaction he felt in the receipt of the jewel was in the inward conviction that he had discharged his duties of the chair in a way that was pleasing to the brethren. Bro. Lazarus then proposed "The Health of the W.M." and said that during the W.M.'s year the brethren would find they had placed the right man in the right place. The W.M. in acknowledging the toast said I thank Past Master Lazarus very much for the kind expressions he has made use of in proposing my health, and I also desire to tender the brethren my most hearty thanks for the cordial, and, I might say, enthusiastic manner in which they have received it. A great man in returning thanks recently for a toast drunk in his honour said that to disclaim all the kind things that had been pronounced in his favour would seem to invite contradiction and thereby reiteration. I would therefore say at once: I am thankful for your good opinion: it has been my constant aim to secure it. You have conferred upon me this evening the highest honour it is in the power of a lodge to bestow on one of its members; and I wish to assure you of my profound gratitude for and appreciation of it. To tell you that I shall do my best to merit a continuance of your confidence is to say very little; that is only what you have a right to demand of me; and when I look round upon the long and distinguished list of my predecessors who have so worthily filled this chair, many of whom have made their mark in the Craft, I may well feel the deep responsibility of the trust you have reposed in me. I shall strive, in season and out of season, in the lodge and out of it, to the utmost of my ability, to promote the interest and maintain the dignity of the Lodge of Joppa. I call to mind with much pleasure and satisfaction this evening, six years ago, when I was initiated in this lodge; but the retrospect that causes me the greatest pleasure and thankfulness is the recollection of that genuine brotherly kindness and generous encouragement I have received from every member of the lodge during the intervening period, as step by step I have worked through the various offices, and to this mainly I owe my proud position to-night. Continue to me that support you have so freely given in the past, so as to make my year of office eminently successful. Let us all be animated with one desire, the well being and prosperity of the lodge. The Lodge of Joppa stands high in the Craft; let us strive to raise it higher. Our lodge is only a unit of a vast community. Masonry is doing a grand work. Look at our three great and flourishing Institutions. What other body of men can boast of anything like them in the way of charity? Each year as the festivals come round witnesses a larger sum of money contributed by the Craft, and this enables the authorities to increase the accommodation, so as to extend the benefit of the charities. The W.M. next proposed "The P.M.'s," and said that from the newly-initiated brethren upwards there was a feeling of admiration for the veterans whose breasts were decorated with jewels; but the higher a brother advanced the more he appreciated the P.M.'s, because he felt the need of the experience and advice of the P.M.'s, which they were always willing to give. Bro. L. Alexander, P.M., replied. "The Visitors," and other toasts were then given, and the brethren separated after witnessing a most successful evening. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Grove Ellis, Bro. James Kift, presiding at the pianoforte. The music performed at the Lodge of Joppa is always of a high order, and on this occasion, when it was equal to the Joppa standard, was participated in by Miss M. Lynton, Mr. C. Rowcliffe, Madame Alice Barnett, Bros. Kift and Ellis. The following were present as visitors:—Bros. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; John Cubitt, P.G.P.; John Boyd, P.G.P. and G. Steward; C. F. Hogard, Col. Shadwell H. Clerk, P.G.D. 1883; J. P. Cohen, W.M. 205; I. Peertree, W.M. 185; W. H. Gulliford, W.M. 1017; A. D. Loewenstark, I. Lazarus, S.W. 1017; G. Manners, 1589; C. Barnett, 1707; C. Rosonsten.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—A meeting of the above lodge was held on Thursday, the 3rd inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel, when there were present Bros. E. Jones, W.M.; Legge, S.W.; Fellows, J.W.; George Kenning, P.M., Treasurer; Rickwood, Secretary; Thomas Cohu, P.M.; George Abbott, P.M.; West, Henry Child, John Kent, Charles Cann, Thomas Fisher, S. T. Lucas, Wm. Cotter, W. Figs, George Taylor, Alfred Lewis, E. J. Kellaway, T. T. Hampton, C. Gale Sparrow, R. J. Dart, W. H. L. Davies, and others. Visitors, Bro. Farthing and another. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed; the W.M. appointed Bro. W. T. Rickwood as Secretary, pro. tem., in consequence of the indisposition of Bro. J. G. Marsh, P.M. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation at the next meeting. The lodge was then closed. The brethren sat down to a very enjoyable banquet, served under the superintendence of Bro. Rand. The usual toasts were given by the W.M. Bro. Davies added much to the enjoyment of the brethren by his performance on the piano.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—This lodge held its last meeting at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval, on the 1st inst., when there were present Bros. H. Higgins, W.M.; Reeves, S.W.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, J.W. (Freemason); G. Everett, P.M. 177, I.P.M.; E. Page, P.G.S., Treas.; Stuart, P.M. 141, Sec.; Kohler, S.D.; Speedy, J.D.; Webb, I.G.; Robinson, D.C.; Marsden, W.S.; Stokes, A.W.S.; Gardner, P.M.; Drysdale, P.M.; Longstaff, Tyler. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised Bros. Pim and Barry, and passed Bro. Webster, the ceremonies being most carefully and correctly performed. The elections for W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler, were unanimously in favour of Bros. Reeves, S.W.; Page, P.M., Treas.; and Longstaffe, Tyler; Bros. Stranger, Fowler, and Higgins, jun., were elected Auditors, and a jewel voted to the out-going Master. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The cloth having been removed, the W.M. gave the preliminary toasts, which were duly drunk. In proposing "The Health of the W.M.," the I.P.M. called attention to the excellent manner in which the W.M. had discharged his duties during his year of office, and which official year was nearly at a close. He had had a very onerous term, and he had performed the responsibilities of his position most ably, and he would carry with him in his retirement the well-wishes of every member of Number 1381. In conclusion the speaker said that on that auspicious occasion, being the advent of 1878, he should without further preface wish him good health and a most happy and prosperous new year. The W.M. briefly, in reply, thanked the brethren for the very hearty manner in which, on all occasions he had been received by them. He had endeavoured to do his duty, and he believed he had given them every satisfaction in that particular, both in and out of lodge, and in conclusion, he said that he had passed a most pleasant year, and one that he should ever remember with satisfaction. "The Visitors" having been proposed, was responded to by Bros. Andrews, Hon. Sec. 55, in the absence of his colleague, Bro. Bingham, P.M. 55, &c. In introducing "The Past Masters," the W.M. said that the lodge was to be congratulated upon having so many distinguished brethren amongst them. Some of them were large supporters of the different charities, and he felt sorry that so few were present that evening, but their health notwithstanding would be drank none the less hearty. Bro. Drysdale in reply, having thanked the W.M. and the brethren for the very cordial manner in which the toast had been proposed and responded to, said that he considered it the duty of every Past Master to attend the meetings of the lodge and to assist their younger brethren—and that without distinction—in the carrying out of their multifarious and onerous responsibilities. The W.M. then rose, and said he was about to propose, and that for the first and last time, a most important toast, namely "The W.M. elect." They all knew the good and genial qualities of Bro. Reeves, who was moreover their first initiate. He had been throughout his Masonic career most indefatigable in his attendance, which characteristic augured well for his successful occupancy of the Master's chair. In personally wishing him a most prosperous year of office, he only expressed that which was the unanimous hope of every member of his mother lodge. This toast having been received with excellent "fire," Bro. Reeves duly replied. In proposing "The Health of the Treasurer and Secretary" the W.M. took occasion to speak of the careful manner in which Bro. Page husbanded their funds, and also in other respects watched over their interests. In Bro. Stuart they also possessed an excellent Secretary, and one who at all times was ready to assist them with the benefit of his advice. The Secretary in response said he felt sorry that the Treasurer had been compelled to leave them at the conclusion of their Masonic labour, but he would take advantage of that circumstance to tell them that in Bro. Page they possessed one of the best Treasurers that he had ever been associated with. He then in conclusion expressed his own thanks for the compliment conferred upon him as Secretary. "The Officers" followed, and was acknowledged by Bros. Walls, Kohler, Webb, and Robinson. During the evening Bros. Everett, Walls, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at an early hour. The installation of Bro. Reeves will take place on the 5th proximo.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—On Thursday, the 3rd inst., a regular meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, which was unusually well attended. Among those present were Bros. F. Wilkinson, W.M.; Ashley, Treas., as I.P.M.; Falkner, S.W.; Rubie, P.M., as J.W.; Capt. Peel, as Dir. of Cer.; Braham, Sec.; Gummer, S.D.; Hunt, J.D.; Robinson and Jacob Smith, Stewards; Bigwood, Tyler; E. White, P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, P.M. 43 and 958, P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire; F. Baldwin, W.M. 355. As visitors Bros. Sir John Floyd, 654; Gen. Doherty, P.M. 53 and 906, and P.P.G.S.W.; Williamson, W.M. 906; Hill, P.M. 906; Dill, P.M. 906; Reeves, P.M. 906, P.P.G.O.; J. Shaw, S.W. 326; P. G. Young, S.W. 906; Howes, J.W. 906; Hayward, S.D. 606; Davis, I.G. 906; W. H. Young, 906; Besford, Sec., 703; Ash, 703; Freeman, 906. There were also many members of 41. The lodge having been opened at 7.40 by the W.M., the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. At the request of the W.M. the minutes reported the proceedings of the committee to promote the interests of the family of Cooper, stating that the name of the

WHY WERE YOU MADE A MASON?

We propose to interrogate a number of brethren as to why they were made Masons. Some might expect that the similarity of their replies would render it requisite for us to narrate to the reader but a single answer. It is true that all did give the same reply at one period of their lives; all signed a similar petition, and made the customary declaration, which it is not necessary for us to repeat here; but we propose to renew the inquiry after the lapse of some eight or ten years, and to get, if possible, an honest answer.

Bro. Backus has been a Mason for fifteen years, and from our intimate knowledge of his Masonic life (which has been invariably distinguished by diligent attendance at lodge, and conscientious performance of every duty imposed upon him) we felt confident that his reply would be ingenuous and satisfactory, and it is. He says that he was made a Mason for two reasons—because he was from youth a seeker after knowledge, and he was strongly impressed with the belief that the mysteries of Freemasonry would unveil to his mind wisdom that he could not attain in any other manner. This was his first reason. His second was, that he had always understood brotherly love was a distinguishing characteristic of Freemasons, and he was anxious to belong to a brotherhood in which each member unselfishly aided another, when in distress of mind, body, or estate. He admitted that he had some curiosity to learn the forms and ceremonies of the Craft, but this curiosity was altogether subordinate to the two reasons just given.

It is needless to say that Bro. Backus is entirely satisfied with Freemasonry, for, in his own language, "it fills the bill"—not its own bill, for it has none, but the one which he arranged for it in his own mind. The fraternity issues no posters to entice entrants. It forbids solicitation for membership. One must confess, however, that sometimes when a new lodge is started, with perhaps a dozen or twenty members, and the first night of meeting discloses that there are eight or ten applicants for initiation, it does look as if the entire body of the new lodge had been out with life and drum beating up recruits. Of course they were not, but, we repeat, it looks so. The enthusiasm of members of new lodges is so unbounded, that they omit no opportunity to laud Freemasonry in general, and their own lodge in particular, and the result is a rush in that special direction.

Bro. Smirky has been a Mason for two years, but he is now seen so infrequently at the lodge, and takes so little interest in the Craft, that we have some doubts as to whether he remembers why he was made a Mason. On asking him the question, however, we find he knows right well, and he feels sore over his knowledge. He shall speak for himself. "I joined the Masons because I imagined them to be a lot of 'hail fellows, well met,' always ready for a jollification, conferring the degrees more for their own sport than for the edification of the initiate, and never closing a meeting without a banquet. I soon found out, however, how awfully I was mistaken. I never saw a more solemn set of fellows, and I would as soon go to church as to a lodge. I was made a Mason for fun, and there is no fun in Masonry—to speak of."

Bro. Solomon contradicts both Bro. Backus and Bro. Smirky. Some men are walking dictionaries, Bro. Solomon is a walking Bible. He is a man of one idea. He ignores the present, and lives only for the future. He joined the Masons because he had read that the Holy Bible was the first Great Light in Masonry, and he was glad to support a society founded on such a principle. He was mistaken in thinking that Freemasonry was one-ideal, like himself. As soon as he became a member of the Craft, he found that it encouraged festivities and banquets, and often went from labour to refreshment. That was enough to ruin it in his estimation. He is now a Mason only in name, just as Bro. Smirky is, but for quite a different reason.

Bro. Curus was made a Mason to see what there was in it, and his testimony is that it is as hollow as a drum. Bare curiosity prompted his application, and as soon as it was satisfied, he had no further use of the lodge. He had no interest in it, and never attended it. Of course he was not going to pay six dollars a year for dues for nothing, so he sent in his resignation, procured a dimit, and buried it in the bottom of his trunk. That is practically the end of Bro. Curus as a Mason, and there are no mourners.

The Rev. Bro. Free was made a Mason gratis. It was the custom of his lodge to receive clergymen without a fee; if it was charged in the first place it was donated afterwards. Bro. Free thought a great deal of Masonry for the first year, but when December came around, and he received a bill for dues, he was horrified. He was made a Mason because he was invited to do so, without cost, and he soon let his brethren know that if they did not intend to remit his dues annually, he would leave them in disgust; and he did. It was the opinion of most Masons that that lodge was served right. Charity Masons are dead wood in Masonry. He who sets out in life as a Masonic pauper, expects to be sustained as a pauper all of his life. The lodge which remits an initiation fee throws away its mysteries upon an unappreciative brother. We rarely value that which costs nothing. Bro. Free was made a Mason because a friend asked him, and promised that the lodge would forgive him the initiation fee; but because it would not forgive him perennally his dues, he is now suspended for N. P. D. Served him right; and the lodge ought to be suspended too, if it persists in making Masons gratis.

We do not believe that the reader was made a Mason for any except legitimate reasons, for the bare fact that he takes and reads a Craft newspaper to a large degree substantiates his Masonic character. Bro. Free, Bro. Solomon, and Bro. Smirky were never known even to borrow a Masonic newspaper to read, but every brother who loves the fraternity, loves its literature, and feels a pride in encouraging its dissemination among the Craft.—Keystone.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

JOPPA LODGE (No. 188).—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held on Monday at the Albion, Aldersgate-st., when Bro. Lewis Lazarus, W.M., presided. Bro. Cox was passed to the second degree, and G. J. Wyman was initiated, both degrees being admirably worked by the W.M. Bro. E. P. Albert, P.M., P.G.P., then presented to Bro. Lewis Lazarus, Bro. Joan T. Miller, the W.M. elect, and Bro. Lewis Lazarus impressively installed Bro. Miller in the W.M. chair. The Board of Installed Masters, which numbered 20 brethren, included the names of Bros. Hyde Pullen, Thos. Cubitt, John Boyd and Col. Shadwell Clarke. The officers appointed were Bros. Speigal, S.W.; Hyman, J.W.; E. P. Albert, Secretary; Bro. Campion, S.D.; Baker, J.D.; Isaacs, I.G.; Genese, D.C.; Benjamin, Steward; and Black, Steward. The sum of £5 was voted to the list of Bro. Speigal, S.W., who was deputed by the lodge to act as Steward at the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The W.M. then rose and addressing Bro. Lewis Lazarus, I.P.M., said:—I have invested all the officers whom it has been my privilege to nominate. You, Worshipful Sir, claim your rank of P.M. as a right, and no words of mine can add to your dignity. But a very pleasing duty now devolves upon me, and in the name and on behalf of the Lodge of Joppa I present you with this P.M. jewel as a mark of the esteem and regard in which you are held by your brethren. May your valuable life be long spared to wear this jewel, which I have no doubt you will with honest pride, and may it be handed down in your family as a heirloom from generation to generation. I could say a great deal more as to your excellent working, and the satisfactory manner in which you have discharged your important duties, but I shall reserve what I have to say on that subject to a later period of the evening, when I am sure the brethren will honour with heartiness the mention of your name. I thank you on my own behalf for your most excellent rendering of the ceremony of Installation, which I can assure you has left a deep impression upon my mind, with a lively sense of the great cost of time and labour the mastering of it must have entailed upon you. Bro. Lewis Lazarus, in returning thanks for the presentation, said he could not find words which would adequately express his feelings. He had received much kindness from the brethren, and it would be his constant aim to do all in his power to promote the interests of the lodge. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren, to the number of 168, adjourned to the banquet table, and under the presidency of the W.M., partook of a sumptuous repast, provided by Bro. Jennings. After banquet the usual toasts were proposed, and after that of "The Queen and the Craft," had been duly honoured, the W.M. proposed "The Grand Master." In the course of his observations on this toast he said the whole Craft felt justly proud that the heir to the throne of this mighty empire filled the important position of Grand Master of Freemasons. It was a matter for much congratulation that Masonry had made such great strides under His Royal Highness's rule, and he thought that the more the Order increased the better it would be, provided the brethren admitted worthy men; for if Freemasonry was, as the brethren believed it to be, founded upon the purest principles of piety and virtue, surely it should be encouraged to grow. Moreover, every brother who introduced a candidate conferred a great and lasting boon upon him. In giving the toast of "The Pro Grand Master, &c.," the W.M. said that those who were entitled to attend Grand Lodge (and there were a great many then present), must have witnessed the dignified, effective and courteous manner in which the duties were performed by the Earl of Carnarvon. He would for one moment refer to the proceedings at the last Grand Lodge when in a powerful speech which should be read by every Freemason, the Pro Grand Master referred to the recent action of the Grand Orient of France. The brethren never need fear losing any of their ancient landmarks whilst Masonry possessed such a champion in the Earl of Carnarvon. Ignore T.G.A.O.T.U. and they destroyed the whole fabric of Freemasonry. Bro. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B., replied. Bro. L. Alexander, P.M., replying to the toast of "The Benevolent Fund of the Lodge of Joppa," said that he had that day attained his majority as an Installed Master. He also said that the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge now amounted to £1400, and it was invested in consols. The W.M. in proposing

"The Health of Bro. Lewis Lazarus," I.P.M., said he need not remind the brethren of the Lodge of Joppa how admirably Bro. Lazarus had worked the ceremonies during his year of office: but it was not only the members of the lodge but visitors had had that evening an opportunity of witnessing the grand ceremony of installation executed in a masterly and perfect manner by the I.P.M. It must be a source of much gratification to P.M. Lazarus that the brethren appreciated his merits, a fact which was abundantly clear by the presentation of the P.M.'s jewel with which his breast had been adorned that evening. Bro. Lewis Lazarus in reply said that having already addressed the brethren in open Lodge it would be simply superfluous for him to detain them now by making a long speech; and the greatest satisfaction he felt in the receipt of the jewel was in the inward conviction that he had discharged his duties of the chair in a way that was pleasing to the brethren. Bro. Lazarus then proposed "The Health of the W.M." and said that during the W.M.'s year the brethren would find they had placed the right man in the right place. The W.M. in acknowledging the toast said I thank Past Master Lazarus very much for the kind expressions he has made use of in proposing my health, and I also desire to tender the brethren my most hearty thanks for the cordial, and, I might say, enthusiastic manner in which they have received it. A great man in returning thanks recently for a toast drunk in his honour said that to disclaim all the kind things that had been pronounced in his favour would seem to invite contradiction and thereby reiteration. I would therefore say at once I am thankful for your good opinion: it has been my constant aim to secure it. You have conferred upon me this evening the highest honour it is in the power of a lodge to bestow on one of its members; and I wish to assure you of my profound gratitude for and appreciation of it. To tell you that I shall do my best to merit a continuance of your confidence is to say very little; that is only what you have a right to demand of me; and when I look round upon the long and distinguished list of my predecessors who have so worthily filled this chair, many of whom have made their mark in the Craft, I may well feel the deep responsibility of the trust you have reposed in me. I shall strive, in season and out of season, in the lodge and out of it, to the utmost of my ability, to promote the interest and maintain the dignity of the Lodge of Joppa. I call to mind with much pleasure and satisfaction this evening, six years ago, when I was initiated in this lodge; but the retrospect that causes me the greatest pleasure and thankfulness is the recollection of that genuine brotherly kindness and generous encouragement I have received from every member of the lodge during the intervening period, as step by step I have worked through the various offices, and to this mainly I owe my proud position to-night. Continue to me that support you have so freely given in the past, so as to make my year of office eminently successful. Let us all be animated with one desire, the well being and prosperity of the lodge. The Lodge of Joppa stands high in the Craft; let us strive to raise it higher. Our lodge is only a unit of a vast community. Masonry is doing a grand work. Look at our three great and flourishing Institutions. What other body of men can boast of anything like them in the way of charity? Each year as the festivals come round witnesses a larger sum of money contributed by the Craft, and this enables the authorities to increase the accommodation, so as to extend the benefit of the charities. The W.M. next proposed "The P.M.'s," and said that from the newly-initiated brethren upwards there was a feeling of admiration for the veterans whose breasts were decorated with jewels; but the higher a brother advanced the more he appreciated the P.M.'s, because he felt the need of the experience and advice of the P.M.'s, which they were always willing to give. Bro. L. Alexander, P.M., replied. "The Visitors," and other toasts were then given, and the brethren separated after witnessing a most successful evening. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Grove Ellis, Bro. James Kift, presiding at the pianoforte. The music performed at the Lodge of Joppa is always of a high order, and on this occasion, when it was equal to the Joppa standard, was participated in by Miss M. Lynton, Mr. C. Rowcliffe, Madame Alice Barnett, Bros. Kift and Ellis. The following were present as visitors:—Bros. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; John Cubitt, G.P.G.; John Boyd, G.P.G. and G. Steward; C. F. Hogard, Col. Shadwell H. Clerk, P.G.D. 1383; J. P. Cohen, W.M. 205; I. Peertree, W.M. 185; W. H. Gulliford, W.M. 1017; A. D. Loewenstark, I. Lazarus, S.W. 1017; G. Manners, 1589; C. Barnett, 1707; C. Taylor, 1426; A. Tisley, 8; H. I. Lyons, 205; A. L. Mawkes, 315; Murgloski, 398; C. Davis, 222; Lechowitz, 1642; Williams, 933; Noble, 902; Dolling, 1673; A. Barnard, 749; Maynard, 205; I. Beveridge, 1319; Forge, 619; Morson, 1320; Jewell, 1559; C. Isaacs, 141; C. Horsey, 3; P. G. Jupe, 1287; Hatterj; W. Roroby, 917; B. Newton, 1201; J. Botobol, 1201; W. R. Phillips, 975; H. J. Lewis 907; H. E. Bonheim, W. Birdseye, 715; C. Coleman, 907; E. Lancaster, 1044; Hodgers, 902; Noble, 902; J. Colver, 1031; A. H. Brown, 174; Frankenberg, 73; Field, 65; Fletcher, 180; Rev. V. Rosenstern.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—A meeting of the above lodge was held on Thursday, the 3rd inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel, when there were present Bros. E. Jones, W.M.; Legge, S.W.; Fellows, J.W.; George Kenning, P.M.; Treasurer; Rickwood, Secretary; Thomas Cohu, P.M.; George Abbott, P.M.; West, Henry Child, John Kent, Charles Cann, Thomas Fisher, S. T. Lucas, Wm. Cotter, W. Figes, George Taylor, Alfred Lewis, E. J. Kellaway, T. T. Hampton, C. Gale Sparrow, R. J. Dart, W. H. L. Davies, and others. Visitors, Bro. Farthing and another. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed; the W.M. appointed Bro. W. T. Rickwood as Secretary, pro. tem., in consequence of the indisposition of Bro. J. G. Marsh, P.M. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation at the next meeting. The lodge was then closed. The brethren sat down to a very enjoyable banquet, served under the superintendence of Bro. Rand. The usual toasts were given by the W.M. Bro. Davies added much to the enjoyment of the brethren by his performance on the piano.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—This lodge held its last meeting at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval, on the 1st inst., when there were present Bros. H. Higgins, W.M.; Reeves, S.W.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, J.W. (Freemason); G. Everett, P.M. 177, I.P.M.; E. Page, P.G.S., Treas.; Stuart, P.M. 141, Sec.; Kohler, S.D.; Speedy, J.D.; Webb, I.G.; Robinson, D.C.; Marsden, W.S.; Stokes, A.W.S.; Gardner, P.M.; Drysdale, P.M.; Longstaff, Tyler. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised Bros. Pim and Barry, and passed Bro. Webster, the ceremonies being most carefully and correctly performed. The elections for W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler, were unanimously in favour of Bros. Reeves, S.W.; Page, P.M., Treas.; and Longstaffe, Tyler; Bros. Stranger, Fowler, and Higgins, jun., were elected Auditors, and a jewel voted to the out-going Master. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The cloth having been removed, the W.M. gave the preliminary toasts, which were duly drunk. In proposing "The Health of the W.M.," the I.P.M. called attention to the excellent manner in which the W.M. had discharged his duties during his year of office, and which official year was nearly at a close. He had had a very onerous term, and he had performed the responsibilities of his position most ably, and he would carry with him in his retirement the well-wishes of every member of Number 1381. In conclusion the speaker said that on that auspicious occasion, being the advent of 1878, he should without further preface wish him good health and a most happy and prosperous new year. The W.M. briefly, in reply, thanked the brethren for the very hearty manner in which, on all occasions he had been received by them. He had endeavoured to do his duty, and he believed he had given them every satisfaction in that particular, both in and out of lodge, and in conclusion, he said that he had passed a most pleasant year, and one that he should ever remember with satisfaction. "The Visitors" having been proposed, was responded to by Bros. Andrews, Hon. Sec. 55, in the absence of his colleague, Bro. Bingmann, P.M. 55, &c. In introducing "The Past Masters," the W.M. said that the lodge was to be congratulated upon having so many distinguished brethren amongst them. Some of them were large supporters of the different charities, and he felt sorry that so few were present that evening, but their health notwithstanding would be drank none the less hearty. Bro. Drysdale in reply, having thanked the W.M. and the brethren for the very cordial manner in which the toast had been proposed and responded to, said that he considered it the duty of every Past Master to attend the meetings of the lodge and to assist their younger brethren—and that without distinction—in the carrying out of their multifarious and onerous responsibilities. The W.M. then rose, and said he was about to propose, and that for the first and last time, a most important toast, namely "The W.M. elect." They all knew the good and genial qualities of Bro. Reeves, who was moreover their first initiate. He had been throughout his Masonic career most indefatigable in his attendance, which characteristic augured well for his successful occupancy of the Master's chair. In personally wishing him a most prosperous year of office, he only expressed that which was the unanimous hope of every member of his mother lodge. This toast having been received with excellent "fire," Bro. Reeves duly replied. In proposing "The Health of the Treasurer and Secretary" the W.M. took occasion to speak of the careful manner in which Bro. Page husbanded their funds, and also in other respects watched over their interests. In Bro. Stuart they also possessed an excellent Secretary, and one who at all times was ready to assist them with the benefit of his advice. The Secretary in response said he felt sorry that the Treasurer had been compelled to leave them at the conclusion of their Masonic labour, but he would take advantage of that circumstance to tell them that in Bro. Page they possessed one of the best Treasurers that he had ever been associated with. He then in conclusion expressed his own thanks for the compliment conferred upon him as Secretary. "The Officers" followed, and was acknowledged by Bros. Walls, Kohler, Webb, and Robinson. During the evening Bros. Everett, Walls, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at an early hour. The installation of Bro. Reeves will take place on the 5th proximo.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—On Thursday, the 3rd inst., a regular meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, which was unusually well attended. Among those present were Bros. F. Wilkinson, W.M.; Ashley, Treas., as I.P.M.; Falkner, S.W.; Rubie, P.M., as J.W.; Capt. Peel, as Dir. of Cer.; Braham, Sec.; Gummer, S.D.; Hunt, J.D.; Robinson and Jacob Smith, Stewards; Bigwood, Tyler; E. White, P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, P.M. 43 and 958, P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire; F. Baldwin, W.M. 355. As visitors Bros. Sir John Floyd, 654; Gen. Doherty, P.M. 53 and 906 and P.P.G.S.W.; Williamson, W.M. 906; Hill, P.M. 906; Dill, P.M. 906; Reeves, P.M. 906, P.P.G.O.; J. Shaw, S.W. 326; P. G. Young, S.W. 906; Howes, J.W. 906; Hayward, S.D. 606; Davis, I.G. 906; W. H. Young, 906; Besford, Sec., 703; Ash, 703; Freeman, 906. There were also many members of 41. The lodge having been opened at 7.40 by the W.M., the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. At the request of the W.M., Bro. Dr. Hopkins reported the proceedings of the committee appointed to promote the interests of the family of the late Bro. Cooper, stating that the name of the youngest son had been accepted as a candidate for admission into the Masonic Boys' School, that circulars had been issued to promote his election, and that a letter had been received from the Grand Secretary announcing that a grant of £40, subject to confirmation, had been made by the Committee of the Benevolent Fund, in addition to the £21 from the Prov. Grand Lodge. A letter was read from Bro. Brown, I.P.M., praying for indulgence on account of absence, owing to severe bereavement in his family. Much sympathy was expressed for this worthy brother, and the Secretary was directed to forward to him a letter of sincere condolence. Bros. White and Ashley spoke at some length as to the election of W.M. for next year, which had been discussed at a meeting of P.M.'s, and reported a recommendation that under peculiar circumstances, both Wardens having expressed a desire that their elevation to the chair should be postponed, the present W.M. should continue in office another year, to which he had given his assent. A ballot was then taken, which proved to be in accordance with this proposal. Bro. Ashley was in like manner re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Bigwood, Tyler. Mr. G. B. Mann, who had previously been admitted by ballot, was introduced, properly prepared, and initiated by the W.M. The charges were delivered by Bro. Dr. Hopkins, and the working tools were explained by the S.W. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. Gregory, Cartmell, and T. E. Wilton were raised by the W.M., who then dismissed them. In this lodge it is the custom for the secrets to be communicated after the return of the newly made Master Masons, and by request from the chair this was done by Bro. Dr. Hopkins, who also gave the traditional history of the degree and the charge, Bro. Falkner, as before, explaining the working tools. The lodge was then brought down to the First Degree, arrangements were made for the annual banquet, and no other business offering, except a vote of thanks to the visitors, which was carried by acclamation, the proceedings were brought to a close at 10.40.

PLYMOUTH—Brunswick Lodge (No. 159).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Huyshe Temple, Plymouth. The W.M., Bro. J. H. Stephens presided, and the lodge being duly opened the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. John Andrews, was proceeded with. The ceremony of the installation was ably performed by Bros. Stephens, R. Lose, and George Stentifer, P.M.'s. After the ceremony the W.M. appointed his officers: Bros. Stephens, I.P.M.; F. Littleton, S.W.; J. B. Johns, J.W.; George Stentifer, Treasurer; H. Miller, Secretary, O. Knowles, S.D.; C. D. Stentifer, J.D.; T. W. Trevan, I.G.; H. Mortimer, D.C.; W. H. Carter, Org.; A. Rowe, S.S.; J. W. S. Trevan, J.S.; James Bartlett, Tyler. The brethren subsequently adjourned to Bro. Walter's Farley Hotel, Union-street, where they sat down to an excellent banquet. The W.M., Bro. John Andrews, presided, and there were about sixty brethren present. The W.M. was supported by his officers. In the course of the evening a Past Master's jewel was presented on behalf of the lodge by Bro. George Stentifer to the I.P.M., who returned thanks in a graceful and feeling manner.

ST. JOHNS LODGE (No. 279).—On Wednesday, 2nd inst., the brethren of the St. John's Lodge of Freemasons, No. 279—the oldest lodge in the province of Rutland and Leicestershire, held their annual festival at the Masonic Hall, Leicester, for the installation of Bro. George W. Statham, the Worshipful Master elect for the ensuing year. There was a large attendance of the members of St. John's and other lodges in the town and district, as well as from a distance, there being no fewer than three representatives of Lancashire lodges—two from Manchester and one from Prescott, near Liverpool. Bro. Clement Edwin Stretton (son of his Worship the Mayor), P.P.G. Supt. of Works, the retiring W.M., opened the lodge, after which Bro. W. Kelly, R.W.P.P.G.M., took the chair, and proceeded to install the W.M. elect, in a very able and impressive manner. At the close of this ceremony, the W.M. appointed and invested the following officers of the lodge for the ensuing year:—Bro. Clement E. Stretton, I.P.M.; S. Cleaver, S.W.; J. Farndale, J.W.; the Rev. P. Smith, Chaplain; J. O. Law, Secretary; Joseph Jessop, S.D.; T. Colman, J.D.; L. P. Chamberlain, I.G.; E. Newton, D.C.; J. Roadknight and M. A. Cook, Stewards. Bro. C. Gurden was cordially thanked for his services as Treasurer during the year, and being unanimously re-elected, briefly acknowledged the compliment. His Worship, the Mayor of Leicester, Bro. Clement Stretton, P.P.G.S.W., was unanimously re-elected the P.M. to represent the lodge on the General Purposes Committee. The W.M. then proceeded to present a very handsome P.M.'s jewel to Bro. Clement Stretton, I.P.M., as an expression of the esteem in which he is held by the lodge and an acknowledgement of his very valuable and efficient services in the chair during the past year. The jewel bore the following inscription:—Presented to Bro. Clement Stretton, P.P.G., Superintendent of Works, by the St. John's Lodge, No. 279, as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of his valuable services as Worshipful Master, 1877.—Bro. Stretton, in briefly acknowledging the compliment said, "R.W.P. Provincial Grand Master, W.M. and Brethren, I have been frequently told by my predecessors that no moment in their Masonic career has been so appalling to them as when rising to return thanks for a P.M. jewel, but when I look round on the faces of those whom I am proud to believe are my friends, and see their expression of kindly sympathy, I feel my fears changed into some degree of confidence. When I was initiated, six years ago, I had very little hope of ever attaining any position in the lodge, and the Master's chair seemed as far removed as the 'Star in the East.' But the courtesy of the brethren, and the efficiency of my officers, have made the past year the most pleasant of my life. My health having debared me from an active life, Masonry has been an especial boon in every case, and my happiest hours during the last six years, have been spent between 'the four walls.' I thank you very heartily for this handsome jewel which I am well aware will gain me admission into any society of Masonry that I may wish to enter. At the close of the lodge the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet, admirably served by M. A. Cook, the Bull's Head Hotel. The newly-installed W.M., Bro. G. W. Statham, presided, and the following were among the brethren present:—Bros. W. Kelly, P.P.G.M.; S. S. Partridge, P.G. Sec.; Clement Stretton (Mayor), P.P.G.S.W.; Clement Edwin Stretton, P.P.G., Supt. of Works; J. Malcolm McAllister, P.P.G.S.D.; J. W. Smith, P.F.G.P.; S. Cleaver, P.G.A.D.C.; J. Farndale, P.G. Steward; C. Gurden, P.P.G.S.W.; J. Jessop, P.G.S.B.; the Rev. J. H. Smith; P.P.G. Chaplain; the Rev. F. H. Richardson, P.G. Chaplain; T. A. Wykes, W.M.; John Orlando Law; Edward Newton, jun., Thomas Dunn, Tyler; S. A. Marris, J. Roadknight, Alfred Palmer, P.M.; Frederick William Bottrill, James Joseph Bird, Matthew A. Cook, R. A. Barker, P.M.; Charles Stevens, William Langmore, H. H. Peach. The following were amongst the visiting brethren:—E. Mason, I.P.M.; S. Knight, H. Peake, P.M., P.P.G. Supt. of Works; J. Read, S.D.; Edwin W. Potter, R. Taylor, S.W.; Morley H. Lewin, I.P.M.; W. H. Chamberlain, W. Briam, T. Worthington, P.M.; J. Vaughan, W.M., Lancashire; J. Sandbach, P.M., Lancashire; S. G. Simpkin, J.D.; E. Praeger, Joseph Clemmey, T. A. Wykes, W.M.; T. R. Pickering, J. M. Quinn, and Owen Jones. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the whole proceedings were of a most enjoyable character.

MONMOUTH.—Loyal Monmouth Lodge (No. 457).—On Tuesday, January 1st, Bro. the Rev. D. G. Davies was installed as W.M. of this lodge, and the ceremony was most ably performed by Bro. Captain S. George Homfray, P.A.G.D.C. and D.P.G.M. Monmouthshire. The brethren afterwards adjourned to a banquet at the King's Head Hotel, Monmouth, presided over by the W.M.

OXFORD.—The Alfred Lodge (No. 340).—On the 19th ult. Bro. F. W. Ansell, at that moment W.M. elect, entertained an influential party of brethren at dinner in the banquet room, consisting of the Past Masters of the lodge, and of officers elect for the ensuing year. Bro. Alderman Handall, P.M., Prov. G. Treas., in speaking to the toast of his health on the occasion, complimented him on such a happy social gathering, which augured well towards the success of his year of office. The installation took place at the festival on St. John's Day, Bro. Houghton ably performing the interesting ceremony. After the installation of Bro. F. W. Ansell, P. Prov. G. Sup. of W., as W.M., he proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bros. John Pratt, P.P.G. Deacon, as P.M.; James Jenkin, P.P.G. Sword Bearer, S.W.; Rev. Henry Deane, P.P.G. Chaplain; J. W. Henry Houghton, P.P.J.W. Treas.; W. R. Hobbs, P.P.G. Sword Bearer, S.C.; T. F. B. Evans, Assist. Sec.; F. Ryman Hall, P. Dir. of Cer., S.D.; J. Jess Hughes, J.D.; Robert Payne, Senior M. of Cer.; W. Ellis Knowles, Junior M. of Cer.; James Mace Dormor, I.G.; W. R. Bowden, P.G. Steward, Organist; Edward Horn and Samuel Harris, Stewards; William Stephens and George Norwood, Tylers. The brethren gave their annual ball in the Clarendon Assembly Room on Wednesday, the 9th inst., when more than 120 members and friends assembled, the Craft appearing, by permission of H.R.H. the Prov. G. Master, Prince Leopold, in full Masonic costume.

DORCHESTER.—The Lodge of Faith and Unanimity (No. 417).—This lodge held its first regular meeting for the ensuing year on the afternoon of Thursday, the 2nd inst. There was a good muster of the brethren to witness the ceremony of installing the W.M. elect, Bro. W. H. Dean, that ceremony being the most important matter on the agenda paper for the meeting. The ceremony was ably performed by the W.M., Bro. R. Case. W. Dean proceeded to appoint and invest the following brethren as his officers for the year:—Bros. R. Case, I.P.M.; W. E. Brymer, S.W.; T. Bevis, J.W.; Rev. H. P. Paikes, Chap.; T. M. Dron, Sec.; A. H. Lock, S.D.; E. Burnett, J.D.; G. Gregory, D.C. P.M.; R. D. Thornton, I.G.; W. P. Ceckeram, P.M., and W. How, Stewards; J. Robinson, jun., Org.; Talbot, Tyler; Old, Assist. Tyler. The annual banquet took place after the closing of the lodge. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and ably responded to. The evening was spent very pleasantly, and with that harmony and good feeling so characteristic of Masonic meetings.

PENRYN.—Three Grand Principles Lodge (No. 967).—The brethren of this lodge assembled at their lodge room, at the King's Arms Hotel, on Tuesday the 1st inst., to initiate the W.M. elect (Bro. Thomas Rickard). The lodge was close tyled at 4 p.m., when the ceremony of installation took place, the beautiful ritual of the Order being impressively performed by I.P.M. G. W. Trenery, P.P.G.S.B. The Worshipful Master invested his officers as follows:—G. W. Trenery, P.P.G.S.B., I.P.M.; Thomas Gill, P.P.A.D.C., Treasurer; S. Sara, S.W.; Thomas B. Hart, J.W.; J. M. Thomas, P.M., P.G.O., Organist; G. Chapman, Secretary; R. Peters, S.D.; H. Dawe, J.D.; N. Gray, I.G.; W. J. Thomas, D.C.; F. Code, Steward; R. Carter, Secretary, C.M.A.F. The following members of Lodge Love and Honour (Falmouth) were present:—H. Tilly, W.M.; P. L. Fox, S.W.; J. Wallace, J.W. The business having been completed, and the lodge closed in due form, the brethren proceeded to the banqueting room, where a sumptuous dinner was provided, served in Bro. G. Chapman's best style. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and a most agreeable and harmonious evening was spent.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Lodge (No. 913).—The regular meeting of the above lodge took place on Thursday, the 3rd inst. at Bro. Tucker's Assembly Rooms "The Lord Raglan," Burrage Road. Bro. H. Butter, the W.M., filled the chair, and was supported by the following officers:—Bros. W. T. Vincent, I.P.M.; C. Coupland, P.M. and P.P.J.W. Kent, A. Penfold, P.M.; J. McDougall, P.M.; T. Smith P.M.; T. Hayes, S.W.; W. B. Lloyd, J.W.; E. Denton, P.M. and Secretary. James Chapman, S.D.; R. J. Cook, J.D.; H. Mason, I.G. and R. Lester, Tyler. Among the guests were Bros. Wetherill, P.M. 166, I.C.; R. Hilton, 829; W. Weiss, 1076; C. Jolly, (Freemason) &c. &c. The lodge having opened in due form and with solemn prayer, the minutes and accounts were read, and passed. Mr. C. Warburton Russell was then, after ballot and approval, initiated into Masonry, and Bro. F. W. Upson, after most ably answering the usual questions, was raised to the degree of M.M. It was then unanimously agreed that the sum of ten guineas should be given to the Girls' School Charity Fund, and ultimately Bro. Coupland and Smith were jointly appointed to act as Stewards at the forthcoming festival of that institution. The lodge was then closed and after partaking of one of Bro. Tucker's recherché little suppers, the social board was spread and the brethren re-assembled for refreshment. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were, as is always the case in this lodge, most heartily responded to, and the name of Lord Holmesdale, P.G.M. Kent, was received most enthusiastically. The toast of "Bro. Eastes, D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present," was then given by the W.M., who in the course of his speech, said they had a fair sprinkling of the P.G. Officers Past and Present in their lodge, he instanced the names of Bros. Coupland, Tongue, Denton, and Smith, as having had the honour of office in the Province, and especially they ought to feel proud of Bro. Coupland, who had taken the highest position in the province, and who was both in his private, as well as in his Masonic life, an honour to Plumstead and the lodge. (Cheers.) To those who had the privilege of seeing him (Bro. Coupland) do the work in chapter, it was a pleasure ever to be remembered. Many a good Mason had come from London on purpose to see him do that work, and there was but one opinion among them, and they had left with, if possible, a higher opinion of the importance of Arch Masonry than they had before possessed. (Cheers.) He then proposed the toast with "a good fire." Bro. Coupland in response said it was a most unfortunate thing for him to have his name so often coupled with a toast of so much importance. (No, no.) Well, what he meant was that having so often to respond to that toast, he found it difficult to do other than keep on repeating the same thing over and over again. (Cheers.) He had the privilege of meeting their esteemed Grand Master, Lord Holmesdale, several times during the course of the year, and as well the Deputy Grand Master, and if the brethren around had the same privilege, they would come to the same conclusion that he had arrived at, and not only himself, but every officer in the province, namely, that in Lord Holmesdale and Bro. Eastes they had at their head two of the best and hardest working Masons it was possible to meet with. (Cheers.) No labour seemed too hard, and no responsibility seemed too heavy for them, while charity warmed their hearts with an undying flame. Long might they live to guide and govern the Masons of Kent. (Loud cheers.) The W.M. had been pleased to allude to him as a "good Mason," and while he felt it to be a high honour to be called so, yet he felt that he only did his duty, and if all the brethren were to do so, and sink individuality in the general good of the Craft, it would be better for the future of Freemasonry, and better for themselves. (Applause.) He then resumed his seat after thanking them most feelingly for the toast. Bro. Vincent then in eulogistic terms proposed the toast of "The W.M.," and in reply, Bro. Butters said that without their support he was as no one. He was more convinced than ever, that if there was not a bond of sympathy existing between himself and the rest of the lodge, he never could carry on the duties with credit to himself or satisfaction to them. (Applause.) He then referred to certain matters personal to the lodge, and said that through the subordinate officers of it, as well as in the present position, he had striven hard to render himself worthy of their choice, and he felt strongly the undoubted sympathy that existed between them, and which had so warmly, under recent circumstances, been tendered him. (Applause.) He meant to maintain the credit and dignity of the lodge while in that chair, and asked them to give him a continuance of that sympathy, which had under some little trial separated him hitherto. Unless the true principles of Freemasonry were kept by them all in view, how could its attributes—brotherly love, good feeling, and affection, keep among them? He asked them to let those principles ever be held as the safeguard of their Order, and then, while he should do as he trusted he had ever done, all that lay in his power for the prosperity of the lodge and the happiness and welfare of its members, they on their part would feel within themelves that they were assisting to carry out a good work, and would have their reward in the harmony and love that should, and always had prevailed in the working and comfort of the lodge. (Loud cheers.) The toast of "The Past Masters" was especially left in the hands of Bro. Penfold, who the W.M. eulogised for his constant and unwearied efforts for the benefit of the lodge, and, in reply, he said that when he had been relegated to the position of Past Master he thought he should have had an opportunity of smoking his pipe in peace, and resting on his laurels, but to-night he found he had been labouring under a wrong impression. He could assure them the object always held in view by the Past Masters was to at all times promote the interests of the lodge by every means in their power. He knew that if the whole of the Past Masters were out of it, Freemasonry would still flourish. They were but units in the grand structure of the Order, and while each lodge formed one of these units, so each brother formed a unit in his own lodge, and it was by his conduct that the cohesion so necessary for its stability was kept up, or otherwise. By unity they became strong, but by division they must fall; he trusted to see them all united in one bond of brotherhood, and then the result would be for them a strong and flourishing position among the lodges of the province. (Loud cheers.) They had one of the best Masters it was possible to have. He was equal to any emergency, and should one arise, he might be sure of the support of every Past Master, and he felt as sure of every member of the lodge. (Applause.) The toast of "The Initiator" followed, and Bro. Russell modestly replied. "The Visitors" was eloquently responded to by Bro. Wetherill, who thanked the lodge most heartily for the cordial reception accorded to him, as a total stranger that night, but although he was a stranger to them, yet the name and character of the Pattison Lodge was no stranger to him. His mother lodge was at Constantinople, and he was its I.P.M.; in fact he had to leave Turkey so hastily that he could not wait to receive his Past Master's jewel, which was presented to him at the United Military Lodge, at their last meeting. He could tell them that at Constantinople they read their Freemason, and every week it was eagerly awaited, and when they met, it used to be a constant question, "Well! how are they getting on in Woolwich and Plumstead? what are they doing at the 'Pattison,' or the 'Nelson,' or the 'Union Waterloo'?" and when they read in the Freemason of the splendid progress they were making, it gladdened their hearts for Freemasonry and old England. (Loud cheers.) So they might see that the Pattison Lodge and its doings were no strangers to him. (Cheers.) He thanked them again for their splendid hospitality, and assured them of just such a hearty reception, should they ever visit the "Leinster," No. 166, I.C., at Constantinople. (Cheers and laughter.) The toast of "The Officers" followed, and after Bro. Hayes, S.W., had responded in a stirring address, and Bro. Pryce, who had that night received the collar of D.C. at the hands of the W.M., had said a few words, the Tyler's toast concluded the pleasures of the evening. Some excellent glees and part songs were rendered by Bro. Woodford, Edmonds, and Davies during the evening, added much to its perfect enjoyment.

SOUTHEAST.—Priory Lodge (No. 1000).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Middleton Hotel, Southeast, on Thursday, the 20th ult., when there were present, amongst others, Bros. Rev. S. R. Wigram, Past Grand Chaplain, W.M.; Dr. E. E. Phillips, P.M. 379, I.P.M.; W. Chaplin, S.W.; J. C. Johnstone, P.M. 20 (I.C.), as J.W.; Rev. H. Hayes, Chaplain; J. A. Wardell, P.M. 160 and 1000, P.P.G.D., Secretary; A. Lucking, P.M. 160, P.M. and M.E.Z. 1000, Prov. G.D.C., D.C.; G. F. Jones, S.D.; F. D. Grayson, J.D.; W. H. Norman, I.G.; J. R. Hermann, P.M., P.P.G.D.; W. S. Cox, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; Rev. H. J. Hatch, P.M. 160, P.P.G. Chaplain; H. Beecher, H. Briggs, E. Birkett, H. Hassell, R. Barrett, J. G. Berry. Visitors: Bros. Rev.—Heaton, 425; Dr. Fisher, J.W. 379; F. Calrony. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. in a very able manner raised Bros. O. Bentall and W. Griffin to the Third Degree, and initiated Mr. W. Poplewell into the mysteries of the Craft. The lodge then proceeded to the election of a W.M. for the ensuing year, when the S.W., Bro. W. Chaplin, was unanimously elected; Bro. F. Wood, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. A. B. Mountain re-elected Tyler. A P.M.'s jewel was unanimously voted to the retiring W.M., Bro. Rev. S. R. Wigram, P.G.C., for the admirable manner in which he had governed the lodge during his year of office. There being no other business of importance the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The usual toasts were given, and the brethren separated after spending an enjoyable evening.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—This lodge celebrated the festival of St. John on New Year's Day, in their new lodge room, Station-street, when the W.M. elect was installed. The following members were present:—Bros. I. Evening, S.W. W. F. Lamonby, P.M. and Sec., P. G. Reg., (Freemason); W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org., P.G. Org.; Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., P.M. and Chaplain; T. Bird, S.D.; G. Brash, J.D.; C. Gibson, I.G.; W. McQuhae and H. Dent, Stewards; W. Shilton, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; James Black, W.M. elect; W. Martin, J.W. 1660; Captain F. R. Sewell, T. C. Robinson, J. Holloway, Richard Harrison, John Pearson, H. Peacock, R. Bailey, and John Towers. The visiting brethren were:—Bros. J. A. Salkeld, 962, Workington; J. W. Young, P.M. and Sec. 1400, P.G. Purst.; John Hartley, 1400; Thomas Wigham, 1400; Henry Irving, Sec. 962; Thomas Mandle, P.M. 371; W. Lamonby, W.M. elect 1073, P.P.G.T.; John Melmore, 371; T. Weatherston, 371; A. Taylor, P.M. 310, P.P.G.S.B.; James Quay, 1400 and 371; Joseph Pearson, P.M. 327, and J. Blackburn, 962. In the absence of the W.M., Bro. W. Taylor, Bro. Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., opened the lodge, after which the minutes of previous ordinary and emergency meetings were read and confirmed. Bro. W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. P.G. Org., then assumed the Presiding Officer's position as Installing Master, when Bro. James Black, W.M. elect, was presented. For eleven years consecutively the W.M.'s of Skiddaw Lodge have been installed by Bro. Crowther Morton, P.M. 872, 1002, 1267, W.M. 1660, P.P.G.S.W., but some months since Bro. Morton intimated his wish to retire from the duty in favour of a younger brother, and it was arranged that Bro. R. Robinson, P.M. and Treasurer, P.P.G.S.D., should perform the ceremony of installation. The sudden illness, however, of Bro. Robinson precluded the possibility of his being present, and Bro. Lewthwaite undertook the work at very short notice, and fulfilled it admirably. After the lodge had been opened in the Third Degree a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and worked in full, and officiated as follows:—Bro. Lewthwaite W.M.; Bro. W. Shilton, S.W.; Bro. W. F. Lamonby,

J.W.; Bro. A. Taylor, I.G. The board having been closed, the newly installed W.M., was saluted and proclaimed in the three degrees, this latter part of the ceremony, as also the presentation and explanation of the working tools, investment of officers, and addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren, being executed by Bro. W. F. Lamonby, P.M. The following is a list of the new officers:—Bros. Captain Sewell, S.W.; Tom Bird, J.W.; T. C. Robinson, Secretary; Lewthwaite, organist; C. Gibson, S.D.; W. McQuhae, J.D.; H. Peacock, I.G. The Treasurer, Chaplain, Stewards, and Tyler will be invested next lodge night. Before the lodge was closed Bro. Lewthwaite moved, Bro. Lamonby seconded, and a hearty vote of thanks was directed to be forwarded to Bro. T. McMechan, P.M. 327, Wigton, for his handsome present to the Skiddaw Lodge of a portrait of Bro. J. Lemon, P.M. and P.Z., 327, P.G. Treasurer. Bro. Lamonby also moved, the W.M. seconded, and it was unanimously agreed to vote the sum of £5 5s. towards completing an additional lodge vote for the Boys' School, the first half of which was granted, in accordance with custom, out of the church collection at the Provincial Grand Festival, held under the banner of the Skiddaw Lodge in September last. This being the whole of the business, and hearty good wishes having been tendered personally and by telegram from Lodges 327, 371, 962, 1073, 1267, 1400, 1532, and 1660, the lodge was closed in form. The brethren then adjourned to the Station Hotel, where a first-class banquet was provided by Bro. Peacock and Mrs. Peacock, the service of which, also, was unexceptionable. Bro. Black, the newly installed W.M., presided, and Bro. Captain Sewell, S.W., was vice-chairman. Grace before and after meat was said by Bro. Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A. The W.M. having proposed "The Queen, the Patroness of Masonry," followed by "The Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," Bro. Bolton gave "The Army, and Navy, and Auxiliary Forces," which he coupled with the name of Bro. Captain Sewell, who made a very suitable reply. Bro. Holloway next gave "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese," which was responded to by Bro. Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., in one of his happiest efforts. The Masonic part of the toast list was then proceeded with, and Bro. W. F. Lamonby proposed "The M.W. Grand Master of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales." In these troublous times, when Masonry was under the ban of excommunication of a Sovereign Pontiff, and when even in our midst a certain section of the Craft had thought fit to eliminate from its Constitutions the fundamental principles of belief in a Supreme Being, the Masonic brethren of England ought to rest doubly assured, when they had at their head the heir to the throne, with two of the Prince of Wales's brothers, also holding high office in the Grand Lodge. Under so happy a reign they might never fear they would drift into that vortex in which the French Grand Orient had plunged itself, whilst, also, they could always afford to treat with contempt the harmless anathemas of the Papacy. Bro. J. W. Young, P.M. 1400, next proposed "The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, Lord Skeimersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers." Bro. Rev. E. M. Rice, M.A., followed with "The Health of the Earl of Beville, M.P., R.W.P.G.M. of Cumberland and Westmoreland." Bro. Bailey gave "Colonel Whitwell, M.P., R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the rest of the Provincial Officers, Present and Past," coupled with the names of Bros. W. F. Lamonby, Lewthwaite, Young, and Taylor, all of whom acknowledged the compliment. Bro. W. F. Lamonby then proposed what he styled the toast of the evening, "The Newly-installed W.M. of Skiddaw Lodge," and, in doing so, congratulated Bro. Black in attaining the exalted position he had that day. He (Bro. Lamonby) had known Bro. Black ever since he came to Cocker-mouth, had closely watched his conduct, both as a public man and a Mason, and was perfectly satisfied he would perform his duties in the chair, and retire from office with the goodwill and applause of his brethren. He (Bro. Lamonby) was convinced Bro. Black's sympathies and endeavours were in the important work he had undertaken, and the best proof of this was the fact of their new W.M. having signified his intention to confer the degree of F.C. on the four brothers who were waiting to be passed, on next lodge night. Bro. Black, in reply, assured the brethren of Skiddaw Lodge that no effort should be wanting on his part to insure the efficiency of the work during his year of office. He had had some experience in having twice served as Secretary, and then as Warden, and, besides, he had that day appointed a staff of officers whom he had every confidence would give him their united and zealous support. He proposed "The Health of the Newly-invested Officers." Bro. Captain Sewell, S.W., as senior officer, first replied, and referred to a remark of Bro. Lamonby's when investing him that day, which was to the effect that, with one exception, he was the oldest Mason in Skiddaw Lodge, and that he was the son of a worthy brother, who, years ago, in conjunction with two or three others, by their indefatigability preserved from oblivion, and propped up, what was now one of the most flourishing lodges in the province of Cumberland and Westmoreland. He alluded to his mother lodge, Perseverance, No. 371, and it had struck him that he ought not to relax any endeavour to merit the compliments which Bro. Black had conferred upon him by appointing him S.W. He should freely promise Bro. Black a regular attendance, and further hoped to see those desirable little notices at the foot of their circular, relating to lodges of instruction, very frequently. Bro. T. Bird, J.W.; T. C. Robinson, Sec.; C. Gibson, S.D.; W. McQuhae, J.D.; and H. Peacock, I.G., also returned thanks. Bro. Bailey gave "The Retiring Officers," which he associated with the names of Bros. Evening, S.W., and Lamonby, Sec., the latter of whom congratulated Bro. Black, on succeeding to office with a balance of nearly £40 on the right side, although the lodge had incurred considerable expense in the removal of their furniture from the old to the new lodge room, and in the purchase of new fittings. A considerable amount of their proceeds during the year had arisen from arrears, and he threw out a hint to Bro. Robinson, the new Secretary, to keep a sharp eye on members in that respect. The W.M., in complimentary terms, proposed "The Installing Masters," both of whom were about the first acquaintances he made some ten years ago, when he settled down in Cocker-mouth. Bros. Lewthwaite and Lamonby having replied, Bro. Lewthwaite proposed that they drink the health of Bro. R. Robinson, who would have taken his place that day, but that sickness interfered. Bro. Robinson's health was drank most cordially, and with the warmest wishes for his speedy recovery. Bro. Lamonby gave "The Visiting Brethren," coupled with Bros. Mandles, Lodge 371; Pearson, 327; Salkeld, 962; W. Lamonby, 1073; and Martin, 1660, each of whom responded. Bro. Bolton, in complimentary and fitting terms, proposed "The Health of Bro. Dent," the architect of the new lodge premises, who made a suitable reply. Bro. W. F. Lamonby next gave "The Masonic Charities," and referred to the excellent system recently adopted by the brethren of Sun and Sector Lodge, No. 962, Workington, for the creation of votes in the three Institutions. That system consisted in as many members who liked subscribing the moderate sum of 2s. per month, and so soon as five guineas was raised a ballot was taken, and the member who drew the lucky number was entitled to a life-vote in whichever of the institutions he chose. Some members, also, were giving up their chances to their wives and eldest sons, which, all would know, was a decided numerical advantage. He hoped so admirable a scheme would be set on foot by the brethren of Skiddaw Lodge, and was sure Bro. Irving, the Secretary of No. 962, whose name he associated with the toast, would be most happy to give more detailed particulars of the way in which the concern was worked. Bro. Irving having replied, several members of Skiddaw Lodge expressed their intention to join the "lottery" instantaneously, one, we are happy to say, being an Entered Apprentice. The W.M. having given "To all poor and distressed Masons," the toast list was exhausted, and the happy party broke up by singing "Auld Lang Syne." Bro. Lewthwaite, P.G. Org. had charge of the musical arrangements, which included, "Oh, who would not a Mason be?" "Three cheers, Brothers all;" and "Brothers, all, of every Nation," harmonised as glees, from Bro. Dr. Philpots' collection; as also other part songs and glees, with songs by Bros. Brash, Weatherston, and Lamonby.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Saturday last, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. William Roebuck in the chair. Among the other brethren present were Bros. Hyde Pullen, Don. M. Dewar, Fred Adlard, S. Rosenthal, Henry Cox, W. F. C. Moutrie, R. B. Webster, A. Durrant, Jesse Turner, John Boyd, C. G. Rushworth, J. G. Chancellor, H. Massey (Freemason), C. F. Matier, Henry Norman, Charles Horsley, Geo. J. Palmer, Dr. Jabez Hogg, and F. Binckes, Secretary. Bro. Binckes informed the Committee that His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Senior Grand Warden, had graciously consented to take the chair at the next festival of this Institution, but the day, in June or July, and the place for the festival would have to be fixed by his Royal Highness. He (Bro. Binckes) had a letter from Sir Howard Elphinstone, in which he stated that the Duke of Connaught would have great pleasure in presiding at the festival.

The brethren then proceeded with the petitions of which there were 21 on the list. Of these two were deferred.

An outfit of £5 was granted to an ex-pupil of the Institution.

The list of candidates for next election in April was then settled. There were 46 unsuccessful candidates at the October election. Of these, one was taken off on account of his age, leaving 45. Twelve had been placed on the list since October, and 19 had just been accepted, which would make 77. The two which had been deferred would make 79. There were, therefore, a certain 77, and a possible 79. There would be ten vacancies, but Bro. Binckes said the buildings were in a forward state, and he thought 20 more boys might be taken on, making 30 to be elected at the Quarterly Court in April.

The necessary declaration of the number of candidates and vacancies was then made.

The House Committee was thereafter authorised to expend £1500 on fencing, asphalt, and draining the new playground, which is 250 feet by 200 feet, the old playground having been taken up for the new buildings which enlarge the school.

Bro. Roebuck said the new playground would be a magnificent one.

Bro. Charles Horsley, without desiring to make a motion on the subject, threw it out as a matter for the consideration of the brethren whether some rule should not be laid down, that the fathers of candidates for the school should have subscribed to its funds. By far the greater number had never subscribed anything.

Several brethren opposed any such suggestion, on the ground that to lay down such a rule would be to make the school a benefit society, which was not at all desirable.

Bro. Binckes said this was not at all a new idea. It had been mooted before, and was opposed on the same footing as now, and was immediately dismissed.

Bro. Horsley said he did not intend to make a motion on the point, but he mentioned it merely as a suggestion.

The Committee passed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and then separated.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The usual Twelfth Night entertainment to the pupils who remain in this school during the Christmas holidays was given on Monday evening. There were only thirty-nine girls who did not go home at Christmas, but though these made but a small party, their number was supplemented by several brethren and members of their families, who are generally to be found at this favourite Institution whenever the girls have an evening set apart for amusement. The Twelfth Night entertainment is always a pet pastime at this school, and though the old amusement of drawing for characters is no longer followed, the children find as much enjoyment in bonbons, and the fanciful dresses which they contain, as their predecessors did in those ill executed and not always complimentary figures and mottoes which were the accompaniment of the Twelfth-cake party. Looked forward to with the most intense anxiety by the children, the entertainment never fails to be looked back upon with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction by both the children and the visitors, and the efforts of the former to make the evening pleasurable are equalled by those of the latter to lead the children to wish for a renewal of the visit. Every person who goes to the Girls' School looks upon its inmates as a happy united family, with the matron and governesses as standing in place of the parents, and they find in the healthy and cheerful appearance of the little girls the best evidence that the parental hand is most judiciously exercised. On Monday evening the visitors had another opportunity of seeing the condition in which the school and the pupils were, and it was universally acknowledged that there had been no diminution in the fostering care hitherto observed by the management of the School. The visitors arrived about four o'clock, and were received by the matron, (Miss Jarwood) the governesses, (Miss Redgrave, Miss Ruck, Miss Triggs), the matron's assistant, (Miss Shepherd), and the pupils.

Among the visitors were Col. and Mrs. Burdett and family, Bros. S. Marsh, R. B. Webster, Thos. Robinson, W.M. 309; H. Massey, Miss Massey, and Miss A. Massey, H. Fulcher, I.P.M. 569, and Mrs Fulcher, Griffiths Smith, and Mrs. Griffiths Smith, H. C. Levander, Mrs. McManus of Philadelphia, Miss Rowland, Charles Jacobin, H. A. Dubois, two Masters Dubois, and two Misses Dubois, N. B. White, Thos. W. White, Thomas Hingston, Mrs. Hingston, Miss Louisa Hingston, W. Winn, Herbert Dicketts, John Faulkner, Edward Cox, Mrs. E. Cox, Louis Hirsch and Mrs. Hirsch, W. W. Morgan, jun., Mrs. Morgan, Dr. Jabez Hogg, F. R. W. Hedges, Rev. T. W. Morris, S. Rawson, Benj. Head, Miss Head, A. H. Diaper, Miss Muggeridge, Alfred Sack, Mrs. Sack, and Jaekel Fébérey, P.M., 851.

The visitors shortly after their arrival partook of tea, and then proceeded with the amusements of the evening. By the liberality of the Shakespeare Lodge, No. 99, these were on a more extended scale than usual, and Mr. Albert Jones, the famous mimic and ventriloquist, who appeared in character costume, amused the company for two hours by representations of Mr. Solemn Sides, who makes a speech at a dinner, an Exeter Hall reverend of the most lugubrious type, and a ventriloquist. After this he gave an impersonation of Mr. Sothern as "Lord Dundreary," the Christy Minstrels, the Wandering Minstrel, and the Peepshowman. All of these were highly amusing, and the whole party were much pleased with Mr. Jones's representations. Then there was a good deal of dancing, and then the children's supper, which was graced by a splendid cake, sent by Bro. and Mrs. Hirsch, frosted, and impressed with the words, "Dear children, your friends, Mr. and Mrs. Hirsch, wish you all a happy new year." Alice Taylor proposed "The Health of Mr. and Mrs. Hirsch, with many thanks for the cake;" and the children cracked their bonbons, adorned themselves with the costumes which the bonbons contained, and afterwards spent the remainder of the evening in the most perfect enjoyment. Bro. Jaekel Fébérey amused them for a long time playing on the piano while they danced, and made them roar with laughter at his amusing songs, "The Untidy Family," and "I'm so sleepy." It was late when the visitors left, and the party broke up with feelings of regret that they could stay no longer.

The January meeting of the Rosicrucian Society was held at the Café Royal, on Thursday, the 10th inst., under the presidency of Frater the Rev. W. B. Church, supported by Fraters Sigismund Rosenthal, Dr. W. R. Woodman, George Cooper, J. C. Cox, George Kenning, and others. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed; two brethren were admitted to the M—C—; Frater T. B. Yeoman was elected Celebrant, the other officers were advanced one grade. The Fraters afterwards dined together.

I understood that the Times intended at the beginning of the year to give up its strange freaks in orthography and eccentricities in punctuation. This wholesome reform was inaugurated on the 1st of January by heading an important paragraph "The Prince and Princess of Wales." There is every reason, the more, to suppose we may look for considerable sport in this journal throughout the year.—The World.

The directors of the Bank of England have reduced their rate of discount from 4 per cent., at which it was fixed on the 29th November last, to 3 per cent.

The title of Mr. Tom Taylor's new comedy, in rehearsal at the Court Theatre, is "Victims." It will be produced on the withdrawal of the late Lord Lytton's "House of Darnley." Mr. John Clarke—who must not be confounded with Mr. J. S. Clarke, the popular American comedian—has been engaged by Mr. Hare to sustain a leading part in the piece.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The first meeting of the Board of Stewards for the festival of the 13th February, 1878, was held on Tuesday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., occupied the chair. There were also present Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C.; E. Terry, C. J. Perceval, Col. Shadwell Clarke, W. H. Phythian, Edward Cox, G. Ward Verry, H. John Hatch, D. W. Holness, John T. C. Murchfield, Joseph Pawsen, Francis Ashlar, J. T. Briggs, W. Charter, J. G. Russell, C. W. Noehmer, Nardus Gluckstein, W. W. Morgan, H. Massey (Freemason), James Kew, Charles K. Killick, A. Leigh, W. Gamble, H. Vickery, and James Terry, Secretary.

Bro. Terry said that he had had the permission of His Royal Highness the Grand Master to invite some brother of position to take the chair on the occasion of the festival which H.R.H. fixed for the 13th February. Consequently he wrote to the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, Prov. G.M. for Cornwall, to occupy that position. The noble Earl, however, was unable to do so, and he (Bro. Terry) consequently wrote to His Grace the Duke of Manchester, Prov. Grand Master of Norths and Hunts. The Duke of Manchester consented, and that had been ratified by His Royal Highness. After that, he (Bro. Terry) had now the pleasure to announce that he had written to every lodge, and had received in response the names of 189 Stewards—not so many as last year, but still a very good list, and with the exception of last year the largest number of Stewards the Institution had yet had at a festival. With such a prospect he thought a very successful festival would be had.

Bro. Edward Cox proposed, and Bro. G. Ward Verry seconded, Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., as President of the Board of Stewards.

Carried unanimously.

Bro. Verry proposed, and Bro. Phythian, seconded Bro. Edward Cox as Treasurer.

Carried.

Bro. Verry proposed, and Bro. E. Cox seconded, Bro. Jas. Terry as Hon. Secretary, and this having been carried, Bro. James Perry, in thanking the brethren, said he hoped and trusted that his exertions, backed up as he knew they would be by such a board of Stewards as he now had, the next festival of the Institution would be eminently successful.

The details of the arrangements for the festival were then made.

The Rev. Bro. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., moved that the Steward's fee should be two guineas.

Bro. G. Ward Verry having seconded the motion, it was carried.

It was arranged that complimentary tickets should be issued to the M.W.G.M., the Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., the G.S., the Assistant G.S., the Hon. Surgeon to the Institution, the Secretary of the Girls' School, the Secretary of the Boys' School, the Secretary of this Institution, the Collector, the gentlemen in Grand Secretary's office, the Times, Daily News, Freemason, and several other papers.

The musical committee was appointed, and after the settlement of some other business the Board adjourned till the 24th inst., at four p.m.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this Institution was held on Wednesday last at Freemasons' Hall. Col. Creaton, V.P., in the chair. There were also present Bros. Benjamin Head, S. Rawson, J. M. Case, Griffiths Smith, F. Adlard, C. A. Cottebrune, W. Hale, L. Stean, Thos. Cubitt, Joseph Smith, Edward Cox, H. G. Warren, George Bolton, James Brett, W. Stephens, Hyde Pullen, Capt. N. G. Philips, A. H. Tattershall, John G. Stevens, G. Ward Verry, Thomas de L. Long, C. F. Hogard, C. J. Percival, John Bellerby, H. Massey (Freemason); and James Terry, Secretary.

After the reading the confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Terry reported the deaths of two annuitants, one at Ware, and the other at Wakefield. The Warden's report for December was read, and the Secretary then reported that the entertainment given on the previous Wednesday to the inmates of the asylum at Croydon was highly successful, and was greatly enjoyed by the old people.

The report of the Finance Committee shewed a balance to the credit of the Male Fund, to 31st Dec. 1877 of £225 8s. 6d.; to the credit of the Female Fund, £1035 16s. 4d.; and to the credit of the Sustentation Fund, £35 16s. 9d.; or a total balance of £1295 15s. 7d.

The Chairman was authorised to sign cheques, and the salary of the clerk, W. Recknell, in the Secretary's office, was raised £20 a year from the 1st of March. £10 was voted to the collection, Bro. Knill, as a gratuity on subscriptions for which he had made application, but which had been paid at the Secretary's office.

One case, which was deferred from last meeting for further information, was placed on the list for election, the enquiries which had been made having proved very satisfactory.

The petitions were then taken. A great many cases were placed on the list of both male and female candidates.

Notice of a motion for a small alteration of the laws was given by Bro. H. G. Warren.

Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., moved, and Bro. John G. Stevens seconded, a pension of ten shillings a week to the late gardener of the Institution at Croydon. The motion was carried unanimously.

The Secretary produced to the committee the returns obtained from the Tylers, who are annuitants of this Institution, of their total income independent of their annuities. They were all found to be within the £40 prescribed by the laws.

Thursday, the 14th February, was, at the request of the Secretary, appointed as the next meeting of the Committee, the usual February meeting this year falling on the day appointed for the next festival. The Committee, however, will meet on the 13th, as prescribed by the rules, but only for the purpose of adjourning to the next day.

Before the Committee separated, Bro. Terry said that the receipts of this Institution for the year 1877, as the brethren had no doubt all seen announced in the newspapers, amounted to the sum of £16,480, a larger amount by a great deal than had ever before been received by any one of the Institutions in one year.

The Committee then separated.

Masonic and General Tidings.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—The Quarterly General Court of the governors and subscribers of this Institution, will be held at Freemasons' Hall on Monday next, at 12 o'clock.

The Duke of Connaught, after visiting Prince Leopold at Windsor Castle, left by the 10.45 a.m. Great Western Train for London. Prince Leopold remains at Windsor Castle.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is about to pay a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Hamilton at Hamilton Palace. According to present arrangements his Royal Highness will arrive at Hamilton on Sunday, the 13th inst., and will leave on the Wednesday following. Owing to the early meeting of Parliament he will not stay so long as was originally intended. The visit is of a private nature, its object being to enable his Royal Highness to enjoy a few days' shooting in the extensive preserves of the Duke. The preserves include Cadzow Forest, the only part of the great Caledonian forest now remaining, and in which a herd of the old breed of wild cattle is kept. There will be a grand ball on the evening of Tuesday the 15th inst., for which about 400 invitations have been issued.

It is stated that the Prince of Wales and a large number of German Princes will be present at the marriage of Princesses Charlotte and Elizabeth of Prussia next month.

INDIAN FAMINE FUND.—The Freemason's of Devon have, through their P.G. Master, forwarded the sum of £300 to the fund.

The Installation meeting of the Hundred of Ellor Lodge (No 469) took place at the Masonic Rooms, Spalding, on Thursday last. Bro. G. F. Barrell being installed W.M. for the ensuing year. A full report will appear in our next.

The German army estimates for the year 1878-79 amount to 294,794,240 marks, the mark of the newly denomination being equal to the English shilling. This amount shows an increase of 1,820,000 marks.

A new comic drama by Mr. Byron is in preparation at the Globe Theatre. The leading characters will be sustained by Mr. Toole and Mr. Collette.

Two young men named Harris and Walker were on Tuesday week charged at the Mansion House with breaking a window in the shop of Bro. Kibble, a jeweller, in Gracechurch-street, and stealing four watches. One of them, on being apprehended, said he was hard up at the time, and committed the offence in order to be imprisoned. They were remanded.

Bro. Thos. Robinson, of Fareham, was installed W.M. of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 309, on Thursday week. This brother is, we think, one of the youngest Masters in England, having been initiated (as a Lewis), in the year 1874, at the age of 19. A full report of the meeting will appear in our next.

Bro. Gerard Henry's annual evening concert was given at Wimbledon on Monday last, under the patronage of Sir H. W. Peck, Bart., M.P., Sir Trevor Lawrence, Bart., M.P., Sir Joseph Bazalgette, and several other distinguished brethren. A numerous and fashionable audience was present, and the concert was a great success in every way. The artistes were Miss Marian Williams, R.A.M.; Miss Martha Harries, R.A.M.; Mr. Walter Wadmore, Bro. Gerard Henry, Mr. T. Gatehouse (Violin), Mr. W. D. Sumner and Bro. Stephen Jarvis (pianoforte), all of whom acquitted themselves to the entire satisfaction of the audience.

The sixth annual ball will take place in the Town Hall, Barrow, in aid of the Masonic Charities, on Thursday, the 24th of January, under most distinguished patronage.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.—The Quarterly General Court of the governors and subscribers of this Institution, will be held at Freemasons' Hall, this day (Saturday) at 12 o'clock.

In the letter of Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, last week the boy's name should be Twitchett, not Mitchell.

The Installation meeting of the Eclectic Lodge (No. 1201) took place on Friday evening, a report of the proceedings at which will appear in our next. Bro. E. J. Hart of Historical Engraving Notoriety was the out-going W.M., and Bro. A. E. Taylor the new W.M. A report of the meeting will appear in our next.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Multitudes suffering under a complication of disorders might obtain relief through these healing and purifying remedies, which should be employed without a day's delay. When the weather is variable and colds and influenzae are prevalent, this Ointment, well rubbed upon the throat and chest, gives the greatest ease, and checks all tendency to inflammation in the lungs and other organs. The Pills assist the curative action of the Ointment, inasmuch as they purify the blood and so quicken the circulation that congestion is rendered almost impossible. Holloway's treatment deals most successfully too, with that very troublesome and often tedious ailment, indigestion, which is the bane of thousands from overwork and fast living in the present day.—ADVT.

CRAFT CERTIFICATE OF NO. 281, BARNSTAPLE, OF 1766.

Your correspondent "Dryadust" has done well to transcribe the text of the old certificate of No. 281, Barnstaple, of 6th January, 1766, as it is most desirable to have such documents made public for the benefit of the Masonic students, now happily increasing in numbers and influence. The lodge in question was warranted in 1762 and was then No. 281, the number being altered in 1770 to 228, soon after which it became extinct. In 1873, the "Loyal Lodge" was constituted in the same town, as No. 453; in 1792 it became No. 365; in 1814, (after the "union") 469; in 1832 it was altered to 312, and last of all changed to 251 in 1863. It was usual in those early days for the lodges to issue their own certificates, and, indeed, was even so done early this century.

R.W. BRO. HARRIOTT, 1729, LIST OF LODGES.

I will answer our esteemed brother's note shortly, having a copy of the original of 1729, (not 1719), and will transcribe it for the Freemason.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

LODGE CERTIFICATES.

In your last number you gave us a copy of a private lodge certificate (Fleece Lodge, in Barnstaple), dated January 6th, 1766. Hereunder I send you a copy of a similar one, issued by Lodge Hannibal, held at the Masonic Hall, St. George's, Bermuda, dated 5th November last, which is as follows:—

"To all whom it may concern,

"Lodge Hannibal, No. 224, A.F. and A.M.

"Holden under the Grand Lodge of Ireland.

"We hereby certify that Bro. Walter Askew is a regular, registered Master Mason, in the Lodge Hannibal, 224 held under the Grand Lodge of Ireland: that he has, during his stay with us, behaved himself as an honest and worthy brother, and as such we recommend him to all the fraternity around the globe.

"In testimony thereof we have hereunto set our hands, and affixed the seal of the lodge, at our lodge rooms, Masonic Hall, St. George's, Bermuda, this 5th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy seven.

"Admitted 10th January, 1877,

"Declared off on the 5th November, 1877.

THE PLEIADS.

Can one give me the correct title of Bro. Hamblenton's book "The Relation of the Pleiades to the Primitive Traditions, or the Origin of Races." He read a paper at 33, Golden-square, some time back on the same subject.

STOMA.

The utilisation of subterranean heat for warming houses is suggested by an American engineer in Nevada, who is perfecting a plan for heating the town of Virginia by means of the warmth generated in the subterranean regions of the mines. He believes there is sufficient heat in the lower levels of the mines to warm every house in the city, and recommends a system of pipes through which the heat will be drawn out of the mines, and distributed about the town.

The consumption of horseflesh in Paris, which commenced in 1860 in the face of great prejudices, but which steadily advanced and derived a great stimulus from the siege, has this year averaged 1000 animals per month.

THE NEW MEDICAL COLLEGE EDINBURGH.—A commencement has been made with the clearing of the site to be occupied by the new Medical College, Edinburgh. The houses occupying this site were built about a century ago, and that portion of them constituting Park-place consisted of what were then first-class city residences. One of these, of very graceful design, is considered to be the work of one of the brothers Adam. It was the town residence of the Campbells of Succoth, and was at one time occupied by Sir Islay Campbell, Lord President of the Court of Session. This house, Mr. Anderson, the architect of the college buildings, proposes to re-erect and incorporate with the general design in such a manner as not to interfere with the æsthetic effect of the Anatomy Court, of which it will form a feature. Another of these houses belonged to the Taits of Harvinton, and in it the present Archbishop of Canterbury was born, his mother having been a daughter of the Lord President Campbell above referred to. The interiors of these houses contain admirable specimens of mantelpieces, doors, &c., similar in style to those so much affected by the modern Queen Anne school. These Mr. Anderson proposes to utilise as far as practicable in the new class rooms. To carry out the portions of Mr. Anderson's design absolutely required will entail a cost of about £188,000. Towards this sum the public have contributed about £90,000, and the Government have promised to contribute £80,000 conditionally upon the public subscribing the balance. —Builder.

A statue to Thomas Campbell has been erected at Glasgow, the poet's birthplace, and forms a companion to the figure of Burns, at the side of the Scott Memorial in George Square. The bronze statue is 9 feet high, and represents Campbell in the costume of the Prince Regent's period, holding a pencil and scroll.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

A "Folk-lore Society" has just been formed for the purpose of preserving the fast-fading relics of our popular fictions and traditions, legendary ballads, local proverbial sayings, superstitions, and old customs. According to the prospectus the new society "will gather together the folk-lore articles scattered throughout English literature, and such communications on the same subject as may be forwarded direct to the society, and select therefrom articles of special interest for publication by the society; and, as opportunities offer, it will print such accounts of the folk-lore of the colonies and also of other countries as may serve to illustrate and explain that of our own. As the society increases and its means further develop, it is intended to extend the field of its labours so as to include the collection and publication of the folk-lore of aboriginal peoples." Among the members of the Council are Mr. F. Overy (President of the Society of Antiquaries), Professor Max Müller, Mr. W. R. S. Ralston, M.A., and Mr. Edward Solly, F.R.S. Mr. Thoms has consented to act as director of the society, and Mr. G. L. Gomme, of 26, Merthyr-terrace, Castelnau, Barnes, has undertaken the duties of honorary secretary.

About 50 telephones are now in practical use in Cincinnati as a means of communication between business establishments. The longest connecting wire is from a distillery in Cumminsville into the city proper, about five miles. The telephone has, however, been tested on the police telegraph in that city, equivalent to nearly a hundred miles of wire, and is said to have given satisfactory results. Philadelphia Ledger.

THE GULF OF MEXICO.—Professor A. Agassiz, with an assistant, is to be accommodated on board the United States Coast Survey steamer Blake, which has just sailed on a surveying cruise that will occupy this winter. By a study of the animals dredged from the bottom of the gulf, Professor Agassiz will be enabled to make important comparisons with the fauna of the Atlantic, and especially as to growth, habits, migrations, and changes of living forms found in the waters near the British Islands and the Scandinavian Peninsula. The expedition is under the command of Lieutenant-Commander Charles D. Sigsbee, United States Navy, who has had several years' experience on coast survey duty, and has been notably successful in deep-sea soundings. —Nature.

PURE WATER.—In the last session of the Deutsche Gesellschaft für öffentliche Gesundheitspflege, Dr. Falk described a new method of testing the purity of drinking water by electrical experiment. From researches carried out in the laboratory of the School of Artillery in Berlin, it appears that the conductive properties of water for the electric current vary rapidly according to its degree of purity, the resistance decreasing with the purity of the water. It is possible, in this manner, to detect with great ease the presence of small quantities of organic matter in water. —Nature.

The Mercers' Company have given notice that the lectures founded by Sir Thomas Gresham will be read gratuitously to the public on the following evenings at 6 o'clock in the theatre of Gresham College, Basinghall-street—viz., Rhetoric (Mr. T. F. Dallin), January 15, 16, 17, and 18; Law (Dr. Abdy), January 22, 23, 24, and 25; Physic (Dr. Symes Thompson), January 29, 30, and 31, and February 1; Divinity (the Dean of Winchester), February 5, 6, 7, and 8; Astronomy (the Rev. E. Ledger), February 12, 13, 14, and 15; Geometry (the Dean of Manchester), February 19, 20, 21, and 22; and Music (Dr. Henry Wylde), February 26, 27, and 28, and March 1.

The Farnesina Palace in the Transtevere, Rome, well-known for its magnificent frescoes by Raphael, has been closed to the public by its owner, the Duke de Ripalta, a Spaniard, on the pretext that the Government works for the improvement of the Tiber trespassed on his grounds and endangered the safety of the building. Bills to this effect were posted on the walls, but the police tore them down and declared that they were illegal, having been placed there without the visa of the authorities. Built more than three centuries and a half ago, the Farnesina is a fine monument of the Italian Renaissance, and contains not only the mythological paintings of Raphael—notably the story of Cupid and Psyche—but works by Peruzzi, Sebastian del Piombo, and a colossal head attributed to Michael Angelo.

MUSICAL NOTATION.—A correspondent from Breslau writes to the Frankfurter Zeitung that the musical director, Herr H. J. Vincent, the latest advocate of the new key-board, delivered a few days ago a lecture on this subject in the music-hall of the University of Breslau. The new key-board has already given rise to much discussion in Germany. Herr Vincent asserted that the introduction of a new notation was a "postulate" necessarily associated with it as its written image. Both are consequences of that new view of the essentially chromatic character of the sound-world, which is (he said) forcing its way into universal acceptance. Both of them are the expression of this view in its double relation; for the chromatic key-board is nothing else but an embodied notation, while the notation may be described as an abstract written key-board; they reciprocally correspond to each other. The lecturer declared that the only road to a really simple theory of music was to accept the chromatic system as the origin and foundation of the diatonic. The scale of seven notes must be viewed and treated as a corollary deduced from the scale of 12; therefore the chromatic is the parent of the diatonic system. But this theory leads directly to the adoption of the new chromatic key-board, and a system of notation adapted to it without keys or clefs. Herr Vincent purposes visiting most of the principal towns in Germany to lecture on his special subject.

Sixteen farms have been entered in competition for the prizes, to the value of £240, offered for best managed farms by the Bristol Local Committee for promoting this year's Show of the Royal Agricultural Society of England. The competition is limited to tenant farmers in Gloucestershire, the Eastern Division of Somersetshire, and the Northern Division of Wiltshire. Of the number entered 13 are dairy or stock farms, only three coming in the classes for arable farms.

Captain Nelson, of the American ship Sacramento, recently arrived at Melbourne, reports that on July 9, in lat. 31° 59' N., and long. 37° W., he saw a sea serpent. Some 60 ft. of the monster was observable. It appeared to be about the size of a flour barrel in girth and of a yellowish colour.

The Channel Tunnel Works at Sangatte have made special progress of late, according to Engineering. If this trial should succeed the actual tunnel would be begun at once.

Mr. Charles Matthews has written to the papers contradicting a rumour that he has an intention of retiring from the stage. He is not, he observes, "of a retiring disposition," and is, besides, too fond of his profession to relinquish it voluntarily.

POST OFFICE ORPHAN HOME.—This institution celebrated its annual Christmas Festival on Thursday, 3rd inst., at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association in Aldersgate-street, the chair being occupied by Mr. R. W. Johnston, acting Postmaster of the Eastern Central District, and the arrangements generally being superintended by Mr. W. Powley, the honorary director and treasurer of the home. It appeared from a brief address delivered by the chairman that, although the home had been in existence for something under eight years, there are as many as 70 children on the books, and that ten additional boys and girls will be brought within its protection within a few days, making a total of 80 orphans, who will be clothed, fed, and educated at the expense of the institution. The home has for its patrons the Postmaster-General and several of the chief officers of the Post Office, as well as many of the bankers and merchants of the City of London; and its chief boast is that it has no building, no debt, and only one salaried official. In fact, it is a good instance of the success of the much-abused boarding-out system.

THE GUILDHALL LIBRARY.—It will be recollected that as an experiment and in deference to the wishes of many large firms in the city, the Corporation of London determined that their library in the Guildhall should be opened to the public for 12 months on every evening during the week, except Saturday, until 9 o'clock. Mr. Overall, F.S.A., the librarian, reports that the total number of readers availing themselves of the additional privileges granted by the Corporation had been 49,434—namely, those staying at 5 o'clock, 14,738, and those afterwards arriving, 34,696. The average attendance each evening had been 201 readers, and, taking the months separately, it appeared that the maximum occurred in an evening in February (259), and the minimum in June (170). Thus, as might be expected, the public make more use of the library in the winter months than in the summer. The class of readers using the library and reading-room in the evening would appear to be, for the most part, young men engaged in mercantile pursuits during the day. The literature consulted might be thus classed—1, history, topography, heraldry, and biography; 2, philosophy, science, and the fine arts; 3, poetry, drama, and fiction; 4, voyages, travels, and geography; and 5, classical and English literature and belles-lettres. There was not a single instance of any one injuring the books intrusted to them. The works of the most popular historians had been duplicated, and a purchase had been made, under the bequest of the late Sir David Solomons, of a liberal selection of works upon science and the fine arts. The staff arrangements made by the library committee had worked very satisfactorily. The actual cost of the evening opening had been £1277 for the year. In 1874 the total number of readers and visitors was 173,559; in 1875, 192,716; in 1876, 220,257; and in the first six months of last year, 121,619; the daily average attendance for these years being respectively 603, 724, 767; and for the six months in last year, 816. In conclusion the librarian states that, judging from the rapid increase in the number of readers and the usefulness of the library in all its branches since it has been opened by the Corporation as a free library, and including the evening opening during the past year, he was certainly of opinion that, as the facilities afforded and the great value of the collection in the library became more generally known, the results in the future would be even more favourable. The library committee, having carefully considered the Librarian's report on the details of the working of the library, and having regard to the very satisfactory evidence as to the extent to which the public had been benefited by the evening opening, recommended the Court to authorise its continuance, and permanently sanction the arrangements which during the experimental period had been found to provide so effectively for the care, maintenance, and supervision of the library. This recommendation has been adopted.

Sir John Astley, Bart., M.P., in consideration of the three very bad seasons which have done so much damage to agriculturists, has returned 20 per cent. to his Lincolnshire tenants whose rentals are over £200 per annum, and 15 per cent. on those under that amount.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 12, 1878.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The annual Festival of this admirable Institution of our Order will take place on the 13th February, 1878, under the distinguished presidency of the Duke of Manchester, R.W., Prov. G. Master of Huntingdonshire. A very numerous Board of Stewards has already been formed, among whom may be named Bro. the Marquis of Hartington and the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, together with many Present and Past Grand and Provincial Grand Officers. Up to the present time the Stewards number 195; which large list may well be increased before the second meeting of the Stewards on the 24th of January. This we trust will prove to be the case, and we need hardly add that if Bro. Terry can open our Charitable Festivals for 1878 with 200 Stewards, it will be indeed a good augury for the cause of Masonic Charity in this new year of light and grace. At the first meeting of the Stewards on the 3rd inst., Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G. Purst., well known to most of us, for many good genial qualities, was elected Chairman. Bro. Edward Cox, an old and worthy member of our Order, was chosen as Treasurer, and to our zealous and untiring Bro. Terry, was delegated the important office of Secretary to the Board of Stewards, not only "virtute officii," but as a special mark of fraternal regard and confidence. The Stewards very wisely fixed the amount of deposit for Stewards at the reasonable figure of two guineas, and we are inclined to think that this fact may induce many other worthy brethren to volunteer to act as Stewards to this most deserving charity of our Order. For let us remember what the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution really does do. It is now giving annuities to 145 aged and decayed brethren, of £40, equivalent to £5800 annually, and annuities of £32 to 130 widows, amounting to £4160. Thus it is pledged to an annual expenditure of £9960. In addition to this the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution gives to 13 widows (this is a unique arrangement of our excellent Masonic Charity) one half the amount of their late husband's annuity. Thus on the whole, the payment to the annuitants will absorb somewhat over £10,200, and we may well bear in mind that during the last five years we have added 99 annuitants and £4600 annually in allowances. These are facts to be recorded and realized. We may observe that of these annuitants fourteen brethren and fifteen widows live at Croydon, where they have comfortable rooms and coals provided for them. We make bold to say that there is not one Charity of our Order which is in itself more useful and valuable, or more deserving the kindly support of the entire Craft. It does as much good, humanly speaking, as can be done by any other similar charity, and does it simply, straight-forwardly, and unostentatiously. It has been sometimes said that the Institution is a rich institution, but that is a complete mistake. It has no doubt a considerable amount of funded property, but the interest of that, which amounts, in both the funds to about £1440 annually, in round numbers, as will be seen, bears but a small proportion to the sum necessary to carry on the Institution, namely £10,200 annually at the very least. It has been remarked that the balances of the Institution are large, and so they are, and well it is that they should be so, as the Committee and Bro. Terry very properly always bear in mind that seasons of prosperity may be followed by the chilling hours of adversity, and that it is always wise to keep on the "credit" side if possible of your Banker's account. The "debit" page is a bad one for societies and individuals. We feel it to be our duty strongly to commend the claims of this excellent Institution to the notice and sympathy of our many readers. We shall hope on the 13th of February, to hear Bro. Terry announce a noble total, and shall be glad to think that thus our old English

Craft remains true to its high mission, the inculcation of Masonic brotherhood, the practice of kindly and discriminating true hearted charity. May our anticipations be realized, and the anniversary of 1878 demonstrate that English Freemasonry is "moving on."

A NOTE OF WARNING.

Those who know most of what is going on in Freemasonry are the fullest of some little anxiety for the future. We have at this moment before us the spectacle of a weekly increasing Order, and of an enormous list of candidates for Freemasonry. A large number of lodges have their agenda papers covered positively with the names of the applicants, whether as initiates or joining members. And though it is very pleasant to us old Masons to witness the appreciation of an Order, to which some of us have devoted the best hours of our lives, we still feel, and feel strongly, that there is another side to the picture, not so cheerful, and certainly not so welcome. It is the old saying, "After the dinner comes the reckoning," and after we have thus added to our numbers, rapidly and indiscriminately, what then? We now wish to point out to our readers two ways in which this untimely haste of admission is likely to injure the prestige and prosperity of the Craft. We shall suffer greatly from a lowering of our standard of admission. It is an undoubted fact that in order to swell lodge funds many candidates are admitted who have no claim to be admitted at all. Too many brethren forget both the responsibility of a Freemason and the need there is that they should have some knowledge of the candidate. Many candidates get in in a sort of haphazard way like this. Bro. Jones says to Bro. Jiggins, "I am going to propose Beckington, will you second him?" "I don't know him," says Jiggins, "but if you propose him I will." "Capital good fellow is Powter," says Napper—"let's have him in our lodge, Johnson." "I don't know him," says Johnson, "but if you do that's quite enough." Accordingly, Beckington and Powter are proposed, seconded, and admitted. We have known of a case where candidates were admitted on the fiat of one brother, though unknown to the other brethren, and at this moment no possible enquiry can be made as to those who are trooping in, and on whom will depend the future of Freemasonry. Of the above there is no possible doubt; though its remedy may not be so easy to find, and then, secondly, let us remember, the evil accruing to us as an Order, in respect of overwhelming demands on our Charities. Ask Bro. Terry, or Bro. Binckes, or Bro. Little, all of whom know the working of Freemasonry well, and they will tell you, we feel sure, that the present rapid increase of brethren fills them with most serious considerations for the future. Of those who now are so carelessly admitted in such large numbers, a very sensible proportion will become inevitably candidates for our Charities. And when we realize what has been doing, what is doing in this respect, we often ask ourselves, what is to be the possible limit? What will be the probable result of such a startling increase of our numerical membership? We then beg, respectfully, with the beginning of 1878, to call the attention of W. Masters to this most important subject. Let them set their faces against this extraordinary facility of proposition and of reception, and let us all remember that if our lodges are to continue to be what they are meant to be to us, we should endeavour to make them a family party to us all, in which all are known, all are loved, all are on terms of affection, and happy when with us. Freemasonry is not and never will be strong because of numbers, but it is and must be strong in the heartfelt sympathy and Masonic fellowship of all the members of its kindly lodges.

THE INDIAN FAMINE FUND.

The result of the appeal from the Mansion House to the benevolent public for the relief of our distressed fellow subjects in India, must be deeply gratifying to patriotic Englishmen and Freemasons. Up to Tuesday evening, January 1st, 1878, the Indian Famine Fund now being raised at the Mansion-House reached the splendid total of £500,000 sterling, or reckoning it in Indian currency, over five and a half million rupees. It will be in the remembrance of some of our readers, as our contemporary, the Times, clearly points out: "The fund was opened on the 15th of August last when, at the request of the Duke of Buckingham, the Governor of Madras, the then Lord Mayor (Sir Thomas White), made a public appeal for help. The donation of the Prime Minister came by the first following post, and those of Her Majesty and the Prince of Wales the same week. Since then over 16,000 separate donations have been paid in at the Mansion-House, besides many more remitted direct to the bankers. The fund was distinct from those collected at Manchester, Liverpool, Blackburn, Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Bradford, which were kept purposely quite apart, and sent to India. Dublin, however, contributed £13,000 to the Mansion-house Fund, and a large number of other cities and towns throughout the Kingdom and in the Colonies also sent their donations through the Lord Mayor. It is still not the case, as it has been asserted, that the greater portion of the money received was obtained by the action of provincial organizations, for the bulk of the collection was contributed by private donors; by bankers and merchants in the City, and through church and chapel offertories. The largest sum received in any one day at the Mansion-House was £13,000. In the box outside the Lord Mayor's residence over £1000 was contributed in coin by passers-by in the space of six weeks. Up to the present time £475,000, or over 5,000,000 rupees have been remitted to India, but a further large remittance was made at the meeting of the Committee on Monday. The Central Relief Committee in India, at the head of which is the Duke of Buckingham, have all along been full of gratitude for the aid rendered by the English people, resulting in the saving of a vast number of lives, and in the prevention of much misery. Yesterday £8500, including £2000 previously advised, was received through the Mayor of Sydney as an instalment of the contributions in New South Wales; and £200 also came from New Plymouth, New Zealand. These sums brought up the fund to the half million. In reply to a message from Sir Thomas White, General Sir Thomas Biddulph telegraphed from Osborne on Tuesday, the 1st. ult.:—"The Queen is much gratified at the magnificent result of the Mansion-house collection." And while, then, we congratulate the poor sufferers in India on so noble a contribution, and while we rejoice to think how wise and patriotic was the timely movement of the then Lord Mayor, as the head of the greatest municipality in the world, we also think it well to point out another fact to our many readers. In addition to the half-million raised at the Mansion-house for the relief of the sufferers by the famine in India, £54,216 was also received there during the Mayoralty of Sir Thomas White for the purposes of charity—viz., Hospital Sunday Fund, £26,082 19s. 1d.; the Inundations Relief Fund, £8904 14s. 3d.; the Welsh Miners' Fund, £4674 12s. 5d.; the St. John, New Brunswick, Fire Relief Fund, £7062 5s. 10d.; and the North Sea Fishery Disasters Fund, £7491 16s. 3d. Thus the year's result for charitable appeals at the Mansion-house amounted to the magnificent sum of £54,000. We think that there will be but one feeling of satisfaction and gratitude at so eminently successful an appeal, and we congratulate the late Lord Mayor most sincerely on the pleasant memory which his mayoralty must afford him, of a great work carried on and achieved, in the noblest of all causes, the claims of suffering humanity. Too much praise cannot be accorded to the zealous labours of a distinguished committee, and especially to those humbler officials whose labours have been untiring, and whose punctual attention to all letters is worthy of imitation by all who are placed in a similar position of importance and trust.

THE STATE OF TRADE.

Various suggestions have been made as to the reasons of the abnormal and unwelcome depression of trade. Some seem to think that we may trace it to the unfortunate strikes in various trades, which have marked the last year; some numerous other causes, proximate and remote, which we need not dilate upon in these pages. We believe that much of it must be laid at the door of the unsettled state of affairs abroad, the alternating doubts as between war and peace, and the great drain such an untoward war is sure to cast both on the finances and resources of Europe. We always distrust those persons who talk glibly and cheerfully about war, as if it were a pastime of idleness or a freak of folly. It is the witty French writer, "Scribe," who says that most wars have begun about a trifle, and as a rule we are inclined to agree with him. As Freemasons we are friends of peace, not of war, because war brings in its train not only its own attendant horrors, but because, also, it inevitably overthrows for the time the peaceful struggles of commerce, the legitimate channels of trade. If peace shall happily reward the efforts of mediation, and the new year behold an armistice, as preliminary to a conference, we shall, we think, soon witness a revival of trade amongst us. We are not amongst those who take a depressed view of the prospects of the Chancellor of the Exchequer; on the contrary, we venture to think that the result of the year's returns will justify both his cautious anticipation, and his well-balanced Budget. If such should prove to be the case it will be a great satisfaction to all classes of the community, and it will be a signal proof of calm calculation and faithful statistics. We always have croakers amongst us who delight in possible deficiencies and probable short-reckonings, but we fancy that this year, as last, the Chancellor of the Exchequer will prove to be in the right, and will announce to the House of Commons a sufficiency of receipt, and a satisfactory equilibrium. In the present state of trade it is clear that the revenue must suffer, as they say, "by sympathy," but it will be no little merit, no slight proof of ready resource and tranquil confidence, if the returns justify the estimates, and the House of Commons applauds once more the announcement of a surplus, be it more or be it less, instead of a deficit. The figures on the face of them, though close running, no doubt, point, we think, clearly to such a happy contingency, and we venture to hope that we may be in due time permitted to hail a "consummation" so "devoutly to be wished for" by us all alike.

FRIENDLY ADVICE.

We do not profess to give "advice gratis;" but we think, every now and then we can afford to be both philanthropical and large-hearted, and so endeavour to be both to-day. Two cases in the Law Courts have recently struck our attention forcibly. The one is the case of a gentleman, who ought to have known better, certainly, who married a young woman 45 years younger than himself, and did not find a congenial help-mate or a happy home. Very strange this, is it not? Yes, it came to pass, that the fair and youthful wife took it into her head that she could live more comfortably separate, and so she suggested that he should live apart from her, while she enjoyed his well-furnished house. After a little the reality of the isolation came so congenial and common to her mind, that she actually forgot that she was married at all, and she went to a broker, as a single woman, and asked him to sell her furniture. At this moment, however, when the furniture was gone, a sense of "sentiment" lingered with her, and so she asked her darling husband to pay her a little visit, (having remembered that she was married all the while), and when he reached his well known house of connubial bliss and joy, and saw, as Lord Byron says, his household gods shivering on the hearth, &c. No more dramatic situation can well be realized. How well Bro. Toole would act the suffering husband. The court of law restored to the injured man his "household stuff," but nothing is said of the partner of his joys and his bosom, and of his property. On the whole we think that he is perhaps happiest, "alone once more in the world," with no "dear gazelle" to look on him with "tender eyes," and we earnestly deprecate the notion of any old man or any old Mason, be he who he may, marrying a charming young woman only forty-five years younger than himself. The chances of happiness seem dubious and hazy,—verbum sat sapienti. In another case, a young man obtained £250 damages from an Irish jury, because his young lady declined to marry him. Her excuse for not marrying the ardent swain is both peculiar and suggestive. She said, she "did not care very much about him," and, she "should not be dictated to when coortin." On the whole we agree with the young woman strongly. She clearly knew best whether she liked the young man or not, and she certainly had a moral right not to be "dictated to when coortin." The young man was poor, the young lady rich, and so an Irish jury, ever warm-hearted and sympathetic, gave that young "lover" £250 damages, to console his "blighted affection, and to heal a broken heart." It is just possible substantial justice was done in the matter, but from some remarks of the able judge we are inclined to think, that had he had to assess the damages they might have been somewhat less. We trust that our young men will not be encouraged to propose to young ladies in order to obtain damages from young ladies who "don't care for them very much," and who "will not be dictated to." Had we been upon that jury, we think, yes, we think, that we should have considered the "smallest coin of the realm" sufficient damages for the wounded evidence of such ardent affection. We, however, may be wrong, and the jury who saw both in court, complainant and defendant, were probably right. But the precedent is a serious one, and in the present state of our young men may lead to much litigation. An English jury, we think it right to remark, may not be so very liberal.

COMMUNIQUE.

We are very much pleased to be privileged to communicate to the Craft the following translation of a letter from the Grand Secretary of the St. John's Hungarian Grand Lodge, and which is the best possible reply to many assumptions and unwarranted assertions. All Anglo-Saxon Masons will rejoice to hear that the St. John's Hungarian Grand Lodge is not committed to the suicidal course of the Grand Orient of France.

[TRANSLATION.]

Or. Buda Pest, 13th Dec., 1877.

V. W. and B. Brother,—

The circumstance that our Hungarian St. John's Grand Lodge has some time since been added by the English Masonic Newspapers to those Grand Lodges which ought to be declared proscribed, in consequence of having abolished the belief in God, like the Grand Orient of France, induces me to write.

This assertion evidently rests upon error and wrong information, and I therefore consider it necessary to call your attention to the point, that although our brethren have considered this question in a semi-official conference, it never has been brought officially upon the agenda, and scarcely ever will be brought under discussion in this thorough-going sense. Not only does our constitution, and upon the faith of which we have been sanctioned by our government in part II. number I., very minutely settle the question, but even our ritual, which with us is an addition to the constitution, informs the individual to be initiated that he would be mistaken if he believed that in our Temple anything would be suffered that was in opposition to God and the government, as also that the initiation is effected to the glory of the G.A.O.T.U.

All this is very far removed from atheism, and you would very much oblige me, if you could cause this to be inserted in the Freemason in the same way as was the one with reference to the Grand Orient of Italy, in the number before last.

Offering you my best services in return, and in case of necessity or want of explanation expecting to hear from you,

I am,

(Signed) UHL, G.S.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE AND THE GRAND ORIENT OF ITALY.

Notwithstanding the bold statement of the energetic Bro. Desmons, (more zealous than discreet), we have always felt assured that our distinguished Bro. J. C. Parkinson was perfectly correct when he said that the Grand Orient of Italy had not followed in the wake of the Grand Orient of France. Had it done so it would have undoubtedly lost all British and American and Canadian sympathies. That Bro. Parkinson is absolutely correct in his welcome statement in the Freemason, is proved by the last Bulletin du Grand Orient, which though it publishes the "affectionate sympathies" of the Grand Orient of Italy "envers le Grand Orient de France," "dans les circonstances difficiles qu'elle traverse" does not deem it wise evidently, as it says, to print the document "in extenso." To use a somewhat slang expression the Grand Orient of Italy refuses to go the "entire animal." Where then is the Grand Orient of France? We fear that the answer must be, as before Cosmopolitan Masonry, in complete isolation. The letter we publish above from the Grand Secretary of the St. John's Grand Lodge of Hungary proves how unwise and unfounded have been those rhapsodists and sectarians, who have backed up the insane act of the Grand Orient of France, and what a fearful amount of injury is accruing to Cosmopolitan Freemasonry by the ill-directed agitation of the intolerant and revolutionary.

KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPÆDIA.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I rejoice to tell you that the whole of the Cyclopædia is in print, and that the list of subscribers is printing. Under these circumstances I think that with the aid of our good friends, Messrs. Hazell, Watson, and Viney, we may undertake to deliver the book to our subscribers quite early in February, at latest. We have to make allowance for binding, &c., but I do not anticipate that we need now hesitate to look forward to this early delivery of the long expected work. I am Sir,

Yours fraternally, THE EDITOR.

Original Correspondence.

GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Yours of the 5th inst. contains a report of the annual meeting of the Lodge Mother Kilwinning, on 21st December, at which it was agreed to call the attention of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to the "unfortunate step taken by the Grand Orient of France." &c. In order to guard against the impression that in such an important matter the Grand Lodge of Scotland requires to be urged in its duty by a lodge in Ayrshire acting upon the suggestion of a brother living in Banffshire, I beg through you to intimate that the Grand Master Mason of Scotland, Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart, Bart., and his Committee sitting at Edinburgh, had taken action in the matter three weeks prior to the date at which the Kilwinning Lodge resolved to address Grand Lodge on the subject. This will be seen from the following excerpt of minute of the Grand Committee of the Grand Lodge of Scotland of 27th November last, a copy of which is in possession of the Grand Orient of France. The same excerpt minute was published in the "Scottish Freemason" of 7th December:—

"The Grand Secretary directed the attention of Grand Committee to the recent change in the Constitution of the Grand Orient of France, whereby belief in God is not now essential to admission as Freemasons. Bro. Dr. Loth, representative from the Grand Orient, who had been asked to be present, having satisfied the Committee upon certain points in connection with the subject upon which they desired information, the following resolution was adopted on the motion of Bro. William Mann, P.M., No. 65, seconded by Bro. R. S. Brown, P.M., No. 124:—"Having had their attention directed by the Grand Secretary to the recent change in the Constitution of the Grand Orient of France, whereby a profession of belief in Almighty God, the Great Architect of the Universe, and the immortality of the soul, is not now exacted of candidates for admission as Freemasons, and having maturely considered the same, instruct the Grand Secretary to intimate to the Grand Orient of France that, should it be the case that such a radical change in the fundamental principles of Ancient Freemasonry has indeed been confirmed by the Grand Orient of France, Grand Committee will be under the necessity of recommending to Grand Lodge to sever the fraternal relations that have for so long a period subsisted between it and the Grand Orient of France."

As regards the sending a copy of the Kilwinning resolution to the Grand Orient of France, I may state that it was an instruction by Grand Committee at their meeting on the 24th December, that I should intimate "that it is beyond the province of Mother Kilwinning or any other lodge holding of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to communicate direct with any foreign Grand Lodge on the subject of Freemasonry."

I am, yours &c.,

D. MURRAY LYON,
Secretary to the Grand Lodge.

THE ORDER OF ST. JOHN.

[We give the two following letters from the Times in order to keep our readers "au courant" of the progress of the late controversy, and we shall continue to do so. We may add that the Marquis of Carabas, who began it, states that he has as much right to call himself K.G. Practically, the gist of his second letter, as of the first, is that the English Order of St. John is a pseudonym.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—The Order of St. John or of Malta being a military body, I cannot enter into a public controversy about it. But when so distinguished an officer as Colonel Porter denies the existence of the Grand Master, I feel justified in replying. The present chief is John Baptist Ceschi di Santa Croce. His title is "Pro Magister," or Lieutenant of the Magisterium. This title has been used since 1805, because the Grand Master having the rank of a Sovereign Prince, with the style of "Most Eminent Highness," or "Serene Highness," would have to keep up a state which would be inconvenient under present circumstances.

I have before me the official roll of the Order, containing the names of all the members—a book of 157 pages. The succession of chiefs from Hompsch is as follows:—Paul I, Emperor of Russia, 1798-1800; John Tommasi, 1802-1805; Innico Maria Guevara, 1805-1814; Andrea di Giovanni, 1814-1821; Antonio Busca, 1821-1834; Carlo Candida, 1834-1845; Filippo di Colloredo, 1845-1864; Alexander Borgia, 1865-1872; John Baptist Ceschi di Santa Croce, elected the 14th of February, 1872, in accordance with the statutes of the Order. Colonel Porter will find him duly recorded in the Almanack of Gotha, and his election was notified to all the Continental Courts. The Order has a resident Minister Plenipotentiary at Vienna. His Imperial Highness the Czarévitch a few months ago asked for the Cross of the Order, and it was granted by Count Ceschi di Santa Croce as Lieutenant or Pro Grand Master. I am aware of the facts regarding the supposed revival of the Langue and Priory of England and the story of Sir Robert Peat, which was fully explained to me by the late Garter King at-Arms, Sir Charles Young.

I regret that Col. Porter has sought to bring in religious prejudice by saying that we are "under the patronage of the Pope." The Order has resided for some years in its own palace at Rome, and has enjoyed the status of a Sovereign Prince.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE BOWYER.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—If Colonel Whitworth Porter will refer to the "Almanach de Gotha" (p. 810 of the edition of 1877) he will find the information he requires as to the present organisation and government of the Order of St. John set forth with all the accuracy of that valuable publication. If he should require more detailed information, he may refer to the "Ruolo Generale del Sovrano S.M. Ordine Gerosolimitano," of which a new edition was published at Rome by the Fratelli Pallotta a few months since.

The Order of St. John is, as every student of history knows, a religious Order of the Roman Catholic Church, just as much as the Benedictines or the Jesuits. It has, as other Catholic Orders have, lay brothers and honorary members, who take no vows and are not monks. It has also honorary members, who are not even Roman Catholics. They are very few in number, and of very eminent rank. The Prince Consort was a Knight of St. John. His brother, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, Duke Charles of Schleswig-Holstein, Duke Augustus of Saxe-Coburg, and the present Czarévitch have, as Prince Albert had, the honorary Grand Cross of the Order. The German Princes I have named are ranked on the "Ruolo" under the Grand Priory of Bohemia. The Czarévitch is classed among the members of the Order who are under the immediate jurisdiction of what Colonel Porter playfully calls "the fragment of the Order resident at Rome under the patronage of the Pope." Of course, there is no reference in the "Ruolo" or the "Almanach de Gotha" to "the philanthropic association presided over by the Duke of Manchester," as it was quite correctly described in the Times, on the occasion of its adding an august lady to its list of members last autumn.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
January 4.

THE APOLLO UNIVERSITY LODGE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We think that Bro. Riach, in the letter which appeared in the Freemason of the 29th of December, showed a little too much confidence in his powers of memory. We do not wish to parade the names of those who have been elected members of the Apollo University Lodge, though they were neither present nor past members of the University of Oxford, nor among the founders of the lodge; but we could refer him to pages 76, 79, 84, 90, 106, 116, and 118 of the last edition of the bye-laws. On each of these pages he will find the name of one whose name appears in the list of the ordinary members of the lodge, and not in the university calendar among the members of the university. He is quite right as to the existing bye-laws.

We are, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

THE EDITORS OF THE LAST EDITION OF THE BYE-LAWS OF THE APOLLO UNIVERSITY LODGE.

MASONIC SLANDER.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

On the evening of the last day of the year 1877 (not three hundred miles from the "Great City") I heard the character of a very ill. Brother traduced in a railway carriage, by a person professing to be a Mason. Without entering into all the particulars of the affair, permit me through your valuable paper, to protest publicly, as then I did in the railway carriage, against such conduct, the traducing the character of a brother, whether high or low in rank, and that in his absence.

Any novice in Masonry must know that such conduct is wholly un-masonic, and entirely opposed to the spirit and teaching of Masonry. Many may think, and perhaps some may ask, "Pray, what is Masonry?" Well, to my mind, and to my way of thinking about Masonry—if I am wrong, I hope some kind brother will put me right on this point—Masonry is not merely a profession; Masonry is not ritual, ceremony, &c.; Masonry is not self-love and self-seeking; Masonry is not cant and hypocrisy; Masonry is not a wind-bag; but true Masonry throughout the world is, I think, the daily endeavour to put into practice the noble and sublime principles which she teaches to her pupils, so that they may show to the outer world, that in all climes, and amongst all nations, her teachings when practised elevate the mind and ennoble the character of the man who is her true disciple.

A Mason! For to be a Mason in fact and in deed should be, to be a man whom all could trust, love, and honour, both as a man and a citizen.

Masonry, I think, teaches that Masons shall in the everyday walks of life endeavour to practise everything that is true, noble, high-minded, and God-inspiring. The key-stones are Faith, Hope, and Charity, and so long as the brotherhood shall continue to build in their daily work on the imperishable foundation-stones of Masonry, so will the world at large, from E. to W., and from N. to S., rejoice to see that Masonry is not a fashionable toy, a commercial adventure, a dramatic bauble, or an evening entertainment for young men, but that its actual workings are productive of good, both to the Mason and to the world in general.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

(Signed)

NATIONAL HOSPITAL FOR DISEASES OF THE HEART AND PARALYSIS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The violent storms of the last few weeks have so seriously injured this hospital as to have necessitated all the back walls and the roof being propped up with heavy beams of timber. To enable the entire outer walls to be rebuilt, at an estimate of £1400, funds are most earnestly needed.

Many serious cases of heart disease have been sent to their homes, and very bad cases are awaiting the season of the building before they can be admitted.

Diseases of the heart have greatly increased during the last 10 years, and it is melancholy to see so many young persons and even little children suffering from this terrible malady, and most serious to reflect in some of the cases as to the sad future which is in store for them, many having inherited the disease.

It is however, most encouraging to find how subservient certain heart affections are to prompt and proper medical treatment.

Rheumatic fever is a great generator of heart disease, but the very large number of cases annually relieved and cured at the above institution is most satisfactory, as numerous and most grateful letters from patients testify.

The Treasurer of the charity is the Right Hon. the Earl of Glasgow, who would most gratefully receive and acknowledge donations.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

VINCENT AMBLER,

One of the Physicians to the Hospital.

CONSECRATION OF THE TEMPLE BAR LODGE, No. 1728.

On Friday evening, the 4th inst., while the old structure of Temple Bar, by some considered an ornament, by others an eyesore, and by all an obstruction, was in the course of being demolished, a lodge of Freemasons, bearing the title of "The Temple Bar Lodge" (No. 1728), was consecrated in the spacious and commodious rooms of "The London," Fleet street, a few yards only from the edifice which was being removed. Venerable and ancient as Temple Bar was, the heartiest wishes were expressed at the consecration of the lodge that it might be still more venerable and ancient than the structure from which it took its name.

Starting under most favourable auspices, there is no reason for doubting that these wishes will be realised, and when those brethren who took part in the ceremony are crumbled into dust and are as much forgotten as the head that a century ago figured on Temple Bar and defaced the civilisation of what was then considered an enlightened age, it may stand forth as a monument of progress and adorn the Order which it seeks to propagate.

The ceremony of consecration was performed by Bro. J. Hervey, Grand Secretary, who was assisted by Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain, as Chaplain, and Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, as Director of Ceremonies. Bro. C. A. Murton, Past Grand Deacon, acted as Senior Warden; Bro. Thomas Fenn, Past Grand Deacon, as Junior Warden; Bro. Nelson Reed, W.M. 1671, as Secretary; and Bro. John Constable, P.M. 185, as I.G. The musical arrangements were under the direction of W. Bro. Capt. Reginald W. Williams, M. A., P.P.G. Org., Middlesex, W.M. 1275, &c. &c. The other brethren present were Bros. E. Terry, W.M. 1319; W. S. Larham, P.M. 1216; J. Dann, P.M. 72; W. Banson, W.M. elect 1580; J. Penderbith, 1598; G. H. Atkinson, 1622; C. Lovebond, J.W. 1707; A. Reed, W.M. 1671; C. Butcher, 975; J. Dixon, 1558; C. A. Murton, P.G.D.; H. Goodall, P.M. 784; T. W. C. Bush, W.S. 185; A. E. Staley, 185; Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; B. Lyons, S.W. 1227; G. Adamson, P.P.G.A.D.C. Kent; R. Harris, 1185; G. S. Symmons, 1707; W. W. Medcalf, J.W. 1671; R. A. Morgan, W.S. 1671; B. Buckworth, 7471; W. Hitchcock, 733; W. Poore, W.M. 1306; D. McNiven, 1426; J. Kimpton, 1601; R. W. Gillard, 725; F. Buckworth, 1471; B. Goodwin, S.W. 733; G. Coleman, 1614; J. Bergmann, J.D. 1671; J. Gow, 619; C. Payne, G.T.; W. D. Bayley, 185; J. L. Jones, W.M. 1670; W. S. Whitaker, P.M. 1572; E. Chetwynd, J.W. 1538; C. Goodwin, 1623; S. B. Wilson, P.M. 59; F. Binckes, P.G.Std.; T. Slep, W.M. 1558; H. Massey, (Freemason), P.M. 619; J. B. Tidmarsh, 1671.

After the lodge had been opened, Bro. Hervey said: Brethren, I have so often addressed you on the occasion of consecration, and I have so repeatedly said that I can find no new subject to address you upon, that I am sure you will pardon me if I make very few observations this evening. And if there be one which I may venture to make it is that the ceremony of the consecration of a lodge is perhaps one of the most beautiful ceremonies which we have in the Order. It is one which of late years has been of frequent occurrence in the city of London, and its immediate vicinity, and not only in London proper, but the lodges have also been extending themselves in every part of the country, for we find both in the home provinces and in the northern ones Freemasonry has continued to spread, and, I hope, to prosper. But the advance of Freemasonry has not been confined to England, for in India, Australia, and every colony where the English tongue is spoken and to which the constitution of the United Kingdom extends—in every one of those districts Masonry has flourished and advanced. I trust that we are advancing, too, not only in numbers but also in efficiency, in the manner in which the work of the lodges is carried out and in the way in which the brethren look upon the Order—with that respect with which I think it ought to be regarded, and which I am sure all those around this room would wish it to be regarded. It has been an objection to us on many occasions, and one which I do not think we are fairly open to, that we look more to enjoyment than we do to the working of the Craft, but I may say that the working of the Craft is to many of us a great enjoyment, and I think a good many look to the working of the Craft in its proper spirit much more than they do to the social enjoyment of the Craft, and much more than they would do to the mere pleasures of the table. I think that in recent years when we look to the Charities of the Order, how much they have advanced and the prosperous condition in which they now are, we must feel that Masonry in that respect at any rate has made a great advance and that we have for some years past effected an object—a good object—and one which I hope will continue to flourish and prosper during many years to come. But there is one thing to be said in our prosperity, and that is that it may draw a great many in to the Craft whose absence we might tolerate very well, and who simply come in for the purpose of what they can get and for what they may derive of benefits from being a member of the Freemasons' Society. Now a very good friend of mine told me—we were only speaking of it this week—that in his own lodge a surgeon desired to be proposed as a member, and in the course of conversation said to him, "Well, but what benefit would it be; would it extend my practice?" The answer was, "You need not say anything more, because I must decline to propose you in my lodge." The answer, I think, was one which if many of us made when we were asked to propose a candidate would be very much to the purpose. And in looking to the prosperity of the Order we must necessarily have many who come into it solely for the purpose of what they may obtain from it. Now, in my position, I know that from the publicity which is given to the grants which are made by Grand Lodge, applications come in from all sides from charities, for contributions of all descriptions, not only from England, but from foreign lands, simply because the applicants think that the Grand Lodge of England is rich, that it is generous, and that it will give. Now that is another inconvenience we are subject to from the trumpet voice of fame blazoning forth what has been done for charities, and what has been voted by Grand Lodge to various objects, such as the Indian Famine, the fires in different parts of America, &c. Now, brethren, while we congratulate ourselves upon our prosperity we may, I fear, have some reason to think that it would be well that when brethren are requested to propose candidates that they should understand, and it should be understood generally, that the Craft is not to be made a medium of success in a profession or in a pursuit of whatever description, but that a man if he joins Masonry joins it to do good and not to be done good by. Such is my view, brethren, of what Freemasonry ought to be; such is my view, which I am sure many around this room entertain, of what ought to be done in the Craft, and what ought to be the qualifications for it; that we may not be led into difficulties hereafter. I am sure I need not say that I and that you all cordially coincide with me in this opinion; and in the ceremony we are about to perform this day I trust that we shall go away after it has been performed with a still higher opinion of Masonry even than we at present possess, and that we may look back to the 4th Jan., 1878, with pleasure and gratification at having introduced a new element into the Craft, or a new vehicle by which many will be introduced into Masonry who will be a credit and an ornament to the society to which we belong.

After the customary formalities the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., delivered the following address: W.M., Wardens and brethren,—You will pardon me if I follow the course which I have adopted on occasions like this of avoiding anything in the shape of a formal address, and rather giving myself and the brethren such thoughts as may be suitable to the occasion or suggested by the particular lodge which may be at the time consecrated. I cannot but feel, the more one regards life, that it is a life of pulling down and building up, and that the observation applies not less to man than to the things around us in the material world—with this great difference, that we men and Masons believe ourselves to be members of two worlds instead of one. I remember some beautiful lines, familiar I dare say to many of my brethren, from the old American poet—

"Art is long, and life is fleeting,
And our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still like muffled drums are beating
Funeral marches to the grave."

But he adds:—

"Life is real, life is earnest,
And the grave is not its goal
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul."

And hence when we look to-day at the peculiar circumstances in which we find ourselves suggested by the name of the lodge about to be consecrated, we find within earshot of this place an ancient landmark of our country being demolished, and we find within these walls another landmark being erected; but I need scarcely say that in the latter case there will be enduring elements in reference to the edifice that we raise to-night which cannot be said of that after which this lodge is called. I have spoken of art; and I look upon art especially in the light of the present day, as one of the grandest witnesses to the beneficence, the wisdom, strength, and glory of the Great Creator; and I am bold also to add, whatever others may say, wiser perhaps and far more able than my unworthy self, that science too, so far from in any way derogating from the majesty, the power, and the omnipotence of the Great Creator, becomes daily more and more a witness to His unbounded power and love. The idea of art at once suggests to us a design, and there cannot be a design without a designer. That very idea of a design must intimate at once, and necessarily that there must be a great mind in which that design will find its source, and hence I look upon it that every great work of art, ministering as it should, not merely to the pleasures of man but to the glory of God, should be regarded as a fragment of the Divine Image, the Divine Power, the Divine Wisdom, and the Divine Love by which the works of this wonderful world have been completed. But it is more than that. At the present day you and I are well aware that from the very bowels of the earth disinterred cities come up to bear witness to the truths of history, and thus in their place supplying a wonderful power on which we may rely for those higher and more sacred histories which we all as Masons venerate. The discoveries at Nineveh, to say nothing of others, have thrown the grandest light upon the truths of this Divine Volume, and the recent discoveries of Dr. Schliemann have, as you know, proved to us that even before the present era we have witnesses raised up from the earth to testify to the truths of history, and that what was believed by men to be mere fable has turned out to be fact. But not only in the region of art, but in the region of science do we look for these great testimonies to the power and the wisdom of the Great Creator. No one at the present day can look around him and see the discoveries of science, without feeling with old Shakespeare that there are secrets in nature which our philosophy has not even yet dreamt of, that there are to be developed wonders of science which shall yet make our posterity wonder even to their latest day; and surely when we look at these things, when we look not to secondary causes but to the Prime First Great Cause from which all these laws must proceed, we cannot but be struck with admiration and awe as from time to time we find the development of science, its latest development in this marvellous instrument, which, by the by, has had a very long pedigree—for the idea which led to the telephone has, as you are aware, as set forth, I dare say, in the hearing of some of my brethren by Mr. Bell the other evening, had a long pedigree—has been worked out by the brains of many men, for many years past, and has now attained to a marvellous excellence, and will probably yet be a greater wonder. Can we doubt with that marvellous science that He who planted the ear must be able to hear, ever mechanically, if the waves of sound can be converted into electricity and reproduced at almost any distance—who can doubt, that even mechanically the sound of prayer shall not reach the ear of Him who planted the ear and must hear. This idea may perhaps seem to some far-fetched; but I venture to say that to myself it has brought an immense amount of consolation. One thought more. This monument outside is as you perceive numbered—every stone is numbered—with a view to its being rebuilt in some other place. Masonry I look upon as in some measure analogous. Every stone of Masonry is numbered: its landmarks are clear and distinct. If that monument yonder were not so numbered, if it was found that any stone was added to it in its new position, or any stone taken from it, it would not be Temple Bar; and I venture to think, especially in the light of passing events, that Masonry, to be identical with what it has been, is, and I hope shall be, shall not suffer from the additions of one nation or the subtractions of another; but that it shall permeate the universe, holding fast the great fundamental truths which I have reasons to believe were taught at the beginning. Under such circumstances let me hope and trust that the Temple Bar Lodge, bound by name as well as by Masonic nature to hold fast the great truths taught from Masonic antiquity, will prove to be witnesses among the other witnesses I have mentioned to the glory of God, to the furtherance of peace and brotherhood amongst men, and above all for building up that which is the noblest work of God, the living temple of man, adorning it with wisdom, strength, and beauty, making it fit at last to be transplanted into that world where there shall be no decay.

The ceremony of consecration was afterwards conducted, and at its close Bro. John Dixon was installed by Bro. Hervey as W.M. of the lodge. The officers invested were Bros. Charles Butcher, S.W.; Thomas W. C. Bush, W.S. 185, J.W.; G. Adamson, P.M. 199 and 1208, P.P.G.A.D.C. Kent, Treasurer; Nelson Reed, W.M. 1671, J.W. 1572, J.W. 1601, S.D. 765, Secretary; A. E. Staley, S.D.; K. Harris, J.D.; D. McNiven, I.G.; B. Buckworth, D.C.; J. Kimpton, Steward; and Church, Tyler. The addresses were delivered by Bros. Hervey, Murton, and Fenn; after which, on the motion of Bro. Nelson Reed, seconded by the W.M., Bros. Hervey, Simpson, Buss, Murton, and Fenn, were elected honorary members of the lodge. Bro. Hervey having acknowledged the compliment, Bro. Reed read a large number of propositions for joining and initiation, and then announced that he had received letters of apology for absence from Bros. Sir Albert Woods, J. B. Monckton, Woodward, W.M. 1538, (the recommending lodge), Williams, 1538, Windale, Palmer, Pearce and Child. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, provided by Bro. Percival Reed. After dinner the usual toasts were proposed and honoured, and several excellent songs were sung, Bro. Bergmann, J.D. Camarvon Lodge, presiding at the piano.

Bro. Thos. Fenn, P.G.D., replying to the toast of "The Grand Officers," congratulated the lodge on taking the name of "Temple Bar." That old landmark of London was very ugly and obstructive and many persons were very glad to have it removed. Still the brethren liked to keep it in remembrance because there were some pleasant recollections suggested by it. Many of the brethren might recollect as he did an old clock standing in front of Temple Bar at St. Dunstan's Church with a giant on each side the clock to strike the hour. To his mind it brought some pleasurable reflections of Temple Gardens at a time when men of business lived in London and their children walked in Temple Gardens. He remembered flirtations he as a child had there at thirteen or fourteen years of age—a time of life when we loved more romantically and unselfishly than in our mature periods. Those were the old days of yellow hackney coaches with grand armorial bearings, driven by the many-caped juries represented in pictures. If this lodge had been consecrated a week or two later Temple Bar would have disappeared. Now, however, some members would be able to relate to initiates that they remembered this lodge before Temple Bar was removed. He hoped the lodge would long prosper and exercise the same hospitality it had that evening.

The W.M. replying to the toast of his health, which was proposed by Bro. Murton, P.G.D., said it was a difficult thing for a W.M., as he was that evening for the first time, to be quite au fait in his duties, but he hoped at a future time to be better able to discharge them. He trusted that during the twelve months he was in the chair he would be able to follow out his duties. He would do his best to make the Temple Bar Lodge the most prosperous in London, and when he handed the warrant to his successor he hoped it would have acquired some lustre.

Bro. John Hervey, G.S. replying for "The Consecrating Officer," said it had often struck him that instead of being the Consecrating Officer it should be the Consecrating Officers, because the Consecrating Officer could do nothing without assistance. He did not know what he should have done without the adequate support he had received from the two Wardens. Then again there was Bro. Buss, who at all times rendered most efficient service; and he could not forget the excellent address which was delivered by Bro. Simpson. The brethren had estimated his own services in a way that almost made him blush. He wished success and prosperity to the lodge, and that it might exist longer than the Bar which was now being removed.

After the toast of "The Visitors" had been proposed, drunk, and responded to,

Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., proposed "The Masonic Institutions." He said: No one can deny that we have great pleasure in meeting together in our lodges to perform the very beautiful and significant ceremonies which are attached to our Order, nor can we ignore for a moment the pleasant and happy social intercourse which is derived from what is called the Fourth Degree; but I venture to say without any possibility of contradiction that there is still a residuum of happiness and satisfaction, which Masons must value after all, above even the pleasant happiness of the lodge or even the social gathering. We have been told to-night in many forms that the happiness of life as well as its material fabrics must crumble and decay; but we are also fully assured that there are certain institutions, certain elements of Masonry which like charity shall survive for ever; and I take it that there is no more thorough, significant, and eloquent representative of that abiding element than our noble charities—our Boys' School turning out into life hundreds of boys, well and properly educated to fulfil their duties as good citizens and as men who are under a responsibility to God; our Girls' School turning out girls who will be, I trust, the future mothers of our English homes, conducting them as I believe they should be conducted, as the great units and centres of civilization, and of all that is holy and of good report; and our Benevolent Institution, supporting our aged men and women, the representatives, to some, of bygone chattels who are to be put on the shelf as useless, but who to noble men and Masons are the remnant of what once was good and noble, labours well and truly done, and to whom if we be true men we should pay that respect and sometimes veneration which is due to the aged which is one of those old lessons in our English school, which even in School Board days we must read again. I feel, therefore, that in proposing to you the toast of "The Masonic Charities" I am not proposing a formal toast, but a good toast, and one which you will all drink with the zeal which becomes Masons, and the intelligence which is the characteristic of educated men. I have never done much myself on behalf of our Masonic Charities; but I need not remind you how heartily, and thoroughly, and liberally they are supported by the great body of our brethren. The magnificent collections at our festivals speak trumpet-tongued, and therefore it would be superfluous if I were to attempt to paint the lily in regard to the support which they receive. But I am bound as an honest man and Mason to say that our Masonic Charities, like all human institutions, are neither infallible nor perfect, and that there is scope, and great scope, for reform in the mode of election to the charities. (Cries of "Question, Question.") It is the question of the day, and must come forward. Honesty is the prime attribute of Englishmen. I never hunted for popularity, and never will do so; and I have that trust and confidence in my brethren, whether Englishmen, whether Christians or Jews, or whatever their profession may be, that I feel that honesty is paramount and stands above all other attributes. (Renewed cries of "Question.") It is the question, I am rightly reminded by my brother—the question of the day, and it is the question which must come to the front, and I will be the one that will be ready to sacrifice my popularity on that question. I say that there is jobbery (cries of no, no,) in regard to all charities in England; and therefore I hold that our brethren will do well to take stock with regard to the manner in which candidates are elected to our Masonic charities. I say it quietly, dispassionately and deliberately, and I am quite sure that investigation into the different claims of candidates forms one of the first necessities of our charities being properly worked; and secondly, that the more we carry our charities out of the happy-go-lucky and haphazard system into the intelligent and deserving category the better it will be. Now, brethren, I do not wish for a moment to throw any cold water on the charities. I am thoroughly disinterested; but I am bound as a Mason and an Englishman to speak what I feel; and what I say I believe to be true. But while I say this, that our Masonic charities are capable of improvement, (and I hope no man at this table will say the charities are perfect and incapable of improvement), I say it is the bounden duty of every one of us Masons, so far as God gives us power to do so, compatible with the other claims upon us, by our voice, our money, our influence, to make them perfect. Many and many a time have I wished I was a rich man to support those charities more than I do; but this I will say, I have done what I recommend the brethren all to do, young and old, to visit the charities to see the fruits of the labour of our Secretaries, and our subscribers, and of the great men who have helped on our charities. Notwithstanding the imperfections which must attach to them, as to every other charity, we should be ready to come forward to help those charities, and where there is an opportunity to support them. Let me just before I sit down mention a case in a charity I am professionally connected with: A little while ago a dear and excellent colleague died of cancer, leaving a widow a share of £600. The interest of that was all the poor widow had to live upon, and we were anxious to get the child into the Clergy Orphan School. The widow had to go to the expense of £110s. 6d. to print cards. I protested against it, and I am happy to say that this morning we have by perseverance got one great leading member of the committee to give his flat against that horrible waste of money, which could benefit only the printer. It is the abominable system, and I denounce here as a disgraceful waste, for it is either something or nothing. If the cards are of no use, why then it is waste to have them; if they are of use, then the persons who can put them forth by the thousands, and others by the tens or hundreds, there is an inequality, and the poorest suffer and go to the wall. Bro. Simpson concluded by asking the brethren to join him heartily in drinking the toast of "The Masonic Institutions."

Bro. Binckes in reply, said that nothing ever gave him greater pride, pleasure, or gratification than to have his name associated with this toast. He knew what the Institutions were now, and what they had been years ago. Many of the brethren equally knew what they were, the most sanguine among them a few years ago, never could have anticipated the success that now attended the Institutions. A few years ago the number of children the school supported could almost be counted on the fingers. Now they supported more than 300 children, and very shortly there would be more than 200 boys in the Boys' School. The Secretaries were most deeply grateful for the enormous support rendered to those Institutions, and he for one was proud that for the last 25 years of his life he had spent his time (he would not go into the question of paid or unpaid) in the support of those Institutions. He said it without fear of contradiction, that contrast those institutions, and their annual expenditure, as the brethren might with other Institutions, they would not find any more honestly or faithfully administered than the Masonic Institutions. As we said in one of our ceremonies whatever you choose to contribute shall be gratefully received and faithfully applied, and we might say so it was with these institutions. He rose to respond that evening under perhaps greater circumstances of difficulty than ever he did during the last 25 years. He knew Bro. Simpson's feelings and notions about these charitable matters; but he (Bro. Binckes) did place it before the brethren (and the brethren should either deny or endorse what he said) that anything more unjustifiable than the opportunity taken by Bro. Simpson of introducing a question of charitable administration at a Masonic meeting like that could not have been imagined. It was not fair. We might all have our opinions as to how charities should be administered, as to how children should be educated, but these questions should come before the Quarterly Courts, and not be introduced at Masonic Lodges, where the brethren met for the single purpose of the Craft, and not for the discussion of questions which might lead to divergence of opinion and perhaps to feelings far stronger than was desirable among brethren. He did not think it right, and he was speaking there in the presence of distinguished members of the Order, and he said it with his impulsive feelings, but he never for one instant had allowed himself to ventilate this question in a private Masonic Lodge. He had been appointed as one of a deputation to wait on the Prime Minister of this country, and had stated his views on the subject there, and he would state them at the Quarterly Court; but he would say, in Heaven's name do not let us have these differences of opinion brought into private Masonic meetings. A greater mistake was never made than for Bro. Simpson to introduce this question to a Masonic meeting of how the boys and girls should be elected to the schools, or the old people to the Benevolent Institution. Why was he (Bro. Binckes) there as the honoured guest invited by the lodge. He felt the compliment very highly and appreciated it most sincerely. Do not let them think him egotistic when he said he expected his name would be coupled with this toast. He was proud to say the Institutions had had a most successful year in 1877. Over £42,000 had been contributed to them, and he believed that in the current year, spite again of commercial depression they would exceed what they had done in the past. He was going to be plain—if he was not plain and could not speak his mind he was nothing—and he would say, do not allow—and he asked the W.M. with all submission and respect—do not for a moment allow administrative questions to be discussed over the social table. There were the House Committee, where every brother had the most perfect right of enunciating his opinions in the most open way. Notice of motion could be given to alter the laws, and on a majority being found to be in favour of the alteration it would be made. But when at a Masonic meeting the toast of "Success to the Masonic Institutions" was proposed, he held that no greater solecism could be introduced by anybody than to bring forward his private opinions on the question of administration. If a brother wished heartily success to the Institutions, he (Bro. Binckes) could tell him how it was to be achieved. Let them give their money, let them give their names as Stewards. All the Institutions were enjoying a large amount of success. The Benevolent Institution had a large amount of funded property; the Girls' School the same; but the Boys' School was not so fortunate. Questions had been raised whether they should husband their resources. They were both husbanding their resources for the future and taking care of the present. They had funded £8000, and they were going to make up the number of boys to 220 or 225. The Duke of Connaught would take the chair at next festival, and when in a few days Temple Bar would be a thing of the past, he thought the Temple Bar Lodge would raise a lasting monument in connection with Freemasonry by sending a Steward to represent it at the next festival of the Boys' School. Without quarrelling with Bro. Simpson on the question of administration, he for one would never surrender the right of private judgment. The most deserving cases should be admitted, and if he gave his ten, twenty or fifty guineas he would exercise his votes as he liked, and give them to the case he thought most deserving. If people liked to spend £5, £10, or £15 in canvassing cards, why should they be debarred? He concluded by saying that he would not leave the room without taking the name of a brother as a Steward for the Boys' School. Bro. Binckes afterwards announced that the W.M. had kindly consented to take the Stewardship for the Boys' School.

The other toasts were given, and the brethren separated.

CONSECRATION OF THE CHOLMELEY LODGE No. 1731.

The above lodge was consecrated on Wednesday last at the Alexandra Palace, by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, assisted by Bro. Henry Gustavus Buss, Assist. Grand Secretary; Bros. E. J. McIntyre and Thomas Fenn, as Wardens; and the Rev. C. W. Arnold, G.C., as Chaplain. Bro. Henry R. Cooper Smith, was the W.M. designate; Bro. Thomas Clarke Tatham, S.W.; and Bro. John Bradley Dyne, J.W.

H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.—A well-executed Crayon Portrait of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with a Biographical Sketch, appeared in last Saturday's Whitehall Review.

OPENING OF A NEW MASONIC HALL IN LIVERPOOL.

Another striking evidence of the steady progress of Freemasonry in the Province of West Lancashire, especially in and around Liverpool, was furnished on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., by the opening and dedication of a commodious and well constructed hall for Masonic purposes, the ceremony attracting the largest and most influential meeting of the Craft seen in Liverpool for a long time. The building has been named the Skelmersdale Masonic Hall (out of compliment to our esteemed Deputy Grand Master and Provincial Grand Master of West Lancashire), and is situated at the corner of Kirkstall-street and Westminster-road, Kirkdale, Liverpool, having been erected for the purpose of giving accommodation for brethren at the north-end of the town. The formal dedication of the building to Masonic purposes took place in connection with the annual installation of the Walton Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 1086, and the ceremony was most impressively performed by Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., assisted by a large gathering of P.G. Officers, W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and prominent members of other lodges.

Amongst the brethren connected with the Walton Lodge present were Bros. G. E. Hanmer, W.M.; J. C. Lunt, P.M.; John Lunt, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; J. P. McArthur, P.M.; J. Ellis, P.M.; R. Abraham, P.M.; W. Septon, P.M.; G. J. Townsend, S.W.; W. Walker, J.W.; W. Archer, P.M., Treasurer; Rev. Dr. Hyde, Secretary; I. Leese, J.D.; G. Riley, E. Plummer, M. Lansing, W. Blease, J. J. Mills, W. Hughes, W. Temple, R. Woodend, A. Rodgers, H. Gill, T. Haslam, R. Beckett, J. Evans, E. Atkinson, H. Spencer, H. Walker, T. Lewis, J. Davies, W. Smith, R. Parry, G. Marsden, F. S. Halpin, E. H. King, J. Parry, G. Cain, W. Roberts, H. Hughes, J. Griffiths, H. Worthington, Sec. 1574; E. Smith, T. Balshaw, R. Roberts, W. Copestake, J. Whalley, W. Roberts, and W. Evans. The long array of visitors included the names of Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary; Dr. S. J. McGeorge, P.G. Reg.; H. Jackson, P.G.A.D.C.; J. Wells, P.G.S.; J. E. Jackson, P.G.S.; H. Pearson, P.G.S.; P. Macmildrow, P.G.S.D.; W. Iyrer, P.G.S. of W.; E. C. Cooper, P.G.S.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; J. R. Ross, S.D. 1289; W. Pulford, W.M. 477; W. McGauley, 724; W. B. Townsend, S.D. 1211; J. P. Hewitt, 1239; E. O. Simpson, P.G.S.; J. Calverley, 1211; J. B. Sprake, 1211; W. Quayle, W.M. 1505; J. Armstrong, W.M. 1250; T. McWean, J.W. 1035; J. W. McWean, S.W. 1035; J. Smith, 77; C. The hall is Gothic in style, with ornamental brickwork, having an Ionic doorway, and has cost about £2000. It consists of a lodge room on the second floor, with ante-rooms, lavatories, &c., and a large dining hall on the ground floor, with the necessary offices, cloak-room, &c. The latter room is seventy feet by twenty-eight feet, being sixteen feet high, and the lodge room is fifty-five by twenty-eight feet, with segmental arched ceiling, which greatly promotes its acoustic properties. Messrs. R. Wells and Co., the contractors, while observing architectural outlines, have admirably kept in view the requirements of Freemasonry, and the result is that a hall of the finest capacity has been provided. The building operations were personally superintended by Bro. J. Wells, P.G.S., P.M. 680. A striking novelty in the fitting of the building are the pneumatic bells and speaking tubes, fitted by Messrs. Homfray and Co. (by their Liverpool agent, Bro. W. Septon, P.M. 1086), and the communication thus readily established between the W.M. and the Tyler will be a great advantage for Masonic purposes. Messrs. Chappell had charge of the brickwork; Mr. P. Stock executed the plastering; Bro. W. Griffiths the painting; Bro. J. Hayes the plumbing; Bro. W. Jones the gasfittings; and Messrs. Walker and Pendleton were entrusted with the heating apparatus, which seems to be admirable.

There was an attendance of about 150 brethren, and the influential nature of the meeting may be seen by the fact that there were no fewer than thirty-six Past Masters present. After the lodge had been duly opened by Bro. G. E. Hanmer, W.M., Bro. Alpass, P.G. Sec., took the chair, and dedication prayer was offered by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Hyde. Boyce's anthem, "I have built surely Thee an house," was then sung by Bros. C. Haswell, J. Busfield, J. Queen, and T. J. Hughes, Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., presiding at the harmonium. Bro. H. S. Alpass, as the Presiding Officer, in dedicating the building to Masonry, referred to the great advantage of having halls specially dedicated to the purposes of Masonry, and said that in Liverpool there were happily only three lodges which now met at an hotel. This state of things, as compared with that which formerly existed, had in a great measure secured the success of Masonry in this town and province. In West Lancashire there were more subscribing members than in any other in the kingdom, and the numbers continued to increase most steadily. He was certain that it was the wish of the middle class, from which the ranks of Freemasonry were largely recruited, that their Order should be as much as possible dissociated from hotels, and in consequence of that feeling this beneficial change had taken place with such excellent results for the Craft. In the exercise of temperance, Masons of the present day were in advance of the age, and their charities had been highly assisted by the removal of lodges from hotels. In conclusion, Bro. Alpass expressed his sense of the honour conferred on him in being asked to perform the ceremony that day; and he hoped the Walton Lodge, which now numbered over 100 members, would continue to prosper.

Bros. Hanmer, the retiring W.M.; and Archer, P.M., then presented the W.M. elect, Bro. G. J. Townsend, for installation, the ceremony being ably performed by Bro. Alpass, P.G. Sec., the remainder of the work, after the Board of Installed Masters—orations and charges—being most impressively delivered by Bro. John Lunt, P.M. 1086, P.P.G.D.C. A cordial vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes to both these officiating brethren.

The officers were appointed and invested as follows:—Bros. G. E. Hanmer, I.P.M.; W. Walker, S.W.; Rev. Dr. Hyde, J.W.; W. Archer, P.M., Treasurer; J. Leese, Sec.; Casey, S.D.; Riley, J.D.; R. Beckett, I.G.; J. Lunt, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., D.C.; H. Gill, S.S.; and J. S. Templeton, J.S. About 100 of the brethren subsequently dined in the large hall, the banquet being most satisfactorily served by Bro. Casey. During the evening a valuable P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. Hanmer, I.P.M., in recognition of his valuable services to the lodge. A capital musical programme was given by Bros. Hughes, Busfield, Haswell, Queen (with Bro. Skeat as accompanist); and Bro. H. Gill, S.S., again delighted the audience by his most delightful performance on the fairy bells. The menu card and toast list were marvels of Shakespearian gems, and the "toasting" was cordial, pointed, and enthusiastic.

Reviews.

"Freemasonry: Its Two Great Doctrines, the Existence of God, and a Future State," by Bro. CHALMERS I. PATON. Reeves and Turner, 196, Strand, London.

Important, most important, as the subject is, which has thus been most ably treated by our Bro. Chalmers I. Paton, we should not be honest reviewers if we did not commence our remarks with one or two notes of Masonic reserve. What we mean and wish to say is this. We think that, in all such important discussions, we should be most precise in stating, most careful in laying down, the outlines of our argument, the facts of the case, and that we should never either start with a "petitio principii" or put forward as the basis of our thesis what is somewhat in excess of the actual facts of the case. For such conscious and unconscious exaggeration always reacts not only upon itself but upon the combatants. It renders the battle more arduous to fight, the victory more difficult to win. It provokes retorts and replications, and as it must be actually defended, leaves yourself and your allies often at the mercy of the common enemy. We say this, because we fear that those opponents whom Bro. Paton seeks to convince and confute, may fairly ask for a proof of his statement, in the first instance, that belief in the two great and needful truths he seeks to strengthen and to uphold, has been declared indispensably requisite on the part of every Freemason, and without profession of which no candidate is ever admitted into the Order. And here consists our difficulty. We are not aware of any such declaration, and as we cannot be too particular in such assertions, we think it well to guard ourselves from assenting, as a matter of fact, to them. Strictly speaking, the only pre-requisite declaration required from candidates by our Book of Constitutions, our "Lex Scripta," is the one given at page 85, and no mention of religious belief occurs in it.

But by the "Lex inscripta" of Freemasonry, its common law, we act as a rule on the charges and ritual as well. The charges declare that "A Mason is obliged by his tenure to obey the Moral Law, and if he rightly understands the Art, he will never be a stupid atheist, nor an irreligious libertine." Whatever the exact force of these words may be, they have always been held to exclude atheists and libertines from Freemasonry.

Beyond this, we are aware of no official declaration on the subject, but though we say this, because we deem it best, in the interest of all, that we should not expand or exaggerate the fact beyond what it will fairly prove, we do not disagree with Bro. Paton, except in form of expression. In spirit and substance we are fully in accord with him. That is to say, we hold with him that in our Ritual the immortality of the soul is distinctly taught, and that as we accept the Bible, "The Volume of the Sacred Law," and are bid to "consider it the unerring standard of truth and justice," and to "regulate our actions by the divine precepts it contains," we accept the moral law of God and the revelation of God with all their solemn and personal responsibilities for ourselves in every scene, every circumstance of life.

The difference, then, between Bro. Paton and us consists in this. We accept the two great truths which he upholds so firmly, as taught us partly by our charges and ceremonial, but we cannot quite concur in his dictum that the admission of belief in God and the immortality of the soul are officially laid down as pre-requisite conditions for initiation. Practically they are taught, but they are not officially laid down as pre-requisite. This is not "a distinction without a difference," but it is a very important distinction and difference. For were we to assent to Bro. Paton's statement as a fact, officially in respect of English Masons, we should not be correct. And if we cannot do so we think it better not to weaken our true position, by stating that which is doubtful and debatable.

Actually, there is no great difference of opinion between Bro. Paton and us, as the happy and distinct teaching of English Freemasonry, as a fact, is to impart to all its members a distinct assertion of these great truths. But we are sticklers for accurate terminology, and matter of fact statement just now, noting often how much harm is done by loose assertions and untenable arguments. If Bro. Paton will permit us to say so, we think his own position would be strengthened, and the value of his work increased, were he to recognize the difference we have sought to point out, namely, that while Freemasonry having by its common law, its immemorial usage, proclaimed belief in God, it is also inculcates in its ritual acceptance of the great truth of the immortality of the soul. Indeed, the teaching of Freemasonry in these respects may be considered most expressive and direct.

We think Bro. Paton's work valuable in this, that it serves to point out what is, to those who study its "apophthegmata," the admitted teaching of Freemasonry. We are inclined to hope that his undoubtedly clear and connected argument in respect of the truth of the Divine Existence and a Divine Revelation is needless, happily for Freemasons. We do not believe that we have really and truly a single unbeliever amongst us. At least if he be so he has no business to remain in our Order, which equally rejects stupid atheism and polished unbelief.

At the same time there is unfortunately a good deal of scepticism and material infidelity and independent morality afloat in society just now, and we commend Bro. Paton's lucid arrangement of the argument to all non-believers in God and in Revelation. If not altogether novel in form and substance, if those who have carefully studied "the evidences" may be reminded of older writers and familiar positions, we yet think the work one of much meritorious compilation.

We trust that our words will not be misunderstood; we have lived so long that we are fully aware of the course and consequences of all such discussions as these. Having studied the matter carefully ourselves, though we have no doubt of the ultimate issue of the struggle, that truth will master error, that God's kingdom will prevail among men, we yet think it always best to give no santonage ground, to lend no unhappy weapon by any weakness or defect in our argument to our watchful and restless foe.

No doubt the position of the controversy just now, as between the impugnors of Revelation and the defenders, is one of some little anxiety; but we never for one moment lose our faith or trust in that vindication of His own eternal wisdom, and goodness, and power, and truth, which T.G.A.O.T.U., in His own good time, will make manifest to all.

We thank Bro. Paton for a very readable book, and we shall hope to hear that it is largely patronised by the Craft.

"Practice of the Supreme Court of Judicature and of the House of Lords on Appeal" by LOCOCK WEBB, Esq. Q.C., Butterworth's, 7, Fleet street

Bro. Locock Webb is well known to our Order as one who has done the Craft good service, and as an able and leading Q.C., at the Chancery Bar.

The remembrance of his Masonic career, predisposes us to regard his name with favour, while his merits as a lawyer would fairly claim due regard and respect. But well known as he is, and few more hard working members of a great profession exist, and much esteemed as he is, he is no before us in a new character. No longer in forensic wig and gown, he has, as Sergeant Snubbin said in Pickwick, the "ear of the court," but appeals boldly on his own merits, as an author in the great public thoroughfare of literature. And though his work be technical, no doubt, and special, it has many claims to perusal and attention, and we can honestly pronounce it to be a great success. We have reason to believe that the work, as a "vade mecum," on the subject on which it treats, is regarded with unanimous approval by those distinguished men who adorn the judicial bench of this country, while in his own profession there is but one opinion as to its merit, importance and value.

We note that some of our legal contemporaries have spoken in high terms of praise of the labours of our distinguished brother, and we think that their commendations are most fully justified. The "Law Examination Journal" says—"This work is the most exhaustive that has yet appeared on the new procedure." The "Justice of the Peace," observes—"We think this a most useful and seasonable volume to all who are actively engaged in present litigation, and in the practice of the High Court of Justice, not omitting the two Courts of Appeal." The "Law Times," points out that "This is a work of undoubted merit, and is in every way superior to the books of practice under the Judicature Acts already published. . . . We congratulate Mr. Webb on the fact that he has not adopted the rôle of a bookmaker. With the aid of several competent assistants, he gives to the profession a pithy treatise on Jurisdiction, Law, and Procedure. Some of what may be called the brief essays on the different heads embraced, are models of concise statement. . . . This volume must prove a most welcome addition to the library of the judge and the practitioner."

No one can peruse its pages without feeling strongly what an amount of careful thought and consideration, of study and research, must have been exercised by Bro. Locock Webb, in order to enable him to write so clearly, so fully, and so well. This very valuable "Hand-book" is composed of six books, which are as follows:—Book I.—Constitution and Judges of the Supreme Court—Jurisdiction and Law—Sittings and Distribution of Business—Trial and Procedure—Officers and Offices—Jurisdiction of Inferior Courts—Fees and Per-centages—Unclaimed Dividends.

Book II.—Rules of Court—Rules and Orders relating to Costs—Court Fees—Per-centages and Stamps

Book III.—Statutory Jurisdiction as to (inter alia) Administration—Arbitration—Charitable Trusts—Confirmation of Sales—Copyholds—Declaration of Title—Improvement of Land—Infants' Custody—Settlements—Inclosure—Land Clauses Consolidation Act—Land Registry—Leases and Sales of Settled Estates—Life Assurance—Liquidations—Lord Mayor's Court—Married Women's Property—Merchant Shipping—Partition—Patents—Perpetuation of Testimony—Petitions of Right—Property Law Amendment—Railways—Rectification of Register—Rivers Pollution Prevention—Solicitors—Special Case—Trade Marks—Winding up—Vendors and Purchasers.

Book IV.—Bankruptcy—County Palatine of Lancaster and the Stannaries.

Book V.—Appellate Jurisdiction of the House of Lords and Standing Orders.

Book VI. (Appendix) comprises Forms—Schedule of Costs—Order as to District Registrars—Schedule of Court Fees—Rules as to Solicitors—Fees of Official Referees—Stamps—Forms of Judgments by Default in the Chancery Division—Rules relating to Proceedings for Divorce and other Matrimonial Causes—Trustee Relief Acts—Bankers' Book Evidence Act—The Winter Assizes Act and Orders in Council thereunder—Provisions of Regulations of Railway Act, 1873, relating to Cases from the Railway Commissioners—Forms and Method of Procedure on Appeal to the House of Lords—Lord Cairn's Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, and Sir John Rolfe's Chancery Amendment Act, 1862.

We have before observed that we think these words of praise are fully borne out by the book itself, which can be profitably studied by all, even non-professionals, who wish to understand the present position and practice of the High Court of Judicature and the other branches of legal jurisdiction and machinery. We especially commend that portion of the work which relates to the House of Lords as displaying alike archaeological research, as well as legal precision, and we can assert that the work is not only most clear in its statement of facts, and is never dry, but on the contrary is very readable. It is in fact a work much needed by the profession, and most useful for daily handy reference in chambers, and in solicitors' offices, and as a large contingent of the legal profession, whether as barristers or solicitors, belongs to our Order, we think it well to press upon their notice this useful and compendious work. The changes which have come alike upon the constitution and practice of our law courts are many and great, and we feel that both the public and the profession are greatly indebted to Bro. Locock Webb for his timely work, of which we see he speaks very modestly, but which is, we know, highly valued by all who consult its "dicta," or study its pages. In thus mentioning its seasonable appearance and prevailing merits, with a grateful and admiring appreciation of its undoubted importance and authority we wish also to say that we hope this is not the last time we shall hail Bro. Webb as well in the guild of Literature as in our good old Masonic Order. There are many other subjects interesting to the public which we think he might well elucidate and illustrate with his facile pen and clear statement, and we shall always be pleased to record his new triumphs in the field of our great expanse of literary wars, as in that profession of which he has been so long a leading member, especially in his own branch. We feel sure that all our brethren whose professional engagements or legal tastes induce them to study Bro. Locock Webb's practical work will be glad to find for themselves not only how very readable the book really is, as we said before, but how great is its intrinsic value, as a correct exposition of those principles and that practice which are so important, whether for barristers or solicitors, carefully to master and clearly to comprehend. The book is destined to be a success.

"The Cure of Cataract and other Eye-Affections," By Bro. JABEZ HOGG; Baillière, Tindal & Co., 30, King William-street, W.

Our well known brother Jabez Hogg, whose services in the Royal Westminster Ophthalmic Hospital are widely appreciated, has published a very useful and interesting work on this, always to us, affecting subject. There is perhaps hardly any form of human suffering which so appeals to our inner sympathies as deprivation of sight. Happily, of late years, much has been done to improve the condition of the blind, especially mentally and may allude here. "en passant" to Dr. Moon's praise-worthy efforts for many years in this most needful and important direction.

Bro. Jabez Hogg comes before us with a little work clearly written, and admirably illustrated, which may be well perused not only by those who make ophthalmic affections their study, but those who like to see and to realize what the curative skill of a great profession can do to alleviate the many and constant sufferings of humanity. At the same time, strictly speaking, the work is more properly adapted to professional readers, and we have no doubt that it will be truly welcomed by all to whom the diseases of the eye are a constant source of anxious experiment a happy treatment and skilful cure. We have a large number of that most valuable body of citizens, "Surgeons," amongst our friendly readers, and we are glad to call their special attention to Bro. Hogg's important work.

At the meeting of the Etonion Lodge, No. 209, held at Windsor on Saturday, besides the Ferns, Palms, Flowers &c., several novelties in device for flowers were placed on the table, consisting of Square, Level, and Plumb-rule, Square and Compasses, and five pointed Star, these being placed opposite the respective officers. We need hardly mention that the decorations, which were supplied by Bro. Dick Radclyffe and Co. were much admired.

Obituary.

BRO. J. SUTCLIFFE.

Our readers will have learnt with regret of the death of our much esteemed Bro. John Sutcliffe, as recorded in the Freemason of December 29th. The following particulars of his Masonic career (which reached us too late for insertion last week) will doubtless be read with much interest.

Bro. Sutcliffe was made a Mason, we believe, at Heckmondwike; he was also a member of the Lodge of Harmony, Bradford, and was a subscribing member to that lodge for many years. At West Hartlepool he took a prominent part in the direction of the Harbour of Refuge Lodge, of which he was the first W.M. He served the office of P.G.J.D. for Durham. He became a member of the Pelham Pillar Lodge, and was one of the founders of the St. Alban's Lodge, of which also he was first Master. He took the office of P.G.S.W. for Lincolnshire, was afterwards, as a member of the Remigius Mark Lodge, Lincoln, made P.G.M.M. for Lincolnshire. He was subsequently made P.G.M. for Lancashire and Cheshire, for the Royal Order of Scotland. He took the Knights Templar Degree in Hull, and the Rose Croix in Sheffield. He was also a member of the Oliver Chapter of Royal Arch Masons at Grimsby. He continued to subscribe to the whole of these Lodges and Orders to the last. His death is a very great loss to the Masons of Lincolnshire, as he entered into the business of Masonry with much spirit and method. He made all arrangements himself, to the minutest details, previous to the meetings, more particularly those of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge.

BRO. W. DOYLE.

It is with much regret we have to announce the somewhat sudden death last Saturday, of Bro. Wm. Doyle, P.P.G.J.D., at his residence in Mount Pleasant, Liverpool. Our brother was well known and highly respected, and an extended notice of his Masonic career and largely attended funeral last Tuesday, will appear in our next issue.

BRO. W. H. WRIGHT.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of W. H. Wright, Esq., J.P. of Bolton and Southport, which took place on the 2nd inst., at his residence, Duke st., Southport, in the 64th year of his age. More than eighteen months ago he became enfeebled in health and removed from Bolton to Southport, where he remained up to his death, his last visit to Bolton being about eleven months ago. Suffering from a painful internal complaint, he has been constantly attended by Dr. Heath, of Southport, but his constitution gradually broke up and he succumbed at half-past three o'clock on the 2nd inst.

The late Bro. Wright was initiated into Masonry in the Anchor and Hope Lodge, No 37 (then No. 44) Bolton, in June, 1850, and after serving the various subordinate offices in the lodge was installed W.M. of the lodge in 1858, and in June, 1862, he was appointed Provincial Junior Grand Warden of East Lancashire. Bro. Wright was exalted to the degree of Holy Royal Arch, and in the same year was installed as a Knight Templar in the St James's of Jerusalem Encampment in Bolton, and in this Order the deceased was perhaps more universally known and esteemed for his labours than any other Knight in the Province of Lancashire. He soon obtained the position of Eminent Commander of his Preceptory and filled the office of Provincial Grand Chancellor for several years and on the 14th Nov., 1867, he was appointed Deputy Provincial Grand Commander. Through the failing health of Bro. A. H. Roys, Provincial Grand Commander, Sir Knight Wright was frequently called upon to represent the province at the meetings of Grand Conclave, where his face was exceedingly familiar, and where he was as highly respected as he was known. For many years he attended the Grand Master's Council, and was a member of the Ritual Commission. In 1873, on the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the Order of the Temple, Sir Knight Wright was promoted to the rank of Knight Commander of the Order, for the eminent services rendered by him. He was also Registrar of the United Preceptory at Manchester for a great number of years.

He was also a member of the Palatine Rose Croix Chapter, at Manchester, and one of the promoters of the St. George's Rose Croix Chapter, at Bolton. Indeed, it may truly be said that during a great portion of the late Bro. Wright's Masonic career, and until failing health compelled him to relinquish the bulk of his Masonic engagements, no brother so zealous or more universally esteemed could be found in the province, and his loss will be lamented by a large circle of friends and brethren.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

On the same evening that the Twelfth Night Entertainment was given at the Girls' School, Battersea Rise, an entertainment was likewise given to the Boys at their School at Wood Green. Mr. Bridgeman Smith, who has on former occasions afforded much amusement by a display of his inimitable dissolving views, again entertained the boys with the same work of art, representing this time the various scenes in the tour of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in India. Mr. Bridgeman Smith's dissolving views are so well known that it is unnecessary to give a description of them, further than to say that they were highly appreciated, and with some chromatropes and comic views afforded great amusement to the boys and the company assembled, among whom were the Rev. Dr. Morris and family, the Misses Binckes, and Miss Pullen.

ECLECTIC LODGE. (No. 1201).—This lodge, which, since the establishment of its new regime of hospitality, has commenced a brighter career, inaugurated the second year of its new life on Friday, 11th inst., by the installation of its new Worshipful Master, Bro. A. E. Taylor. There was a large gathering of members and friends, the visitors including Bros. Thomas Fenn, Past Grand Deacon of England; G. Kelly King, P.G.S., P.M. of the Alexandra Palace and other lodges, Yardley, 301; G. G. Barber, 441; Knight Smith, 1441; J. Mason, A.G.D.C. Middlesex, P.M. 1567; Blaikr, James Stevens, Charles Taylor, of The Great City Lodge; Woodcock, 1206; Hamilton, of the St. James's Union; J. Cowan, W.M. of the Carnarvon Lodge, Johnson (of No. 134, who had passed the chair in the Eclectic); J. While, P.M. of the United Strength (Freemasonry); F. G. Pochin, G.S. Leicester and Rutland; Aldworth, Golden Rule; P. Robinson, 201; E. A. W. Taylor, 302; W. J. Taylor, 271; Dr. Payne, 1261; C. Walker, 862; J. J. Wade, C. Pullman S. T. Williams, C. Walker, and others. The retiring W.M., Bro. Harty, opened the lodge, and finished his year's work by passing brothers whom he had initiated, and then proceeded with the installation ceremony, giving the charge to the brethren on the solemnity of the occasion, and calling upon the W.M. elect to assent to the responsibilities undertaken by all candidates for the Master's chair. The Board of Installed Masters having been formed in due and customary form the new Master was invested, entrusted, and placed in the highest position to which the members of a lodge can raise any brother member. The usual greetings having been given the W.M. appointed his officers, and invested those whom he had re-elected as well as those elected by the lodge, the whole being as follows:—Bros. Saul, S.W.; Lee, J.W.; Mander, P.M., as Treasurer; W. H. Barber, Secretary; Moss, S.D.; Pochin, J.D.; Dr. Lloyd, I.G.; Watts, P.M., as D. C.; Davis, W. S. (and the W.M. in investing this brother raised a laugh by telling the officer that the lodge looked to see efficiency combined with economy), and Bro. Pace made his debut "in collar" by being invested as A.W.S. Bro. P. M. Mander assisted Bro. Harty in the installation work, by giving the address to the W.M., and after Bro. Harty had delivered the charge to the Wardens, Bro. Mander took up the thread of the ceremony by the last charge, "old style," therein conducting the listeners over the "bleak mountains" with very pleasant elocution. The W.M. then decorated the I.P.M., Bro. Harty, with the Past Master's jewel voted by the lodge, and referring to the change made by the majority of the lodge, a year ago, from a non-banqueting to a banqueting lodge, said the lodge during the preceding year had passed through a crisis, and had come out of it most satisfactorily, and the fact that it had come out of it thus satisfactorily was mainly due to the immense energy of Bro. Harty. (Cheers.) Bro. Harty, before election to the chair, passed through the other offices of the lodge, working in all of them with skill and assiduity, and he had discharged the duties of W.M.—always a difficult and responsible post, but of increased difficulty last year in the Eclectic—in a manner which had won the entire approbation of all who had seen the working of the lodge. (Cheers.) That day the I.P.M. had capped his work by discharging the duties of Installing Master, and the jewel which the lodge had bestowed could be accepted with honour, and worn as having been worthily earned. (Applause.) Bro. Harty, in responding, said he could not allow that moment to pass away without thanking his friend and brother, whom he had had the pleasure of installing that night, for the words just heard, and the lodge for that which in his eyes was a jewel of inestimable value. To be the W.M. of his mother lodge was to a Mason a crowning point to his Masonic career, and it was a matter of delight to himself that he had passed through this honourable distinction, to the honourable position of a P.M. of the lodge. (Cheers.) When he entered the Eclectic all was dark and dreary with regard to hospitality, and there was no happy meeting, no friendly introduction of the newly made brother to his brother Masons after the ceremony. He felt this lack of union, for he never saw the Worshipful Master who initiated him after the ceremony, but he knocked against Bro. Mander on that eventful evening of his initiation, and asked that brother to come with him and drink "success to Freemasonry." It was after coming to know what Freemasonry was in other lodges and in other respects, that he resolved to endeavour to work a change in the constitution of the lodge by which the brothers of the Eclectic could receive and give hospitality, and they could not exchange such friendly visits under the old system of the Eclectic, for no brother would care about accepting hospitality if he could not offer it in return. (Cheers.) The lodge had now tried the change for a year, and he hoped they liked it. (Cheers.) He was bound to say the members seemed to enjoy the new regime, and under it the lodge would flourish. (Cheers.) Letters were read by the Secretary from the Grand Secretary and Assistant Grand Secretary expressing regret at inability to be present. Bro. Mander drew the attention of the lodge to the fact that Bro. Harty had undertaken the office of Steward for the forthcoming festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, on behalf of the "Old People," and moved that the lodge vote £10 to be placed on Bro. Harty's list. Bro. Bostobel seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren disappeared from the Temple of Masonry to re-appear in the Temple of Restoration, the Holborn Restaurant, where a feast which would have astonished the Masons of a generation or two back was served for the delectation of those who love dinners "A la Russe." The W.M., after the dinner, gave the usual loyal toasts, with an expression of the combined loyal sentiments towards the Queen and the Craft and the head of our Order which are ever heard in Masonic circles. The W.M. then proposed "The Grand Officers, Past and Present," and congratulated the Eclectic Lodge upon the fact that there was present a distinguished Past Grand Officer, who was, moreover, a member of the lodge, and who would, no doubt, respond to the toast—Bro. Thomas Fenn, Past Grand Deacon. (Cheers.) Bro. Thomas Fenn, who was received with warm cheers, said he had to thank the lodge for connecting his name with the toast of "The Grand Officers," for he regarded it as a very great honour to a Past Grand Officer to have his name coupled in a toast with noblemen so distinguished as the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale. (Cheers.) Every brother who attended Grand Lodge on a recent occasion, and heard Lord Carnarvon speak upon a very weighty subject, could not but have felt that His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master could not have found a more fitting representative of himself than the Earl of Carnarvon. (Cheers.) Notwithstanding the noble Earl's connection with state affairs, and the great demands upon his time through his holding a most important position in the Government of the vast British Empire, his lordship never failed to come to Grand Lodge when any important question affecting the Craft was to be discussed, and the manner in which the Pro Grand Master brought such questions before Grand Lodge was such, that by his eloquence, his tact, and Masonic good feeling he carried Grand Lodge with him on all points. (Cheers.) It was deeply to be regretted that Lord Skelmersdale was not so frequently in Grand Lodge as the brethren would like, and those who knew his lordship were sure that he would be a great favourite—but his lordship's absence was to be accounted for by the fact that his health did not admit of his taking so great a part in Grand Lodge affairs as the brethren desired, and this all brethren would regret. (Hear, hear.) With respect to the other Grand Officers, the manner in which the toast had been received testified to the respect the Craft generally bore to those selected by His Royal Highness for office, and on behalf of his brother Grand Officers and himself, Bro. Fenn returned warm thanks. He proceeded to add that on the last occasion when he had the honour to respond to the toast in the Eclectic Lodge (on the last installation night), he ventured, with some harmless pleasantries, to allude to his first visit to the lodge, when he performed the duty of consecrating it. Bro. Harty, had that night described his own feelings of isolation upon initiation, and Bro. Harty's experience of the first introduction to the Eclectic Lodge was more genial than his (Bro. Fenn's), for while Bro. Harty did find a friend and brother to go and drink "Success to Freemasonry" with him, he himself, on his first night with the Eclectic, got no more than a glass of cold water. (A laugh.) Last year he did contrast that hydropathic reception—with the gathering at the changed constitution of the lodge, and congratulated the members of the Eclectic Lodge upon the change; but in doing so he had not the slightest idea that he was wounding the susceptibilities of a kind and good brother, one who however much one might differ with him upon points, must be declared to act conscientiously up to his idea of Freemasonry. (Hear, hear.) At the time that he (Brother Fenn) spoke last year, he was ignorant of any difference having arisen in consequence of the change having been made by the majority of the members, and he had then really expected to see present the kind and good brother to whom he referred, and to hear from him the confession of a mistake in the original constitution of the lodge. (A laugh.) Bro. Fenn thus felt constrained to make some sort of apology for saying anything, however unintentional, calculated to wound any one's feelings. Still, however, "may difference of opinion never alter friendship," and Bro. Fenn still held his own opinion that labour and refreshment should never be sundered. (Cheers.) If the social aspect of Freemasonry were cut out from Freemasonry there would be a body without a soul. (Cheers.) Especially would this be the case in London, where an ordinary inhabitant in a "road," a "crescent," a "terrace," and a "park," might live for twenty years without knowing his opposite neighbour, and, therefore, social gatherings were necessary to assist men in forming those friendships which Freemasonry was so famous for forming and cementing. (Cheers.) In the country, where people know each other, the social element was kept with a glass of whisky and water, and a pipe. (Hear.) He ventured to say, however, that we somewhat overdo banqueting in London. (Hear.) In former times Masonic banquet consisted of fish and a joint, and a tankard of ale—and he was not sure that it would not be better for us to follow our forefathers' example to some extent. (Hear.) In these times of high pressure we could go in for French dishes and champagne—he was not finding fault with the Eclectic for doing so, as he had that evening much enjoyed himself, (a laugh), but looking over the minutes of the Prince of Wales's Lodge he found it solemnly laid down that members were only to have wine when a prince of royal blood dined with the lodge, and this showed that moderation and economy were practised in former times. (Hear.) But it did not matter whether members of lodges had a win, or whether they had ale—it would be well for the Craft if from time to time the brothers dined together. (Cheers.) Without the institution of dining, a proper social element would be lost to the Craft, and the high moral principles thereby inculcated would be lost, and Masonic charity as well. (Hear.) By "Masonic charity," he did not mean that which was dinned into Masonic ears on all occasions, as to the duty to put our hands into our pockets to support the Masonic Charities. To do this was all very well, yet this was only the outcome of our teaching; but to do that was not alone Masonic charity. (Cheers.) We were taught not only to relieve the distressed, and to extend the liberal hand to those in want, but to render kind offices to each other; to soothe the unhappy, and to sympathise in their misfortunes; to restore peace to troubled minds; to forgive the injuries of men to endeavour to blot wrongs and the sense of wrongs from the recollection, and to foster those principles of universal friendship and benevolence which the colour of blue teaches us should be as expansive as the blue vault of heaven itself. (Loud cheers.) He concluded by thanking them most cordially for the manner in which they had received the toast of the Grand Officers, and in return trusted that the lodge might flourish. Brother Harty, in an eloquent speech, then toasted the W.M., whose day of installation was also his natal day. Bro. James Stevens chanted "Many happy returns of the day," amid the plaudits of the brethren. The W.M. responded in a speech which was alike a credit to his heart and head, and then proceeded to give "The Health of the Visitors," and having read the long list, was greatly cheered when he stated that his own father and uncle were present on that, to him, great occasion. Response was made to the toast by Bro. J. Stevens, Bro. Cowan, Bro. Woodcock, Bro. Taylor, and several other brethren; and then the W.M. proposed the toast of the Past Masters, and dwelt upon the high honour the lodge felt in having as its W.M. an artist of the celebrity of Bro. Harty, whose name was so closely associated with the Craft as the artist of the picture of the Prince of Wales's installation at the Albert Hall. Bro. Harty responded in a speech worthy of the occasion and of the traditional eloquence of the Sister Isle. It was late before the proceedings were entirely over.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—The brethren of this lodge held their regular meeting on Thursday, the 10th January, at the Ladbroke Hall, Notting-hill. Bro. Penn, W.M., presided for the first time. Bros. Parkhouse, S.W.; Smout, sen., as J.W.; Savage, P.M. as S.D.; Lander, J.D.; Oldery, Organist; and Smout, jun., D.C. Amongst the brethren present we also noticed Bros. Lichtwitz, Whittaker, Collet, Newland, Fye, Wood, Barte, and other. After reading and confirming the minutes of the last meeting, Bro. Oldery passed the Second Degree, and Bro. King was duly raised to the Third Degree, and here we must observe that the ceremony performed by the W.M., might be a pattern to many old Masons, and it was generally acknowledged amongst the brethren, that they never heard it done with more perfection, the dignified appearance of the W.M., naturally adds of course to the solemnity of the ceremony. Messrs. C. Rowland, Dewynter, John Roberts, and James Whittaker, were then admitted to the Order. Before closing the lodge it was proposed and carried to hold another ball on the 22nd of February, at the Ladbroke Hall, similar to that of last year, for the benefit of the Masonic Institution for Girls, which Bro. Stephens, P.M. represents at the next festival, and as may be justly anticipated, his list will be nearly equal to that of Bro. Murlis, P.M., last year, which amounted to over £200. After closing the lodge, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, provided admirably by Bro. Linscott, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts being proposed. The Earl of Carnarvon is always in this lodge a special toast as a mark of gratitude, not only for giving permission to name the lodge after him, but also to use his coat-of-arms. "The Visitors" were then honoured; there were present Bros. Dyer, 790; Harvey, 1196; Hendover, Morgan, Little, Game, P.M. 511; Adkins, T. Savage, P.M.; and Spiegel, 188, and it was responded to by each separately. The P.M.'s toast was responded to in the usual humorous style by Bro. Murlis, P.M. "The Initiate" also responded to the toast proposed; then followed "The Officers," here especially, the W.M. was pleased to see Bro. Parkhouse, the S.W., in his place who, through his own illness and illness in his family, was for some time prevented from being amongst them. The S.W., on rising to respond, (who seems to be a great favourite amongst the brethren), was greeted with great applause, and was so overcome with emotion, that he could hardly express more than a few words. The other officers then responded in suitable terms. The next toast was "The Masonic Charities," to which Bro. Stevens, P.M., as Steward for the next festival, responded, thanking the brethren for the liberal manner in which the lodge had treated him, by heading his list with ten guineas, and the support he had from the brethren in adding to it already more than 100 guineas, led him to expect that his list would be second to none in the Craft, and he further appealed to those brethren who have not already done so, to subscribe as soon as possible, he is always ready to receive. He no sooner sat down than several brethren called out to put down their names; Brother Whitaker subscribed ten guineas, as a first instalment, and promised more if he saw that other brethren will take a similar interest. The Tyler's toast closed a very enjoyable and interesting Masonic gathering.

COWES.—Medina Lodge (No. 35).—The Master of this lodge for the ensuing year was installed on Thursday, 10th inst. in the presence of a good attendance from the neighbouring lodges. Bro. Wyatt having been re-elected, the ceremony was much shortened, but the ancient charges, &c., were given, at the request of the W.M., by Bro. Parkes, I.P.M. of the Albany Lodge, Newport, in a very impressive manner. The following brethren were appointed by the W.M. as his officers for the year:—Bros. Ains, I.P.M.; Barfield, S.W.; the Rev. W. Barker, M.A., J.W. and Chaplain; Mursell, S.D.; Wheeler, J.D.; Fellowes, I.G.; Luter, Tyler; J. G. Wheeler, P.M., Treasurer; T. Giles, P.M., Secretary; J. G. Jones, Organist; Munt, D.C. At six o'clock, the brethren sat down to a most excellent banquet at the Gloster Hotel, served a la Russe, and the way in which Mr. Jones catered was heartily appreciated by all. After the banquet, the loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and a happy and pleasant evening was passed.

BOLTON.—Anchor and Hope Lodge (No. 37).—The installation meeting of this ancient lodge was held in the Freemasons' Hall, Church Institute, Bolton, on Monday, the 7th January. There was a numerous attendance of brethren, amongst whom were Bros. R. K. Freeman, W.M.; James Brown, S.W.; Saml. Crowther, J.W.; Saml. Isherwood, P. Prov. G. Treas.; John Tunnah, Prov. G. Secretary; G. P. Brockbank, P. Prov. G. Deacon; Wm. Slater, P. Prov. G. Deacon; Robt. Harwood, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works; Reuben Mitchell, P. Prov. G. Sword Bearer; Pilkinton, P.M.; Jas. Walker, P.M.; James Newton, P.M.; Jas. Horrocks, P.M.; James McAdam, P.M.; J. M. Rutter, P.M.; J. D. Porteous, P.M.; Richard Hough, W.M. 146; John Wild, P.M. 146; W. A. Byron, P.M. 178; R. Brown, P.M. 241; Liverpool, Hon Sec. West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution; Charles Williams, W.M. 384; and others. The lodge was opened in the First Degree by Bro. R. K. Freeman, W.M., assisted by his officers. The minutes of the preceding regular meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened on the Second Degree, when Bro. James Newton, P.M., the Installing Master, took the chair. The W.M. elect (Bro. James Brown, S.W.), was presented to the Installing Master by Bro. Samuel Isherwood, P.M., P. Prov. G. Treas., and the ceremony of installation was proceeded with, there being present at the Board of Installed Masters no fewer than eighteen brethren who had attained to that degree. The Master elect having been placed in the chair of K.S., and proclaimed and saluted in the three degrees, the officers for the ensuing year were invested by Bro. R. Brown, P.M. 241, viz., Bros. Saml. Crowther, S.W.; Johnson Mills, J.W.; Rev. J. H. Gibbon, Chap.; Wm. Slater, P. Prov. G. Deacon, Treasurer; J. D. Porteous, Sec.; G. M. Garstang, S.D.; Jno. Booth, J.D.; Robt. Harwood, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works, Master of Ceremonies; F. W. Pacey, Mus. Bac. Oxon., Organist; Jas. Robinson, 2nd Inner Guard; J. W. Roiley, Tyler. Bro. R. Brown then delivered the usual addresses to the Master, Warden, and brethren. On the proposition of Bro. John Tunnah, Prov. G. Secretary, seconded by Bro. G. P. Brockbank, P. Prov. Deacon, the Secretary was instructed to write to the family of the late P. Prov. G. W. H. Wright, P. Prov. G. Warden, expressing the sympathy and condolence of the members of this, his Mother Lodge, with them on their sad bereavement, and of the high esteem and regard entertained by the brethren for his memory. Heartly good-wishes were expressed by the visiting brethren, and the lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, after which, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given and responded to, the proceedings of the evening being enlivened by the services of an efficient glee party, consisting of Bros. Slater, Garstang and Pacey (members of the Lodge). During the course of the evening, a subscription was entered into in aid of the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution, which resulted in nearly £20 being raised for the Institution. The Tyler's toast having been given, the brethren separated at an early hour in the evening.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Royal Gloucester Lodge (No. 130).—The festival of St. John, and installation of W.M. of this lodge for the year ensuing, took place on Thursday, the 10th inst., the attendance being very good. The W.M., Bro. R. Sharpe, having raised two Parsee brethren, who have been studying medicine at the Victoria hospital, at Netley, proceeded to instal his successor, Bro. C. John Phillips, the Board of Installed Masters numbering fifteen. The new W.M. subsequently invested his officers as follows: Bros. C. Jellicoe, S.W.; James Cole, J.W.; R. Sharpe, Treas.; J. R. Weston, Sec.; Rev. E. Y. Nepean, Past Prov. Grand Chap.; Chap.; S. Myer, S.D.; J. Robertson, J.D.; Pike, Org.; J. F. Obree, I.G.; Baird, and Marshall, Stewards; and Biggs and Vare, Tyler and Assistant Tyler. Before the lodge closed, a cordial vote of thanks was proposed to the retiring Master for his efficient performance of the installation ceremony, and in response he embraced the opportunity of presenting to the lodge a handsomely bound and gilt copy of the Book of Constitutions, and a similarly bound and gilt manuscript copy of the bye-laws, beautifully written, with illuminated initial letters, by Mr. Clarke, of the High-street, Southampton. Subsequently thanks were tendered to Bro. Sharpe for his able conduct of the lodge during the past year, and a Past Master's jewel voted him, in recognition of his services. The installation banquet was provided by Bro. Durnall, and gave every satisfaction to an excellent attendance of the brethren. In proposing the respective customary toasts, the W.M. called the attention of the brethren to the connection of the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, with Hampshire, and pointed to some of his public services in that county, as at one time judicial chairman of its quarter sessions, and then chairman of the visiting justices, under whom the gaol discipline of the county was revised. His lordship's career and that of the Prov. Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, (Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.), testified to the truth of the remark often heard in that hall, that most distinguished Masons were also remarkable for their public services outside the Craft. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master, (Bro. W. Hickman), and the Prov. Grand Secretary, (Bro. Le Feuvre), owned the Royal Gloucester as their mother lodge, and it was somewhat remarkable that for the whole period during which Hampshire had had a Grand Master, either the Right Worshipful brother or his deputy, and sometimes both, either claimed the Gloucester as their mother lodge, or were joining members of it, the last three or four Deputy Prov. Grand Masters living in Southampton. The lodge was also congratulated on the gratifying contributions both from the province and from England at large, to the Boys' School festival, presided over during the past year by the R.W. the Prov. Grand Master. P.M. Morris Miles, Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies, responded to the toast on behalf of "The Grand Officers." In proposing "Sister Lodges and the Visitors," the W.M. remarked that the five lodges in Southampton and the immediately adjoining neighbourhood being presided over by comparatively young men, ought to prove an incentive to young Masons, as showing that the elder brethren had no desire to monopolise the deservedly coveted position of W.M. The toast was acknowledged by the W.M.'s of Peace and Harmony, Shirley, and Clausentum Lodges, Bros. J. Clark, G. M. Passenger, jun., J. E. Tucker, and G. Tilling. The toasts of the W.M., and the P.M.'s having been given and acknowledged, the healths of Bros. Kariman and Koyaji were given from the chair, with special expressions of good-will towards them in their home in India, to which they are about to proceed, and both brethren replied in eloquent terms. "The Officers" were duly remembered before the parting toast was given and an evening closed which was characterized by much good feeling, the speeches being relieved by several capital songs, contributed to by P.M.'s Payne, Keane, Tilling, the W.M., and others, and some admirable selections on the harmonium by P.M. Sharpe.

TRURO.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 131).—The festival of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated by the Centenary Lodge Fortitude, with great éclat on Wednesday, the 9th inst. The members assembled in their hall in Quay-street for the installation at 2 p.m., when a large number of the Craft attended. W. Bro. Edward Edwards, W.M., in the chair. Bro. Col. Sir James McGarel-Hogg, Bart., K.C.B., M.P., and three other joining members, were elected, and two candidates were initiated, the latter ceremony being conducted by the W.M. The R.W. Bro. William James Hughan, P.M. P.S.G.D. of England, P. Senior Grand Warden of Egypt, &c., was presented for installation to the W. Bro. Thos. Chirgwin, P.M., P. Prov. S.G.W., Installing Master; the usual questions being asked by the Secretary of the lodge, Bro. Wm. Porter, and the presentation being made by W. Bro. William Lake, P.M., P. Prov. G. Reg. The Installing Master having entrusted the new Master, according to ancient custom, that brother was placed in the chair, amid the plaudits of the numerous Past Masters present in honour of the occasion, forming quite a lodge of themselves. Bro. Hughan, on the brethren being admitted, stated that the first official act of his would be to order the Secretary to insert in the minutes the fact of the installation that day having been conducted by his valued friend and brother, P.M. Chirgwin, who had installed him into the same position in the year 1868, just ten years ago. The present occasion, however, he felt it was a special compliment to him, for the installing Master was not only distinguished as a Mason, but also the first Mayor of the City of Truro, honoured and trusted by his fellow citizens, and esteemed by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. The W.M. appointed and invested the following brethren as his officers for the year ensuing:—Edward Edwards, I.P.M.; John H. Sampson, S.W.; J. Cooper Furniss, J.W.; William Porter, Secretary; Richard Lean, S.D.; S. Richards, J.D.; John A. Mackenzie, M.C.; Henry Toope, Organist; William B. Morris, I.G.; W. Bro. T. Chirgwin having been re-elected Treasurer, was invested accordingly, and John Langdon was again re-elected as Tyler. W. Bro. Stephen Holloway, P.M., P. Prov. G.D., who was Steward for the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund in 1868, when Bro. Hughan was W.M., was again re-elected in that capacity. The W.M. explained the sad cause which prevented the attendance of Bro. Holloway that day, and felt assured that the sympathy of his brethren and their appointment of him to office would be much appreciated by him. Then followed a unique expression of esteem for the new Master, Bro. Hughan, by deputations from various lodges rising time after time to offer the congratulations of their members to the W.M., including representatives from 75, Falmouth; 330, Bodmin; 331, Truro; 589, Redruth; 699, Chacewater; 1529, St. Columb; 523, Leicester (per Bro. Rev. W. T. Fry, P. Prov. G. Chaplain, Leicestershire), the roll being added to at the banquet by 121, Penzance; 1550, Plymouth, and others. Letters were also received from the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgumbe, Prov. Grand Master; Sir Frederick M. Williams, Bart., M.P., Deputy Provincial Grand Master; James H. Neilson, P.M. 620, Dublin, P.S.G.W. of Egypt, &c., and many other brethren, expressing regret at their unavoidable absence and best wishes for the ancient lodge of "Fortitude," Truro, which has not ceased to work at regular intervals from 1772 to the present year. The annual banquet was served at the Red Lion Hotel, Truro, by Bro. John Bray, P.M., P. Prov. G.D.C., and gave great satisfaction to the crowded guests, who were somehow or other all comfortably seated and entertained in the large room of the hotel. Bro. Hughan was in the chair, and was supported by Col. Sir James McGarel-Hogg, Bart., K.C.B., M.P.; W. Bros. William Tweedy, J.P., P.M. 331, Prov. G. Treasurer; Edward Trewbody Carlyon (City Treasurer), P.M. 331, Prov. G. Secretary; Thomas Chirgwin, J.P., P.M., P. Prov. S.G.W. (Mayor of Truro); William Lake, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G. Reg.; John R. Collins, P.M. 330, P. Prov. G.S.B.; William James Johns, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G. Reg.; William H. Jenkins, P.M. 131, P. Prov. S.G.W.; Frederick William Dabb, P.M. 588, P. Prov. G.W.; William Middleton, P.M. 131, P. Prov. S.G.D.; Richard John, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G.D.C.; T. L. Dorrington, P.M. 131, P. Prov. J.G.D.; Nathaniel B. Bullen, P.M. 131, P. Prov. G.O.; James C. R. Crews, P.M. 131, Prov. G. Std.; Lieut. W. F. Sharp, W.M. 231; John Jeffery, J.W. 331; John Thomas, W.M. 589; John F. Hooper, W.M. elect of 699; R. G. Bird, P.M. 1550; W. Rooks, P. Prov. G.P.; Edward Edwards, I.P.M. 131; John T. Tillman, P.M. 131; J. Wallace, J.W. 75; W.D. Rogers, S.D. 75; James Lovell, jun., Sec. 121; the Wardens, officers, and many members.

An interesting feature of the evening was an able sketch of the Metropolitan Board of Works and its gigantic operations by its respected chairman, Col. Sir James McGarel Hogg, and the speeches generally were much above the ordinary, those of the W.M. containing many valuable details respecting the position of the order, and the progress of Freemasonry in Cornwall. The musical arrangements were entrusted to Bro. N. B. Bullen, who did his work well as usual.

BOLTON.—Lodge of Antiquity (No. 146).—The annual festival and installation meeting of this lodge were held on Wednesday, 9th January, at the Bull's Head Inn, Bradshawgate, Bolton. Amongst the members of the lodge present were Bros. Richard Hough, W.M.; Jno. Duxbury, S.W.; Robt. Horridge, J.W.; Thos. Glaister, P.M., P. Prov. S.G. Warden; Hy. Ainsworth, P.M.; Wm. Nicholson, P.M.; John Morris, P.M.; John Wild, P.M.; Thos. Collins, P.M.; and others. The visitors included Bros. Saml. Isherwood, P.M. 37, P. Prov. G. Treasurer; Wm. Slater, P.M. 37, P. Prov. G. Deacon; Thos. Entwistle, P.M. 221, S.W. 1723, P. Prov. G. Supt. of Works; Robt. Whittaker, P.M. 678, P. Prov. G. Dir. of Ceremonies; J. W. Taylor, P.M. 221, J.W. 1723, P. Prov. G. Org.; James Brown, W.M. 37; James Newton, P.M. 37; and others. The ceremony of installing the W.M. elect (Bro. John Duxbury, S.W.) was performed by Bro. John Wild, P.M., who also invested the officers for the ensuing year, viz: Bros. Robt. Horridge, S.W.; James Dooley, J.W.; Wm. Nicholson, P.M., Treas.; M. Burgess, Sec.; William Cooper, S.D.; George Taylor, J.D.; Richd. Duxbury, J.G. Bro. Wild then delivered the usual addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren. Heartly good wishes were expressed by the visiting brethren, and the lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 9th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. Bro. Jowett occupied the chair, but there was not a very large attendance of members. The lodge having been opened in the First Degree with solemn prayer, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, Bro. Shepherd was then examined, and proving efficient, was entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and on Bro. Shepherd being re-admitted, he was passed to the degree of F.C. by the W.M., the working tools being presented by the S.W. The usual proclamations were afterwards made, eliciting "heartly good wishes" from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony.

FAREHAM.—Lodge of Harmony (No. 309).—The installation of Bro. Thomas Robinson as Worshipful Master of this lodge (No. 309) took place on Thursday, the 3rd inst., the lodge being opened at the Town Hall, in consequence of the large attendance of the brethren. Bro. the Rev. T. Robinson, P.M. 88 and 704, P.P.G.C. of Cambridge, and P.P.G.S.W. of Kent (father of the W.M. elect) was the Installing Master, and admirably conducted the sublime ceremony. The newly elected W.M. having been duly inducted into office, appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bro. A. Nance, S.W.; Bro. Edgar Goble, J.W.; Bro. the Rev. Dr. White, L.L.D. (Vicar of Hambledon), Chaplain; Bro. J. B. Goldsmith, Treasurer; Bro. E. G. Holbrook and J. Gilbert Heath, Secretaries; Bro. A. R. Holbrook, S.D.; Bro. H. Jeans, J.D.; Bro. Osborne, Org.; Bro. N. H. Matthews, D.C.; Bro. Rev. A. Headley, I.G.; Bros. J. Andrews and J. Holbrook, Stewards; and Bro. Pannell, Tyler. The lodge having been closed in due form, the brethren adjourned to the "Red Lion" Hotel, where an elaborate banquet was served. The Worshipful Master occupied the chair. On the removal of the cloth, "The Queen and the Craft" was proposed from the Chair and duly honoured, after which the W.M. proposed "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G., K.T., &c., and the Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon." The toast having been duly honoured, the Worshipful Master proposed "The Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and the Officers of Grand Lodge." Bro. the Rev. Dr. White proposed "The Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P." Bro. W. Edmonds proposed "The Very Worshipful Bro. Hickman and the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge." Bro. Tayler having acknowledged the compliment, on behalf of Bro. Hickman, proposed "The Visitors," coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Eastes, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Kent, who has forty-three lodges under his care. Bro. Eastes responded, and alluded to the great importance of interchanging visits, so that information and experience might be obtained. Bro. Goldsmith proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master," in a neat speech. Whatever honours might hereafter fall upon Bro. Robinson, he would, he felt sure, always regard that evening as the proudest evening of his life. He had been in office three years. Bro. Robinson had always attended to his duties, and gave great promise for the ensuing year. If ever he wanted assistance he might always call upon the Past Masters, who would be ever ready to afford it. The Worshipful Master responded. In thanking them for the honour they had done him, he also thanked them for making it his good fortune to be one of the youngest Masters in England, if not the youngest. He hardly knew how to thank the brethren sufficiently for the honour they had done him in electing him to that important position. In accepting it he was fully determined to carry out his duties to the very best of his ability, and endeavour by every means in his power to enhance the honour and usefulness of that lodge. He should never forget the ceremony of that evening. Solemn at all times as was the installation of a Worshipful Master, in his case its solemnity was very much added to by the fact of its being conducted by his own father, and he might say, with pardonable pride, that it had been performed in a manner which could hardly be excelled. He proposed "The Health of the Past Masters of the Lodge," and in doing so particularly thanked Bro. Whale for his valuable services for two years in the chair. Bro. Whale suitably returned thanks, and assured the Worshipful Master that the Past Masters were always ready to render him every possible assistance. "The Officers" was given and duly acknowledged, and the Tyler's toast brought the evening to a close. The musical portion of the proceedings, both in lodge and at the banquet, was ably carried out by Bro. Robert Osborne, P.P.G. Organist, who was assisted by Bros. Pearman, Knight, Stroud, and Grant, as vocalists.

SOUTHEND.—Priory Lodge (No. 1000).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on the 10th inst., at the Middleton Hotel, Southend, Bro. the Rev. Spencer Robert Wigram, P.G.C., W.M., presiding. The Rev. Brother installed his successor, Bro. William Chaplain, in the presence of a full lodge, in which were many of the Provincial Grand Officers. A P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. Wigram. After the business of the lodge was concluded, the brethren banquetted at the Middleton Hotel.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on the 5th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Leonardgate, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. Thomas Jackson. There was not a large attendance. The meeting was held for the purpose of conferring the third degree on Bro. W. H. Chippendale, who has gone abroad to join his regiment. The lodge having been opened in the First and Second Degrees, Bro. Chippendale gave proficiency of his knowledge as a Fellow Craft, was entrusted, and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Chippendale having been admitted, was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. by the W.M., the degree being carefully and efficiently worked. The W.M. also presented the working tools, after which the lodge was closed with the usual formalities. The annual meeting for the installation of W.M. of the above lodge was held on the 7th inst., in the before named room. There was a fair muster of members and visiting brethren. Bro. T. Jackson, W.M., occupied the chair of K.S., and was supported by his respective officers. The lodge having been opened in the first degree, the ballot was taken for Bro. Henry James James, (Palestine Lodge No. 97) as a joining member, and proved unanimous. Bros. Palmer and Welch next gave proof of their efficiency as E.A., and were entrusted and retired, and on being separately admitted were passed to the degree of F.C., the working in the former being admirably gone through by Bro. Longman, P.M., and in the latter by the I.P.M. The Worshipful Master then vacated his chair, which was occupied by Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B. of E., as Installing Officer, and who proceeded to install Bro. A. Sheriff as Worshipful Master of the lodge for the ensuing twelve months, the ceremony being most ably and impressively performed. The following brethren were also appointed and invested officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. T. Jackson, I.P.M.; N. W. Helme, S.W.; Wm. Taylor, J.W.; W. J. Sly, Treasurer (re-elected); H. Longman, Sec.; John T. Jackson, S.D.; Thomas Bell, J.D.; James Vince, I.G.; J. Aldous, Org.; and A. K. Allison, Tyler. The brethren then adjourned to the King's Arms hotel, and sat down to an excellent dinner, under the presidency of Bro. A. Sheriff, W. M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and a pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent. The Fortitude and the Duke of Lancaster Lodges were represented by their Worshipful Masters, Bros. Jowett and B. F. G. Dale, who responded on behalf of their respective lodges.

KIRKBY LONSDALE.—The Underley Lodge (No. 1074).—The annual festival of this flourishing lodge was held on Friday, January 11th, at three o'clock in the afternoon, when the members and visitors assembled unusually strong. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. Robert Godfrey, assisted by his Wardens, and Bros. John Bowes, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; W. Dodd, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; Rev. Canon Ware, P.M., P.P.J.G.W.; Waring, P.M.; W. James, P.M.; Atkinson, P.M.; Greenbanks, Wilkinson, Quinay, Dr. Waller, No. 2, S.C.; Pussey, S.W., W.M. elect; Anderson, Tyler, and a number of other brethren. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bro.

Greenbank claimed preferment and having proved his claim was entrusted, and in due course raised by the W.M. The lodge having been lowered, Bro. John Bowes, assumed the chair of K.S., and Bro. Pussey having been presented was installed in ample form as W.M. for the ensuing year and saluted, proclaimed and greeted in the several degrees. A cordial vote of thanks was carried by acclamation to Bro. Bowes, the Installing Master. After labour, the brethren adjourned to the Royal Hotel, for the annual banquet, which did great credit to the hostess, and a most enjoyable evening was spent under the guidance of the genial W.M. The toasts were enlivened by recitations and songs from Dr. Waller, Dr. Page, W. James, the W.M., R. Godfrey, Quinay, Simon, &c. Dr. Page proposed "The Health of the Installing Master," and referred to his long and intimate acquaintance with that brother, and his readiness at all times "to come to the rescue." We will only add that the W.M. lives in the hearts of the brethren and that his year of office must be a happy and prosperous one.

TREDEGAR.—St. George's Lodge (No. 1098).

—On Thursday, January 10, Bro. Rev. Edward Jones was installed as W.M. of this lodge, and the ceremony was most ably performed by Bro. N. Bradley, assisted by Bro. G. A. Brown. There was a good attendance, amongst whom was Bro. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray, P.A.G.D.C. and D.P.G.M., Monmouthshire. The brethren afterwards dined together at the "Castle Hotel," and amongst those present was the son of the late Bro. Brock, who is now in the Masonic Institution for Boys, and allowed to be present by special request, and the brethren were much pleased with his improvement during the time he has been in the institution. He returned after his holidays on the following morning, and no doubt would ever remember the privilege which had been granted to him.

BARNARD CASTLE.—Barnard Lodge (No. 1230).—The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held on the 4th inst., in the Masonic Hall, Newgate. In consequence of the notice on the circular, that this was the first meeting of the lodge in their new premises, neighbouring lodges were well represented, as will be seen by the following list of visitors, viz., Bros. R. Richardson, 602; G. Stillman, P.M., P.P.G.J.D.; J. Brown, J.W.; W. Knowles, J. J. Scrafton, J. Robson, F. Wouldhave, W. J. Mulvey, R. R. Rule, D. Armstrong and C. A. Slader, 1121; F. W. Bewsh, I.P.M. 1274; W. Waistell, 1337; C. R. Green, 1522; G. C. Lee, 1611; J. M. Shepherd, J. Hartley, R. Peverell, C. J. Spence, J. Hawdon, J. Graham, E. T. Stephenson, W. J. Mulvey, and J. Fawcett, 1650. Among other business before the lodge was that of Bro. W. Waistell, Lodge 1337, as joining member, who upon the ballot being taken was declared unanimously elected. Bro. R. R. Rule, Bishop Auckland, Lodge 1121, was proposed by Bro. R. J. Dent, W.M., as joining (honorary) member. The proposition was seconded by Bro. Moore, P.M., Bro. the Rev. C. R. Green, Rokeby Lodge 1522, was then proposed by Bro. Moore, P.M., and seconded by Bro. Cooke, P.M. The chair was then taken by Bro. by Bro. Moore, P.M., who proceeded in his customary painstaking and effective manner, to install Bro. John W. Badcock into the chair. The following were the other appointments, viz.: Bros. G. C. Lee, S.W.; W. Ward, J.W.; Rev. J. Brockbank, Chaplain; R. C. M. Cooke, Treas.; Wm. Sang, Secretary; J. Kyle, S.D.; B. S. Beckwith, J.D.; J. M. Moore, D.C.; Wm. Gardner, I.G.; J. Kirtley, Tyler; Wm. Gardner and D. Finlay, Stewards. Bro. Cooke, P.M., then arose, and after asking permission from the W.M., addressed the esteemed I.P.M., saying: "I have to-night a most pleasing duty to perform, Bro. Dent. On behalf and in the name of the brethren of the Barnard Lodge I present you with this P.M.'s jewel, as some token of our respect and esteem towards you as a brother, also in remembrance of the efficient and substantial aid you have rendered to the lodge during the erection of this Masonic Hall, and for the effective and faithful discharge of your duties during your year of office as W.M." Bro. Dent very feelingly replied. "Hearty Good Wishes" were presented by the visitors from the various lodges they represented. The festival of St. John the Evangelist was subsequently celebrated by a banquet at the King's Head Hotel, and was partaken of by about forty brethren. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly honoured, the Tyler's toast bringing a very pleasant evening to a harmonious termination. The P.M.'s jewel was an emblematic one, containing Bro. R. J. Dent's monogram in the centre, and at the back the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. R. J. Dent, W.M. of the Barnard Lodge, No. 1230, on the termination of his year of office, the 4th of January, 1878."

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge (No. 1353).—The Festival of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated by this young but flourishing lodge on the 4th inst., at the King's Arms Hotel, when there were present Bros. G. F. Dale, W.M.; Wolfenden, S.W.; Elleshaw, J.W.; Parker, S.D.; Hartley, J.D.; Cleminson, I.G.; Bell, S.S.; Stork, J.S.; Oglethorpe, Org.; Hartley, P.M.; Bell, P.M. and Treasurer; Heald, P.M.; Acton, P.M. and Hon. Sec.; Coulon, I.P.M.; Stewardson, P.M. 950; Taylor, P.M. 1051; Bannister, P.S.D.; Scott, Stork, Tracey, Barlow, Beckett, Patterson, Longmire, P.S.D. and S.W. 1651; Taylor, Dotson, Sandam, Hetherwall, Richmond, Jas. Simpson, Jno. Simpson, Blisard, Bell, Hall, (Kirkham Lodge), Wilcox, Wilkinson, Jacobson, Barsby, Mans, Bell, P.S.S.; Stizaker, Woods, Beesley, Huntingdon, Jackson, S.D. 1051, Captain Storey, and Allison and Sheppard, Tylers. The W.M. was supported on his right and left by the Past Masters of the lodge. The toasts then followed. After "The Queen and the Craft" had been duly honoured, the W.M. proposed "The M.W. Grand Master of England, the Princess of Wales, and the Royal Family;"

"The Earl of Carnarvon, R.W. Pro G.M.," "Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.D.G. Master, and R.W.G.M. of West Lancashire," "H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, S.G.W.," "H.R.H. the Prince Leopold, J.G.W.," "The Grand Officers, Past and Present," "Colonel the Hon. F. A. Stanley, R.W.D.P.G. Master, and the P.G. Officers of West Lancashire," "The Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces" was proposed by Bro. Hartley, P.M., and Bro. Coulon, Quarter-Master Sergt. 1st Royal Lancashire Militia, responded. "The Bishops and Clergy of all denominations" was given by Bro. Bell, P.M., and briefly responded to by Bro. Parker, S.D. "The Health of the W.M." was then proposed, in eulogistic terms by Bro. Coulon, I.P.M., the same time observing that the brethren had seen six months of Bro. Dale's working as W.M., and he could venture to express that every brother of the lodge was proud of their W.M. It was owing to his exertions the beautiful choir which adorned the ceremonies in our lodge at working hours, no less than their charming influences this evening, was established, and there can be no doubt that the Duke of Lancaster Lodge, was the most energetic and best worked lodge in the neighbourhood, he would therefore call upon every brother present, to drink long life and happiness to the W.M. in a full bumper. The toast was drunk with the utmost enthusiasm, so was also that of Mrs. Dale and all the little Dales. The W.M., in responding, thanked the brethren for the kind and enthusiastic manner they had drunk his health, and that of his wife and children, and expressed that this moment was the proudest in his life, and he considered no greater honour could be bestowed on him six months ago the W.M. of the Duke of Lancaster Lodge. It was a distinguished honour that any gentleman might feel proud of, more particularly, on his part, being so young a 'Mason.' It was just four years ago he was initiated a member of the "Duke," when he looked back it seemed like yesterday, the working of the lodge was arduous, and the meetings long, generally meeting at six and working up to eleven, but he was only too much rejoiced to have such work to perform, but at the same time he must tender his thanks to the brethren and his officers for their strenuous assistance in carrying on the work, and from appearances at present, there was not going to be a cessation as the precept for next lodge night, was as full as any yet, which meant another six and eleven. He must again express his thanks for the very enthusiastic manner his health, and of his wife and children were received, and must say he felt proud to address his brethren from the very place the Mayors of Lancaster have done the same to their corporations from time immemorial, and as he was there placed he considered he was in a exalted position as any one, being the W.M. of the Duke of Lancaster Lodge, 1353. The W.M. proposed "The Health of Bro. Coulon, I.P.M.," which was drunk with enthusiasm, and Bro. Coulon, I.P.M., responded. The W.M. next gave the P. Master of the lodge, Bro. Hartley Senr., P.M., responded, and observed that it gave him the greatest pleasure to be among them that evening, also at the progress the lodge had made since he was installed into the chair of K.S. As the first Master of the lodge in 1871, he was one of the first who signed the charter, and he rejoiced that the false prophets who predicted at that day, the speedy downfall of the lodge, have been disappointed, he returned them his sincere thanks on behalf of the P.M.'s. for the very flattering manner they had drunk their health. Several other toasts having been proposed and responded to, the Tyler's toast was given by Bro. Stewardson, P.M. This brought the banquet to a close.

SOLIHULL.—St. Alphege Lodge (No. 1431).

—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at the George Hotel, the W.M., Bro. E. A. Webster, in the chair, supported by the following officers and brethren: Bro. W. Hillman, P.M.; B. J. Allsopp, S.W.; A. Horrocks, J.W. (pro tem); F. Jones, Hon. Sec.; J. Jennings, S.D.; D. Simms, J.D.; E. C. Weller, I.G.; J. Hillman, S.; A. Hopkins, D.C.; J. Chapman, Tyler. The visiting brethren included the following: Bros. J. L. Kennedy, P.P.G.D.C.; J. B. Hall, P.G.D.C. Leicester and Rutland; S. Davies, sen., 141; Buckley 1180; W. Pringle, P.M. 925; J. Luck, 1031. The lodge was opened punctually at five o'clock, p.m. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, The lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. C. H. Evans being present, the W.M., addressed the usual enquiries, which the candidate answered in a very satisfactory manner, whereupon he retired, and the lodge being opened in the third degree, and he was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason, the whole of the ceremony was performed in the manner usual in this flourishing young lodge, and reflected the greatest credit upon the W.M. and his officers. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, where a goodly and plentiful repast was waiting for them, all being carried out under the personal supervision of Bro. J. Hillman who never tires in his endeavour to make all comfortable, the usual toasts was given from the chair. Interspersed with numerous songs and recitations, by the W.M., Bros. Kennedy, Davies, W. Hillman, Buckley, Wilkinson, Jones, Evans and Burt. Previous to leaving the brethren did not forget the Benevolent Fund in connection with the lodge.

NEWPORT.—Albert Edward Prince of Wales's Lodge (No. 1429).—On Thursday, 10th January, Bro. James Horner was installed as W.M. of the above lodge, and the ceremony was most ably performed by the I.P.M. The brethren adjourned to a banquet at the Westgate Hotel, and were much pleased to see the worthy D.P.G.M., Bro. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray, P.A.G.D.C., there on his return from Tredegar. There was an excellent muster of the Craft, including several Provincial Grand Lodge Officers, and many brethren connected with neighbouring lodges. The lodge was opened in due form at 2.30, when the ordinary lodge business having been disposed of, Bro. Frederick Orders, the W.M. for the past year, proceeded with the installation of Bro. James Horner, P.G.A.D.C., as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. These responsible duties were admirably carried out, and the retiring W.M. received the congratulations of the brethren present, as did also the newly installed W.M. on his having been placed in the chair of King Solomon. The W.M. next proceeded to invest his officers for the ensuing year, the list being composed as follows: Bro. James Horner, W.M.; F. Orders, I.P.M.; W. Watkins, Treasurer; Henry Richards, S.W.; James Sanders, J.W.; W.M. Locke, Secretary; W. H. Wheeler, Assistant-Secretary; A. Taylor, S.D.; J. E. Thomas, J.D.; E. Conner, Supt. W.; E. W. Perrin, Organist; W. Welsford, I.G.; J. Jenkins and E. W. Evans, Stewards; H. Fletcher, Tyler; W. Hopton, Assistant-Tyler. This concluded the business of the lodge, which was closed in due form, the brethren adjourning to the "Westgate Hotel," where the annual banquet took place. Bro. Hallen laid covers for about fifty brethren, and the viands were of the choicest and most recherché kind. The W.M. proceeded with the toast list, first giving "The Queen and the Craft," followed by "The M.W. G.M. of England, his Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, K.G.;" "The M.W. Pro G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, the R.W. Deputy G.M. the Viscount Skelmersdale, and the Officers of the G. Lodge of England," Bro. Dr. W. Morgan then gave "The R.W. the Prov. G.M. for Monmouthshire, Bro. Colonel Charles Lyne;" and in doing so remarked that he had had the pleasure of knowing the P.G.M., and had watched his Masonic career ever since he entered Newport, and it must be very gratifying to him to find himself at the highest point in the province which it was possible to arrive. In the absence of Bro. Colonel Charles Lyne, P.G.M., this toast was responded to by Bro. Charles Rowe, P.G.S. "The W. the Deputy P.G.M. for Monmouthshire, Bro. Captain S. G. Homfray, and the rest of the Prov. G. L. Officers," was given by Bro. Richards, the S.W. The toast of the evening was "The W.M. 1429, Bro. James Horner, P.G.A.D.C. Mon," and was proposed in eulogistic terms by Bro. F. Orders. In the most enthusiastic manner the brethren acknowledged the toast, and the W.M. feelingly responded. The remaining toasts were the "Installing Master" (Bro. Orders), "The Masonic Charities," "The Visiting Brethren," "The W.M., Officers, and the Brethren of the Silurian Lodge," (to which Bro. Campbell, W.M., responded), "The Isca Lodge, and other Lodges of the Province," and "The Officers of the Albert Edward Prince of Wales Lodge." The Tylers toast brought to a termination a most harmoniously-spent evening.

BARNSELEY.—Friendly Lodge (No. 1513).—The celebration of the festival of St. John the Evangelist, and the installation of the Worshipful Master of the above-named lodge was held on Thursday, January 3rd, at the King's Head Hotel, when in the presence of a number of the Craft, Bro. W. Winsworth was duly installed as Master. The ceremony was very ably performed by Bro. G. Sykes, P.M. 290; supported by Bros. Braithwaite, P.M. 1513; Wood, P.M. 290; Farrar, P.M. 1592; Beauland, W.M. 1562; Slack, P.M. 919. The following brethren were appointed and invested as officers of the lodge for the ensuing year, viz.: Bro. Gratton, I.P.M.; Chambers, S.W. Morris, J.W.; Watson, Treas.; Massie, Sec.; Shepherd, S.D.; Alderson, J.D.; Nelson, I.G.; Horne and Whiteley, Stewards; Rogers, Tyler. A banquet in honour of the festival was afterwards held, about forty sitting down, amongst whom were visitors from Lodges, No. 55, 139, Sheffield; 29, Huddersfield; 306, Leeds; 910, Pontefract; 1492, Penistone. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and duly responded to; the enjoyment of the evening was much enhanced by some capital songs and music given by several of the brethren.

LIVERPOOL.—Marlborough Lodge (No. 1620).—The first installation meeting in connection with this suburban lodge, after its consecration, was held at the Derby Hall, Tuebrook, near Liverpool, on Wednesday afternoon, the 2nd inst. The lodge was duly opened by Bro. W. Woods, W.M., and amongst those in the lodge room during the afternoon and evening, were Bros. W. Pughe, S.W.; G. Lunt, J.W.; L. Bagnall, Treasurer; H. Hindle, Secretary; C. Tyrer, S.D.; G. Lunt, 1393, (who kindly undertook to act as Tyler pro tem.), J. A. Barrow, J. Asbury, C. J. Carr, R. Brown, W. King, A. F. Ingham, N. J. Pitts, T. Fletcher, jun., A. H. Carmichael, J. McFall, G. P. Getterton, W. E. G. Tisdale, H. T. Rourke, T. McCracken, W. Bulcock, C. Asbury, J. W. Wood, A. Thomas, J. W. Lightbound, W. Thomason, H. J. Blackburn, D. Gaudin, A. Preston, W. Brown, and A. Ashley. The visitors were Bros. J. W. Turley, P.P.G.J.D.; E. Ford, S.W. 1386; J. P. Bryan, 1035; J. Boyle, 823; R. Hargreaves, 1182; J. C. Salmon, 505; J. Barlow, 440; T. Carr, 1094; R. H. Evans, P.M. 292; W. C. Erwin, Sec. 1393; T. Sammons, W.M. 1392; W. J. Lunt, P.M. and Treasurer 823; J. Lilly, 1182; W. Wilson, P.M. 823; W. H. Hignett, 1547, and others. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, five brethren were passed to the degree of F.C. by the retiring W.M., (Bro. Woods), who afterwards installed Bro. Wm. Pughe as his successor in the chair of K.S., the presentation for that purpose having been made by Bros. P.M. Evans and P.M. Lunt. The following brethren were subsequently invested officers for the coming year, Bros. W. Woods, I.P.M.; T. Lunt, S.W.; H. Hindle, J.W.; Luke Bagnall, Treasurer; Henry Pitts, Secretary; C. Tyrer, S.D.; W. Thomason, J.D.; T. McCracken, I.G.; Wm. King, S.S.; H. Barrow, J.S.; P. C. Asbery, A.S. Several propositions for initiation and joining having been made, the lodge was duly closed, after the balance sheet had been passed, the brethren dined in the evening under the presidency of Bro. Pughe, W.M. About sixty brethren sat down, the excellent catering of Bro. Vines, P.G.D.C., giving the usual satisfaction. Several capital glees, songs, &c., were sung in good style by Bros. Barlow, 440, (Canada); C. Waterson, 1035; A. C. Forshaw, 1035; R. N. Hobart, 1505, and J. P. Bryan, 1035, 203, honorary Organist of the Marlborough. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. In responding to the "Provincial Grand Officers," Bro. W. G. Lunt said that although not a Present or Past Provincial Officer, he fully approved of the custom of honouring the Grand Officers on such occasions, and bore testimony to the urbanity and assiduity of the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale. "The Worshipful Master" was proposed by Bro. W. Woods, I.P.M., who expressed his gratification at the choice the lodge had made, and said that from his long personal observation he could testify to the careful attention given by Bro. Pughe to his Masonic duties. He was sure that the lodge would prosper under his government, and gave his assurance of hearty co-operation during the coming year. The W.M. in replying, thanked them for the great kindness which he had experienced from every one in the lodge since his connection with it, and expressed his determination to do all in his power to keep up the prestige of the lodge. The "Installing Master" was proposed by the W.M., who spoke to the hard work undergone by Bro. Woods in forming the lodge, and attending to its affairs during his year of office. He had much pleasure in presenting to him, on behalf of the brethren, a handsome tea and coffee service, as a small token of their esteem and gratitude. Bro. Woods replied in suitable terms, and said that he was heartily glad that the efforts of himself and other brethren had been successful in providing a proper house for Masonry in Tuebrook, and expressed his conviction that the Marlborough Lodge would go on and prosper. "The Visitors" was proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bro. Dr. Crawford, 680, and Bro. R. H. Evans, P.M. 292, in eloquent terms. "The Officers" followed, and the W.M. congratulated the lodge on possessing such a competent staff for the coming twelve months. Bro. George Lunt, S.W., and others acknowledged the toast. "The Charities" was responded to by Bro. John Jones, P.M. 216, who stated that at three meetings lately of Masons no less a sum than £20,000 had been subscribed by the brethren. The "Musical Brethren" was acknowledged by Bro. J. P. Bryan, 1035.

HAMPTON WICK.—Wolsey Lodge (No. 1656).—An emergency meeting of this new but most successful provincial lodge was held at the hostelry of Bro. Andrews, of the White Hart, on Saturday, the 5th inst., and which was, for an "off-night," very fairly attended. Amongst those present were Bros. W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Midx., P.M. 201, 2326, 1512, W.M.; B. Sharp, P.M. P.G.S. of Midx. S.W.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. of Midx., J.W. 1381, and acting J.W. (Freemason); the Rev. J. De Crespigny, P.P.G.C. of Midx., Chaplain, acting I.P.M.; T. Ockenden, S.D. 1512; Secretary; Forge, acting I.G.; Marvin, D.C.; and Scott, W.S. The W.M. had convened the meeting for the purpose of easing his agenda of business at the next regular lodge night, but his good intentions were partly frustrated by the non-attendance of several brethren and gentlemen who were down for raising, passing and initiation. The ballot having been successfully taken for the latter, the W.M. proceeded to initiate two out of the five present, namely, Messrs. Humphries, and Bicknell, (serving brother). He then passed Bros. Worthington and Murray, to the degree of M.M., the whole of the work being most carefully performed. A proposition for initiation having been taken, the lodge, after sitting upwards of three hours, was adjourned until the first Monday in the ensuing month. The visitors were Bros. Herbert Jones, 1326, Murphy, and Henry Jones, 1512. During the evening, the Secretary read the names of many brethren and others who had forwarded apologies for their non-attendance. There was no banquet, but the brethren partook of a slight refreshment. The only toasts were "The W.M.," and "The Initiates," the rest of the evening being devoted to conviviality.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—On Tuesday the 1st inst., the above pleasant and flourishing little lodge held one of its usual monthly meetings at Bro. West's house, the Three Crowns, Bro. W. Steele, W.M., in the chair, supported by the following officers: Bros. Manning, S.W.; Turner, J.W.; Plume, S.D.; Dr. Vance, J.D.; Lloyd, I.G.; and Thomas, who officiated for Bro. Steadman, O.G. The Past Masters present were Bros. J. Henderson, who is as well Sec.; and West, who is P.M. of lodges 1076, 1327, 1437, and P.P.G.S.D. Herts. The business before the lodge consisted of balloting for Mr. J. Geller, but although the result was favourable, unavoidable circumstances kept the candidate away. Bro. W. Pentney was then raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M. most impressively, and as usual, the working of the subordinate offices was perfect. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a dinner, served in Bro. West's best style. At refreshment the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to in the usual way among Masons, and the rest of the evening was spent most enjoyably.

INSTRUCTION.

THE EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1643).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, 4th inst., at the Mitre Hotel, Goulborne-road, Notting Hill. There were present Bros. Penn, W.M.; Crabb, S.W.; Smout, sen., J.W.; Spiegel, S.D.; Wood, J.D.; Luhtwitz, I.G.; Smout, jun., Secretary; Savage, P.M., Preceptor; Murles, P.M.; Tettenbrun, Woodmason, Whittaker, Dehane, Gabb, Hatton, and others. The ceremony of raising was then rehearsed, and Bro. Woodmason being the candidate, the lodge was resumed to the First Degree, and the First and Second Sections was then worked by Bro.

Savage, assisted by the brethren. The reply of Bro. Parkhouse, S.W., of the mother lodge, to the letter of sympathy, sent to him from this lodge of instruction, was then read, in which he expresses his grateful thanks to the brethren. A committee was then appointed to arrange the bye-laws of this lodge, consisting of Bros. Penn, W.M.; Murles, P.M.; Adkins, and Spiegel. The lodge will meet next Friday, at half-past seven, when Bro. Spiegel will occupy the chair, and promises not only to work the Three Degrees, but will also explain the Tracing Boards in the First and Second Degree.

Royal Arch.

LION AND LAMB CHAPTER (No. 192).—The January meeting of this chapter was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, on Wednesday last, the 16th inst. The officers and members present were Comps. F. D. R. Copestick, M.E.Z.; H. Birdseye, H.; T. C. Chapman, J.; George Phythian, P.S.; R. Pawson Hooton, W. E. Newton, Thomas Cohu, Francis Fellows, S.E.; George Kenning, Treas.; George Newman, P.Z.; James Lorkin, E. Benard, W. H. Brand, E. F. Storr, Wilson, Cox, Arkell, Ewins, C. Cann, Perry, and others. The visitors were Comps. W. Birdseye, H. Everett, and Forsyth, P.Z. Victoria Chapter. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. William Francis Darnell, of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192. It proving unanimous in his favour, he was duly exalted to the degree of Royal Arch. The installation of Principals and induction of officers was then proceeded with, under the able guidance of the veteran and much esteemed Comp. H. Muggidge, P.M., P.Z., &c., with the following result: Comps. H. Birdseye, M.E.Z.; T. C. Chapman, H.; R. P. Hooton, J.; George Kenning, Treas.; F. Fellows, S.E.; G. Phythian, S.N.; E. F. Storr, P.S.; C. B. Cheese, First A.S.; J. Lorkin, Second A.S. A P.Z. jewel was voted to Comp. F. D. R. Copestick. A satisfactory audit was declared for the year 1877, under the able management of the outgoing Z., Bro. F. D. R. Copestick. A banquet followed, the usual toasts being given and responded to.

BATH.—Tynte Chapter (No. 379).—A regular meeting was held on Tuesday, January 15th, at which there was no other business than the installation of Principals, who had previously been nominated. In the absence of the First Principal his chair was taken by Ex. Comp. Becket, P.Z.; that of H. by Ex. Comp. Watts; and that of J. by Ex. Comp. Dutton. The chapter was opened by them at 7.40. There were also present Past First Principals Reeves and Davis, and as visitors Col. Ford, P.Z. 53; Dr. Hopkins, P.Z. 328, 587, 710; Carey, Z. 41. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The new officers having been balloted for and unanimously elected, Ex. Comp. Dr. Hopkins installed Ex. Comps. Watts, as Z.; Dutton, as H.; and Loder, as J. Comp. Gore was appointed E.; Reeves, N. and Treas.; Becket, P. Soj.; and Gazzard, Janitor. A vote of thanks to the Installing Principal, for his assistance, was carried by acclamation. A long discussion ensued on matters connected with the chapter, and the proceedings were brought to a close at 9.30.

KIRKBY LONSDALE.—Bective Chapter (No. 1074).—The regular quarterly convocation of this chapter was held on Friday, the 11th inst., at one o'clock. In the unavoidable absence of the M.E.Z., Earl Bective, M.P., Prov. G. Supt., his chair was occupied by Ex. Comp. John Bowes, P.Z., Prov. G.S.N., supported by Ex. Comps. W. Dodd, P.Z., H.; Rev. Canon Ware as J.; Comps. Dr. Page, E.; R. Godfrey, N., acting P.S.; W. James, Dr. Waller, No. 2, S.C., and a goodly number of other companions. The chapter was opened by the Principals, when the members generally were admitted. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for three candidates, duly proposed, all of whom were unanimously accepted, and Bros. Waring, P.M., and Anderson being present were duly exalted. The thanks of the lodge having been accorded to the acting M.E.Z., and there being no further business it was closed with the usual solemnities.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Sculptor's Studio" in our next.
H. H.—We omitted the ritual technicalities purposely. We do not profess to publish them.

Owing to the pressure upon our columns this week the following reports stand over:—Lodges 13, 151, 209, 237, 379, 429, 469, 477, 586, 597, 663, 732, 1035, 1044.

The Christmas double number of the "Masonic Magazine" has reached us, and we notice contains, amid a mass of generally interesting reading, much that is especially attractive to members of the Craft. We have glanced at several of the articles, and note many that are both curious and pleasant in its well-stocked pages.—The Southampton Observer.

To meet the demand upon our space, an additional 4 pages has been included in this week's issue of "The Freemason," making it a 24-page paper.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

This Institution's Governors and Subscribers held their Quarterly Court on Saturday last, at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Lieut.-Col. Creaton, Vice-Patron. The Court was composed of Bros. Griffiths Smith, Raynham W. Stewart, A. H. Tattershall, James Morrell, John Faulkner, H. A. Dubois, W. F. C. Moutrie, Z. D. Berry, S. Rawson, Frederick Binckes, H. Massey (Freemason), John W. Dennison, J. A. Rucker, William Roebuck, the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, James Terry, Peter de Lande Long, W. Nicol, Dr. F. W. Ramsay, John Boyd, E. J. Barrow, Leopold Ruf, and Louis Hirsch. Bro. Robert W. Little (Secretary) was too unwell to be permitted by his medical adviser to leave home, and his place was filled by Bro. F. R. W. Hedges.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, the brethren declared eight vacancies in the School for the April election; and as the House Committee recommended, consequent upon the completion of the new buildings, the admission of ten extra children at the April election, a resolution was come to that the number to be eligible at the next Quarterly Court be eighteen. The number of children then in the Institution will be, including three admitted by purchase, 198.

One petition was deferred at the last meeting of the General Committee for further information. Several letters had since been received in answer to enquiries, and the brethren therefore put the case on the list.

Col. Creaton, upon the recommendation of the Building Committee, then moved, pursuant to notice, "That authority be given for the purchase of a slip of land adjoining the school." He said the object of the purchase was to give free space, the ground at that south-east corner of the premises being very much contracted. He believed there was a chance of having a larger piece of ground than that referred to in this motion, as he had seen one of the proprietors a few days ago, who promised that he would speak to his brother and see if the piece to be bought could not be increased. At present the piece was thirty-three yards, but he hoped they would be able to get double that. The price he would name in his motion was, not exceeding £100.

Bro. J. A. Rucker said, in seconding the motion, that the piece of land to be acquired would get rid of a very disagreeable elbow.

Col. Creaton added that the cost of the thirty-three yards would be about £35, but it was a most important thing for the Institution that they should get it.

The motion was carried.

Col. Creaton also moved, "That a wall be built from the new laundry to the end of the new grounds." The new piece of land just authorised to be purchased was an extension from the wall now standing beyond the new laundry. That wall went on to the end of the piece of land just referred to. The wall would cost about £250. It was very important they should have this wall, and the Building Committee having thought the matter over very seriously resolved to recommend to the Quarterly Court, that the wall should be built. In fact, it was a necessity.

Bro. Griffiths Smith seconded the motion.

Bro. John Symonds asked whether the wall was the partition from the surrounding grounds.

Col. Creaton said it was.

The motion was then put and carried.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart next moved, according to notice, "That a committee be appointed to consider the system of education which is pursued in the School, with a view of ascertaining whether any improvement can be effected." He said that in bringing this motion forward he was not casting any reflection on the House Committee, but he had heard numerous observations from many brethren that they were neglecting a very important duty to the children by not having sufficient attention paid to their domestic education, and too much to the elementary part of it. The brethren all knew that the poor girls in the Institution came from all classes, and they were educated in the school for a position far above that which many of them could expect or hope to be in at home. The Institution should educate them all for a position which they might all occupy—a domestic position. But in this school too much regard was paid to teaching the children geometry, Latin, French, German, dancing. By doing so they were unfitting them for domestic life, an education for which should be part of the system of the establishment. He simply asked for a committee of enquiry, as he was sure it would satisfy many brethren, and even if it did no good it could do no harm. He was satisfied of this, that if they attended more to the domestic education of the girls than to the higher education they would be able to take many more children into the school.

Bro. Dr. Ramsay seconded the motion, because he thought it might be advisable to have a discussion on the subject. It was quite clear that observations were made out of doors with reference to the system of education pursued at this Institution; and he gathered that those observations referred to the higher branches of education being given in preference to an education in domestic duties. Whether the fact was so or not, he did not know, but if it was, and there were observations to that effect, it was quite proper that the House Committee should arm themselves with the means to defend it; if it was not, then they should have the power to refute it; and either way put themselves forward as worthy of the hearty support of the Craft.

Bro. John Faulkner said he failed to see that the elementary part of the education was over-estimated at the school, or that it unfitted children for the performance of domestic duties. For his part, he thought the higher education children received, the more thoroughly it fitted them for domestic duties. He was of opinion that the brethren would find that those women who attended to their domestic duties the best were the women of the best educated classes. It was only the uneducated classes that did not attend to their domestic duties. Partial education prevented attention to domestic work. When he went to the Girls' School one week, he found some of the children cleaning their boots. This was not like what it was at some orphan asylums, where the children were less refined. He would like to see the girls taught laundry work, which he thought was very useful, and would not detract from any of the children's other education.

Col. Creaton said he could answer the question as to what domestic duties the children performed. In the first place, there were a certain number told off every week to go into the kitchen; a certain number were told off to go round with the matron every morning; and in addition to that, the girls made every stitch of their clothing; in fact, they did everything in the establishment except cleaning floors, carrying coals, and washing. They assisted in the household work, attended in the kitchen, and to the cooking. Of course they had no one to wait upon them in laying the tables; that they did themselves. They assisted at folding in the laundry, but they did not do the washhouse work.

Bro. John Symonds would only like to add his protest to Bro. Faulkner's against the idea that there was anything antagonistic in high education to attention to domestic duties. His own experience among people he knew was precisely the reverse. He found generally that if he visited a home presided over by a lady who was very well educated she attended to her domestic duties; but if he happened to visit a home where the lady was not well educated, domestic duties were not attended to. Bro. Stewart had laid down the principle that high education was antagonistic to domestic economy, and that it was palpable that those who were taught French and German, and Latin and geometry, would not attend to domestic duties. He heard him distinctly say so. He thought that was a motion which all the brethren should protest against. He was about to go further and say that if he went into a house where there was a lady at the head, educated in that style which prevailed when many of the brethren were younger, some years ago—that was, if she was imperfectly educated—he found her absorbed in notions about dress or how she should improve her own personal charms, or she was reading frivolous novels. The more highly educated a woman was the more she would attend to domestic duties. He would no more expect a daughter who was highly educated to neglect her domestic duties than he would expect a son who had received a high education to neglect his duties if he brought him up as a merchant. The idea that girls could be over-educated was exploded; we heard over and over again that with women it was so, but it was a fallacy, and the sooner it was thrown overboard the better.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford took up the same course of argument. He entirely disagreed with Bro. Raynham Stewart. His experience of the Masonic Girls' School was that there was no other school in England conducted on the same principle that met with the same success. The Freemasons in their schools had to deal with various classes of children; and the House Committee very wisely preferred to give them a maximum of education fitted to all the girls in the school. Whenever there was a variety of classes of girls got together it was a very signal proof of success if those girls were turned out capable of filling such situations as the girls from the Masonic Girls' School filled. He, for one, protested against a statement going forth that such an education as that given in this school unfitted the girls for domestic duties. Some of the brethren might remember a meeting held some years ago in a house on the other side of the street, when the late Grand Master, the Earl of Zetland, presided, and proposed the same thing that Bro. Stewart now proposed. Notwithstanding the views of the then Grand Master, the whole of the brethren present unanimously refused to adopt them, and they resolved to let the Girls' School go on in the way it was going on, giving satisfaction as it still did to the great body of the Craft.

Bro. Griffiths Smith said that Bro. Stewart had remarked that if they gave the girls a less education they would be able to take in more. Already the building had been increased, and they were now filling it up.

Bro. Stewart: We shall increase again, I suppose.

Bro. Griffiths Smith: That is a question of funds.

Bro. Stewart's motion was then put and lost.

Col. Creaton said he thought it better to state now than to have a meeting for the purpose of selling out funds that at the end of last year the funds at the bank were so low as to require accommodation from those gentlemen. It was only temporary. He had also to report that the new buildings were completed, the laundry also, and that work would commence on Monday. He also said that at the last Quarterly Court and election the room in which it was held was not nearly large enough, and that the next court would require to be held in a larger room.

After some conversation it was resolved to ask the Board of General Purposes to allow the use of the great hall for the purpose.

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Quarterly Meeting of this Institution's Governors and subscribers was held on Monday, in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John Symonds, V.P. and Trustee, presided, and there were also present Bros. S. Rawson, S. B. Wilson, F. Adlard, the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, Col. Creaton, Wm. Roebuck, H. Massey (Freemason), J. J.

Berry, R. B. Webster, John Mason, and F. Binckes, (Secretary).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, two cases which stood over for further information since last General Committee were taken, and the information having been obtained, one case was declared ineligible, and the other was placed on the list for next election.

The settlement of the list of candidates for that election was then taken, and on the subject being brought forward,

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., adverted to the point he mentioned at a former meeting, and read the following Law 56 of the Institution—"At the meetings of the General Committee in January and July the number of vacancies shall be ascertained and stated, due enquiries having been previously made by the Secretary of the several parties who have children on the list of candidates as to their own circumstances, and the eligibility of such candidates, the replies to such enquiries being officially reported to the General Committee."

The Chairman said that as this matter had been raised, and the Rev. Bro. Woodford had referred to the fact of the recommendation being required, this would be a convenient time to allude to what took place at a former Quarterly Court. It would be remembered that Bro. Woodford gave notice of a motion to confer upon the Quarterly Court the power of approving or rejecting candidates recommended by the General Committee, and was under the impression that Bro. Clabon had ruled that such power did not exist in the Quarterly Court. He (Bro. Symonds) at the time stated that he believed that Bro. Woodford was under some error, that he undertook to communicate with Bro. Clabon. This he had done, and he asked Bro. Clabon to be present at this meeting, if he could, and take the chair, in order that he might give his own explanation. Bro. Clabon had written to him that he would endeavour to do so, but as he had not come it was evident that business prevented him. He (Bro. Symonds) did not know that he need go into the matter fully, but Bro. Clabon's letter called attention to Law 57, which stated, "The names of candidates shall be approved and declared at the Quarterly General Court immediately preceding each election, and no candidate unless so approved shall be placed on the list for such election." He did not know how any of the brethren could say after such a law that it was imperative on a Quarterly Court to place candidates on the list for election if recommended, without taking the recommendation of the Committee. That, he thought was, what Bro. Clabon meant, and that must set the matter at rest. It did not only rest on the mere fact of the preceding law as read by Bro. Woodford just now that they recommended the cases; but here was a distinct statement of the law that the names of candidates should be approved at the Quarterly Court. "No candidates unless so approved"—that really could not mean that the functions of this court were merely ministerial, and that it was bound to put the candidates on.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford said he thought it very satisfactory that this had been made clear on the high authority of Bro. Clabon, because he had understood that Bro. Clabon, an old member, stated the rule of the Boys' School had been to accept the recommendation of the Committee as final, and the Quarterly Court had no power to reverse it.

Bro. W. Roebuck said it was so understood, but that had been shown to be wrong.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford—Now, however, it is clearly understood that there is a power in the Quarterly Court of rejection if they think fit.

On the motion of Bro. W. Roebuck, seconded by Bro. Col. Creaton, it was declared that thirty boys should be elected in April out of a list of seventy-eight.

The Chairman said there was one point he should like to refer to, and he thought the Committee would do well to give it some consideration. The point was whether after the improvements and additions to the Boys' School had been completed they could not endeavour to arrive at a rule to admit as nearly as possible the same number of candidates each half year. That was a rule at the St. Ann's and the London Orphan Asylum. They seldom varied more than one or two each half year, and the friends of the candidates could form some idea of the number of votes required. The difficulty in the Masonic Boys' School experienced by the friends of candidates when five or nine were to be elected was that a very large quantity of votes were required, and now they saw the result, for nine or ten boys who were among the candidates at last election were taken off the list on account of their being over age. If this Institution had a similar rule to the two institutions he had named probably these boys would now be enjoying the benefits of this school. If the brethren desired to admit twenty or twenty-five, or even fifteen at each election, the elections would be very much simplified, and it appeared to him that there would be really less disappointment. They might, perhaps, not always fill up the whole number of vacancies, and sometimes, perhaps, they might put in one or two more boys beyond the number of vacancies. By this means they would equalise the number to be admitted each time. It seemed to him to be for the interest of the candidates. Some ten boys were taken off last time, and at the next election there would be some who would not require to poll any at all. He did not wish to make a motion on the subject, but he merely threw it out as a suggestion for the brethren to consider whether after the alterations were completed they could not endeavour to get into a certain groove, to admit as far as possible a certain number at each election, and prevent those tremendous struggles which occasionally occurred at the elections.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford wished to know what the Chairman meant by saying that some candidates at next election would not require to poll any votes.

The Chairman said that so many candidates were to be admitted next time that some of those who were unsuccessful at last election polled a larger number than the minimum votes which would secure election next time, and therefore they would not require to add to what they got last time.

Col. Creaton could not see how a certain number of candidates were to be admitted each time. Suppose there were only six vacancies, and it was wanted to put in twenty candidates.

Bro. Binckes said that the age of sixteen was quite late enough to keep boys in the Institution.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford was afraid subscribers would not like to be restricted.

The Chairman said what he recommended was, that the General Committee, or some members on behalf of the General Committee, should ascertain the practice with regard to St. Ann's, the London Orphan, and the Idiot Asylum, and see how it worked in those institutions. The objection raised by Bro. Woodford of how the subscribers would like the restriction, was one deserving of very serious consideration. Still the subscribers to the institutions he had mentioned took no objection to it.

Col. Creaton said he observed by his voting papers in the London Orphan Asylum that there were about the same number—forty out of seventy-three.

The Chairman thought it would be desirable to ventilate this subject, and that Bro. Binckes should bring it before the General Committee to ascertain the practice of other institutions, and see whether some means might not be adopted whereby the number to be elected on each occasion might not be made more nearly equal than it was at present. When the number to be admitted was five out of sixty or seventy candidates the struggle was something fearful.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford said it was a most important question for our Institutions whether the term of subscription to a lodge was at present sufficient for brethren in and out of London. Masonry had got to such a position now that they might increase the maximum of subscription to a lodge. At present the time was five years, and that might be made up of portions of years spread over a great many years. Men in that position constantly got their children into the Schools, whilst others who had lived and died in Masonry could not get their children in. Five years were hardly a sufficient qualification.

Col. Creaton was very glad that Bro. Woodford had broached this subject. It was one that was worthy of grave consideration.

The Chairman said that these points when considered might be considered conjointly by committees of both Schools, that the same law might be applicable to both.

The subject then dropped.

On the motion of Bro. Roebuck, seconded by Bro. Col. Creaton, £1500 was voted for the new playground, the old one having been built upon in the formation of the new portion of the school.

The Chairman suggested that the Committee might take into consideration the advisability of having a swimming bath.

Bro. Binckes said this was a question again of money; but he thought that with the magnificent swimming baths at the Alexandra Palace the proprietors of that establishment would be happy to make terms with the Institution for the use of them. He thought that for £100 a year this could be done.

Col. Creaton referred to the subject of the abolition of the office of Collector, and wished to know whether there were not still large sums of money in annual subscriptions outstanding from 1877. He wished to know whether the change had answered.

Bro. Binckes had not gone thoroughly into the statistics. There was money still outstanding; but the annual subscriptions were much larger than hitherto; and the abolition of the office of Collector had proved a success.

The meeting then concluded with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

THE ANNUAL MASONIC BALL AT LIVERPOOL.

The Freemasons of "the good old town" of Liverpool held high festival on Tuesday evening, the 8th inst., at the Town Hall, when and where the 99th annual Grand Masonic Ball took place. The gathering had again the charm of charity to recommend it to the patronage of our fraternity, as assistance to the funds of West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution was once more the primary object of the "festive throng." The brotherhood in this division of the county are justly proud of the name and fame which their excellent Charitable Institution has gained throughout the length and breadth of the land, and the help given by its aid during the past year has been more valuable than ever. The value of the institution is clearly shown by the fact that at present nearly 100 children are on the foundation, educated entirely from its funds; and this number is steadily increasing from year to year, as the natural result of the marvellous progress which the Craft is making in this division of the county. The current expenses of education, amounting to about £1100 per annum, are now covered by the subscriptions of the brethren, the interest from the invested capital, the proceeds of the annual ball, and donations; and so liberally has the "West Lancashire" been supported by the brethren that there is now an accumulated capital of about £13,500, being a large increase as compared with last year. The special feature of this charity is that the whole of the scheme in connection with its working is carried out without a single farthing of expenditure, as all the officers gratuitously give their services in carrying out its objects, and they personally superintend the progress made by the children at the different schools in which they are placed, these schools being selected by their mothers or guardians. It is in contemplation to increase the benefits conferred by this excellent charity, in the direction of giving a helping hand to children when about to start in the world after leaving school; and there is little doubt that the enthusiastic support of the brethren will enable the committee to carry this scheme into effect when it has been sanctioned by the proper authority.

The ball was under the patronage of His Worship the Mayor and Mayoress of Liverpool, Lord and Lady Skelmersdale, Earl and Countess Bective, Major Starkie, Lord de Tabley, Hon. F. A. Stanley, Sir Gilbert and Lady Greenall, Lieut-Colonel N. Bousfield, M.P.; Captain Garnett, Sir James Ramsden, Lieut-Colonel Birchall, W. Rathbone, Esq., M.P.; Right Hon. Viscount Sandon, M.P.; J. Torr, Esq., M.P.; Colonel Ireland Blackburne, M.P.; and others. The executive committee consisted of Bros. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D. of C. (chairman); W. J. Lunt, P.Z., P.M. 823 (vice-chairman); J. McKune, P.Z., P.M. 216 (treasurer); and H. M. Molyneux, P.M. 823 (who again acted as M.C.). The important duties of honorary secretary were admirably fulfilled by Bro R. Martin, jun., I.P.M. 1182, who was indefatigable in his exertions to make the '78 ball a certain success. There were about 500 persons present, and the varied nature of the Masonic clothing worn by the brethren nearly every Order in Masonry being represented, gave a striking effect to the ballrooms. The great and small rooms were utilised for the purposes of dancing, which was carried on to the strains of Bro. G. W. Phillips' band. Supper was served in the luncheon and dining rooms of the Town Hall, the excellent catering of Bro. Fairhurst (Fisk and Fairhurst) giving great satisfaction; and amongst the "creature comforts" was a splendid baron of beef, which was the "observed of all observers."

Ireland.

The Provincial Grand Lodge, South-Eastern District, met at Clonmel on the 9th inst. The attendance of brethren from various lodges was very large. The Rt. Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Stephen Moore, D.L., M.P., occupied the chair. The routine business having been transacted, the officers for the year were duly installed. Bro. Milward, being absent, was not installed as Senior Grand Warden, but the Very Worshipful W. G. D. Goff, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, acted in his place. Bro. W. H. Constable was installed as Junior Grand Warden, Bros. Waugh and Sunderland, No. 32, being Grand Senior Deacon and Grand Inner Guard; Bro. J. E. Murphy, 5, Prov. Grand Treas.; and Bro. DeRenzy, 297, as Prov. Grand Sec. The Grand Master then proceeded, according to resolution, to present their late honoured Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Sir John Keane, Bart., D.L., with a gold P.G.M. jewel and a beautifully illuminated address (the work of Mr. Mullaby, of Waterford), handsomely framed the design embracing many Masonic insignia, having Corinthian and Doric pillars upon each side, wreathed with a ribbon bearing the names of the various Lodges in the Province, the "All-seeing Eye" being at the top. Underneath are fully emblazoned the arms of Bro. Sir John Keane (taken from a wonderfully preserved old parchment, with a genealogy of the family written in Irish and English), also the open Bible, with compass, square, &c.—all being richly encircled with wreaths of flowers, scrolls, &c. The address, which was prefaced by the Provincial Grand Master with some appropriate remarks, in his usual graceful and happy style, was in the following terms:—

"At the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, South-Eastern District, held in Carlow, April, 1877, it was unanimously resolved that the lodge, having learned with great regret that Bro. Sir John H. Keane, Bart., has resigned the office of Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, which he has held since its formation, desires to place on record its deep sense of the obligation due to him for the Masonic manner in which he discharged the duties of this office, ever faithfully attending, and generally presiding, at its meetings, often at much personal inconvenience—thus evincing his interest in our Order, and always endeavouring to promote its prosperity and harmony.—Signed on behalf of the Provincial Grand Lodge,

"STEPHEN MOORE, P.G.M."

Bro. Sir John Keane, who was saluted with warm applause, then replied as follows:—

Right Worshipful Sir and Brethren,—I ask you to accept my deep and sincere thanks for the resolution so kindly passed at the Provincial Quarterly Meeting held in Carlow in April, expressing "its sense of the obligation due to me for the Masonic manner in which I have discharged the duties of Past Grand Master, in faithfully attending and generally presiding at its meetings." I feel, brethren, that this expression of the P.G. Lodge is over indulgent towards myself, conscious as I am of the many shortcomings in the manner of my carrying out the duties of the high office entrusted to my care by our late Most Worshipful Grand Master more than ten years back, and continued by his successor. Still I have endeavoured to carry out those duties according to the gifts and lights that I have received; but imperfectly performed even as they were, they could not have been gone through without the hearty and frankly tendered co-operation of the brethren of the district—brethren, in many instances, of far more Masonic knowledge, zeal, and experience than myself. In bidding you an official farewell, I feel a consolation in being succeeded by a brother whose private and Masonic character is "without fear and without reproach," and in whose judicious hands I pray that this district, which I have had the great honour of forming, may go on and prosper, the brethren thereof never forgetting to dwell together in peace, love, and harmony. |

An address was also read, and is to be presented to Bro. Abraham Denny, Waterford, at next provincial meeting there, the lodge expressing regret for his indisposition.

About thirty-six of the brethren then adjourned to refreshment, and enjoyed a delightful evening, receiving the proverbial hospitality of Lodge 44, Bros. Fienell, Fitzgerald, and Bradley being as indefatigable as ever in their attention to their guests. A large collection was taken up for the Masonic Orphan Schools—the meeting, all through, carrying out the old Masonic motto of "Peace, love, and charity."—Clonmel Chronicle.

Public Amusements.

COVENT GARDEN.—The entertainment provided by Bro. C. Rice at this house for the special edification of our little ones far surpasses any other for good songs, excellent dancing, and superb scenery, that we have witnessed this season. The march of the three hundred is in itself enough to make the piece—"Puss in Boots"—a glorious success. Those who have been to Covent Garden Theatre will endorse our opinion, and those who have not have yet to see, if they take our advice, the most finished and gorgeous of all the Christmas spectacles.

NEW ROYALTY.—"La Marjolaine" still runs at this theatre, and if good houses can testify to a success, this play is undoubtedly one. Miss Kate Santley has, perhaps, more admirers off the stage than any other lady in her line in the profession. That she has fairly earned this popularity none but the envious will question, nor that she fully sustains, in "La Marjolaine," her right to popular suffrage. The opera is now preceded by a comédietta by Mr. Rac, entitled "Love's Alarms," in which Mr. Lionel Brough contrives to keep the majority of the audience in one continuous roar of laughter.

THE LATE KING OF ITALY.

The second edition of the British Medical Journal contains the following telegram from its Roman Correspondent:—

"The following is a brief epitome of the course of the late King's illness:—The King had been slightly indisposed for 14 days, the symptoms at first being, however, only of an indistinct character. The main symptoms of which he complained at the outset were those of cold, shivering, and pains chiefly located at the right side of the chest. During the night of Saturday he had exposed himself at an open window, and was seized at noon on Sunday with severe shivering and acute and obviously pleuritic pain, for which he was bled to a slight amount. On the same evening, Dr. Baccelli, a physician specially known for recent researches on the subject of the diagnosis and treatment of pleuritic effusions and accompanying inflammations, saw him in consultation. He found considerable dulness over the right lung, indicating a complication of pneumonia. The King was bled again next morning, and his other treatment consisted mainly in the administration of quinine in small doses and tartarized antimony. On Monday high fever set in, with profuse sweating; the heart was dilated, and its action weak. On Tuesday the same symptoms continued in an aggravated form, and on that evening there was a notable exacerbation of fever, together with a military eruption of bad omen. On Wednesday morning His Majesty was obviously sinking, and had become so weak that the pulse could scarcely be felt. Oxygen inhalations were then employed, and these produced a temporary rally; but the effect was only temporary, and the King died in collapse at half-past two."

CAPITULAR FREEMASONRY.—The next meeting of the Prudent Brethren Chapter, No. 145, held at Freemasons' Hall, will take place on Tuesday, February 12, 1878, on which occasion, as there will be no exaltation, the work will consist of lectures, sections, and illustrations appertaining to Royal Arch Masonry. Those companions who were present at the former public night given by this chapter will no doubt avail themselves of the privilege of attending. Those who may have been prevented upon that occasion, we strongly advise to avail themselves of this. The chapter will be open to all R.A. companions properly vouched for. We hope to give further particulars in our next.

We have received the following notice of an instruction meeting which we deem worthy of re-production:—"New Cross to wit.—To all members of our Order to whom these presents may come. Whereas our trusty and well-beloved Bro. John Shaw, P.M. 79, &c., assisted by fifteen well-known and learned members of the Craft, will work the Fifteen Sections, in the Star Lodge of Instruction, 1275. These are therefore to command you to appear at our said lodge, on Saturday, the 26th day of January, 1878, at seven o'clock in the afternoon, at the Marquis of Granby Tavern, New Cross Road, and then and there to help, aid, and assist in the working of the said Fifteen Sections, and herein fail not at your peril. Given under our hands and seal this 29th day of December, 1877.—H. Keeble and A. B. Church, Honorary Secretaries."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Multitudes suffering under a complication of disorders might obtain relief through these healing and purifying remedies, which should be employed without a day's delay. When the weather is variable and colds and influenzas are prevalent, this Ointment, well rubbed upon the throat and chest, gives the greatest ease, and checks all tendency to inflammation in the lungs and other organs. The Pills assist the curative action of the Ointment, inasmuch as they purify the blood and so quicken the circulation that congestion is rendered almost impossible. Holloway's treatment deals most successfully, too, with that very troublesome and often tedious ailment, indigestion, which is the bane of thousands from overwork and fast living in the present day.—Asst.

Obituary.

BRO. THE RIGHT HON. GEORGE WM. BARON KINNAIRD AND ROSSIE, K.T.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of the Right Hon. Geo. Wm. Baron Kinnaird and Rossie, K.T., which took place at his residence, Rossie Priory, Perthshire, on the 7th inst. Bro. Lord Kinnaird held the office of Provincial Grand Master, Perthshire East, for 50 years, the date of his appointment being November, 1827. He was grand Master Mason of Scotland for two years; and in that capacity laid the foundation stone of a new harbour at Dundee. In the same capacity his lordship presented to King William IV. the address to His Majesty expressing the abhorrence the Grand Lodge viewed the atrocious attack that had been made upon his sacred Majesty.

The death of Lord Kinnaird, the ninth holder of the peerage, which dates from 1682, is an event to be regretted by temperance reformers; for though he had completed his 70th year he had not ceased to take a lively intelligent interest in public affairs, and in actions of a temperance character. It was he who brought in the Scottish Public-house Bill of 1853, and whose name, and not Mr. Forbes Mackenzie's, ought to have been popularly associated with it as its author. On several occasions, and very recently, his lordship warmly descanted on the evils of the liquor traffic; and his vote in the Lords might have been counted upon (as that of his brother, who succeeds him, has been in the Commons) had the Permissive Bill reached the Upper House in his lifetime. His fellow peers who survive him may wisely emulate his useful and honourable career.

Lord Kinnaird was buried in the old churchyard of Rossie, about half a mile from the Priory, on Saturday afternoon, and his remains were followed to the grave by between five and six hundred persons of all ranks and conditions. The burial service was conducted by the Bishop of Brechin. Lady Kinnaird with her grandson walked next the coffin the whole way. Among those present were the successors to the title; the Hon. Miss Kinnaird, sister of the deceased, the Hon. Ashley Ponsonby, Lady Kinnaird's brother, Lord and Lady De Mauley, Colonel Ogilvy, (son-in-law of the deceased), Admiral Sir James Hope (brother-in-law), Admiral Low Lanerton, the Earl of Mansfield, the Hon. Waldegrave Leslie, Sir John Ogilvy, Mr. Baxter, M.P., Mr. Yeaman, M.P., &c. Deputations attended from the neighbouring town councils and from societies and associations in which his lordship was interested.

BRO. C. W. DOYLE.

As we briefly announced last week, Bro. William Doyle, P.P.G.J.D. of West Lancashire died ~~some~~ ^{on} Saturday, the 5th inst., and the news of his death gave keen grief to a large circle of Masonic friends, who, knowing his undoubted worth, valued him very highly. He was taken suddenly ill on the previous Wednesday night, and died from the result of erysipelas in the head. Bro. Doyle held many distinguished Masonic positions, and was universally admired and valued by all who knew him, both within and without the circle of Masonry. He had been connected with Masonry for 16 years, and at the time of his death he was P.P.G.J.D. of West Lancashire, P.M. and Treasurer of the Alliance Lodge, No. 667 (having filled the latter position for seven years), one of the committee of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, P.Z. of the Mariners' Chapter, No. 249, P.E.C. of the order of Knights Templar, P.S. of the Red Cross Order, besides holding office in Mark Masonry, Rose Croix, and Rosicrucian order. Bro. Doyle also took a warm interest in all the Masonic charities, and did his best to increase their usefulness and benefit their position.

The mortal remains of our much lamented brother were consigned to their last resting place in the Necropolis, Liverpool, on Tuesday morning, the 8th inst., and the universal feeling of regret for this sudden loss to the fraternity in this division of the county was shown by the largest attendance of brethren seen in Liverpool since the funeral of the late Bro. Captain Mott. A "funeral lodge" of the Alliance Lodge, No. 667 (of which the deceased was an esteemed P.M. and Treasurer), was opened at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, at half-past nine o'clock, and here there was the specially solemn Masonic ceremony, which is used on the occasion of the death of members of the fraternity. There were upwards of 150 brethren present, and the most affecting ceremony created a deep impression on all who were present. Bro. G. S. Willing, W.M. of the lodge, was in the chair, and amongst the officers of the lodge present were Bros. J. E. Jackson, I.P.M.; T. Ockleshaw, P.M.; G. A. W. Phillips, P.M.; J. E. Skillicorn, P.M.; W. Witter, P.M.; A. Winkup, P.M.; J. Bolton, P.M.; J. Dewaynes, P.M.; W. C. Bulman, P.M.; J. Ellis, S.W. (W.M. elect); H. Firth, J.W.; J. H. Gregory, Sec.; T. Peake, S.D.; D. Lloyd, J.D.; A. Bucknall, I.G.; T. Yeatman, Org.; and J. E. Grant, J.S. There were altogether about 250 Masons present at the funeral, and the crowd at the Necropolis must have numbered upwards of 500. Amongst those who thus paid their last tribute of respect to the deceased were Mr. W. Jones (nephew), Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; Dr. M'George, P.G. Registrar; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; W. Vines, P.G.D.C.; W. Vines, P.G.D.C.; G. Turner, P.G. Treas.; S. E. Ibbes, P.P.G. St. B.; B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B.; H. Pearson, P.G.S.; J. Skeaf, P.G. Org.; R. Brown, P.M. 241; James Shelly, 673 and 505; R. Martin, P.M. 1182; H. Nelson, P.M. 673; W. T. May, P.M. 673; J. T. Callow, P.M. 1505; M. Hart, P.M. 1502; W. J. Chapman, W.M. 1609; the Rev. J. R. Jenkins, S.W. 216; T. Clark, P.M. 673; H. M. Molyneux, P.M. 823; W. J. Lunt, P.M. 853; T. Evans, P.M. 1570; A. Morrison, W.M. 1570; Mr.

Corless, P.M. 594; R. P. France, P.M. 594; H. Burrows, W.M. 673; T. Shaw, P.M. 823; T. Bond, 667; P. B. Gee, P.M. 1264; W. Pughe, W.M. 1620; C. Campion, 1609; H. Eve, 667; J. Lecomber, W.M. 594; S. Bushnell, 667; W. Gamble, 249; J. Milner, 594; P. Maddox S. Prince, Maccabe, T. Berry, P.M. 155; A. Woolrich, J.W. 1356; T. Joseph, 249; W. Coates, 1609; T. Roberts, P.M. 673; H. Gill, S.S. 1086; R. G. Hudson, Peter Hudson, J. W. Edginton, P.M. 1182; R. Folds, 667; L. Bagnall, Treas., 1620; E. O. C. Rothwell, P.M. 1356; T. Sheen, J.W. 247; J. Gallagher, P.M. 1011 (E. L.); J. G. Jacob, 202; S. Millikin, 823; J. O. Rea, I.G. 1182; I. Jacob, J. Tabley, 594, &c. The appropriate anthem in the lodge room in Hope-street was most impressively rendered by Bros. Busfield, Yeatman, Child and Queen. Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., presiding at the organ. The brethren were conveyed in thirty cabs and private vehicles to the late residence of the deceased, and from thence the cortege proceeded by way of London-road, Moss-street, and Brunswick-road to the Necropolis. The funeral service and special Masonic prayers were read in the chapel and at the side of the grave by Bro. the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, acting Chaplain; and the special exhortation to the large assembly of brethren was delivered with great effectiveness by Bro. G. S. Willings, W.M. of the deceased's lodge, after which many of the brethren threw sprigs of acacia into the grave. Bro. W. T. May, P.M., acted as M.C., and all the arrangements were very satisfactorily carried out under his direction. The coffin was of polished oak, and bore the simple inscription—"William Doyle, aged 50 years; died Jan. 5, 1878." The funeral was conducted by Mr. D. Busby.

ORDER OF HIGH PRIESTHOOD.

The annual council of the "Tabernacle of Concord," in connection with this degree, by order of the Venerable President, R. Brown, was held at the Compton Hotel, Church-street, Liverpool, on Friday, the 4th inst., for the installation of Presidents, investiture of officers, and consecration of all approved candidates whom the brethren may introduce. Bro. the Rev. C. R. Hyde, D.D., was then installed V.P. for the current year, Bro. Joseph Bell, Second P.P., and Bro. W. J. Thomson, Third P.P., the ceremony being performed by the V.P.P.'s Brown and Clark. Nine candidates were afterwards admitted into the Order by the V.P., and other officers. Bro. Bell was afterwards duly elected V.P. for the ensuing year, Bros. Thomson, Second P.P.; J. C. Lunt, Third P.P.; T. Clark, P.V.P., Treasurer; Brackenbury, Recorder; and A. Woolrich, J.W. After the usual business, an ~~amount~~ ^{sum} was made to the V.P. a life governor of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. Besides those already named there were present Bros. J. Wood (Freemason), I. Roberts, W. Morris, J. Keet, E. Carter, J. Buckley, G. D. Fleming, J. Atkinson, R. E. Milton, J. Armstrong, W. Whiteside, J. Normanton, R. Black, Archdeacon, T. Hugo, J. Seddon, R. W. Barnes, A. Bucknall, W. T. May, and H. Burrows.

R.M.I.B. OLD SCHOLARS' REUNION.

Some of the members of this club dined together at the Hercules, Leadenhall-street, on the 12th December, the chair being taken by Rev. Dr. Morris (Head Master of the School, and President of the Reunion). The chief toast of the evening was "Prosperity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and success to the Reunion." A vote of thanks having been passed to Mr. Maidwell, (proprietor of the Hercules), for the able way in which the dinner was served, the evening concluded with music, recitations, &c.

A Copenhagen correspondent of the Sunday Times, writing on the 7th inst., says:—The annual grand festival of the Danish Freemasons was celebrated on Saturday, when the Crown Prince was re-elected Grand Master. In the evening about 400 brethren assembled to a very brilliant banquet in the large hall of the Grand Lodge. The Crown Prince, who presided, was enthusiastically received by the brethren. He was supported by his uncle, Prince John of Glücksburg, the Swedish Minister, Baron Beck-Friis, and all the dignitaries of the Craft. A special collection was, at the desire of the Crown Prince, made in favour of the widow of one of the brethren, who a few days ago lost his life in the attempt to save another person who had fallen through the ice. A very handsome amount was obtained.

SEAMEN'S HOSPITAL (DREADNOUGHT), GREENWICH.—A quarterly general court of this corporation was held on Friday last, Captain the Hon. F. Maude, R.N., in the chair. Amongst other gentlemen present were the following—Mr. Joseph Moore, Mr. Frederick Cleeve, C.B., Admiral Sir Claude Buckle, K.C.B., Mr. W. Toller, and Captain Vincent Budd. It was reported that 540 seamen had been admitted as in-patients to the hospital during the past quarter from British and foreign ships, of which number 104 came from London, 40 from Liverpool, 25 from Glasgow, 17 each from Hull and Newcastle, 16 from Shields, and 179 from the other ports of Great Britain and Ireland. From foreign ships there were admitted 142 sailors, of whom 17 came from Germany. From the statement of income and expenditure for the year 1877, which was read by the secretary, it appears the society commenced the new year with a debt of £1,595 6s., and an urgent appeal for increased support was made by the chairman.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

Another Pompeii has been unearthed in Southern Italy—the ancient Greek colony of Sipuntum, in the neighbourhood of Manfredonia, on the Adriatic coast, about 140 miles north-north-west of Brindisi, in the low-lying ground which stretches from the foot of Mount Gargano to the sea. Its disappearance was not due to an overwhelming shower of ashes, or to burning streams of lava, but simply to the sinking of the site on which the city stood owing to successive earthquakes, which covered its streets and buildings in tufa and soft clay for some six centuries. A temple of Diana and a Necropolis are the chief remains unearthed at present, and a portion of the inscriptions and the most interesting objects have been deposited in the Naples Museum.

A CENTENARIAN.—Mrs. Mary Burfield, the widow of an Excise officer, has just died at Colchester, aged 100 years last June. She had been a widow for 53 years, her husband having died at Hadleigh, Suffolk, in the year 1824. Of her 12 children only two survive her. She retained full possession of her faculties to the last.

Herr Wagner's Musical Academy at Bayreuth, where students were to be trained for the interpretation of the Music of the Future, will not be opened for the present, as the composer declares "the times are unpropitious for such an experiment."

BOSTAL HEATH.—The Metropolitan Board of Works have taken formal possession of this newly-acquired open space of the metropolis by placing an officer in charge of the common. It is situated in the extreme south-eastern suburb of London and is one of the most beautiful spots of Kent.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—The Baroness Burdett-Coutts has, on election as an Associate of the Royal Historical Society, made the library of the institution a magnificent present of books, including the publications of the Camden Society.

THE NEW IMPERIAL ORDER.—The Queen has created a new Order of Distinction, called "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," for the princesses of her Royal House, the wives, or other female relatives of Indian princes and others, to be selected by the Crown. The 1st of January is to be its anniversary, and the Kings and Queens Regnant of England are to be its Sovereigns. Her Majesty has conferred it upon all her daughters and daughters-in-law, and twenty-nine other ladies, including several members of the highest nobility.

THE RHINE FISHERIES.—The ~~contract~~ ^{newly} come into force. The States mentioned agree to issue similar laws with regard to fisheries, and to further in every possible way the maintenance and increase of the valuable species of fish both in the Rhine and in the Lake of Constance. The contract has been signed for the space of ten years, and the participation of the other Rhenish States is much desired.—Nature.

THE HARVEST OF THE SEA.—The recently issued report of the Fishery Board of Scotland is a most interesting document. We learn, in spite of the stormy and unfavourable character of the weather, that the herring season on the whole is a better one than last year's, though still under an average. The entire "take" of herrings over the whole Scottish seaboard during the year was about 7,000,000 barrels; the quantity cured being slightly about 598,000 barrels, or about 345,000 barrels under the quantity cured in the previous year. The loss of life this year, notwithstanding the exceptionally rough weather, has been greatly under the average, and includes one man on the Caithness coast, one at Hemsdale, two on the Aberdeenshire coast, and one further south—in all, five. Last year by one storm upwards of 40 men were drowned. The destruction of boats and nets by the storms this year has been greater than usual. There seems no reason to retract formerly expressed convictions that, with favourable weather, the Scottish herring industry will every year yield fish to the value of from a million to a million and a half sterling, and that the chief drawback to its maintenance is the want of suitable harbours in localities where the herrings appear in enormous shoals, but where the districts are unable to provide the whole of the funds necessary for the required harbourage.—Fishing Gazette.

SHELL FISH IN 1675.—We have received from a correspondent a curious old bill rendered in the reign of Charles II. to Mr. Walter Tucker, the Mayor of Lyme, in Dorset. It was on the occasion of his entertaining the Judges on their Assize visit. The items are:—Thirty lobsters, £1 10s.; six crabs, 6s.; 100 scallops, 5s.; 400 oysters, 4s.; 50 oranges, 2s. This seems rather an odd bill of fare. That the Judges were supposed to be partial to shell fish seems evident, but why in name of all that is indigestible should oranges go with crabs and lobsters? It might be worthy of note if the sentences could be found which the Judges passed on the culprits after such a supper.—Meat and Provision Trades Review.

THE INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Mr. John Frederic Bateman, the newly-elected president of this influential body, delivered an inaugural address on Tuesday last, the 15th inst. From a recently printed list it appears that the numbers of the several classes now constituting the institution are as follow:—979 members 1701 associates, and 16 honorary members—together 2696, while there are 493 students attached. Thirty years ago, when the institution had been established 30 years, the aggregate number of different classes was only 551.

It is stated that Staff-Captain David N. Welch, of the Royal Yacht "Alberta," is shortly to retire, and that he will be succeeded by Staff-Captain Alfred Balliston, at present in command of the "Elin."—Broad Arrow.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1878.

THE LAST QUARTERLY COURT OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

The meeting which took place last Saturday was numerous and influentially attended, and we commend our careful report of it elsewhere to the notice of all our readers. For two points in it demand special attention. The one, is the welcome announcement of the respected Chairman, Bro. Col. Creaton, that eighteen girls will be elected at the next election, bringing the number in the School up to the total of 198, a very remarkable and interesting fact in itself, and one likely to prove most welcome and acceptable to the subscribers, though it necessarily calls for increased exertions, on behalf of that most needful and well conducted Institution, the Girls' School. The second point is most important in itself—viz. the, discussion which took place on Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion to appoint a committee to enquire into the present system of education in the Girls' School. But though inspection and investigation as to "results" are always needful and advisable in all scholastic establishments and work, be they what they may, it appears to us that Bro. Raynham Stewart prevented any brethren from deliberately supporting his motion, by the arguments which he made use of. We may observe, that Bro. Dr. Ramsay only seconded the motion, pro forma, to allow of discussion on a question so vital in itself, and so bound up with the best interests of the School. Bro. Raynham Stewart argued that the present education given "unfitted" the girls for their after duties in life, and also that this "over education," as he termed it, rendered them unlikely to attend to laborious occupations. As regards the first argument, it is it involves both a petitio principii. So far from the Girls' School being an educational orphan for the "battle of life," having failed, it is well known, as a fact, to many for whom we write, that the girls who come out of our School have no difficulty in placing themselves, and how well they fill the situations in which they are placed, and how very successful as an Educational Institution, our Girls' School has been, and is, at this very hour. Indeed, it may be fairly said, as it will be conceded by all "experts," that our Girls' School is "unique" in England, if not in the world, both in its organization, its work, and its outcome. We know of none like it, we have yet to be told of any which surpasses it. For it is bear in mind, "sui generis." It has to deal with children of contrasted classes, and different positions in the social scale, and it is no little to the credit of the Committee that it has endeavoured to find a standard of education suitable for all, while it in no way ignores either peculiar claims, or prevailing aptitude in the scholars. If there be an educational institution which seems to be doing its work properly and thoroughly, it is our Masonic Girls' School. In the second place, the theory that education prevents persons doing rougher work is an exploded fallacy, worthy of the dark ages, and which we did not expect to hear reproduced by Bro. Raynham Stewart in 1878. We had hoped, we had driven away that old ghost of effete superstition, that bugbear of crass ignorance for ever, and we cannot but deeply lament to witness its reappearance, even among Freemasons. The answer to it is very simple. The cry of all departments of industry now is for skilled labour. Some of the acutest intellects we have ever known, pointed out years ago, that skilled labour must eventually drive out unskilled labour, inasmuch as work was better done by educated than by uneducated workmen. The standard of education has been, happily, rising and still is in this country, and as Freemasons, we are ever favourable to light and knowledge. Are we then to refuse to girls what we give to boys? Are we to advance the education of the one, and keep back the education of the other? Certainly not; we cannot do so either in fairness or propriety. And therefore we also dismiss Bro. Raynham Stewart's second point, as being equally fallacious with the former. But as a fact, the theory that in our Girls' School they do not attend to domestic duties is entirely a mistaken one. No doubt great attention is properly paid to their educational acquirements, but they make their own clothes, they are proficient in needlework, they make clothes to order, and all the girls successively take part in the kitchen work, &c. It can therefore in no sense be said that the education in our Girl's School is either unpractical or too elaborate. We therefore regret that Bro. Raynham Stewart should before the Craft have used any words which should seem to say that a work which has been and is a signal success, should in any way be supposed to be a failure. On one point we wish to say a word further. We are all probably agreed that in the abstract that cookery is a very important branch of feminine education and ought to be carefully attended to. We would therefore suggest to the House Committee, (a suggestion which we know they will take in good part), that they should place themselves in communication with the directors of the School of Cookery at Kensington, and so give our girls the benefit of instruction by a qualified cook regularly and systematically. The House Committee of the Girls' School are always ready to listen to practical suggestions, and we feel sure, that no difficulties will occur on their part, or indeed of any one else connected with the School. In this sense perhaps the recent discussion may have done good, as it will serve to shew how very unfounded are the complaints made by some, how avers the Quarterly Court properly is to needless changes, and above all how unanimous a support the House Committee will receive from the subscribers in their arduous responsibilities. For the Girls' School administration has solved that most serious problem, a good, practical, common-sense education, and remembering its past work, realising its present efficiency, and looking on to its future development, its supporters will again determine, as of old, to "leave well alone," and uphold its prosperity.

CHARITABLE ADMINISTRATION.

It is always an invidious and unwelcome duty for Masonic journalists to find fault with the words of their brethren, or to comment upon any honest expression of opinion or complaint, and, therefore, we feel sure that in what we are now about to say, we will be credited by our readers when we assert, that we speak with all regret and with all reserve, at the same time, that our utterances are marked, we hope, by all of Masonic honesty, friendliness, and courtesy. We are among those who much regret the words spoken by our esteemed P.G.C., Bro. R. J. Simpson, at the recent consecration of the Temple Bar Lodge, as we venture to deem them neither 'given forth at a "convenient season," nor, to say the truth, quite fair to the brethren of our Order. We are about to celebrate the first anniversary of our Masonic Charities for 1878, and all of a sudden we are told in most emphatic words by a Past Grand Chaplain of our Order that in "all" our charitable associations there is "jobbery," (without any exception, be it noted), and that there is "great scope for reform in the mode of election to the charities." Thus it will be seen that our worthy Bro. Simpson includes even our Masonic charities in this most sweeping charge. We quite agree with Bro Binckes, that such a scene and time were not the proper place to ventilate such opinions, they ought to be brought forward calmly and dispassionately in a proper court. They cannot be seriously discussed in the heated sentimentality of a banquet, they demand the more tranquil and sober treatment of a business meeting. But we have another "bone to pick" with our good Bro. R. J. Simpson. The fact, if a fact, is a most alarming one, as regards our many great and noble charitable institutions, and we beg to doubt it altogether. But as regards our Masonic Institutions, we are in a position to say, that any such allegation is as unwise as it is unfounded. Bro. Simpson is a zealous member of the Charitable Reform Association, and in this strong language, (which we believe he uses sincerely) is riding one of their many "hobbies" to death, for it but represents his own view of the grave question of interchange of votes, which is one of the alleged grievances, and such a "moot point" cannot be settled by infallible dogmata, or burning denunciation. At any rate let us keep clear of Masonic popes and Masonic infallibility; popes and infallibility have done enough mischief in the world and we will not have them imported into Freemasonry. For as we have often said before, we hold the interchange of votes to be perfectly proper, in every sense, and shall always be prepared to uphold it in any fair discussion. But we do object to have our mouths shut, so to say, ourselves "rolled over" by the assertion of "a petitio principii," the assumption, the dogmata of an infallible correctness. After an experience of years in our Masonic charitable elections, we are quite able to say that any charge of "jobbery" as against them, is an entire delusion. A correspondent calls attention to a case which clearly proves that the theory which asserts that a committee necessarily selects candidates better than the subscribers, is, as we have always contended, not the case. In this case, acting under external pressure, the general committee actually committed a breach of the laws of the Institution. We hold therefore, that the proposals of the Charitable Reform Association, are a complete mistake in this respect, and will lead inevitably to greater abuses, to greater jobbery, the hurtful pressure of private influence, than any we ever know of in our present honest form of open voting. We trust that on reconsideration, Bro. Simpson may be induced to withdraw words hastily spoken, and not in our opinion to be justified, especially as regards our Masonic Charities, and that he will prove, that when a Mason has made a mistake, the next best thing he can do, is to own it at once, manfully and straightforwardly.

ONE OF THE GREATEST HINDRANCES TO MASONIC LITERATURE.

There are many hindrances just now in the way of Masonic literature, but the greatest of all, in our humble opinion, is the personality in which Masonic writers so often think well to indulge themselves. It is quite melancholy indeed often to note the tone and the temper, with which some writers approach things Masonic. It is beyond measure hurtful to us all to realize the "animus" of some who set up to be "Didaskaloi" teachers of their brethren. Even the most careless cannot fail to be struck with the bad taste and heartless acerbity with which some "anonymous scribblers" set to work to attack some defenceless brother, and to infuse into the pages of a Masonic paper, the license of outrageous personality, or the baneful extravagance of hostile vulgarity. We published in our last Freemason a timely protest against cowardly Masonic slander in a railway carriage against a brother behind his back, what shall we say of those who seek under cover of anonymous correspondence, or, in all the glory of a frothy leader, to vilify and traduce, to backbite and assail—a brother Mason? What can we say, we repeat, of such Masons, but that theirs is indeed a burlesque on all Masonic profession, a cruel wound alike to the honour, the manliness, the highmindedness of Freemasonry? When, however, we come to think the matter over carefully and calmly, as we have found one or two grounds of consolation ourselves, we think it well to impart them to our readers. In the first place, though a trite and common place observation enough, it is not too much to bear in mind that a large proportion of these noisy professors of Masonic wordiness, these "factors" of low personality, are utterly incompetent to teach anything either to their brethren or to mankind. If it be still true, perhaps, as of old, that "scribinus docti indoctique," yet it is very trying to have to wade through the nonsense, which marks their utterances, and above all the dirt with which such scribes besprinkle everyone and themselves at the same time. They do no good to the journal in which their ill-omened lucubrations appear, they discredit Freemasonry, they disgrace themselves. Life is too short for us all to pore over "conclusions in which nothing is concluded," essays in which we have neither force nor point, the puerilities of the "feeble forcible," the twaddle of the ignorant or the discreditable. It is most humiliating for the thoughtful and serious mind to realize how many seem to put pen to paper only for the sake of giving personal pain, to "wound," if "afraid to strike," to insinuate, if not daring to speak out plainly. Like Bartolo, they live and exult in the great power of judicious calumny. Such are persons who send anonymous letters and think they have done something very clever; such are those to whom if we speak sternly we should say "mentiris impudentissime," but whom we treat rather as vulgar buffoons, incapable of one high or sensible thought, whose writings, like their habits, are redolent of the gin palace, and as the old saying runs "smell," of the debased company they associate with. To all Freemasons who love their Order and wish for the true progress of Masonic literature, such hurtful parasites are most objectionable, and their contributions most unwelcome. They only live for personality; without personality the press itself is useless, for they have no real aims, or noble imaginings. They have no wish to instruct, impress, or edify their brother Masons. On the contrary, the Masonic Press is only valuable to them as it ministers to a degraded taste of reckless personality. Their only object in the leader or the letter is to gratify private spleen or personal prejudice, and they are only happy, and only satisfied when they can cast a stone at some unoffending and even friendly brother. Nothing has so kept back Masonry in past times as those immoral "Free Lances," who have only used the Masonic Press to further their own views, and purposes, to enshrine their own likes and dislikes, their senseless animosities, their low-lived antipathies. Nothing also so influences a large portion of Masons at this present hour, in their dislike of the Masonic Press, as their fear or hatred of personality. Unfortunately, if they want to see violence and virulence, perversity and intolerance, the vulgar taunt, the unseemly sneer, the unbrotherly inuendos, as they are to be found in all their glory and luxuriance, they have only to open the pages of a professedly Masonic paper. Most curious anomaly! Freemasons are glad, apparently to proclaim themselves the most uncharitable, the most malignant, the most unvarnished, the most slanderous of mortals. These are hard words, my masters, but they are, we believe, both timely and seasonable. We have had our attention recently drawn to words, written by a professed brother Mason, which are an outrage on all truth and decency, and good feeling, and honourable sentiment, and brotherly goodwill amongst us. The Freemason, happily, is indifferent either to insinuation or attack, it has the confidence of a very large and increasing circle of readers, and ignores and contemns the flippancy of the ignorant, just as it treats with silent dignity the vulgar twaddle of the Slanderer, the Gossip and the Goose!

TIME'S REVOLUTIONS.

Just as we were going to press last Thursday, too late for befitting note or comment, there comes to us the telegraphic account of the death of Victor Emanuel, King of Italy. Though the Freemason steadily ignores all political events and public transactions as such, it yet from time to time, feels it to be but right to advert to what is passing in the world before our eyes, and which has all of influence on the age in which our lot is cast. Without alluding to many thoughts and facts which might lead us speedily into the "debateable land" of pure politics, we yet think, we may fairly say this as English Masons and citizens, that we fully and heartily sympathize with the great loss which Italy has sustained. Whatever the complications of other days may have been, whatever force may have lain in the "uti possidetis," and the "statu quo" for statesmen and thinking persons; whatever irregularities may have occurred in bringing about great national changes, few we think, can deny the right or the claims of the patriotic sympathies and yearnings of the Italian people. Italy for many reasons has always been both a classic, and familiar, and interesting ground to Englishmen of all conditions. Whether it be the force or the tradition of early and wise scholastic training, there ever has lingered with the inhabitants of Great Britain a deep-seated and heartfelt sympathy with Italy as Italy. As patriots and free men ourselves, inheriting a mighty past, looking on to a great future, boasting of a goodly present, we have felt that we had no right after all, (despite diplomatic considerations and special episodes), to deny to Italians, the same appreciation of constitutional government and religious liberty which we enjoyed ourselves, so fully, and so happily, and so peacefully, and, we will add, so loyally at home. In the case of Italy there was this intenser difficulty, that the Italians lived in proximate connection with the influence of the great centre of Roman Catholicism, and that, therefore, undoubtedly, the struggle would be severer and the conflict greater. Victor Emanuel, who has just left the busy scene, was undoubtedly the embodiment of the Italian idea, and as such he must be generally regarded, and leniently judged. He has lived to see Italy outwardly united. He has been permitted to witness the growth of liberal institutions, of a constitutional government, of a free church in a free state. He has passed away at a time when Italy seemed to be "moving on," and to be claiming its proper place in the category of nations. That the death of Victor Emmanuel is a great loss to Italy, who can doubt? For that favoured land has still an untried and doubtful future before it. The struggle as between Ultramontane assumptions and legal enactments is not yet at an end, and Italy has perhaps some thorny ground yet to traverse, before it has founded a true constitutional Monarchy, based on the development of individual, and communal and national liberty, and the loyal allegiance of a great and grateful people. But in this, its onward if arduous career, we can only sympathize with it as Englishmen and Freemasons. And therefore to day, we deeply deplore the account of the premature death of Victor Emanuel, and we wish to express above all our Masonic sympathy for the Italian Government, and the Italian Grand Lodge. The accounts of the interchange of religious courtesy as between the Pope and the dying king are most touching if true. We rejoice to think, that as that last hour of mortal struggle approached, which removes all earthly greatness just as it overthrows all earthly professions, the unwise anathemata of the Romish Church were withdrawn, and the King received, as all should receive at such a time, the happier fullness of religious administration suitable to one of his religion. His is a very weak and abject mind, which at such a solemn moment rejects religion in its soothing and beneficent office! Let us hope that the solemn memories of the past may serve to soothe the exacerbated sentiments of the Vatican, and that St. Peter's, as the great Cathedral of Italy, may witness, the religious observances, for the first King of Italy. Since we wrote this, it seems that the Pantheon has been selected for the funeral ceremonies of the King. We regret that the Church of Rome has not risen to the proper level of the occasion and taken the opportunity of making an "entente cordiale" with Italy.

JOBBERY IN OUR MASONIC AND CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Dear Sir and Brother,—
I see that in a speech reported in your columns Bro. R. J. Simpson has used this offensive word as regards all charitable institutions in England, and by unmistakable implication in respect of the elections of our Masonic Institutions. As one who has taken great interest and an active part in such elections for many years, permit me to use the "medium" of your pages to protest against an utter misuse of the English language, for I venture to assert, and that most strongly, that in the proper sense of the word "jobbery," no such term can fairly or fitly be applied to our Masonic elections. But it is quite clear to me, that Bro. Simpson uses the word in a sense peculiar to himself, namely, in order to carry out certain preconceived notions of what he deems a needful reform. He has often expressed his opinion on the "interchange of votes," which he declares to be "jobbery," and denounces as jobbery, though he has not a shadow of proof to bring forward in support of his assertion, and though he has been answered over and over again in your pages, I contend that the whole of his proposition rests upon an assumption, and that his contention is alike mistaken and untoward. Yet on this "dictum" laid down by the "Lord knows who," and certainly not infallible, I beg to observe that Bro. Simpson denounces our charitable elections as "jobbery," and does not even spare his brethren in Masonry.

Dr. Johnson defines a "job" to be a "low, mean, lucrative, busy affair," and "jobber" to be "one who sells stocks in the public funds." In process of time "jobbery" has come to signify, as it has been well put by some one, a corrupt transaction which is brought about from interested motives or personal feeling, without any consideration for the "fitness of things," or "pro bono publico."

I ask, somewhat indignantly, I confess, is this a fitting description by a brother Mason of our Masonic elections. I fancy that there will be but one equally indignant reply in the Craft.

As a proof how hollow is the cry for "voting reform" and how unwise it is to trust to committees alone, I call attention to a recent case in one of our charities which I for one should not have been surprised if Bro. Simpson, taking the "high moral line," or any other line you like, had eloquently denounced, as approaching the confines of "jobbery,"—for obvious reasons I name no names, though the case is well known now to most of us. The case is simply this. The father of the poor orphan, having subscribed to a colonial lodge for two years, (this was the maximum, if even this was obtained), leaves Masonry, and dies out of Masonry seven years later. The orphan's claim is recommended by an influential committee, brought forward, strongly supported at the General Committee, and, despite its obvious infraction of the laws of the institution, carried persistently by a large majority.

I note in the list of leading Masons who originally supported the case the name of our esteemed Bro. R. J. Simpson himself. I admit, however, that in the October circular his name had been withdrawn. Now looking at the case simply as an act of Masonic law and equity, I, for one, feel that if any matter might be fairly deemed more deleterious to itself or more prejudicial to the charity, or more unfair to those many brethren who live and die in Masonry, and whose orphans cannot get into the School, this is the case "par excellence," as the French would say. It is the "weakest case I have ever known," as was well remarked in a correspondence which appeared a short time back in the Freemason, and I hope never to see another like it.

I quite agree with Bro. Simpson when he says so eloquently, "I say it quietly, dispassionately, and deliberately, and I am quite sure that investigation into the different claims of candidates forms one of the first necessities of our charities being properly worked; and secondly, that the more we carry our charities out of the happy-go-lucky and haphazard system into the intelligent and deserving category the better it will be." But how does this admirable lesson of administration accord with the recent case, which was one of the most "haphazard happy-go-lucky" proceedings I ever heard of, and which convinces me that committees want looking after as much as subscribers?

I am inclined to hope that Bro. Simpson said a little more than he meant in the fervour of his eloquence, and that he may on second thoughts be willing to withdraw so objectionable a word as "jobbery." If he has no other excuse, he can make use of the one put forward by a speaker at a large dinner, in a town with which Bro. Simpson is well acquainted, when having made a signal blunder he excused himself thus happily, and amid the loud applause of the company. "Gentlemen, I am sorry for what I have just said, but I have lost, gentlemen, one of my front teeth, and words will come out, gentlemen, no less volens."

I shall be glad to see a disclaimer in your pages from our worthy brother, the P.G.C.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours most fraternally,

AN OLD STEWARD FOR THE CHARITIES.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

There is, it seems, no doubt that the Grand Orient of France will be excommunicated by the Anglo-Saxon Grand Lodges, and therefore the union of the Craft be dissolved. This unhappy fact is only to be regretted, not more to be hindered.

Allow me to ask once more, what has the Grand Orient of France done in its last vote? It has eliminated a profession of faith from its constitutions which does not belong to Masonic law, and which was not in the French Constitutions before. The Grand Orient has at present a similar law as the German Grand Lodges. For there was never in any German Grand Lodge a passus or S. (sic) concerning the belief in God, nor is this the case in the General Regulations, the fundamental Masonic principles adopted by the German Grand Lodge League. Never has any German Grand Lodge asked a candidate before he was initiated as to his belief whatever, and, nevertheless, the Grand Lodge of England has found faith with German Masonry.

A hundred years ago the great philosopher, J. G. Fichte, was initiated, notwithstanding he was denounced by his contemporaries as an Atheist.

Bro. Fichte was a man of the highest moral worth, a perfect Mason, and my German brethren are proud of such a member of the Craft. We have at present a great number of brethren in our lodges who do not believe in a "personal" God, and are convinced that the question of a "Creator" of the world is not a religious but only a physical question, a question on the cause of causality in general. These non-believing brethren belong to our best and worthiest Masons, and they are loved and venerated without regard to their belief or non-belief, as in Germany the lodges only ask whether the candidate is a moral and educated man or not. We consider the Craft as a purely moral institution, and securing freedom of conscience and profession, and acknowledge each honest and true conviction. All this has only reference to the individual brother Mason; the lodge as such and the Craft as such acknowledge the Great Architect of the Universe.

If the Grand Orient of France, who has not voted against the belief in God, has committed a Masonic crime, then all continental Masonry is guilty of the same crime. No Masonic Popery can prevent continental Masons from being convinced that absolute freedom of conscience is the true meaning of our Royal Art.

Believe me, dear Brother, most fraternally yours,

J. G. FICHTE.

THE ORDER OF ST. JOHN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I observe that in your issue of the 5th inst. you ask for information respecting the perpetuation and continuation of the Order of St. John in England.

The following is the account of the same, given by the existing Order of St. John of Jerusalem in Anglia, and put forth by them in their brief notice of the Order, &c., in 1874:—

"In the year 1826 the five associated branches of the Order projected the revival of the dormant Langue of England, and negotiations were entered into with the Rev. Sir Robert Peat, D.D., G.C.S., Chaplain to King George IV., and other English gentlemen, who consented to aid in the re-establishment of the Order in England, and at a chapter assembled in Paris, and representing the great majority of five of the then existing divisions of the Order, the resuscitation of the Order in England was resolved. The Chevalier de Chastelain was deputed to attend a meeting convened at London of Englishmen interested in the project, when he formally revived the English Langue, and invested the Rev. Sir Robert Peat with the functions and authority of Grand Prior of England.

This is the utmost amount of authority claimed by the existing Order for their assumption of the titles of the Knights Hospitaller, whose members were the defenders of Christendom for so many years.

I should like to call the attention of your readers to a few facts respecting this last-named Order. On the 29th November, 1797, the Emperor Paul I. of Russia assumed the title of Protector of the Order of Malta. On the 27th Oct. 1798, the same Emperor was proclaimed Grand Master of the Order, (the last Grand Master of the Order, who was duly elected according to the constitution of the Order, namely, Ferdinand Von Hampsch, being still living).

On the 6th July, 1799, a formal abdication of the Grand Mastership by Ferdinand Von Hampsch in favour of the Emperor Paul was made and forwarded to St. Petersburg.

On the 20th July, 1801, the Sacred Council of the Sovereign Order of St. John of Jerusalem, being then assembled at St. Petersburg, published a proclamation setting forth the mode of election of a Grand Master in the place of the Emperor Paul, then deceased. On the 27th of June, 1802, John de Tommasi was elected Grand Master in pursuance of the last mentioned proclamation.

De Tommasi was succeeded in 1805 by Guevara Luando, who was followed in 1814 by André di Giovanni Castellio, in 1821 by Antoine Busca, and in 1834 by Carlo de Candida. On de Candida's death, Count Colloredo was elected, and in 1858 he was still Grand Master. The further devolution of the office I have not been able to trace satisfactorily, but I believe it to be vested in the Marquis de Santa Croce, who appears to have been elected in 1872.

The English Order of St. John, although revived in the manner I have before quoted, has never been recognised by the Sacred Council, nor by any of the Grand Masters before mentioned.

In a publication, dated 1841, and emanating from the Chancery of the British Langue (the revived Order), I find the name of M. Carlo de Candida set down as that of the Grand Master, ad interim. It appears from this that within 7 years from their formation, the English Langue fully recognised the then Grand Master of the Order, as duly appointed, and that it was only on the refusal of recognition by the General Council that they thought of disputing their power or authority.

I should be the last to disparage the many good works done by the members of the revived Order, but I share the objections stated by the correspondent of the Times, whose letter you quote, to persons sailing under borrowed colours, and I hope that Sir Edward E. A. H. Lechmere, or some other member of the revived Order, will be able to fully prove the title of its members to the names and reputation that they claim as their own.

Apologising for this trespass on your valuable space, I am yours fraternally,

PANACHA.

[The following is Colonel Porter's able letter which has frequently been referred to in the discussion. Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Times."

Sir,—May I ask your permission to add a few words to the controversy between the most noble the Marquis de Carabas, K.G., and Sir E. Lechmere on the subject of Pretenders?

It behoves those who bring forward accusations as to the wrongful assumption of titles to be very careful that they do not fall into a similar error. Our friend the Marquis states that the English branch of the Order of St. John, of which Sir E. Lechmere is the valued Secretary-General, is not recognised by the Grand Master of the Order. May I ask the Marquis who is this Grand Master? I have for many years made the history of the Order of St. John a favourite study, and am now startled to discover the existence of a dignity which I had deemed extinct. Hitherto, I have been led to believe that the last Grand Master of the Order was Ferdinand Hompesch, who surrendered the island of Malta to Napoleon in 1798. Although the Emperor Paul of Russia afterwards assumed the dignity, his right thereto was never recognised, and after his death I have always imagined that the office fell into abeyance. Perhaps "Carabas, K.G.," can inform me who the present holder is, and how he was elected.

As regards the dispute between "Carabas, K.G.," and Sir E. Lechmere, the real truth seems to be this—Neither the fragment of the Order resident at Rome under the patronage of the Pope, nor that other important, but now extinct, fragment, consisting of the three French langues, to whom our English branch owes its revival, possessed the power of exclusive jurisdiction. The English langue claims its right of affiliation through the latter, and the former is powerless to deny it.

It is a very pretty quarrel, and will not be set at rest by such attacks as those of "Carabas, K.G." The English branch has bestirred itself to work in accordance with the intentions of the original founders, and is consequently yearly growing in influence and numbers.

Let the Roman branch follow our example. They will by so doing act far better up to the motto of the Order, "Pro utilitate hominum," than by useless attacks upon our raison d'être.

WHITWORTH PORTER,
Colonel Royal Engineers.

To the Editor of the "Times."

Sir,—Colonel Whitworth Porter does me the honour to descend into the lists and challenge my accuracy, because I used the term "Grand Master" in the letter you were so good as to insert in The Times.

The Colonel raises thereby an entirely distinct issue from that to which I have hitherto addressed myself. Permit me to add a few words on this subject at the end of this letter which I hope will give the Colonel a sufficient answer to his question, "Who is this Grand Master?"

Our question is a different one—viz., whether the association to which the Colonel and Sir E. Lechmere and so many more honourable and excellent men belong is a legitimate branch, or a branch at all, of the historic Order of St. John of Jerusalem, commonly called the Knights of Malta. If Colonel Porter will turn to page 821 of the "Almanach de Gotha" for the present year, 1878, he will find, under the heading "Ordre Souverain de S. Jean de Jerusalem," the style and name of our present head as follows—"Lieutenant Grand Maître, le bailli fra Ceschi a Santa Croce (élu le 14 Février, 1871)." Then follow the names of the Council of the Grand-Magistero—viz., the four Grand Priors of Rome, Bohemia, the Lombard-Venetian, and the Two Sicilies, the Vice-Chancellor of the Order, &c. After the Italian Priorities and the German Langue follow the Associations de Chevaliers d'Honneur et Dévotion—viz., 1. the Rhénane—Westphalian; 2. the Silesian; and 3. the English, whose President is the Earl Granard.

The fact, then, as I have stated—that though the association calling themselves Knights of St. John may be a philanthropic society doing much good, as I am glad to hear from Colonel Porter, it is not a recognised portion of the Order of Malta; in a word, it has made itself. Now to conclude with a word about my use of the term "Grand Master." Colonel Porter's historic remembrance are accurate when he tells us that Count Hompesch was our last Grand Master in the strict sense of the words, but they have led him into error if he supposes that the Order remained in an acephalous condition when the sovereignty of Malta was wrested from it by the French (to be ceded by them in turn to England, in trust for the Order, he it said en passant, by the Treaty of Amiens). On the contrary, the office was, and is still, filled by Lieutenant Grand Masters, in regular succession, and elected by the statutable officers of the Order. The Lieutenant Grand Master, the Bailli Brother Ceschi a Santa Croce, and his council and officers, are, therefore, distinctly not a "fragment," as Colonel Porter says, but the legitimate and sole head and governing body of the Order, exercising alone the sovereign rights still remaining to them; such, for instance, as that of sending a Minister-Plenipotentiary and Envoy-Extraordinary, who resides and is received as such at the Imperial and Royal Court of Vienna. The reason why our Grand Master is styled "Lieutenant" is that his dignity as a Sovereign Prince, recognised by all the crowned heads of Europe, was such that when deprived of his dominions it was felt that a Lieutenantcy, or Commission as it would be called if vested in more than one, as the Lord Lieutenantcy of London is held in commission, if I mistake not, was more suited to his fallen fortunes.

Let me add but two more "last words." Colonel Whitworth Porter himself embodies the whole question at issue. He signs, "Colonel Royal Artillery." I look to the "Army List" and find him in his proper place there. He and his friends say they are members of the Order of St. John. I look in our official list, and lo, they are not!—neither they nor their Secretary-General, nor anything that is theirs. I wish them well, I shall be most glad to show them over our little "good work," the stately Church and useful Hospital of St. John and St. Elizabeth in Great Omond-street; but I must once more, and finally, assert that it is only in the sense in which they are Knights of St. John that I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

CARABAS, K.G.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Some few months ago I addressed you on the subject of the approach to our School on Wandsworth Common—the only approach from Clapham Junction—unless a long round is made. It is over a narrow, muddy, dirty little foot bridge, that crosses the South Western Railway shortly after leaving the Junction; the two ends of the bridge are closed by swinging gates, and the stonoes on each side are much worn, so that they form considerable hollows, where rain collects just where the passers must place their feet when going to cross the bridge, and, in consequence, must in wet weather—and, as you know, it is frequently wet now-a-days—get their feet well soaked. I suppose when members of the Committee of the School visit it they must drive round by the main road, and are, therefore, happily ignorant as to foot passengers, the only means of getting to the school. The next time, however, they have to visit the noble institution, let them come on a wet day, in patent leather boots, and walk from the Junction to the school: then something might be done.

Yours fraternally,

A CONSTANT READER.

THE MASONIC SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

Your potent and well timed "notes of warning" in the Freemason cannot fail to convince the Craft that the rapid increase in our numbers will naturally cause a corresponding increased demand on our central charities, which cannot at once be met, as regards the schools for want of space. What cannot be cured must be endured, yet to prevent heartburnings after the elections, and also carry out our noble tenets in their entirety, an education fund for each province should be at once formed, to educate the children of deceased and distressed Freemasons at suitable schools in the neighbourhood of their own homes, until such times as they can be elected into the Central Schools, thereby constituting them, so to speak, wards of the province; a noble example of which has been set by the provinces of West Yorkshire, Lancashire, Cheshire, and Cornwall. It would be an incentive to those brethren who do not contribute to the central charities to begin their charity at home and induce them not to end it there, for Free masonry without Charity is worth nothing.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully and fraternally,

A. LINCOLNSHIRE W.M.

TEMPLE BAR LODGE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your otherwise excellent report of the consecration of the Temple Bar Lodge there are two or three little inaccuracies of omission and commission, which I would in justice to the brethren and myself mention and correct.

For "I have never done much on behalf of our Masonic Charities," it should have been, "I have never been able to do as much as I wished for our Masonic Charities."

There was a cry of "Question,"—but from Bro. Binckes—there may have been a second—but both were speedily put down by a storm of "cheers," which have been omitted.

Many cries of "Question" were raised during a portion of Bro. Binckes' speech, which were also omitted.

It is also not recorded that after Bro. Binckes spoke I rose in explanation, and said—"No word I said referred to the administration, but to the elective system of our charities."

I strongly hold that truth may be spoken anywhere, so long as it is spoken in a gentlemanly manner and a proper spirit, and without personality. Public matters may surely be discussed in public at any meeting of the brethren, especially a matter which concerns not merely the subscribers to our charities, but the whole fraternity.

Your "note of warning" is very good and reasonable, but be assured we should have much fewer Masons coming into the Craft for what they could get if we had a highminded, impartial, and strict system of investigation before any candidate was placed on our charity list, and a better and more discriminating mode of election after.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

R. J. SIMPSON.

ROSLIN CASTLE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

The Society of Antiquaries of Scotland recently held their first meeting of the session in Edinburgh, for the reading of papers. Among the papers read was one, by Mr. Andrew Sker, architect, formerly of Her Majesty's Office of Works entitled, "Roslin Castle, its buildings Past and Present," tracing the history of the building from the early part of the 14th century, part of which building was erected by Sir William St. Clair.

The castle was added to by his great grandson, Henry, the second of the St. Clair line of the Earls of Orkney. He built the great keep or South-west Tower.

Sir William St. Clair, 3rd Earl of Orkney, (the founder of the Collegiate Church of Roslin), also made large additions to the castle.

In 1455 James II. gave Sir William the earldom of Caithness in exchange for Nithsdale, and afterwards, in consideration of the elegant buildings he had erected, conferred upon him the dignity of Grand Master Mason of Scotland, a title which remained in the family till the year 1736, when it was given over to the Scottish Masonic Craft.

In 1544 the Castle was burned by the English forces of Henry the Eighth, it was partly restored by Sir William St. Clair after 1580.

Dear Sir, I have penned these few lines to you thinking they will throw some new light on Ancient Freemasonry. Perhaps some of our more enlightened Masonic Students will let us know where and when James the Second was made a Mason.

I remain, fraternally yours,

GEO. W. CHIRKSIDE.

CONSECRATION OF THE CHOLMELEY LODGE, No. 1731.

The following is the oration delivered by the Rev. C. W. Arnold, Grand Chaplain, who acted as Chaplain at the consecration of the Cholmeley Lodge at the Alexandra Palace on Wednesday, the 9th inst. "At a time when the members of our ancient Order are so rapidly increasing in number, and when a false step has been taken by the Grand Orient of France, it seems to me that I cannot better occupy your time than by addressing a few words to you on the great landmarks and principles of our Order. I say then, without the slightest hesitation, that the great basis on which our Order rests is "the belief in God." Masonry is not religion; but at the same time it is deeply rooted in religion, and demands of every candidate for its privileges the belief in the existence of a Personal Deity, the One Living and True God. Further than this Craft Masonry does not go, and so it holds the door open to all nations, whatever may be their religious systems, who believe in God. Thus the Christian, the Jew, the Mahomedan, the Hindoo, the inhabitant of China and Japan, the American Indian, and the South-Sea Islander can all unite in this common bond of brotherhood; but it rigidly excludes the Atheist. Need I remind you that Masonry calls for the recognition of God at every step? Under the names of the Great Architect of the Universe, the Grand Geometrician, and the Most High, His blessing is invoked in each degree. In the centre of the lodge is situated the sacred symbol, to call attention to His eternal existence, His omnipotence, and His everlasting watchfulness, round which each Mason stands on the circumference of a circle waiting for His commands and subject to His inspection. Before the W.M. lie the open pages of the volume of the Sacred Law, the revelation of God's will to man. It is the standard of Masonic truth, the guide of our actions, and the rule of our faith. Every obligation is sealed upon its sacred pages, and the Mason is taught to square his actions according to the dictates of that Sacred Volume if he wishes to become a living stone fit to be built into that temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Masonry teaches the immortality of the soul. It invites us to contemplate death without terror, assuring us that that even nature bears witness that in this perishable frame resides a vital and an immortal principle, which inspires a holy confidence that the Lord of Life will enable us to trample the King of Terrors beneath our feet, and lift our eyes to that bright morning star, whose rising brings peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human race. And the working tools of a Master Mason teach us to bear in mind and act according to the laws of our Divine Creator, that when we shall be summoned from this sub-lunary abode we may ascend to the Grand Lodge above, where the world's Great Architect lives to reign for evermore. Our second great landmark is charity or love, and this divides itself into two heads, brotherly love and relief. I call this our second landmark because it springs from the first. It is born out of the loving heart of God himself, bringing heaven as it were down to earth, and linking soul to soul throughout the world. As has well been said, "Masonry seeks to bring together men of every political faith and of every religious creed, winning them from their isolation, their selfishness, and their sin, and uniting them in their work for the general good." The discussion of religion and politics is strictly forbidden in our lodges, because they are the two most fruitful sources of dissension and bitterness. What can be a grander exemplification of brotherly love than the five points of fellowship, hand-to-hand, &c. But Masonry not only teaches us to have charitable feelings, and to drop the tear of sympathy over the failings of a brother, but to perform charitable acts, to feed the hungry, comfort the afflicted, relieve the oppressed or distressed, to educate the orphan child, and to provide for the aged widow and brother who are past work. Need I say more about these two great landmarks? Well are our principles stated to be Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, for Truth depends upon belief in God; Relief originates in true brotherly love; and Brotherly Love springs from the love of God. Thus the whole current of Masonry rises in and flows back again to God the centre. Time would fail me were I to enlarge upon its allegories and symbols, which remind the Mason every day and hour of his solemn obligations. I would that all men were truly actuated by its principles; the world would then wear a very different aspect; no longer would our hearts bleed at the horrors of war and strife, but the song of Heaven would be realised, "Peace on earth, good-will towards men."

HOW MUCH WE TALK.—It is well that all we say is not written down, not only because some of it might be rather against us, but because there would not be room for it. A curious Frenchman has lately been making a calculation, which is that a man talks on an average three hours a day, at the rate of about twenty-nine octavo pages an hour. This would make eighty-seven pages a day, about six hundred a week, which would amount to fifty-two good-sized volumes every year. And then, multiplying this by the number of years in a man's life, what a library he would have should it be all printed! And, too, how very little of the whole would be worth preserving, and how much he would be so glad if it had been left unsaid!

Reviews.

"The Journal of Travels," No. 1. Ward and Greaves, Crown-court.

This is a new candidate for public approval, and comes before us with a very striking, not to say startling, "bill of fare." The idea is a good one, and is well worked out, and we think that the periodical has a successful future before it. We should not, however, be honest reviewers if we did not point out that the extreme sensationalism of "Robinson Afloat" can do no possible good, and may be productive of harm. We cannot see the good of thus representing, especially to the young, scenes of horror and violence, alike morbid and grotesque.

"Lancaster Masonic Calendar" for 1878. By Bro. J. D. Dr. Moore, M.D.

Is most neatly got up, and is a very handy little "vaude mecum" for those for whom it is mainly intended. It is also likely to be very useful to "travelling brethren" in that part of the county desirous of visiting a lodge and appreciating Masonic work and Masonic hospitality.

"Notes on the History of Freemasonry," By Bro. HENRY SUTHERLAND, M.D., P.M. University Lodge, No. 1118.

We have received this little work, printed apparently for "private circulation" only, but we think it well to make one or two humble "notes" and "comments" respecting it. The idea of the writer is a good one, as well as a useful one, and we are glad to welcome Bro. Dr. Sutherland among that phalanx of Masonic students who are seeking to advance the true interests of Masonic history and Masonic archaeology. We cannot, however, concur altogether with our esteemed brother student, either as regards his general or critical view of the present position of Masonic historiography. We cannot concur with him in asserting that Anderson was the founder, for instance, of the mystical school, inasmuch as all that Anderson really did was, uncritically no doubt, and unscientifically if you will, to modernise the guild legends. But in this very effort of his he preserved consciously or unconsciously it matters not now, the true history of Freemasonry. The mystical school of Freemasonry is rather to be traced to those who actually developed the teaching of the old Catechism or Lectures. Whether Anderson ever had anything to do with the Lectures is more than doubtful, and Desaguliers' share in them is more, we apprehend a matter of tradition than anything else. Our mystical school can hardly be placed as early as 1723, and is to our mind much later, founding its main profession on Hutchinson, Preston, Calcott, Ashe, and Oliver.

Some of the facts mentioned by Dr. Sutherland are not now accepted by the "Authentic School," and it is a mistake on his part to assume, as he does, that Preston arraigned the "York Ritual in 1744," as it is this confusion of York with the South which is the rock upon which so many Masonic historians have come to grief.

It cannot be too often repeated (as Bro. Hughson will agree), that the Antients had nothing to do with York; and though Bro. Preston may have been initiated in an "Ancient Lodge" (though of this no clear evidence exists), all his ritual work is that of the "Modern Grand Lodge." We must not, it appears to us, press too far the evidence of the "Masonic Poem." It no doubt represents the customs and teaching of the operative lodges at the end of the 14th century, and carries us back to still earlier teaching, but it is purely operative, and all that we can derive from it, in our opinion, is a general accordance of teaching. Many of its provisions as regards freedom of birth and corporal blemishes are now given up by our speculative Grand Lodge. Though we belong to the authentic school ourselves, we are not such slaves to authenticity as to seek to strike out all "sentiment" from Freemasonry, and we feel that in Masonic Archaeology, as in everything else, the old a lage is safest and best, "Medio tutissimus ibis."

"Science for All," Illustrated, No. 1. Cassell, Potter, and Galpin.

We have received this well conceived and admirably executed illustrated serial, and we are glad to commend it, without any reserve, to the notice of our many readers. If the subsequent numbers, as we doubt not, are as carefully edited, and as strikingly interesting in themselves, we feel sure that not only will they approve themselves to the educational mind of the day, but they will obtain a large amount of public patronage. "Science for All" deserves to be well studied and thought over, the names of the writers being a guarantee against anything like the mere wordiness of some professed teachers of science. We recommend our readers to buy the work and judge for themselves.

The policemen of North Cornwall have been armed with cutlasses to fortify them for the raid against stray dogs which has been resolved upon.

Mayfair states that the 1000 nights of "Our Boys" will be reached on the 10th proximo and that Bros. James and Thorne propose on that night to double the prices of admission and to hand over the proceeds to some charitable object, which will be a very graceful and appropriate way of celebrating an unprecedented run.

A drawing room entertainment by the employees of Messrs. J. C. Boyd and Co. was given on behalf of the Royal Hospital for Incurables at St. George's Hall on Thursday, 17th inst., at 6.30. Bro. Osmond, 1812 and 1856 was Secretary to the Committee.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The whole of the clothing and jewels for the Eastern Province, South Africa, are now on view at the Masonic Show Rooms, 1, 2 and 3, Little Britain.

At the last meeting of the Grand Masters Lodge, No. 1., Bro. Ralph Gooding, M.D., B.A., Grand Steward, was unanimously elected to the Master's chair for the ensuing twelve months.

A GIFT HORSE.—The Theatre states that a Russian Prince, fanatico per la Musica, ordered a splendid necklace and earrings of a St. Petersburg jeweller, with the intention of presenting them to a celebrated prima donna on the occasion of her benefit last month, at the Imperial Opera. The prima donna, hearing of this, called upon the jeweller and inspected the jewellery. It was not to her taste, and she required several alterations to be made. The jeweller promised to consult his employer. The benefit was held, but the jewellery was not forthcoming. The prince had reserved the necklace and earrings for some less exacting recipient, and the prima donna was left to meditate on the homely wisdom of the proverb, "You should not look a gift horse in the mouth."

The first annual ball in connection with the City of Westminster Lodge, No. 1563, will take place at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's, on Wednesday, the 23rd inst. Bro. Dan. Godfrey's quadrille band will be in attendance. We understand the sanction for wearing Craft clothing has been obtained. Tickets and further information may be had of the Hon. Secretary, Bro. E. J. Scott, 34, Bury-street, St. James's.

EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES.—One of those gatherings marking the interest taken by some of our larger firms in catering for the amusement and instruction of their employees, took place on Monday evening, the 14th inst., at Messrs. Oetzmann and Co's., the well-known house furnishers, of Hampstead-road, in connection with the Mutual Improvement Society and Library, established on the premises, when a lecture was delivered to an audience of about 500, in one of their large show-rooms, by the Rev. Canon McConnell Hussey, entitled "Firesides." Canon Hussey's fame as a lecturer is well known, and this lecture, which, as the title indicates, is peculiarly adapted to the present season, was heartily appreciated by all present.

We are asked to state that the London Lodge of Instruction, No. 201, meets every Wednesday Evening, at 8 o'clock, at the "Devonshire Arms," Devonshire-street, Portland-place, W.

The Colonel Baker who is reported to have been wounded and taken prisoner by the Russians in the affair at Taskesan has been supposed to be General Valentine Baker, but this is not so; it is Colonel Baker, V.C., who is referred to, a most gallant and able soldier, who has been throughout on the staff of his namesake, together with Colonel Allix, and whose loss is a grave injury to the Turkish cause.—Panthy Fair.

LORD KINNAIRD.—By the death of Lord Kinnauld, and the succession in the title and estates of the deceased peer's brother, the Hon. A. Kinnauld, M.P. for Perth, a vacancy is caused in the representation of that city.

The Installation Meeting of the Globe Lodge, No. 23, took place at Freemason's Hall, on Thursday last. Bro. Robert Douglas, S.W., was installed into the Chair of K. S. A report of the proceedings will be given in our next.

The Earl of Rosslyn, M.W.P.G.M. of Scotland had the honour of an audience with the Queen, on Monday last, and kissed hands on his appointment as Ambassador-extraordinary to the King of Spain.

Capt. G. H. Howard, has been appointed to the post of Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, in the room of Capt. the Hon. H. Glyn, promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral.

TEMPLE BAR.—The works in connection with the removal of Temple Bar are completed, with the exception of the south arch, abutting upon Messrs. Child's bank, and it is intended that this portion of the structure shall remain until the bank buildings are shored up. This is to be done in the course of a few days, after which the arch will be removed, when the whole of the old structure will have been cleared away.

The North China Herald states that "a gigantic compendium of Chinese literature, comprising nearly 6000 volumes, has been purchased by Her Majesty's Chinese Secretary of Legation at Peking. Mr. Mayers, on behalf of the authorities of the British Museum, to which institution the collection will be removed as speedily as practicable.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell, of the Boston University, had the honour of exhibiting the telephone to her Majesty, Princess Beatrice, and the Duke of Connaught, on Monday evening, in the Council Room at Osborne.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.—Tuesday's Gazette announces that Honorary Colonel His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught has resigned his commission in the Royal East Kent Yeomanry, and is succeeded by Major-General the Marquis of Conyngham.

The World understands that Bro. Archibald Forbes intends to undertake a short lecturing tour, his subject being personal experiences of the war, which seems now so near its termination. Bro. Forbes will begin at Brighton this day (Saturday), and will face a London audience on the 24th inst., in St. James's Hall.

The World also has reason to believe that a marriage will be arranged between H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught and the Princess Louise, daughter of Prince Frederick Charles. The Princess is seventeen years of age, and much liked by those who know her.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales consented to receive an address on his departure from Hamilton Palace for London on Wednesday. The Freemasons wished to present an address, but there was not sufficient time.

Brethren desirous of obtaining a copy of the Freemason Almanack for 1878, should apply without delay at the office, 198, Fleet-street, London.

We are once more pleased to note the re-appearance of the "Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar, Diary, and Pocket Book." The issue for the coming year leaves nothing to be desired. It is replete with information indispensable to every "brother" who desires to be well "posted" in affairs Masonic, and, in addition, it contains as much diversified intelligence of a calendar character as would make the fortune of many a more pretentious and costly annual. Bro. Kenning deserves to be complimented on the very creditable manner in which he has performed his task.—Civilian.

We extract the following from the Sunday Times:—"On Wednesday last, the 9th inst., the boys and girls who remain in the schools during the Christmas holidays were invited by Mr. Talbot Smith, and the other Masonic members of the Gaiety Theatre company to witness the performances at that theatre, and fully appreciated the entertainment provided for them. Their healthy and respectable appearance elicited many inquiries respecting them, and it would be hard to say whether the excellent performance on the stage or the pleasing sights presented by the presence of these interesting little folks thus introduced into public view most interested the audience. When it is borne in mind that these were the children who, unhappily, had no Christmas home to return to, and no relatives to welcome them, the kindness of the brethren connected with the Gaiety Theatre deserves the warmest recognition.

Bro. E. Freeborn has been appointed Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of all Scottish Freemasonry in India, on the resignation of Bro. Rowell.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.—The following letter has reached the Chairman of the Mansion-house Committee of the Indian Famine Fund:—"10, Downing-street, Jan. 3. Sir,—Lord Beaconsfield desires me to thank you for your letter of the 1st inst. informing him that the amount contributed to the Indian Famine Fund at the Mansion-house has reached half a million sterling. His Lordship has great pleasure in learning of the continued success of the appeal. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. F. Daly, To Sir Thomas White." The weekly statement of the Madras Executive Committee, under date December 15, says that so successful have many of the district committees proved themselves in the judicious distribution of the large funds intrusted to them that, distress still continuing to be very great, further allotments have been made upon occasion being shown for increased aid. The famine is passing away, crops have ripened and are ripening; but the after effects of such terrible scarcity as the Presidency has experienced during the past year have been and continue to be very great. The more detailed the inquiries made in famine-stricken regions, the more serious was the distress found to be; but side by side with records of poignant distress and terrible suffering are to be found particulars of the exceeding great good which "the fund" has wrought and the great part it has played in bringing the country back to its normal condition and in infusing a new life into the people. The death-rate still continues very high. The increased deaths above the average rate in October in four districts only was 34,992, and the decrease of births in three districts 4607. The amount sent to district committees to date—in many cases nearly the whole has been already spent—is 6,093,933 rupees. The total sum received and roughly stated is 7,900,000 rupees, of which the Mansion-house Fund contributed 5,350,372 rupees. The Indian Princes had subscribed 55,000 rupees, the Maharajah of Baroda, the Maharajah Holkar, and the Maharajah of Cassubazzar giving 10,000 each. The late Lord Mayor, in acknowledging the receipt of £8500 from Sydney, writes,—"It affords me the greatest pleasure to receive these splendid contributions raised in your colony in aid of an object which has provoked an outburst of heartfelt sympathy among Her Majesty's subjects in all parts of the world. I beg of you to express to the subscribers the warmest thanks of the Committee and of myself for their great liberality, and to assure them that their gifts will be much appreciated by the suffering people of India."

PLOUGH MONDAY.—Monday week, being what is called Plough Monday, the Lord Mayor, Mr. Alderman Owden, according to custom, entertained a select company, composed of civic dignitaries, at dinner at the Mansion-house in honour of the occasion. Plough Monday was originally the name of a rustic festival, heretofore of great account in England, bearing, like St. David's Day, reference to the resumption of labour, after the Christmas holidays. In Roman Catholic times the ploughmen kept lights burning before certain images in churches to obtain a blessing on their labour, and were accustomed on this day to go about in processions, collecting money for support of these "plough lights," as they were called. Eventually, the Reformation put out the lights, but it could not extinguish the festival. The peasantry continued to go about in procession collecting money, though only to be spent in conviviality. It was at no very remote date a very gay and pleasant spectacle. A plough was dressed up with ribands, and other decorations, and 20 or 40 stalwart swains, with their shoulders and hats flaming with ribands, dragged it along from house to house. Times have changed, and these observances have fallen into disuse. In the City, however, Plough Monday is still marked in the calendar. In the afternoon on Monday the Lord Mayor went in state from the Mansion-house to the Guildhall, and presided at what is known as a grand court of wardmote.

CENTENARY OF THE MOUNT LEBANON LODGE, No. 73.

On Tuesday evening this lodge celebrated its centenary at the Bridge House Hotel, Bro. Thomas Knott, W.M., presiding at the first part of the evening. About 170 brethren were present, of whom the following is a list:—Bros. E. E. Cooper, J. Dixon, P.M. and Treas.; H. Moore, P.M.; F. H. Elsworth, P.M.; T. J. Sabine, P.M.; D. Rose, P.M. and W.S.; G. After the lodge had been opened and the minutes confirmed, Dr. Dixon, the senior P.M. present, delivered the following address:—"W.M., Officers, and brethren of the Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 73: We are assembled to-day for the purpose of commemorating an event of deep interest in the history of a Masonic lodge, its existence for a period of more than a hundred years. This lodge was originally a lodge of Antient Masons, and was constituted on the 27th day of February, 1760, by a warrant from the Grand Lodge of the Most Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons according to the old constitutions. It was known as No. 81. In consequence of the union of the two Grand Lodges, and the formation of the United Grand Lodge, on the 27th day of Dec. 1813, it became No. 104. On January 26, 1818, it first assumed the name of Mount Lebanon Lodge. At the alteration of the numbers in 1832 it became No. 87, since which, owing to the general alteration of numbers in 1863, it has become and now stands on the registry as No. 73. Having completed the centenary of its existence the members of the lodge have petitioned the M.W.G.M. for permission to wear a centenary jewel. On June 11th, 1877, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., was pleased to grant a warrant, permitting each of the actual subscribing members of the lodge to wear in all Masonic meetings a jewel of the approved pattern for so long as he shall pay his regular stipulated subscription to the funds of this lodge, and be duly returned as such to the Grand Lodge of England. As some years have elapsed since this lodge completed the centenary of its existence, it might be supposed that the brethren have been indifferent to the fact, and careless about the honour of wearing a centenary jewel. I shall endeavour to shew you that this has not been the case, by giving a short account of the proceedings which have been taken at various times in relation to this subject. The early history of this lodge, like that of Freemasonry itself, and of many other excellent institutions, is involved in obscurity. The original warrant is no longer in existence, and the names of the founders of the lodge are unknown to us. The first minute book of the lodge appears to have been lost before the year 1819. It is stated on the table of P.M.'s that this lodge was founded in 1749, under the sanction of Lord Byron, M.W.G.M. That table was constructed by Bro. Turner in 1824. I have no doubt the names of the Masters were taken from books which were then in the possession of the lodge. I do not know whether there was in 1824 any documentary evidence for the statement that the lodge was founded in 1749, but if such was really the case, this lodge must have been one of those lodges which seceded from the Grand Lodge of England, and joined the Grand Lodge of Antient Masons, for the reasons which I shall hereafter explain. The idea that 1749 was the date of our constitution was supported—if it had not, as I think probable originated—from the number of this lodge in the register of the United Grand Lodge. On referring to the list of lodges in the Freemasons' Calendar you will observe that this lodge is placed after a lodge which was constituted in 1747, and before another which was constituted in 1751. For a long time we were under the impression that the order of the lodges depended on the order of the dates of their constitution, but it appears to have been taken from the numbers in the registers of the two Grand Lodges at the time of the Union being taken alternately from each list. In 1849 a Committee of this lodge was appointed to make arrangements for celebrating its centenary, but the proceedings were subsequently abandoned on account of the necessary documentary evidence not being forthcoming. On June 4th, 1850, that Committee reported "that the oldest minute book in the possession of the lodge was one commencing September 25, 1764, and ending December 27, 1773, and that between the last named period and the end of the year 1799 there were no minutes whatever." The book here mentioned has since been lost. It does not appear to have been known to Bro. Hughes when he compiled his abridgment of the minutes in 1852, and I can only suppose that it had not been returned by one of the P.M.'s who had taken it home for examination in reference to the centenary, or it may have been in one of the boxes which have been lost. In 1856 a Centenary Committee was proposed by myself, seconded by Bro. Davies, and appointed by the lodge. After several meetings and the adoption of a design for a jewel, we learned that the calendar issued by the Grand Lodge and our table of P.M.'s were not to be accepted as sufficient evidence of our antiquity. In 1865, on the motion of Bro. Donkin, it was resolved to apply for a dispensation to wear a centenary jewel, but the minutes do not record any further proceedings. In 1876 our present Secretary, Bro. Free, was requested to report on the subject of a centenary jewel. With the kind assistance of Bro. Buss, at the Grand Secretary's office, we have been able to trace our origin to the date of the original warrant, Feb. 27, 1760, as one of the lodges of Ancient Masons under the old Constitutions. A petition to the M.W.G.M. was signed by all the officers and P.M.'s and fifty-one members of the lodge, and forwarded to the Grand Secretary in 1877. In due course the warrant I have spoken of was received. The lodge appointed a Centenary Committee, consisting of the W.M., Bro. Knott, the P.M.'s, Bros. Dixon, Walters, Sabine, Rose, Ebsworth, Free (Secretary), Grace (D.C.), and Wilkins; Keeble (J.W.), Isaacs (J.D.), and Stedman. It has fallen to my lot as the senior P.M., with the assistance of my colleagues, to examine all available documents, and to endeavour to condense the result of our labours into my present address. Although the old minute book from 1764 has been lost, another of greater interest has been found, commencing Dec. 30, 1780, and ending, Dec. 23, 1799. This is the oldest record in our possession, and forms the first of seven minute books containing upwards of 2000 pages of manuscript which contain the history of this lodge to the present time. With the exception of three leaves cut from the minute book in 1789, and four leaves cut out in 1793-4, these books appear to contain brief records of all our lodge meetings during the last 97 years. All these I have read. They contain an immense number of facts which are of no interest to us at the present time, beyond the circumstance of their forming a continuous history. However, a few grains of wheat may be collected from the chaff, which will serve to give us some idea of the method of conducting business in a Masonic lodge during the thirty years which preceded the union in 1813. For the information of our young members, who may not have enjoyed any opportunities of making themselves acquainted with the history of our institution, and in order to make my subsequent remarks more intelligible, I trust it will not be considered out of place if I occupy your attention for a short time by referring to the history of Freemasonry in this country, more especially of that period which preceded and followed the formation of the two Grand Lodges and the circumstance of their union, forming our present United Grand Lodge. This subject may be said to form a part of our own history, as I have ascertained at the British Museum that the articles of union between the two Grand Lodges were signed by two brethren, James Agar and James Perry, who were initiated and served the office of W.M. in this lodge. The early history of Freemasonry is traditional and fragmentary. The accounts of its origin are various, and inconsistent with each other. St. Alban is said to have formed the first lodge in Britain, A.D. 287. Prince Edwin, a brother of Athelstan, is said to have held the first Grand Lodge at York, A.D. 926. For some centuries after this period Masonic lodges were principally those of operative Craftsmen, patronised and encouraged by great and noble lovers of art, especially the founders of cathedrals and colleges, &c. The names of these patrons of the Order have been handed down to us as Grand Masters, but not on much authority. From the time of Inigo Jones (G.M. 1607 and 1638) to that of Sir Christopher Wren (G.M. 1685 and 1698), Masonic lodges became seminaries of instruction in the liberal arts and sciences and many eminent men were accepted as members of the Order. In consequence of the age and infirmities of Sir Christopher Wren the annual festivals were neglected and the number of Masons diminished. In Feb., 1717, the four lodges then existing in London met at the Apple Tree Tavern, Charles street, Covent Garden, and having voted the oldest Master Mason then present into the chair, constituted themselves into a Grand Lodge pro tempore. On June 24 following, a general assembly was held. A. Sayer, Esq., was elected G.M.; invested by the oldest M.M. present; installed by the Master of the oldest lodge (that of St. Paul, and now the Lodge of Antiquity); and received due homage from the fraternity. The authority of this Grand Lodge of England was not universally recognised. An ancient lodge at York constituted itself into "Grand Lodge of all England, held at York," in the year 1725. After a certain time it became inactive, but was revived in 1761 and finally collapsed in 1792. The regulations issued by the Grand Lodge of England were looked upon as innovations by several lodges, who renounced their allegiance, and affiliated themselves with the Grand Lodge at York. In 1738 the seceders were numerous, and being glorious Masons it was impossible to distinguish them. The parting of the Grand Lodge committed the error of deviating from the first of the ancient landmarks, the modes of recognition, in changing the word of the First Degree. The seceders then assumed the title of "Ancient Masons," and called their opponents "Modern Masons." In 1753 "The Grand Lodge of Ancient Masons according to the old constitutions" (said to have been granted by Prince Edwin at York, 926) was constituted. It was recognised by the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland. Some of its Grand Masters were at the same time Grand Masters of Scotland.

As the Past Grand Officers who were not re-appointed were to retain their former rank, this lodge has had the singular honour of two of its Past Masters sitting at the same time as Past Deputy Grand Masters in the present Grand Lodge. The Duke of Kent accepted office with the sole view of co-operating with his illustrious brother in promoting and cementing the so much-desired Union. Reverting to the history of our own lodge, I have to regret that I am unable to give you any account of its proceedings during the first twenty years of its existence. In the latter part of the year 1780 the lodge met at the house of Bro. Kelly, at the King's Head, James's-street, Covent Garden. The warrant of the lodge was then in the possession of James Oxburg, as W.M.; Anthony Conyers, S.W.; and Edmund Kelly, J.W. Judging from the names of the initiates and visitors, we may assume that the Irish element largely preponderated. This was a period of considerable activity, 15 members being admitted in 1781. Lectures were given in the Three Degrees of Craft Masonry, and also in the R.A. and Templar Degrees. The Master was elected for a period of 6 months. The Wardens were elected by the members of the lodge, and they appear to have been obligated and installed. The obligation of the Wardens probably referred to their holding office until their successors were elected, as I find it stated at a subsequent period, when no election of officers had taken place on account of the absence of members, that the Master and S.W. agreed to hold their positions until the next day of election "on their oaths of office." The elections took place in a M.M. Lodge, as in one place I find it stated the F.C. were requested to retire before the election. The Secretary and Treasurer were elected by the lodge. The Master appointed the Senior Deacon, and the Junior Warden the J.D. The officers were fined for non-attendance or being late, and also for non-acceptance of office. From the rules and orders of the Grand Lodge, printed in 1813, it appears that the fines for refusal to serve in any office—past officers excepted—were, Master not less than five shillings, Wardens and Secretary two shillings and sixpence each; Deacon one shilling, the Treasurer at the discretion of the majority. Occasionally two degrees were conferred on one night—a brother being initiated and Crafted, or Crafted and raised. In one instance all the three degrees were conferred in one evening (March, 1797). The Festivals of St. John the Baptist (June 24), and of St. John the Apostle and Evangelist (Dec. 27), were the days of installation. Masonic lodges were formerly dedicated to these two saints, they being considered the two grand parallels, which are now represented in our lodges by Moses and King Solomon. It was customary for the lodges to unite with the Grand Lodge to celebrate the grand Festival on St. John Baptist's Day. Each lodge contributed half-a-guinea, according to regulation, towards the expenses. The lodges marched in procession, each having its own standard. It sometimes happened that the standard was left behind as security for the payment of the house bill. Of these festivals I will give an instance from our minutes. "The lodge met at 9 o'clock in the morning, there being 29 members present. They proceeded to the 'Black Prince,' and attended Grand Lodge agreeable to orders. Assisted in celebrating the festival. Attended Divine Service at Camberwell Church, where a Masonic sermon was preached by Dr. Colin Milne, the Grand Chaplain. Dined with the general body at the Grove House, where we were visited by several distinguished brothers, and spent the day in the utmost conviviality and harmony. The Grand Lodge was closed at 9 o'clock in the evening." (June 24, 1788.) At this period the Earl of Antrim was our G.M. Ten years before this (April 7, 1777), the Grand Lodge of England had determined that ancient Masons were not to be countenanced or acknowledged by any regular lodge of Masons; however, they were recognised by the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland. On September 9, 1778, it was reported to our Lodge that "Lord Elcho, G.M., of Scotland, having visited our Grand Master's Lodge, had written a letter in which he expressed his complete satisfaction, at the conduct of the Grand Master's Lodge, and declared his abhorrence of that modern system lately established in England." Modern Masons desirous of being admitted as members of our lodge were initiated again, but at the reduced fee of one guinea. At this period of the lodge's history (1786-94) I must mention the names of two distinguished brethren, James Perry, editor and proprietor of The Morning Chronicle, and James Agar, barrister at law of the Inner Temple. James Perry was initiated in this lodge in 1785; was W.M. in 1786; appointed J.G.W. in 1787, and was D.G.M. in 1788-90. James Agar was initiated in this lodge in 1786, was W.M. in 1787; J.G.W. 1788-9; S.G.W. 1790; D.G.M. 1791-4, or later. They filled these offices in Grand Lodge while they were members of this lodge. Notwithstanding the social position of many of its members the lodge got into debt. "The R.W.D.G.M., Bro. Perry, reported that he had paid the debt and costs of an action of law against the lodge, amounting to £27 2s. 6d." Members in arrear were warned that they "would be reported to Grand Lodge, and be no longer considered members of this lodge." In 1789 Bro. James Gray, of the Grand Master's Lodge (who had joined the year before), became Master, and in the following year was thanked for "the exemplary discipline which he had maintained in the lodge, and the general attention which he had paid to every part of his duty in office, and through whom the lodge was happily restored to that harmony and respect which ought ever to reign among Masons." "The Good Lodge, No. 6, visited, and received a Masonic welcome." This lodge returned the visit in form. The happy state just mentioned was not of long duration, for in 1792 we find the D.G.M., Bro. Agar, P.M. of this lodge, calling the brethren together "for the purpose of restoring the lodge to its former regularity and splendour." The lodge removed to a more eligible house, the Sun, in Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Four initiates were appointed to office, and a joining member from No. 2, Bro. A. Ele, was chosen Master. The W.M. appears to have been unable to attend on account of illness. Six months after the lodge was removed to the Bull, Devonshire-street, Bishopsgate. Old members in arrear were excluded, but the lodge did not prosper. On Dec. 7, 1792, the lodge allowed the Tyler five shillings to perform the duties of Secretary, and to pay for an Outer Guard out of that sum. On June 4th, 1794, the lodge met at the Angel, City-road. The minutes of this meeting do not contain any name. There appears to have been no Secretary, or a very bad one. At this period we find the lodge received a duplicate warrant, dated Dec. 27, 1794, which is our present warrant. The officers named therein are William Lovell, W.M.; Stephen Ele, S.W.; and William Lesturgem, J.W.; all of whom were initiated in this lodge in 1792. The minute book does not give us any information about this warrant. Three leaves are missing just before this date. Bro. W. Lovell appears to have inaugurated a second revival, as fifteen lodge meetings were held in the year 1795, eight new members were initiated, and two brethren joined. Bro. Lovell was a member for several years. The lodge next removed to the Cheshire Cheese, Spitalfields Market. It met there for three years. On Dec. 15th the lodge proposed, "to sup on next lodge night with their sisters, after the installation," and no doubt this proposal was carried out, as the house bill on Jan. 19th, 1796, was £10 2s. 4d, being much in excess of the usual amount. In 1796, Nathaniel Bradley, a watchmaker in St. Luke's, was initiated. He was Master in 1797. Secretary in 1798, and filled that office, with a short period of interruption, for thirty-three years, when he was made an honorary member. He died in 1840, having been a member for forty-four years. It was he who in 1799 first proposed that this lodge should pay an annual subscription of one guinea to the Boys' School. On January 26th, 1818, he proposed the name of "Mount Lebanon Lodge" should be added to the 104. He is the connecting link between the last century and our day, for he was the senior member of the lodge when Bro. Hughes was initiated in 1825, and Bro. Hughes filled that position when many of our oldest members were admitted into Masonry in this lodge (1855). 1800—1825. For many years this lodge met in the parish of St. Luke at various places. The number of members at this time was from twenty to thirty. They were principally tradesmen. From the names I imagine that many of them were Italians. I am sorry to say that several of the P.M.'s were under the necessity of making application to the Grand Lodge Benevolent Fund. At one period (August 24th, 1807) the lodge was so poor that "the brethren agreed to act as Tyler in rotation, until the lodge was free from debt." In 1812 they were evidently in a better position, as the minutes of December 9th state that they ordered "a goose, two fowls, and a salted leg of pork." Poverty did not induce them to admit unworthy persons. A "Mr. Richard Lawless (!)" was rejected as not being a fit person to be made a Free mason." Let us hope this was not on account of his name. In 1819 G. W. Turner was Master. He presented the lodge with three small boards of the Three Degrees, with several Masonic prints, a new minute book and part of the expense of the P.M. tablet. He visited the lodge within my recollection. In 1825 Bro. R

Carpenter was Master. During nineteen years he was an excellent member, and frequently delivered the lectures in the various degrees. In 1829 Bro. W. D. Hughes was Master. He was an advocate of the cause of charity. For several years he was our Secretary. He presented the lodge with a register book of all the members admitted since 1812, and an abridgment of the minutes from 1780 to 1847. Since the Union this lodge has met at six places for periods of one, two, or three years, and at the following six houses for periods of more than four years.

1808—1816	Spread Eagle, Whitecross-street	8 years.

In 1841 the lodge indulged in what is known as a Summer Banquet, for they decided "that the members who chose and their ladies, dine at the Duchess of York Tavern, Battersea Fields, on July 19, and that the members of the Strong Man Lodge be invited to join them." In 1848 E. Harris was Master. He was our Secretary for fourteen years and Treasurer for thirteen years. He died in 1877, respected by every member of this, his mother lodge, of which he had for some years been the oldest member. In 1848 and 1850, C. R. Dean was Master. He was a worthy brother and represented this lodge three times as a Steward at the festivals of the Masonic Schools. He presented the lodge with a new ballot box. In 1853 W. E. Jackson was Master. He presented the lodge with a chair for the W.M., and two pedestals for the Wardens. In 1854 D. Davies was Master. He filled the office of Treasurer for seven and half years, and was preeminently distinguished for the warm interest he took in the Masonic Charities. In 1856 H. Gregory was Master. He was a most energetic Mason, but unfortunately his life was a short one. During his year of office the lodge enjoyed a prosperity which it had never previously attained. The Grand Lodge dues were £44 7s., the highest amount up to that time. I was his first initiate. Twenty-two others followed me in the same year, and I regret to state that at the end of seven years I was the only one who remained a member. In 1859, J. Donkin was Master. He was our Secretary for seven years. On Dec. 20th of this year, the last of our first century, it was my good fortune to be unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year. I was installed on the 17th January, 1860, and as the centenary was not completed until the 27th February following, that being the date of our original warrant (Feb. 27th, 1760), I had the pleasure of presiding over the lodge as the last Master during the first century of its existence, and the first Master during its second century. During this year (1860) the lodge gave thirty guineas to the Masonic Charities. The Past Masters of the lodge who are members at the present time are John Dixon, M.D., 1860; F. Walters, 1863; H. Moore, 1865; T. J. Sabine, 1868; D. Rose, 1869; E. H. Ebsworth, 1870; G. Free, 1872; G. F. Grace, 1873; A. L. Dussek, 1874; I. J. H. Wilkins, 1875; C. Rayner, 1876; T. Knott, 1877. The Past Masters who have been founders and first W.M. of other lodges are H. Gregory, 765; J. Dixon, 871; J. Donkin, 1178; F. Walters, 1307; D. Rose, 1622; T. J. Sabine, 1540. The senior member of the lodge is Bro. W. C. Hendley, who joined April 16th, 1850. The eldest son of the lodge is Bro. S. S. Sard, who was initiated May 15th, 1855. The next oldest member is Bro. F. Walters, who was initiated the day that Bro. Sard was passed, and I was proposed for initiation on the day Bro. Sard was raised (Dec. 20, 1855). The youngest child of the lodge is Bro. Harrison, who was initiated Dec. 18, 1877. The number of members is 124. Total members of the lodge from 1780 to 1877, 844, of whom 678 were initiated in the lodge, and 166 joined. The lodge first met at "Bridge House Hotel," on March 18, 1862, and remained here till June 16, 1863. It met here again on Sept. 17, 1868, and has continued to meet here to the present time. During the last 24 years this lodge has sent 20 Stewards to the festivals of the Boys' School. The personal donations of those Stewards amounted to £194 5s. The lodge donations during the same period were £197 10s. The amount of Stewards' lists from 1870 to 1877 was £973, 7s. The net amount of these lists with the donations of the lodge and Stewards prior to 1870, is £1046 12s. Bro. M. Ekham, a member, bequeathed £300; died 1864. During the last 29 years the lodge has sent 19 Stewards to the festivals of the Girls' School. Stewards' donations, £246 15s. Lodge donations, £168, 1860-1877. Stewards' lists, £693 18s. Net amount of lists since 1860, and donations before 1860, £798 18s. During the last 27 years the lodge has sent 19 Stewards to the festivals of the Masonic Benevolent Institution. The amount of Steward' lists from 1866 to 1867, £393 6s. 6d.; the latter, plus lodge donations (before 1866), £46 27s. 6d. The miscellaneous charities from the lodge funds were £44 1s. The most noteworthy of these were:—1854, to the Patriotic Fund for wives, widows and orphans, of soldiers and sailors fighting in the East £5 5s. 1857 for relief of sufferers in India £10. 1867, Turks Island Relief Fund £2. 1868, Masonic Life Boat Fund £5. 1854-1876, Various donations from the Charity Fund amounted to £163.—Grand Lodge dues 1814 to 1876, paid to Grand Lodge £1166 7s. 6d. 1877, £34 9s. making a grand total of upwards of £3700, which this lodge has been the means of raising for charitable purposes in some form or other. This amount is exclusive of private subscriptions which were placed on the Stewards' lists in previous years (when those lists were not preserved) and also of the donations of members of this lodge which were given on the occasion of their serving as Stewards for other lodges. In conclusion allow me to observe that on an occasion of this kind our joy must necessarily be mingled with serious and solemn reflection. More than 700 of our members have passed away, but the good deeds of some of them are not forgotten to day. Man, as an individual, is but an atom in the infinity of space. His life when protracted to its utmost span, is but as the lightnings flash in the infinity of time. The material works of his hands, however grand and noble they may be, inevitably decay. The noblest and most age-enduring of them all are found in works of operative Masonry. Time—often called all-destroying time—which slowly but surely crumbles into dust the most solid structures of human art, and spares not the Masonic rock itself, adds link upon link to the chain of intellectual and moral progress. Freemasonry is a grand link in the chain of human progress;—each Masonic lodge is a link in the chain of Masonry;—each member of a lodge is a link in the chain of a lodge's existence, or in other words, a fibre in a strand of a rope of many strands;—the excellence, and strength, and durability of which depend on the excellence and perfection of its component parts. The lodge to which we have the honour to belong, though humble in its origin, and humble in the social position of many of its members, has, upon the whole, played no unworthy part in the history and progress of English Freemasonry. If it has done no more, it has helped to add lustre to the brightest jewel in the crown of English Masonry—I mean charity. We have drunk of the cup of prosperity. We have also tasted the bread of adversity. We have not escaped the leprosy of a few unworthy members, but we rejoice that their number has been far exceeded by excellent and worthy Masons. I hope I may say that we have many members who are anxious to emulate the good deeds of those who have gone before us. One thing more is necessary, and that is, we should introduce as our successors only such as are likely to do honour to the lodge and Craft. I have pleasure, W.M., in presenting you with the centenary warrant, which has been granted during your year of office, and of decorating you with the centenary jewel. In the name of the lodge I express the hope you will be spared to wear it amongst us for many years to come. I thank the brethren for the kind attention I have received, and I now conclude this centenary address with the prayer which was doubtless uttered at its consecration of the lodge, "may peace, prosperity, and harmony attend this lodge."

A vote of thanks was afterwards passed to Dr. Dixon for the above address, and it was ordered to be printed and circulated among its members.

Dr. Dixon afterwards installed Bro. E. E. Cooper, as W.M.; and the following brethren to office: Bros. H. Keeble, S.W.; Ireton, J.W.; Dr. Dixon, Treas.; George Free, Secretary; Isaacs, S.D.; Holmes, J.D.; Klingenstein, I.G.; Grace, D.C.; D. Rose, W.S.; and W. Y. Laing, Tyler.

A vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the lodge minutes to Dr. Dixon for installing the W.M., and ten guineas were voted to the list of Bro. Grace, as Steward for the Benevolent Institution festival. The brethren then closed the lodge, and adjourned to a splendid banquet, and honoured a long list of toasts, among which were "The Pious Memory of the Founders of the Lodge," "The Mount Lebanon Lodge," and "The Senior Member," three special toasts for the occasion.

A charming selection of music was performed by Bros. Seymour Smith, T. W. Simons, W. Pritchett, J. Thornton, and Theodore Distin.

MASONIC BALL AT BLACKBURN AND PRESENTATION TO BRO. LE GENDRE N. STARKIE.

On Thursday, 10th inst., a Masonic ball of a brilliant description took place in the Town Hall, the proceeds to be devoted to the funds of the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution.

Prior to the proceedings in the ball-room, a preliminary assembly took place in the large police-court, Town Hall, for the purpose of making a presentation of an illuminated address to Colonel Le Gendre N. Starkie, R.W.P.G.M., East Lancashire, and P.G.W., England. His Worship the Mayor, Bro. Jas. Dickinson, presided; and among those present were Bros. E. Ashworth, P.G.S.W., East Lancashire; R. H. Hutchinson, P.P.G.S.W., East Lancashire; T. Clough, P.P.G.R., East Lancashire; E. Halliwell, P.P.G.O., East Lancashire; W. H. Cunliffe, P.P.G.P., East Lancashire; R. C. J. Duckworth, P.P.G.A.P., East Lancashire; T. Taylor, P.P.G.S.B., East Lancashire; W. Coddington, W. E. L. Gaine, W. Counsell, I.G., 345; S. L. Buckley, S.D., 269; T. S. Ainsworth, P.M., 344; W. F. Townley, P.M., 269; D. Towers, P.M., D.C., 346; Allon Blenkhorn, W.M., 269; G. Oornall, 345; and N. Jones 569, honorary secretaries of ball committee; Wm. Almond, 381, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; Samuel Howarth, P.M., 345; Jas. Bertwistle, P.M., 269; Sam. Tomlinson; S.W., 269; Chas. Aspiden, 269; G. Brooke, J.W., 269; S. Goldstone, S.D., 245; R. W. Catterall, S. W. 1512; P. W. Flinn, 581, Lodge of Faith, Clapham; Thomas Cunliffe, 269; Thomas Preston, 269; Richard Kearsley, P.M. 346; Wm. Pinder, J.W. 345; J. T. Hall, J.D. 1519; John Booth, J.D. 37; Thos. Mercer; A.S. 1516; John Rigby, 345; H. A. Spurr, P.M. 939; E. Shaw, J.D. 340; John Leaver, S.D. 346; J. Margerison, 344; Thomas Thompson, 1519; Thomas Longworth, 269; Daniel Neville, 345; Wm. Heaton, 345; Thomas Walsmsley, P.M. 462; Thos. Parkinson, 269. William, Isherwood, 345; G. T. Underwood, P.M. 424, William Barton, 269; J. Troop, P.M. 269; James Pyes I.P.M., 345; L. D. Blackburn, W.M., 345; George Duerden, P.M., 345; Ralph Ibbertson, 345; Charles Porter, 345; James Aspinall, S.W., 345; Samuel Fallows, 345; W. Fletcher, I.G., 269; Joseph Potts, 269; W. Holland, 269; Obadiah Sagar, J.S., 345; J. Pollard, S.S., 269; H. Underhill, 1519; Wm. Forrest, 37; J. Barton, P.M., 462; W. H. Haworth, I.P.M., 381; John Oldfield, 345; J. J. Pemberton, 345; Amos Armistead, P.M., 346; David Schofield, 269; Daniel R. Parkinson, 345; H. W. Graham, 345; J. Platts, 345; James Heap, J.D., 269; Thos. Sourbutts, D.M., 346; J. J. Blackshaw, J.W., 346; Wm. Lamb, J.D., 346; J. D. Hirst, 345; W. C. Tiplady, 345; and H. T. Platts, S.S., 345.

The Mayor said they had assembled there on that occasion for a purpose which he had no doubt would give great satisfaction to all present, and those connected with the Masonic Craft generally. They should that day celebrate the 50th birthday of the Worthy Provincial Grand Master of East Lancashire. He was sure it would be a source of gratification to all present to see him in such a state of health as they found him that evening. He had just completed a space of life which extended over the period of half-a-century, and he (the Mayor) was sure they all wished that he might have many happy returns of the day—(hear, hear),—and that he might be long spared to live amongst them. (Hear, hear.) He was sure no man connected with Masonry so much delighted in that event as he did. His friends and brethren would welcome Col. Starkie as being the Right Worshipful Master of the largest district in this country. (Hear, hear.) He was sure they regarded it as an advantage and an honour to have Col. Starkie as the Grand Master of so important a district as East Lancashire. (Cheers.) The Mayor then called upon,

Bro. Thomas to read the address, which was as follows:—

To Bro. Le Gendre N. Starkie, D.L., Past Grand Warden of England, and Grand Master of the Province of East Lancashire.—Right Worshipful Sir,—We, the Masters, Past Masters, officers, and brethren of Lodges 269, 345, and 346, Blackburn, desire most cordially and loyally to offer you our sincerest congratulations on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of your birthday. We thank The Great Architect of the Universe that He has granted to you so abundant a measure of health and strength, and that he has endowed you with wisdom and sound judgment, by which you are enabled to discharge the onerous duties of your high office in such a manner as to promote the welfare and happiness of the brethren under your charge, and to further the highest interests of Freemasonry in this large province. We pray that you may be blessed with unimpaired health and energy, long to continue the beneficent rule under which we have the happiness to carry on the good work of the Craft in this province, and may you live to see your children and your children's children following in the footsteps of their honoured progenitors in the good paths of Freemasonry.—Signed on behalf of their respective lodges, Allon Blenkhorn, W.M. Lodge of Fidelity, 269; Samuel Haworth, Lodge of Perseverance, 345; William Williams, United Brethren, 346.

The address, artistically speaking, is a splendid piece of workmanship. It is contained in a massive gilt frame, richly illuminated and decorated with Masonic emblems. The framework is crowned with an emblem of the office of the P.G.M., initialled around as follows: "R.W. P.G.M., of East Lancashire." Beneath this is a crest of the Starkie family in gilt. The names of the three lodges that have contributed the testimonial are inscribed on the frame, namely, "Lodge of Fidelity, 269" at the top; and "Lodge of Perseverance, 345," and "Lodge of United Brethren, 346" on either side. At the base the Holy Bible is carved in gilt, being open with the square and compasses lying on the top of it. The ribbon below contains the motto, "Audi Vide Tace." Each corner is filled in with a double triangle, emblematic of Royal Arch Masonry. The letters of the address are relieved with beautiful colouring. Mr. Cunliffe, decorator, Church-street, and King-street, has executed the mounting and frame, and the address had been prepared by Mr. John Holland, surveyor.

Bro. R. H. Hutchinson, P.P.S.G.W. of East Lancashire, was called upon to present the address. He said he thought none of the brethren in that room could enter it without mingled feelings, nor could he undertake the task which had been imposed upon him to present that address without having those mingled feelings. When he looked back upon the past he remembered that Col. Starkie was the son of a most noble Mason, and he presided over the whole province of Lancashire with such dignity and grace that he gained the goodwill of all the brethren, and when the time came that it was necessary, owing to the growth of Masonry, that this province should be divided, he unlike most men, was ready and willing to divide the district into two great parts. He (Bro. Hutchinson) was sure that brethren of East Lancashire were very glad that they were able to place Col. Starkie at the head of East Lancashire in their noble Order, as the Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Province. They were grateful in two ways. In the first place, he was the son of such a father that by hereditary duty he would perform the duties allotted to him with the same dignity, the same grace, and the same generous satisfaction which the example of his father had left him to follow. He had also the satisfaction of believing that Col. Starkie had the influence and qualification to maintain with dignity and grace what his ancestors had upheld, and he had no doubt that the high reputation of the Order would be maintained. His conduct had so far satisfied the brethren, that they hoped he might be spared many long years to follow the same course, and that his children would hereafter admirably imitate the same example. (Hear, hear.) He (Mr. Hutchinson) knew that to the outside world Masonry was very difficult to understand, it seemed very strange that the highest in the realm should be the patron of the Order—he meant Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. It seemed equally strange that the Prince of Wales should be at the head of their Order. (Hear, hear.) It was also, to those who did not understand it, still more strange that the Royal Prince Leopold and the Duke of Connaught should occupy offices in the Grand Lodge. (Hear, hear.) He dared say many might wonder how it was that amongst other noble names identified with Masonry so many had devoted, and were still ready and willing to devote so much time and attention to Masonry. They could hardly enlighten the public in all the sympathies that bound them to one another, because it appeared to him that of all things in this world it could only be thoroughly appreciated by those who knew the inmost secrets of Masonry. Their tenets and principles, which had caused the world to advance so much, were founded on everything that was good and loyal, because, he need not tell his brethren present that their rule and principle was to submit everything to the will of Providence, whom they called the Great Architect of the Universe. They looked up to Him as the Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor in this life. Whilst Masonry in many other of its degrees and attributes has made direct advances, they looked with regard on various systems of religion, and in their broad principles, it did not matter whether a man lived in the farthest parts of the globe or whether he were a close neighbour, they could call him brother and welcome him under that title, and with that freedom which characterised their conduct. (Applause.) There was a principle, to use language of St. Paul, "which never faileth" in their order, and that ruling principle was charity. This was not merely a superfluous word with them, but it induced one man to help another in need, provided that man were honourable, upright, and straightforward, and whilst recognising their duty to the poor, whether they lived under a monarchical or republican Government, they recognised still more their duty to their neighbour by doing unto others as they would that others do to them. (Hear, hear.) Colonel Starkie, by his position, was elevated, perhaps, above the necessity of daily toil; he inherited a name which had been honoured through many generations, and which, they all trusted, would continue to be honoured for generations yet to come. (Applause.) He thought it was their brother's great privilege, occupying so elevated a position in Masonry, to sail forth upon the ocean of life, endeavouring to help those more unfortunate than himself, and whilst such conduct would occupy the minds of men, it would not only tend to raise their intellects and develop their morality, but it would also kindle a warm and kindly feeling. It was such cordial sentiments as these that they wished to permeate society. Whilst voyaging on the sea of life, it was Col. Starkie's object to do as much good to everybody with whom he came in contact as possible. The great object of Masonry was to promote a bond of sympathy and unity, which would elevate not only themselves; but its salutary influence would spread like the rays of the sun throughout the whole earth. Of all in connection with their Order he wished it to be said, "See how these brethren dwell together in unity." (Hear, hear.) Wherever they met a Mason a fellow feeling was at once aroused, and the sympathies of a brother were excited. He was sure that so long as their Prov. Grand Master was at the head of the Order in this district, he would regard with sympathy, affection, and esteem, all the brethren who dwelt under his care. (Applause.) Nobody knew better than he did how to maintain those feelings of right and justice and charity, in as gentle yet as forcible a manner as possible. He believed there was a cordiality of feeling between the most distant lodges and himself, and the sentiments with which Colonel Starkie was regarded could not be expressed in words. They all rejoiced to celebrate his 50th birthday, and that he was hale and strong, and while that presentation came from only three lodges in the province, Col. Starkie might look upon it as in fact an expression of the feelings of the whole province. This province was the largest over which any Provincial Grand Master ruled in the country, and all the members rejoiced in maintaining the principles of Masonry by fighting under his banner against the flesh and sinews of the world, against infidelity, and all kinds of vice and immorality, and endeavouring to promote that upright conduct which Masonry so truly taught. He thought Masonry was above all other things calculated to inspire peace and goodwill towards men, which should prevail to the ends of the earth. He had great pleasure in presenting the address. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. W. Coddington, who was received with loud cheers, said that he had great pleasure in supporting the presentation of the address to the R.W. Prov. G.M. He felt that he could add little to the eloquent remarks of Bro. Hutchinson, but he esteemed it a compliment that he should have been selected to say a few words upon that most interesting occasion. He had had the pleasure of knowing Bro. Starkie for a number of years, and whether he looked upon him as a Freemason, as a gentleman, as a country squire of the good old English type, if, last though not least as a thorough sportsman, (loud cheers.)—he felt that they might go far indeed before they found one who could fulfil his multifarious duties in so able, and conscientious a manner. The address which had just been read, briefly expressed the feelings and sentiments of the three Blackburn lodges, but he might say that in every town and district of this important province the name of Starkie was always received with honour, and that their R.W. Prov. G.M. was looked upon with esteem and veneration by every Lancashire Freemason. (Cheers.) He had very great pleasure in supporting on behalf of himself, and Lodge 269, and others, the address which had just been presented to Bro. Starkie, and hoped he might live long and happily to hold the position which he now filled. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. Starkie rose to reply, and was received with loud and prolonged cheers. He said anybody who was placed in the same situation as he was would feel most gratified, most thankful, and also have sentiments almost similar to those which were in his mind, that it was hardly possible to find words adequately to express in proper language his thanks for that beautiful and touching testimony of their esteem and regard for himself on the one hand, and the sentiments which had flowed from the lips of Past Grand Officers on the other; for the cordial Masonic friendship which had been expressed by his friend and brother, Bro. Coddington, or by the high degree of honour which had been done him by the Mayor of that great and important borough by presiding on that occasion. (Cheers.) He knew not why in Blackburn they were always treating him with heaps of kindness and marks of attention most unexpected—he hoped not undeservedly. (Loud cheers.) It had been from a peculiar circumstance his good fortune of late to reside amongst them, but long ere that period, whenever he came to that good old town the marks of friendship, esteem, and regard that were shown him were such that he always felt their kindness and brotherly feeling, not from anything on his part, but from their part towards himself. Did they think that a man with any spark of honour, with any spark of feeling would throw those sentiments aside? He could not. They had nothing to gain by it; he had nothing to gain by it. It was that mutual liking, peculiar to Englishmen, which one man entertained for another. (Cheers.) It was the custom in ancient times, when his fellow-citizens wished to confer upon a man some high honour, to present him with a civic crown. It was not the intrinsic worth of the crown that made it valuable, but it was the feeling it embodied. That address was a civic crown. Those beautiful expressions, so beautifully inscribed and delineated, were priceless gems, they were mementoes of feeling which were not to be lightly regarded, and they should be treasured by him until the day he died. (Cheers.) What a civic crown was to the man who had deserved well of his country that address was to him. It should have a very distinguished place assigned to it where he lived now, and an equally prominent place when he went elsewhere, as a manifestation of the feeling entertained for him by the brethren of the three lodges of Blackburn. (Cheers.) They had taken the auspicious occasion of his fiftieth birthday to present him with that incalculably valuable mark of their friendship, full as it was of expressions of kindness to him. As it was his fiftieth birthday, he had to look back upon life, and also to look forward, and in doing so he was reminded of the great and glorious light of the sun, one of the emblems of the Masonic body. As a boy he had seen the sun rise, and as a man he had basked in its meridian splendour, and now that it was declining, let him hope that his setting sun might have the beauty and picturesqueness which attended the sun as it set in the West. (Cheers.) When the bell tolled for him for the last time, and when he had put on his last shift, let him hope that his shortcomings, which had been numerous, would be forgotten; let them remember that he was a man of strong passions like themselves, but let them also remember that he tried to fear God, to love the Queen, to honour his country, and to exalt Freemasonry. (Loud cheers.) It was not everybody who had the gift of oratory like Bro. Hutchinson. He looked upon oratory as a means of portraying something in a manner in which they had not thought of it before; and they must pardon him if he did not arrive at that point of vivid expression, and make them understand how deeply he felt the honour they had conferred upon him on that occasion. But if words were wanting, let him assure them that in his heart he appreciated their heartfelt kindness in presenting him with a testimonial on that occasion. (Cheers.) Bro. Hutchinson had alluded to the long relationship of his family with Freemasonry. He did not like to be egotistical, but he must say that he did feel proud that for a long series of years his family had been intimately connected in a very high position with Freemasonry. (Cheers.) He believed that if the principles of their Order were carried out with strict integrity they would add to the benefits of mankind by softening asperities, and to the advancement of social and moral good to an incalculable degree. Since he had joined the Order it had led him to meet many men of different opinions, and he had had the advantage of discussing those opinions in a calm and brotherly manner, without a wish on the part of either to get the better of the other. It was a grand and noble Order; it had no narrow limits, but proud and noble lines. It had no dogma, but it took the grand idea to benefit mankind on earth, and to fit them better for eternity. (Cheers.) He might not have in himself the capabilities entirely to fill all the duties of the offices he might take, but since he had had the honour of ruling over that province, he had met with such kindness of feeling, such nobleness of sentiment, such kind expressions of brotherly love and affection from those he ruled over, that he had felt how very great were his shortcomings. He asked the three Masters of the lodges at Blackburn, who had drawn the memorial, to accept from him, as a Past Grand Officer of England, his testimony to the zeal which he had always found to exist in the lodges of the province and in Blackburn in particular. He thought that although he had come amongst them almost as a stranger, he had received more kindness in that town than in any town in Lancashire; and he felt an interest in their welfare and in the borough, which was second to none in the county in his feelings. (Cheers.) Whatever he could do for them in his social life, or elsewhere, he would be glad to do it. As his friend upon his right (Bro. Coddington) had said he did like the life of a country squire. He liked to live amongst his people; and after the marked kindness which he had received, it would be a very strange phase and a very queer turn for him to take if he ever forgot it. There might be clearer air, brighter scenes, nobler rivers, and more gorgeous scenery than they could boast, but there were no hearts in the world like the hearts of Lancashire men. (Cheers.) It was said that no man was a prophet in his own country, but let a man be what he was in any situation, he would find in Lancashire that he was esteemed and was reckoned up every day as much as the price of consols in the papers. (Cheers and laughter.) Never would he desert the friends who had clustered round him; never would he give way to feelings of aggrandisement against his neighbour. (Hear, hear.) He reciprocated to them all the kind feeling they had shown to him, and asking them only to be to his faults a little kind, he would fill the position he held as well as he could until he passed the great gulf which separates this world from another. If they lived another ten years, might they maintain the friendship that now existed; might he never do a dishonest act; but might he do honour to his family, and be faithful to his friends and to his country. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. Ashworth proposed a vote of thanks to the chair. Bro. Blankhorn seconded the motion, which was supported by Bro. Starkie, and received in the manner suggested.

The proceedings then terminated, and the company adjourned to the ball-room.

The ball, which was held in the assembly-room, was in aid of the funds of the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational Benevolent Institution. It was exceedingly well attended, and passed off with the greatest eclat. The handsome hall and its adjuncts had been elaborately and tastefully decorated by Mr. F. Thomas, Market-place, whose well known taste in this class of work was perhaps more happily displayed on this occasion than at any previous time. In front of the entrance of the Town Hall an awning was erected, and the vestibule was filled with choice plants from the conservatories of Col. Feilden, the whole being lighted by a handsome transparency of the Prince of Wales' plume and motto. The stairs, corridors, and landing were richly carpeted in crimson and relieved with plants; and the rooms devoted respectively to the ladies and gentlemen as cloak rooms, were replete with everything necessary for comfort and convenience. In the ball room a number of cabinets were placed in convenient positions, and each was surmounted with a large mirror and furnished with a very choice assortment of ornaments, which latter, along with a number of vases, &c., on the mantel-pieces, and in other parts of the room, were kindly lent by Mr. Pinder, of the Market-place.

The company was a most brilliant one, representing, as it did, most of the leading families in the town and district. The Masonic brethren were dressed in the costumes and decorated with the jewels of the Order, in accordance with their several positions and rank in the Craft. At certain periods during the evening, those who were members of the higher degrees retired, and re-entered the room, attired in their respective costumes. The Royal Arch degree, we may add, was very strongly represented. Later on those belonging to the Knight Templar degree formed in procession, and on reaching the centre of the room, what is termed the "Arch of Steel" was formed. This was effected by the members passing each other in pairs, underneath their swords. This costume and one or two others representing still higher degrees, though somewhat singular to eyes unaccustomed to this kind of demonstration, was exceedingly picturesque. One or two quadrilles were formed, the gentlemen in which were Knights Templars, and this was perhaps the happiest effect produced by the change of attire. The ladies' dresses were, we need hardly say, rich and diversified, and the result was, as may be supposed, charming. The band was provided by Bro. Goodwin, Prov. G. Org. of East Lancashire. Bros. A. Blankhorn and W. Counsell performed the duties of Masters of Ceremonies, and were assisted by the following gentlemen, who acted as Stewards: Bros. W. Ashburn, J. Bertwistle, J. Brierley, E. Brooks, S. L. Buckley, E. Halliwell, J. Heap, W. Lamb, F. T. Mercer, H. T. Platt, J. Pye, O. Sagar, F. Thomas, J. Troupe, and J. W. Walsh. Bros. W. H. Cunliffe, and D. Towers officiated as Directors of the Masonic Ceremonies.

A silver mine, the ore of which is stated to be unusually rich, has according to the Norwegian papers, been discovered in the Nam Valley. The discoverer will probably receive a Government grant of about 400,000 crowns.

The German Parliament has been summoned for Feb. 6th.

Mr. Henry Dymond, the special correspondent of the Morning Advertiser in the Russo-Turkish war, was initiated on Monday last in the Enfield Lodge, No. 1237.

We are very pleased to learn that the health of our Royal brother Prince Leopold, has so far improved, as to permit of his taking a little exercise on the terrace of the Palace at Windsor.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.—Lloyd's agents at Scilly reported to Lloyd's this afternoon that the weather at Scilly for some days past had been remarkably fine and settled with a smooth sea, very favourable for the Cleopatra passing the Bay of Biscay. At the time of the telegram being despatched from Scilly (afternoon of the 17th) the wind was northwest.—Globe.

The following gentlemen have been elected as associates of the Royal Academy of Arts:—Briton Riviere, painter; J. E. Cochem, sculptor; Alfred Waterhouse, architect.

A MASONIC PRESENTATION TO BRO. E. J. MORRIS.

A complimentary dinner and Masonic presentation to Bro. E. J. Morris, Grand Deacon of England, and Past Grand Master of South Wales, Eastern Division, took place on Monday, at the Castle Hotel, Neath. The president of the evening was the Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. Marmaduke Tennant, the vice-chairs being occupied by Bros. Walter Whittington, P. Prov. S.G.W., and John Jones, Prov. G. Treasurer.

Among those present were Bros. Charles Bath, P. Prov. S.G.W.; James G. Hall, P. Prov. S.G.W.; T. G. South, P. Prov. S.G.W., Cardiff; Phillip H. Rowland, P. Prov. J.G.W.; David Roberts, P. Prov. J.G.W.; E. Jones, Pro. G. Secretary; Charles Taylor, P. Prov.; G.D., Merthyr; Thomas D. Roberts, P. Prov. G.D.; Brecon; W. G. Davies, P. Prov. G. Sup. Works; H. St. G. Cauldfield, P. Provincial G. Superintendent Works, Evan Jones, P. Prov. G.D.C., Aberdare; Geo. H. White, Prov. G. Pursuivant, and W.M. of the St. David's Lodge, Aberdare; Matthew W. Morgan, W.M. of the Merlin Lodge, Pontypridd; D. R. David, W.M. of the Afan Lodge, Aberavon; Robert Margrave, Prov. S.G.W., and W.M. of the Prince of Wales Lodge, Llanelly; John B. Phillips, P. Prov. J.G.W., Llanelly; W. J. Morgan, P. Prov. S.G.W.; Carmarthen; Dr. Lewis, Maesteg; W. J. Rees, P. Prov. G. Steward; Thomas Thomas, P. Prov. G. Steward; E. Sydney Hartland, W. Little, and other distinguished members of the Craft.

The dinner was provided by Miss Isaacs, and was admirably served, the wines being excellent.

The presentation of the highly complimentary resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, beautifully and most artistically illuminated, elegantly bound in Russia leather, and enriched with solid silver monogram and mountings, was made by the Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. Tennant, on behalf of the Province; and Bro. Charles Bath, P. Prov. S.G.W., on behalf of the subscribers, and acting as chairman of the committee, presented the testimonial, which comprehended a vice-patronship of the Freemasons' Boys School, purchased with its full voting privileges at a cost of one hundred guineas; complete and costly suits of the dress and undress clothing of a Grand Officer, with jewels; and an exquisitely carved oak book-case, with upwards of 200 volumes of books.

The courtesy of the Dep. Prov. G.M. in presiding, having been suitably acknowledged and fitting thanks accorded to Brother Charles Bath, as chairman of the committee, and to Brother Walter Whittington, the hon. secretary, the brethren separated at an early hour so as to avail of the several night trains, many having travelled long distances in order to be present.

A full report of the installation meeting of the Etonian Lodge of St. John, No. 209, which was held on the 5th inst., reached us at 9 o'clock on Thursday evening, too late for insertion in present number. We would impress upon our friends the great necessity of sending in their reports at the earliest moment. To insure insertion in current number copy should reach the Office, 198, Fleet-street, by 12 o'clock noon on Wednesdays.

Miss Anna Eyre, who has been recently singing in Milan, Paris, Naples, &c., with great success, has been engaged by Mr. Mapleson for his English opera season, and will shortly arrive in this country and make her debut as Leonora in "Trovatore."

Dr. J. Stoppard Taylor has been appointed medical officer of health for Liverpool, in room of the late Dr. Trench.

Mr. John Sanders (solicitor) clerk to the Wandsworth Board of Guardians, was initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry in the Wandsworth Lodge No. 1044, on Wednesday last, the 16th inst.

A notice of "Fatherland," the new melodrama now being performed at the Queen's Theatre with considerable success, is unavoidably postponed until next week.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

GLOBE LODGE (No. 23).—This lodge, whose career has extended over upwards of a century, held its installation meeting on Thursday evening, the 17th inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, and was, as usual, well attended. Bro. John Boyd, W.M., P.G.P., P.G.S., occupied the chair. Bro. R. Douglas, S.W., and W.M. elect; Bro. Davies, J.W.; and all the assistant officers were present, and a numerous body of visitors, amongst whom were Bros. Col. Burdett, Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex; Col. Peters; Hyde Pullen, P.G. S.B.; Bartlett, 228; Baker, P.M. 753; J. Moon, J.D. 49; Thieflay, P.M. 145; Manby, 145; Sides, Grand Steward's Lodge; H. Thompson, P.M. 177 and 1158, (Freemason); Reviere, 538; Riddle, 1501; Biggs, P.M. 435; Massey, P.M. 65; and several others. The lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes read, Bros. Simonds and Tartas, candidates for passing, were introduced and questioned, after which they withdrew. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and on their re-introduction they were passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft, the ritual being rendered in Bro. Boyd's usual painstaking manner. The next business on the agenda was the installation of Bro. Robert Douglas, W.M. elect, he being presented by Bro. William Watson, the Senior Past Master of the lodge. The usual proceedings having been gone through, all the brethren below the degree of an Installed Master were requested to retire, and a Board of Installed Masters (about twenty in number) was formed, and Bro. Douglas was most ably installed by Bro. Boyd into the chair of K.S., according to ancient custom, as W.M. of the Globe Lodge for the ensuing year. On the admission of the brethren he was duly saluted in the different degrees, and then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. Davies, S.W.; Reinhardt, J.W.; Palmer, S.D.; Wildy, J.D.; Venn, I.G.; Dodson, D.C.; Jermyn Boyd, W.S.; Dicketts, P.M. Grand Stewards' Lodge, Hon. Sec.; Bennett, P.M., Treas.; Radford, Tyler. Bro. Boyd then delivered the customary addresses to the Master, Wardens, and brethren, and at the close he was warmly applauded. The newly-installed W.M. immediately commenced his active duties by the initiation of Mr. Frederick Mortimer into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry, which ceremony was gone through with correctness and all the confidence of a veteran of the Order, giving evidence that throughout his year the prestige of the Globe Lodge for good working will be fully maintained. The W.M. said he had a most pleasing duty to perform, which was to present Bro. Boyd, P.M., with a jewel, as a memento of the kind feelings entertained towards him by the lodge on his quitting the chair as W.M., wishing him long life and happiness, and that he might remain many years amongst them. Having attached the jewel to his breast, amidst general cheering, Bro. Boyd, I.P.M., said: I am greatly pleased at receiving this mark of the favour of the brethren, and if my year of office has been satisfactory to you, brethren, I can assure you that it is most gratifying to me. I have endeavoured to conduct the affairs of the lodge during my year to your satisfaction, and this proves that I have done so. (Cheers.) The report of the Audit Committee was presented and adopted. Bro. E. C. Davies, S.W., proposed "That on and after January, 1878, the initiation and joining fees be raised from eight guineas to twenty guineas." Bro. Wildy seconded the motion, which was put and agreed to. A committee was appointed to revise the bye-laws of the lodge, and report its proceedings to the lodge at the earliest convenient opportunity. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquetting-room, where a splendid repast was provided by Bro. Best, the proprietor of Freemasons' Tavern. On the withdrawal of the cloth, the W. Master in giving the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," said she had not only endeared herself to them as their Sovereign, but as a warm supporter of their noble institutions, a toast which was drunk most cordially. The National Anthem was sung by Bros. Carter, P.M. 382, Baxter, Jekyll, and Winn. The W. Master said the next toast he had to propose was that of "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," who had shown the deep interest he took in all that appertained to Freemasonry by the appointment of his two Royal brothers to support him in the Grand Lodge, and to make its proceedings a success. They all knew the cordial reception that had been given to the Prince of Wales, not only on both sides of the lantic, but throughout the whole of the British dominions, and he was sure all the brethren would join with him in wishing him all the happiness he could possibly enjoy in the coming year. This toast was drunk, followed by hearty cheering. A gleec was sung by the professional singers "Hail! to thee, Albert," the solo by Bro. G. T. Carter, which was most delightfully rendered, and warmly appreciated. The W. Master said the next toast he had the honour to propose was that of "The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master." He need not remind the brethren of the high estimation in which his lordship was held amongst them, or the great interest he took in promoting the prosperity of Freemasonry, especially in his support of their benevolent institutions, which are looked upon as the greatest ornaments to the Craft that the world could produce. Those institutions he looked upon as a fulfilment of the law of God, and the Earl of Carnarvon was a man upon whom they could always rely as a steady exponent of universal charity, and he asked the brethren to drink his health with cordiality, wishing him all the happiness that could attend him. The W. Master said the next toast that he had the honour and pleasure to propose was that of "Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Officers, Present and Past." As to the marked abilities of these Grand Officers no one could have any doubt, and the brethren looked to them as the great supporters of their institutions, for when work was required to be done they were always ready to do it, and the aid they rendered in providing for their comforts had cultivated those good and kindly feelings for them which existed amongst them. He was of opinion that a great deal of good was done when they came amongst them. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Colonel Burdett and Bro. Hyde Pullen. Colonel Burdett, Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex, said he had often to return thanks for their toast, but seldom with more pleasure than he did at the present moment. As so much had been said of their Grand Master and Pro Grand Master, he would not allude to them; but so far as the toast applied to the Deputy Grand Master and the Grand Officers, he was sure that every one would do his duty to the utmost extent of his power, and he was happy to say that the officers of the Grand Lodge were never stronger than they were at that moment. He might say, however, that the higher they got on in the Order, the greater was the responsibility they felt for the discharge of their duty to the brethren of the Order at large, as they had to take care of the interests of others as well as that of themselves. His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales was responsible for the working of the Grand Lodge, and to enable him to be so he counted upon the assistance of the Grand Officers; and so it went on, step by step, the Grand Officers being supported by the brethren at large, not only of England and Wales, but of other countries who naturally looked to the Grand Officers to take care of the interests of the Order throughout the world. In conclusion he again returned thanks for the honour conferred upon the Grand Officers. Bro. Boyd, I.P.M., said it was getting late in the evening, and after what had been said as regarded the last toast it would be presumption on his part were he to occupy much of their time in proposing the health of their Worshipful Master, but he felt bound to make a few remarks, although he should keep them from a peculiar enjoyment only for a few moments. Those who were present, who were Royal Arch Masons, knew that apart from the ceremony of exaltation there was a ceremony in their proceedings in the shape of a lecture, and one of the sections was called "Moses' Rod," and towards the end of that lecture, "Moses' Rod" was called an emblem of authority; when held by the monarch it was called a sceptre, by the bishop a crozier, by the general abaton and by a civic dignitary a mace. The Worshipful Master's gavel was also an emblem of authority but under a very different appellation. The W. Master had placed his gavel as an emblem of authority in his (Bro. Boyd's) hands, and he trusted that he should make the best use of it by the introduction of his name. They had not all the same capability, and it took some a very long time to learn the duties of Craft Masonry, but he thought they would agree with him when he said that their W. Master had that night exhibited a large amount of capability and talent when for the first time he presided in the chair. Bro. Douglas, notwithstanding that was the first time he had presided, had gone through the ceremony of installation exceedingly well. He had therefore no doubt that they would give the toast of his health a hearty welcome, and at that time twelve months hence they would be better able to say what they thought of him. He trusted that he might echo his (Bro. Boyd's) wish that he had had a happy new year of office, and that each member of the lodge would assist him in every way in his power. He asked the brethren to cordially drink the health of the W. Master. The W. Master, in responding said—Brethren, and Past Master Boyd—I rise to thank you for the very kind manner in which you have proposed my health, indeed in such very flattering terms—and you, brethren, for the way in which you responded to it. It was indeed a great honour conferred upon me to be placed that night in the position of Worshipful Master. Certainly I have had many honours conferred upon me, and particularly in receiving a certificate from a late great Exhibition, but there is no honour that I shall value so much as that which has been conferred upon me this evening. I thank you very much, although I know that I shall have a very difficult task in having to follow such an accomplished Past Master as Bro. Boyd, but I must rely upon the Past Masters in any case of difficulty, and I will do my best to copy their good example. If I do so, I am sure that I shall receive the best wishes of the Globe Lodge, and I again thank you for the manner in which my health has been proposed and received. The W. Master said the next toast he had great pleasure to propose was "The Health of the newly-initiated Bro. Mortimer." He had great pleasure in having initiated him into the Order, as he had known him all his life, and had many opportunities of seeing his good qualities, which had been cultivated until he arrived at maturity, and now he had become a Freemason. He felt sure that before many years were passed he would promote the good and welfare of every one with who he might come in contact, and he wished him all the happiness that Freemasonry could bestow upon him. The toast was well received, followed by the "Entered Apprentice's Song." Bro. Mortimer said he was naturally a little nervous in being called upon to return thanks for the toast which had been just given and received so kindly. When he came to the place that night he little thought he should have to stand up to return thanks, or any opinion as to what he would have to go through to become a Freemason. He thanked them for the kind manner in which they had drank his health, and he hoped to become a good Mason. He had great confidence in coming amongst them; as the W. Master was a personal acquaintance; and he hoped that in time to come he should be enabled to do as much for the brethren as they had done for him. (Cheers.) The W. Master next gave "The Immediate Past Master" of the lodge, and in doing so especially referred to the services rendered by Bro. Boyd, who had been most assiduous that evening in seeing every one well attended to, and he felt assured that it must have created amongst the brethren, as it had in him, a feeling of attachment to Bro. Boyd. They were all aware of the great interest he took in all their Masonic Institutions, more particularly the Girls' School, of which committee he was a prominent member. His kindness on all occasions had won for him their esteem and regard, and he sincerely wished that he might live for many years to enjoy that good opinion that was at all times entertained for him. He asked the brethren to join with him in drinking the health of Past Master Boyd. Bro. Boyd said he was much pleased with the W. Master for the manner in which he had introduced the toast, and was very grateful to the brethren for the manner in which they had responded to his observations about himself. He might say that during his career in Freemasonry he had endeavoured to do his duty in every position in which he had been placed, and to those officers who were then in a subordinate position he assured them that if they pursued a career of good conduct they would in time arrive at the same high position he had attained in the Globe Lodge. It was a pleasure to him to follow a good example in his own lodge, and during the next twelve months he should do all he could to forward the interests of it. During the past year they had put up with his infirmities, but he had done his best, and he believed that he had given them satisfaction or they would not that night have placed on his breast the jewel they had voted to him. He should not detain the brethren with any further remarks as to himself, as a most important toast had just been put into his hands to propose, which was that of "The Visitors." The worthy brother then read the names of the different visitors, making a running commentary on the good qualities of each, and concluded by proposing their healths, a toast which was enthusiastically responded to. Bro. Hyde Pullen returned thanks for the visitors. The W. Master then gave "The Past Masters of the Lodge," for whom Bro. Watson responded, who stated that was the 31st installation meeting of the Globe Lodge at which he had been present, and remarked that during the whole of that time one feeling seemed to reign amongst its members, that they should do unto others as they should do unto them. During thirty years every W. Master had gone forward according to his merits, and there had been no ill-will, and the consequence was that they always looked forward to the installation of a new Master with pleasure. The Past Masters thanked the W. Master for the compliment he had paid them, and they congratulated him in being called upon to preside over so large and distinguished a lodge, and in doing so he had the kindly feelings and best wishes of every member. "The Officers of the Lodge" was then given, and with the Tyler's toast a very happy and harmonious evening was brought to a close. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. G. T. Carter, P.M. 382, assisted by Bros. Baxter, Jekyll and Winn.

JORDAN LODGE (No. 201).—The installation meeting of this old and respected lodge took place at Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, 18th inst., under very favourable auspices, Bro. Elsum, W.M., P.P.G.D.C. Surrey, in the chair. As a great amount of work had to be done, lodge was summoned for four o'clock, and opened punctually at that time. The minutes having been read and confirmed, and report of audit committee adopted, Bros. Yardley, Cope, and Beale, were duly raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons, and Bros. Claudius, and Josua, passed to the Fellow Craft Degree, and Messrs. Leigh and Trew initiated into Freemasonry. The W.M. then proceeded to instal as his successor, Bro. R. C. Read, S.W., who had been unanimously elected by the lodge, the ceremony of installation, as also those of initiation, passing and raising, being very ably rendered by the retiring W.M. On investing the I.P.M. a pleasing duty, that of presenting Bro. Elsum with a P.M.'s jewel, devolved on the newly-appointed W.M., who kindly and affectionately wished the wearer long life and prosperity to wear it. Bro. Elsum deeply impressed, cordially thanked the W.M. of the lodge, and assured them it would be highly appreciated, and he trusted, handed to his son as a memento to stimulate him to try to gain the good-will of all. The usual congratulations, &c., having been accorded Bro. Read, W.M., in a very efficient manner, appointed and invested his officers, thus favourably commencing the duties of his exalted position. Through the admirable arrangements of an experienced Secretary, and the able services of Bro. Davage, D.C., the whole of the business set forth in the summons was concluded at seven o'clock, and lodge closed in due form. After closing lodge, the members and numerous visitors adjourned to a sumptuous tuous banquet which gave the greatest satisfaction to all assembled, and highly creditable to the new proprietor of this well known tavern. Full justice being done to this well spread board, and grace having been said, the W.M. instructed the Wardens as to seeing their columns charged in the West and South, proposed "The Health of Her Gracious Majesty the Queen," coupling with it prosperity to the Craft, as usual in this old lodge. This was most heartily received and responded to. The National Anthem followed by Bro. Thurlay Beale, and given in his able style, elicited great applause. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were effectively and briefly given by the W.M., and duly honoured. "The Visitors" is at all times a welcome toast in this lodge, and was most eloquently and feelingly responded to by Bro. C. Walker, P.M. Whittington, who after alluding to the ability of the officers in having got through the great amount of blessings in the lodge, then thanked the W.M. and the lodge generally, for the liberality and hospitality at all times extended to the visitors of the Jordan. Bro. Leigh in an very effective speech returned thanks for "The Initiates." The Secretary in a few words, thanked the W.M. for the confidence reposed in him by the lodge, and referred to the great labours of his fellow officer, Bro. Davage, Treasurer, D.C., and Third Steward, and to the great interest he takes in seeing to the wants and comforts of the brethren. Bro. Davage in reply, assured the lodge that it was a source of pleasure to see them so satisfied. The Wardens, Bros. Summer, Smith, and Andrews, severally responded, and during these proceedings Bros. Beale, Read, Mander, Yardley, Wettenhall, Smith, and Andrews, sung several songs—accompanied on the piano—amongst others. Bro. Spooner having finished the "Entered Apprentice," in company with "A Jolly Old Miller whose name was Bob Bell," were taken by a well known brother "To the West, to the West," and passing along met Bros. Brewer, Hawkins, and Bacquan, sympathising friends of "Tom Pearce," and being attracted by the "Bells of Chandon," found their way to the "Grove of Blarney," where, either from "The Bells," or the exhilarating influence of Moet and Chandon all seemed really happy, so there leave them to enjoy favourable recollections of the old Jordan, No. 201.

WANDSWORTH LODGE (No. 1044).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Spread Eagle Hotel, on Wednesday. The W.M., Bro. H. R. Jones, presided. The following officers and brethren were amongst those present:—Bros. W. A. Morgan, S.W.; Bro. E. H. Boddy, J.W.; J. Frost, Sec.; P. Cook, P.M.; J. G. Kewney, P.M.; Wardroper, J. J. Holland, S. C. Landon, W. Price, G. Clark, H. E. Goodchild, G. Fortescue, R. Neal, and A. A. Denham. Mr. John Saunders, a well-known solicitor in the district, and Clerk to the Wandsworth Board of Guardians, was ably initiated by the W.M. Bro. Price was afterwards passed to the Second Degree. Upon the motion of Bro. P. Cooke, P.M., who spoke in feeling terms, it was unanimously decided that a letter of condolence be sent to Bro. G. Howick, P.M., who has lately sustained a severe loss in the death of his wife. The names of Messrs. J. W. Marshall, and P. V. Denham (the former proposed by the W.M., and seconded by Bro. E. H. Boddy, and the latter proposed by Bro. A. A. Denham, and seconded by Bro. J. J. Holland), were given in to the Secretary, and will be balloted for at the next meeting. Other formal business was transacted and the lodge was closed.

METROPOLITAN LODGE (No. 1507).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, at Anderson's Hotel, when there were present Bros. R. T. Kingham, W.M.; John Douglass, S.W.; C. J. Scales, J.W.; J. Willing, jun., P.M., Treasurer; W. M. Stiles, Sec.; W. Side, S.D.; H. Stiles, D. C.; H. Lovegrove, Steward; J. Colls, I.G.; J. J. Michael, P.M. Visitors: Bros. J. Shilcock, P.M. 449, P.P.J.G.W.; W. Roach, 49; J. T. Briggs, P.M. 159; E. F. Pierdon, 948; H. Webb, P.M. 72, 193, 890; J. H. Bedwell, I.G. 861; J. D. White, J.W. 190; and A. Clemow, 858. Bros. W. Garrett, and J. Ford were raised; Bros. R. Kearns, S. Ward, C. C. Cruikshanks, and J. H. Grant, were passed, and Messrs. W. G. Smith, W. Davey, F. W. Dimsdale, and H. A. Dimsdale, initiated. The brethren afterwards banqueted together and honoured the usual toasts.

WEST SMITHFIELD LODGE (No. 1623).—At the New Market Hotel, King-street, Snow Hill, West Smithfield, on Thursday, January 17th, the regular meeting of this well established lodge was held. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., Bro. T. W. Adams, who was out of town, the I.P.M., Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., Treas., presided, and he initiated Mr. Samuel Hume, raised Bros. W. McCluer Butt, C. Goodwin, J. Chapman, and W. Marton, and passed Bros. Howard, all the work being well done. Some candidates were proposed for initiation and a brother for joining. Business ended, the lodge was closed, and adjourned to meet on Thursday, March 21st, at three o'clock p.m. The banquet followed, well served by the host, Bro. T. Butt, and his two sons, who were unremitting in their attention to the comfort of all. There were present Bros. G. S. Elliot, S.W.; J. J. Howes, P.M., J.W.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., Sec.; J. Johnson, S.D.; A. Black, W.M. 186, I.G.; W. Pennefather, P.M., D.C.; W. Malthouse, Stwd.; T. McButt, W.S.; E. Mallett, W.M. 141, acting as J.D.; and several others. Visitors: Bros. E. Clark, 1587; W. Malton, 1423; and others.

EVENING STAR LODGE (No. 1719).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. A. J. Duff Filer, W.M., presiding. There were also present Bros. Hartley, as S.W.; Kirkham, J.W.; James Glaisher, P.M., P.G.D., Treas.; Magnus Ohren, P.M., Sec.; William Sugg, S.D.; I. A. Greene, J.D.; J. W. Sugg, D.C.; H. Greene, G. C. Trewby, Joseph Mainwaring, F. W. Hartley, Samuel Cutler, Edward Hide, and John Johnson. Visitors: Bros. E. Crombie, 1623; W. Miller, 1326; Hyde Pullen,

P.G.S.B.; John Methuen, 452; H. Massey, P.M. 619, (Freemason.) Messrs. John West, and Thos. Henry Martin were initiated, and Bros. J. W. C. Holmes, J. Manwaring, E. Hide, and G. C. Trewby were passed. The ceremony of passing was performed by the W.M., and that of initiation by Bro. Magnus Ohren. This being an emergency meeting, there was no other business before the lodge, and the brethren after closing lodge dined together at Freemasons' Tavern. The toasts were afterwards proposed, and Bro. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B., responded for "The Grand Officers," of whom there are no less than three who are members of this lodge, the W.M., Bro. James Glaisher, and Bro. Hyde Pullen. The W.M. next proposed "The Initiates," and included in that toast the four candidates for passing, who when initiated at last emergency meeting, had not an opportunity of replying to the toast, as the brethren separated without dining together. The W.M. said that he had the pleasure of welcoming all these brethren as members of the Craft, and he hoped that though young in Masonry, they would find in their progress that Masonry was much to their satisfaction, and that they would never regret joining it, and especially in that particular lodge. They were placed that evening in the seat of honour, and until they advanced to the post of Master or P.M., they would never have so distinguished a post again. Bro. West, in responding said that of course as he was only an initiate he hardly knew how to begin, but he could only say that he was very pleased to be there that evening, and to have had the special privilege of being initiated in that particular lodge. He felt that it was a particular favour, and a special privilege because there were so many kind friends of his in it. Although he had been many years in a provincial town in England, he found himself a stranger there, and in an isolated position. If Masonry was what he imagined it was, it was a matter which must be very comfortable on that account, because there must be a brotherly feeling existing between the members of the Craft, which men did not get at in an isolated position in a provincial town. The isolation of men who were not Masons might perhaps arise from their not putting themselves forward, to mix with people they came in contact with. Perhaps it might not be prudent on all occasions to do that, but going back to some eighteen years ago, he was impressed with the importance of Freemasonry. His grandfather was a very energetic Mason at Northampton in a very old lodge there, shortly before his death, intimated to him in an indirect way the advantages of Freemasonry, saying that its principles were sound and founded upon a rock, and that therefore they ought to be what every human being should desire and wish for. He had never forgotten the remarks the old gentleman made to him on a special occasion a short time before he died, and he (Bro. West) gathered from it that Masonry was founded on a sure and firm basis, and seeing that he had to go in the world he thought it would be a nice thing to be a Mason and to know the people with whom he had to do. He had never been able to know these people so much as he had that night, and he felt already now that he had gone through a portion of the ceremony safe, and very pleased that he had had the privilege of joining a body who met together as brothers, especially in connection with the special line of life which he followed. This must make them feel a deeper interest in each other than they had felt heretofore. Being isolated as they were they felt they would like to know each other better than they had. He did not know whether he was going astray, as he was young in Masonry; but he could not help expressing himself although in a very rude and rough way, because he did not expect to be called upon to say anything. Still, he could not help expressing his feelings and how much indebted he was, not only for the brotherly kindness he had received that evening and before hand. He hoped and trusted that Bro. Martin and himself would strive to make themselves efficient. He was very anxious already to know what all the stars and stripes, and diamonds, and collars, and everything the brethren wore meant, and he felt that he and Bro. Martin were very desirous of getting some of them upon them. Bro. Trewby wished that when he was at Constantinople he had had an opportunity to join the Freemasons. All his friends there were Masons, but he was at that time only nineteen years of age, and he did not like to tell them he was so young. He held a very good position there, but it would have added very much to his enjoyment of the country if he had joined a Masonic lodge. Now that he had joined he should make up for lost time, and prove himself worthy of being admitted to the Order. Bro. James Glaisher proposed "The Health of the W.M." The brethren were all exceedingly anxious about his health. At the consecration of the lodge he was ill, but he had been to the seaside for sometime, and when he came back to London he said he was a good deal better. The brethren hoped that that better health would continue, and become better and better. The toast having been enthusiastically honoured, the W.M. replied, and said this was the first occasion that he had had the pleasure of meeting the brethren at banquet, where they could give utterance to their sentiments as they had been able to do that evening, since the memorable occasion when the lodge was consecrated, and when the brethren would remember, he cut rather a sorry figure. (No, no.) He bore up against it as well and as long as he could, but he was obliged through positive suffering to leave at last. As Bro. Glaisher had said, he went out of town, and he hoped by the care he had taken of himself since, he had laid the foundation of better health. The brethren could not imagine how much he regretted being ill on the occasion of the consecration, because anything like that on the inauguration of a new era, threw a damper on the brethren, and was not consonant with those agreeable feelings which the brethren should then have. But the brethren were all very kind and gracious to him then, and he was sure they felt, as it had been expressed by the Treasurer and responded to by the brethren that they were very pleased he was among them again. As he had said at the consecration, it was a curious thing that after thirty-five years of Masonry, after having received the honours of Masonry, he should be performing the duties of W.M. of a lodge; but they all knew the cause. They seemed to be looking round for a W.M., and they thought it best to look on the oldest man in the profession of gas engineering in England, or at all events in the Metropolis. He accepted the office, thinking that having made his mark in the profession and having secured a competency in his pocket that it would be ungracious to turn his back on old friends. It was with that view he accepted the office, and he had never regretted it, because he had the brethren's support in the excellent manner in which he knew most of them could perform the ceremonies. He had been supported that evening by Bro. Ohren, who thought that he (the W.M.) would be fatigued if he went through the whole of the ceremonies. It was a very kind offer, and he felt that an offer so kindly made should be accepted. He had also to thank Bro. Sugg who kindly acted as P.M., and Bro. Hartley as S.W. This meeting had been a very happy meeting both in lodge and out of lodge. He had to thank Bro. Treasurer for his kind expressions towards him, and the brethren for adopting those sentiments in the way they had done. The W.M. then proposed "The Visitors" to which Bro. Crombie replied. The W.M. then proposed "The Masonic Institution," and said that no lodge ever separated without drinking to the success of the glorious charities of the Order. The younger members of the Craft were not supposed to know much about them, and therefore we would inform the initiates that Freemasons had three very noble Institutions, the Benevolent Institution the Boys' School and the Girls' School. Bro. J. W. Sugg was steward of another lodge for the Girls' School, and any support to members of this lodge might be disposed to give him he would be very glad to accept. Bro. J. W. Sugg replied and told the brethren that he thought no greater proof of the value of Masonry, not only in its profession, but in its practice, than the Masonic Institutions. There were two sides to everything, and in Masonry there was a pleasurable side in the latter case, and the pleasure consisted in being able to relieve him. On behalf of the charities, he thanked Masonry generally for the noble efforts made for some years past to support the Institutions, when he passed the chair of his lodge, and had a jewel presented to him, he thought, pleasurable as it was, there were something on the other side; if there were pleasure, there was suffering, and if there was suffering, he ought to do something for its relief. He could not do it all at once, and therefore he had taken up the cause of the Girls' School. He became Steward for the lodge of which he had been the Master, and he hoped for the support of the brethren of the Evening Star Lodge, which would be thankfully received and faithfully applied. The W.M. proposed "The Health of the Treasurer and Secretary," to which Bro. James Glaisher responded, and the toast of "The Officers," having also been proposed and responded to, the brethren separated. Bros. Ohren, Combie, and others contributed to the harmony of the evening by singing some capital songs.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo (No. 13).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 9th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, William-street, Bro. G. W. Reed, W.M., presiding. The following officers were present:—J. Primus Moore S.W.; T. Hutton, J.D.; H. Syer, Sec., N. Brown, S.D.; G. H. Masters, J.D.; T. Hosgood, I.G.; T. E. Hassel, D.C.; and B. Norman, Tyler. Among the visitors were H. J. Wetherill, P.M. 166, I.C.; H. Harding, 1536; W. Lacy, 700; J. Davis, 1437; C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason); and others. After raising Bro. Akers to the Sublime Degree, the W.M. closed the lodge in due form, and at the refreshment board, Bro. Moore, in the absence of a P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," regretting that it should not have fallen into abler hands, though none could do it more willingly and heartily than himself. Bro. Reed in reply said no one regretted the absence of a Past Master more than he did. Of course they could not expect to see their I.P.M., Bro. Pownall, who was now at Dover, and unfortunately Bro. G. Davies, who was the "backbone" of the lodge, was unavoidably absent. He felt nervous in their absence, and that had prevented him from carrying out the work to his own satisfaction. He was young in the chair yet, but he trusted at their next meeting to be able to get over that feeling. In proposing the toast of "The Visitors," he paid a high compliment to Bro. Jolly for his excellent reports of their meetings in the Freemason, and strongly advocated the claims of that paper to their support. In it they would find a rich fund of Masonic lore, that would be of inestimable value to the student, and yet not one word that the most fastidious could find fault with, so far as regarded the exposure of their secret arts to the uninitiated. (Applause.) For himself he was always glad to see it on his table, and his friends and family perusing it, for in it one of the most beautiful articles he has ever read had shown what a "Freemason" really was. He alluded to one entitled "What is a Freemason," in the last issue? and advised them all to read it. Bro. Wetherill, who had lately come home from Constantinople, responded, and said he found a little difference in the working here and in the East. He had seen it in Turkish, Armenian, Italian, French, Irish, and Scotch lodges, but whatever the difference the principles inculcated were the same. He then alluded to the action of the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and its repudiation of the Grand Orient of France, and said that action would be endorsed by every true Mason. Bro. Jolly as well briefly replied. "The Officers of the Lodge," was responded to by Bro. Hutton, and then the Tyler's toast concluded the business of the evening.

HASTINGS.—Derwent Lodge (No. 40).—The installation meeting of this old lodge was held on Monday, the 14th January, by dispensation, at the New Claremont Rooms, Hastings, and St. Leonard's Observer office, when Bros. A. R. Croucher, M.D., J.P.; Pro G. Steward, W.M., presided. A ballot was taken for and resulted in favour of Bro. F. Plowman, Lodge 838, Boston, as joining member. Bro. H. F. Crosswhite having given proof of his proficiency, he retired when the lodge was opened in the Third Degree. The R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Sir Walter W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., accompanied by a large majority of his Prov. Grand Officers, was then announced, and received with the usual honours. The W.M. having offered the gavel to the R.W. P. Grand Master, and that offer having been with his usual courtesy declined, the W.M. then proceeded with the work of the evening, and raised Bro. H. F. Crosswhite in his wonted admirable manner. The lodge having been resumed to the Second Degree, Bro. T. Trollope, M.A., P.P.G.S.W., P.M., then presented to the W.M. the W.M. elect, who took the usual obligations. The lodge was then resumed to the Third Degree; when the ceremony of installation was performed at the request of the W.M., by Bro. T. Trollope, M.A., P.P.G.S.W., P.M., in his usual effective manner so well known throughout the province. The board of Installed Masters, which numbered twenty-nine brethren, included R.W. P.G.M. Sir W. Burrell, the W.D.P.G.M., J. H. Scott, Bros. J. P. Freeman, W.P.G.S.; T. H. Crouch, P.G.J.D.; G. A. Wallis, P.G.S. of Works; J. M. Kidd, P.G.D.C.; C. Sandeman, P.A.G.D.C.; Alfred King, P.G. Organist; W. S. Nell, P.G.S.; W. S. Farncomb, P.G.S.; T. Trollope, M.D., P.P.G.S.W.; W. Davies, P.P.G.R.; C. W. Duke, P.P.G.S.D.; G. Wellard, P.P.G.D.C.; T. H. Cole, M.A., P.P.G.A.D.C.; J. Howell, P.P.G.S. of W.; W. Lamborn, P.P.G.P.; J. Dorman, P.P.G.J.D.; C. M. Norris, P.M. 40; John S. Terry, P.M. 507; O. N. Wyatt, W.M. 38; G. M. Pragnell, P.M. 310; F. J. Rubie, W.M. 441; S. F. Foat, W.M. 315; A. Whitfield, W.M. 914; C. R. Chandler, W.M. 1184; G. Stone, W.M. 1303; G. B. M. Whinne, W.M. 1466; J. M. Cunningham, P.P.G.S.W. The officers appointed were Bros. W. Gleinster, S.W.; F. Rossiter, J.W.; Rev. A. Hodges, B.A., Chaplain; G. Wellard, P.P.G.D.C., P.M., Treasurer; John S. Terry, P.M., Secretary; A. Wells, S.D.; Captain E. W. J. Hennah, J.D.; G. M. Wilkins, I.G.; W. D. Davis, Organist; T. Trollope, M.D., P.P.G.S.W., D.C.; J. Attersol, Tyler. The W.M., in investing the Treasurer, drew attention to the fact of his having been appointed to that office for the 28th time. Bro. T. Trollope, M.D., P.P.G.S.W., P.M., on the proposition of the I.P.M. and seconding of Bro. C. W. Duke, P.P.G.S.D., P.M., was elected unanimously as members on the Prov. Charities Committee to represent this lodge. The jewel voted to the retiring W.M. was then presented, and regret was expressed by the W.M. at the absence, through illness, of Bro. W. Langley, P.M., to whom a similar token of esteem had been voted. "Hearty Good Wishes" to the W.M. and brethren from the undermentioned: J. T. Miller, 19; J. W. Watts, S.W., 507; D. Malpas, 1559; J. H. W. R. Burrell, 1465; E. Valentine, 15; J. B. Sargent, 1184. The W.M. received a telegram from the W.M. of the South Saxons, 311, expressing his regret at not being able to attend. There were also present the following members of the lodge: Bro. A. L. Ward, F. H. Parsons, J. C. Kenwood, S. T. Waston, J. W. Markwick, J. Pearce, T. Hulburd, A. Harwood, F. de B. Cooper, H. J. Goldbold, W. H. Russell, W. L. Vernon, C. G. Nairne, A. W. Elliott, G. S. Grey, C. D. Jones, C. Coleman, T. H. W. Wadd, Rev. J. F. Forbes. Bro. T. Brassey, M.P. for Hastings, unable to attend the lodge, was present at the banquet, which took place at the Castle Hotel.

PENZANCE.—Mount Sinai Lodge (No. 121).—A meeting of this lodge was held last week, when Bro. H. Kinsman was installed as W.M. by Bro. Boase, P.M. The Board of Installed Masters included Bros. R. Lovell, J. Maxwell, and I. Levin, Past Masters of 121; F. Beringer, F. Jeffrey, jun., W.M. 318; and G. B. Pearce, I.P.M. 318. After installation the W.M. invested his officers as follows: Bros. R. Lovell, I.P.M.; J. J. Taylor, S.W.; A. O. Michell, J.W.; Rev. R. W. Aitken, Chap.; C. Read, Treas.; J. Lovell, Sec.; G. H. Small, S.D.; F. Holman, J.D.; M. Sampson, I.G.; T. Reynolds, D.C.; N. Jenkins, S.S.; T. Palmer, J.S.; and R. Reynolds, Tyler. The banquet was held in the evening at the Western Hotel.

TRURO.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 131).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held last week, and was attended by a large number of brethren desirous of paying respect to the W.M. elect, Bro. William J. Hugan, P.M., P.S.G.D., England, whose researches in Masonic lore have obtained for him renown, not only in England, but in the United States and other parts of the world, and whose works have been translated into several languages. At the opening of the lodge Bro. E. Edwards, W.M., presided, and the ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. Thomas Chirgwin, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., (Mayor of Truro), who installed Bro. Hugan in the Master's chair in 1868. The Board of P.M.'s included Bros. W. Lake, P.P.G.R.; R. John, P.P.G.D.C.; W. J. Johns, P.P.G.R.; J. R. Crewes, and J. T. Tillman, all of 131, together with Bros. John Thomas, 589, Redruth; J. R. Collins, P.P.S.B. 339, Bodmin; W. F. Sharp, 331, Truro; W. H. Jenkins, P.P.G.S.W. 331; S. Serpell, P.P.G.R. 331; and F. W. Dobb, P.R.J.G.W. 589. After the installation, the W.M. appointed and invested Bros. E. Edwards, I.P.M.; J. H. Sampson, S.W.; J. C. Furniss, J.W.; T. Chirgwin, P.M., Treasurer; W. Porter, Secretary; R. Lean, S.D.; S. Richards, J.D.; H. Toope, Organist; J. A. McKinsey, D.C.; W. B. Morris, I.G.; J. Langdon, Tyler. Bro. S. Holloway, P.M., P.P.J.G.D., was appointed Steward to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund. The banquet was held at the Red Lion Hotel, and sixty brethren sat down to it. Amongst the guests besides those mentioned were the following:—Bros. Sir James Hogg, Bart., M.P., 53 (Royal Sussex); E. T. Carlyon, P.P.S.G.W.; W. Tweedy, P.P.G. Treasurer; J. F. Hooper, S.W. 609; J. Wallace, S.W. 75; Rev. W. F. Fry, P.P.G.C. (Rutland); and J. Jeffery, J.W. 331. The W.M., in giving the toast of "The Queen," mentioned the fact that her Majesty had nearly 200 votes for the Masonic Charities.

NEWPORT.—(Isle of Wight) Albany Lodge (No. 151).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall on the 3rd inst., for the installation of Bro. D. S. Pring, S.W., the Worshipful Master elect for the ensuing year. There was a very good muster of the brethren. The ceremony of the installation was ably and impressively performed by the W.M., Bro. J. Parkes. After the ceremony the W.M., appointed the following brethren as his officers: Bros. J. Parkes, I.P.M.; H. E. M. Hughes, S.W.; J. Golden, J.W.; George Wyatt, P.M., Treas.; J. White, Sec.; the Rev. Watts, P.M., Chap.; B. W. Tilley, S.D.; C. O. Harris, J.D.; R. B. Chiserton, P.M., D.C.; F. W. Beach, I.G.; C. King, Organist; H. T. Dashwood, Tyler; Lock and Ross, Stewards. The brethren subsequently adjourned to Bro. T. E. Bull's Warburton Hotel, where they sat down to an excellent banquet. The W.M. presided, supported by his officers. About 45 brethren were present.

RYDE.—East Medina Lodge (No. 175).—The W. Master elect of this lodge, Mr. George Pack, was installed on Wednesday, Jan. 16th, in the presence of a large attendance of its own members, and those from the neighbouring lodges. Bro. F. Newman, P.M., acted as installing Master in his usual impressive manner. The following brethren were appointed by the W.M. as his officers for the year: Bros. J. Lowe, S.W.; W. T. Brook, J.W.; F. Newman, Treas.; F. Carter, Sec.; A. P. Wilkes, S.D.; E. P. Padden, J.D.; B. Marvin, D.C.; E. Groves, I.G.; A. Alyward, Org.; M. Willis, Tyler; F. Jones, Trewin, and Smith, Stewards. At 5.30, the brethren sat down to a most excellent banquet at the Royal Pier Hotel, and the way in which Bro. Barnes had catered, was heartily appreciated by all. After the banquet the loyal and Masonic toasts were given and a pleasant evening was passed.

WINDSOR.—Etonian Lodge of St. John (No. 209).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Windsor, on Saturday, the 5th inst. Present: Bros. C. D. Hume, P.G.S., W.M.; Roberts, P.G.S., S.W.; E. Schiemann, J.W.; Wilson, P.M. Treas.; Carter, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., Sec.; Pears, J.D.; Cousins, I.G.; Tolley, P.M. Organist; Evans, S. Reid, P.M.; Dixon, P.P.G.D.C., P.M.; Denne, P.M.; Stedwell, P.M.; Cockburn, P.M.; Bryett, P.G.S. of Works, P.M.; Briggs, P.M.; and a large number of the members of the lodge. Visitors: Bros. Sir D. Gooch, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of the Province; Col. Burdett, Provincial Grand Master of Middx.; Bradley, Prov. G. Sec.; Biggs, P.P.G. Sec.; Scott, W.M. 771; Terry, 241; Smith, 574; Simmons, P.M. 902; Bancebrook, 177; Hardy, 190; Cox, J.W. 1566; Bolton, 1566; T. Bryett, 834; Barton, 771; Cole, 742; Elsam, W.M. 201; Burrell, P.M. 1446; Swallow, P.M. 381; Read, P.M. 511; Nash, P.M. 865; Needham, P.M. 865; Cantrell, S.D. 771, and P.M. 1501; Johnson, 771; Fleck, J.W. 771; Davey, 1566. After the Auditors' balance sheet had been presented and received, the W.M., Bro. C. D. Hume, installed Bro. E. Schiemann as W.M. for the ensuing year, who afterwards invested the following brethren as officers in the lodge, Bros. Roberts, S.W.; Wilson, P.M. (re-invested) Treasurer; Carter, P.M. (re-invested) Secretary; Pears, S.D.; Cousins, J.D.; Tolley, P.M. Organist; Evans, I.G.; Dixon, P.M., D.C.; Dick Radclyffe, A.D.C.; Andrews and Apted, Stewards; Kent, Tyler. The ceremony of installation (including the addresses) was done in Bro. Hume's well known style. The first official act of the W.M. was to invest the I.P.M. with the usual P.M. jewel. The Secretary read letters of apology from Bros. Gen. Brownrigg, Provincial Grand Master for Surrey; the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, and the Rev. J. P. Purey Cust, the new D.P.G. Master of the province, who were unable to attend. Four candidates for initiation and two joining members were proposed, and the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren then adjourned to the White Hart Hotel, where the banquet was served, at the conclusion of which the usual toasts were proposed. In addition to the usual floral and fern decorations there were placed on the tables some splendid displays from the artistic establishment of Bro. Dick Radclyffe, of High Holborn, who "worked" up a variety of very appropriate and novel designs in exotics and other choice flowers; amongst them the Square, Level, Plumb-line, Five Points of Fellowship, Square and Compasses, &c.; the beauty and exquisite designs of which were a source of much admiration and praise. The Worshipful Master, in giving the toast of "The Queen and Craft," said: In the royal borough of Windsor he could add little in admiration of the virtues of the royal lady whose name was first in the loyal love of the Craft. The W.M. next gave "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England, and the rest of the Royal Family." They had a Royal Prince, their future King, at the head of the Craft, who shed a lustre upon their Order; while his brother Princes were also with the Craft, and taking as much interest in them as their elder brother had done. He sought their enthusiasm for the toast. The W.M. asked especial honour for the toast of "The Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Officers of Grand Lodge of England," with which he coupled the honoured name of Bro. Col. Burdett, P.G.M. Middlesex. Colonel Burdett expressed the great pleasure it afforded him to be present that evening, and he thanked the W.M. for the honour of associating his name with the toast. His heart had ever been with the brotherhood of Freemasonry, and he was no stranger to the Etonian Lodge of St. John. He had been greatly impressed with what he had witnessed that evening in the mother lodge of the province; and it was simple justice to the I.P.M. to say how pleased he was at the unexceptionable manner in which he had conducted the installation. He had never seen better, from first to last, than the working of the I.P.M. He had set an example that would be well to follow; but it would be difficult to excel. It gave him the utmost pleasure to respond to the toast. (Cheers.) The W. Master said the next toast, he felt assured, would be received with the utmost pleasure and acclamation—"The Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master, Sir Daniel Gooch." (Loud applause.) He had not the eloquence to do justice to the talents and qualifications of the Provincial Grand Master of the royal borough and county; but he could put it in a homely phrase, which would go to their hearts, when he said they had "the right man in the right place." (Loud cheers.) He asked them to drink the toast in bumpers. Sir D. Gooch thanked them sincerely for the heartiness of their feeling towards him, as expressed in their manner of drinking their toast. It was a great pleasure for him to be with the Etonian Lodge that evening, and to see what there was in the Etonian Lodge; the wisdom of charge as applied to the Etonian Lodge was apparent; and showed the advantage of having a lodge of their own. All he had seen that night was excellence itself. If he were to tax his energies and talk for a month, not knowing when to leave off when he once started, he could say no more than that the work of that evening was admirable, and to the utmost creditable in its excellence, and gave character to the Etonian Lodge. (Cheers.) He always spoke with sincerity and openly. He had been asked a question as to the desirability of the division of the two Provinces of Bucks and Berks, as had been proposed. To that he was going to answer openly that he had no sympathy with the proposed change, which he could not think would prove wise or advantageous. There were in all, only sixteen lodges in the two counties, nine in Berks, and seven in Bucks. Did they think sixteen lodges in all, too many for the united province, and was it prudent or desirable to divide them? Was sixteen too many, that they should cut them in two? ("No, no.") He could not help holding the opinion that the proposition was a mistake. He had an objection to putting every Mason in purple. He had always felt, both in Berks and Wiltshire, that they should make purple a mark for zeal, energy, and Masonic excellence. It should be the fitting honour for good service; and go only to men who had done services to deserve it. If they had very small provinces, it would be difficult to get on without the indiscriminate extension of purple. Berks and Bucks had worked satisfactorily and well together; and they were not too strong in character to warrant them in dissolving the bond. (Hear, hear.) They had been enabled to organize a system of charity that had not been surpassed. He felt sorry, therefore, at the step taken, because he considered it a source of weakness. He should not himself take any active personal part against what had been proposed, but those who had taken such steps, were aware he was not with them in the matter. He had but one object in view, and that was for the prosperity and good of the Craft. If they thought the prospect a wise one, not one word from him would be urged against their wishes. When asked his opinion, as he probably might be, by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, he should reply as candidly as he had spoken that night. The settlement laid amongst themselves, and whatever they decided, would have his hearty good wishes. He thanked them sincerely from his heart, and he hoped on many future occasions to meet the brethren of the Etonian Lodge (loud cheers). The W. Master gave "The Provincial Grand Officers of the Province, Past and Present," and associated with it the name of Bro. Bradley. Bro. Bradley returned thanks. P. M. C. E. Hume called upon the company to charge their glasses, and drink with him all the honour they could give the W.M., Brother E. Schiemann. It was his duty for the first time to propose what might be said to be the toast of the evening, the health of the W.M. of the Etonian Lodge. Time was on the wing, and the clock told menacingly against long speeches. He was not gifted with oratory, but he could say that the lodge had in Brother Schiemann "the right man in the right place." He knew that was second hand, because the W.M. had also applied those words elsewhere; but still they were words of truth. In Bro. Schiemann the Etonian Lodge possessed one who during his year of office would set an example that would be worthy of following by those who succeeded him. He regretted his poverty of language prevented him applying more strength to his wishes in asking them to cordially accept from him the toast of their Worshipful Master. The W.M. scarcely knew how to thank Bro. Hume for the kind manner in which words expressed, or the brethren for the heartiness of its reception. He knew he did not deserve so much from them, but he would strive to deserve it. The present was the proudest moment of his life. Though a foreigner they had always taken kindly to him. There was a little prejudice in England against foreigners (no, no)—except Freemasons. Freemasons were spread all over the world, and they were a band of united brothers, and knew nothing about "foreigners." As had been said, time was on the wing, and he could only promise he would try to prove by deeds how much he esteemed the proud position they had placed him in that night. (Cheers.) The W.M. said he would put the two next toasts together, "The Past Masters of the Etonian Lodge," and couple with it "The Name of the I.P.M., Bro. Hume." Bro. Hume returned thanks in a short and terse speech. He thought he should not have come that night if he had known he would have had to listen to the many kind things that had been said of him; he, too, felt the high honour in which he had been placed in returning thanks for the Past Masters of the Etonian Lodge. It was the unity in the Etonian Lodge that made them strong, and got them all on so well together (hear, hear), for all the Past Masters took the greatest interest and gave their help. He regretted his poverty of language prevented his better expressing his thanks; but if he was poor in thanks, such as he had he gave to them most heartily. (Loud cheers.) Some other toasts followed, but the train to London being just due, the meeting was virtually closed with the last toast. The musical talent of Messrs. Folley, Bolton, and Cox, added very considerably to the evening's enjoyment.

HELSTON.—Lodge True and Faithful (No. 318).—The members of the lodge celebrated the annual festival of St. John the Evangelist, last week. The brethren assembled at the Masonic Rooms, at 1.30 p.m., when the lodge was opened in due form. Two candidates for the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry were then accepted, and initiated in the First Degree. The ceremony of installing the W.M. elect, Bro. J. Jeffery, S.W., was then ably and impressively performed by Bro. Joyce, W.M., assisted by Bros. A. J. Grant, P.M. and H. Trembath, P.M. Bro. Jeffery, after expressing his appreciation of the high honour conferred upon himself, invested the following as his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. T. J. Joyce, I.P.M.; R. Sedgman James, Senior Warden; W. Wearne, Junior Warden; Rev. W. H. Bloxome, M.A., P.P.G.C., Chaplain; T. N. Curry, P.P.G.S.D., Treasurer; J. Q. James, P.M., Secretary; R. Arthur, Senior Deacon; Josiah Rowe, Junior Deacon; W. E. Lukies, D. of Ceremonies; J. Willey, Organist; J. Moyses Pascoe, Inner Guard; W. Ellis and R. Dunstan, Stewards; Richard James, Tyler; H. Trembath, P.M., Steward of Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund. The brethren then adjourned to the "Angel" Hotel, where an excellent banquet was prepared and served by Bro. Dawe. The usual Masonic toasts were enthusiastically drunk, interspersed with songs, &c., and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present. The visiting brethren were Bro. Jas. Lovell, jun., No. 121, and Bro. Stephens, from Pennsylvania.

SANDBACH.—Samaritan Lodge (No. 368).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the George Hotel on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at two o'clock p.m. The W.M., Bro. H. Makin, was supported by his officers and above thirty brethren, including Bros. G. W. Latham, P.G.D. of England; J. Tomlinson, P.M., P.P.G.D. of C.; John Bowes, P.M., P.P.J.G.W. C. and W.; J. R. Tomlinson, P.M.; Gilbert, P.M., P.P.G.P.; Rev. Lunt Jones, S.W., W.M. elect, and others. The lodge was opened in due form, when the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when two brethren claimed preferment, and in due time were raised. The lodge was lowered, when Bro. Bowes was invited to act as Installing Master, and having taken the chair, the W.M. elect, Bro. Jones, was presented and duly installed, according to ancient custom. After labour the brethren went to refreshment, and spent a pleasant evening.

BATH.—Lodge of Honour (No. 379).—The first meeting under the new officers was held on Monday, January 14, at the Masonic Hall, at 8 p.m., but unfortunately, several of them were unavoidably absent. The lodge was opened by Bro. H. Culliford Hopkins, W.M., supported by Bros. Dr. Henry Hopkins, P.P.G.S.W., as I.P.M.; F. Wilkinson, W.M. 41, as S.W.; Dutton, P.M. 885, as J.W.; H. Gore, P.M. and Treasurer; Johnson, Secretary; Rev. Saunderson, J.D.; Davis, P.M. and I.G. Loder, P.M.; Gazzard, Tyler; several members; and as visitors, Bros. Beckett, P.M. 906; Watts, P.M. 855; Peach, 41; W. Baldwin, 41. The minutes having been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for Bro. Lyell as a joining member, and Mr. R. B. Stewart as a candidate for initiation, which, in each case, was unanimously favourable. The Treasurer read the financial report, as examined and passed by the Auditors, which was adopted. Bro. Dr. H. Hopkins then took the W.M.'s chair, and initiated the candidate, also explaining the symbolism of the working tools and giving the charge. The W.M. resumed his chair, and though he had intended to give the lecture on the first Tracing Board, for several reasons deferred it till the next meeting. Other business was transacted, a vote of thanks to the visitors was passed, especially to the brother who had officiated in the ceremony, and the lodge was closed at 10 o'clock.

BANGOR.—St. David's Lodge (No. 384).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this ancient lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 15th inst., at the lodge-room, Bangor, Bro. John Ellis, P.M. St. Cybi, being installing officer. The following brethren were installed:—D. Wynn Williams, W.M.; A. M'Millan, I.P.M.; W. Jarvis, S.W.; D. Cameron, J.W.; Ellis Roberts, S.D. and Sec.; W. E. Thomas, J.D.; John Jones, S.S. and Org.; M. Roberts, J.S.; R. Owen, Treas.; W. Jones, P.M., Tyler. After the closing of the lodge, a banquet took place at the Castle Hotel, the W.M. presiding. The visitors included Bros. J. S. Boucher, P.G.C. P.M. 606; Tysilio Johnson, P.M. 1013, 755; J. Salmon, P.P.G.J.W.; T. Coxhead, J.S. 1671; L. H. Aronson, 906; Banks, P.P.G.S.W.; and others.

SPALDING.—Hundred of Elloe Lodge (No. 466).—It is many years since, if ever, such a large gathering of the fraternity has been witnessed in the "good old town of Spalding," as that which assembled last Thursday week to do honour to Bro. G. F. Barrell, who was then installed W.M. of this ancient lodge. After reading the minutes, Bro. Woodrow, P.M., P.P.G.J.D., raised Bro. Edmund Cammack to the Sublime Degree of M.M., and in the hands of this gifted exponent of the ritual of Masonry it would be difficult to imagine anything more impressive. Indeed, nearly the whole of the lodges in the south of the province have been indebted to Bro. Woodrow at one time or other for most eloquent rendering of all the ceremonies of the Craft, and he is thoroughly looked to as the standard of perfection to which every working brother in the province should strive to attain. Bro. Harmstone, the Organist of the lodge, most effectively rendered appropriate music in this and the subsequent ceremonies, thus much increasing the interest and solemnity. The lodge being reduced to the First Degree, the W.M., Bro. Jas. Robinson (who has laboured hard during his Mastership to render accurately all the ceremonies he has performed) initiated Mr. J. R. Capps, and the lodge being again raised the installation ceremony proceeded. It was understood that Bro. J. Terry, P.M. 228, P.G.D.C., Herts, and Sec. R.M.B.I., would officiate as Installing Master, and additional interest was thereby excited in the proceedings, and no brother, be his rank or Masonic experience what it may, could have been disappointed. Throughout the whole ceremony not a word escaped without its proper effect, and Bro. Terry held the breathless attention of the lodge—a silence at times almost painful. The Board of Installed Masters numbered no less than twenty-four—a number rarely, if ever, congregated at a private lodge in this province. On the re-admission of the brethren, the W.M. invested his officers as follows, addressing at the same time a few most telling and well-chosen words to each, viz:—Bros. J. Robinson, I.P.M.; Marten Perry, S.W.; J. F. Symes, J.W.; Fountain, P.M., P.P.G.P., Treasurer (for the eleventh time); Giles W. Ham, Secretary; J. Laming, S.D.; J. Benner, J.D.; Woodrow, P.M., P.P.G.J.D., D.C.; J. T. Harmstone, Organist; A. Harrison, I.G. The I.G. was also invested with a new and very handsome sword, which the W.M. presented to the lodge in addition to the other furniture. The lodge was then called off for refreshment, and loving cups were for a few minutes passed freely round. On labour being resumed, the newly-installed Master addressed the brethren, thanking them for having raised him to the proud position of their Master, asking their help and co-operation in carrying out the work of the lodge, claiming their patience towards himself, and urging punctuality throughout the coming year. The W.M. also dwelt upon Bro. Terry's great kindness in coming down to install him, and expressing the thanks of both himself and the brethren for the great treat they had had in the ceremony so ably performed. Bro. Terry replied, assuring the lodge that no one could be more gratified than himself in being present on so interesting an occasion, and after a unanimous vote of thanks had been proposed by the I.P.M., to the W.M., for his liberal presentations to the lodge, it was closed in form by the W.M. The brethren then adjourned to the Corn Exchange, where a sumptuous banquet had been provided by Bro. Harper. The tables were decorated with a very beautiful collection of hothouse ferns and plants in pots, as well as cut flowers from the fine collection of the W.M., who is known as one of the most enthusiastic and able amateur horticulturists in Lincolnshire. The labours of the "knife and fork degree" being ended, grace, "To Thee Alone," was beautifully sung by Bros. Montem Smith, T. G. Carter, and Theodore Distin, whose talents in this line are so well known throughout the kingdom, and who contributed very materially to the enjoyment of the evening. The W.M. then gave "The Queen and the Craft," and followed by "The Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., the Pro G.M., and the D.G.M." "The Prov. G.M., the D. Prov. G.M., and Present and Past Provincial Officers," to the latter of which Bro. Vise responded, endorsing the remarks respecting the officers of the province, and regretting the absence of the D.P.G.M., whom he had hoped to entertain as his guest. Bro. Harrison, I.G. 469, then gave "The Past Masters," considering that by their counsels, experience and ready help they constitute almost the backbone of the entire system. and Bro. Fountain, P.M. 469, in responding on behalf of the Past Masters, assured the brethren and the W.M. that they would be ever ready to give every assistance in promoting and establishing the science so dear to them all. He trusted that the ancient customs and time-honoured observances would ever be preserved, and especially in the Hundred of Elloe Lodge. Bro. Woodward, P.M. 469, in giving "The W.M." said: "I am sorry I feel quite incompetent to discharge the duty of proposing this toast in any way acceptable to you, with satisfaction to myself or the person to whom it alludes, and although, my brethren, admitting my inability, still on looking down the toast list I see none that requires so few words from the proposer as the one allotted to me. The toast is that of our esteemed and respected W.M., who has this day been installed as our presiding officer for the year, and who I trust will sit most comfortably in the honourable position in which he has been placed by the unanimous vote of the lodge. Yes, brethren, I have the greatest pleasure in proposing the toast, because I believe we have got the right man in the right place, and, if you will allow me the expression, the round peg in the round hole this time. In his election we have had no heartburnings, no casting vote—I have heard of no resignations, and everything has gone 'as happy as the marriage bell,' and my earnest hope and belief is that under our Master the Hundred of Elloe will have a most joyous, most happy, and prosperous year. In our W.M. we have one who is not only respected in our order, but he is one who has the confidence of a very large portion of the citizens of his native town. Very pleasing must it have been to him a short time back, in the building in which we now are, to see the forest of hands held up for him on his being elected to a most important post in carrying out the law for the better education of the rising generation. Yes, we have in our W.M. one who has the tact, the ability, the energy, the will, and the determination to make anything go to which he sets his hand. In him we have a brother who is able to acquit himself with honour and credit to the lodge he represents, no matter how high in social rank they may be into whose company the duties of his office may lead him, and whilst he is able to rub shoulder to shoulder with my Lord Duke or with the Very Rev. the Bishop, we know full well he has the gentlemanliness to hold out the right hand of fellowship to the poorest and most unfortunate Mason that may cross his path. I might go on to speak of his kind and open-hearted generosity, of the debt we owe to him for the handsome way in which he has, at great expense and loss of time beautified and adorned the temple in which we meet, but this has been patent to you all. I therefore ask you to drink in a bumper, health and prosperity to our W.M. with all the enthusiasm it deserves." The toast was received with loud and long-continued cheers. The W.M. expressed his thanks for the honour done him, and said he feared when Bro. Woodward's name was placed to this toast that his partiality might lead him to say much more than was deserved, or than a strict interpretation of language would justify (cries of no, no). He could only say that no effort should be wanting on his part to conduct the lodge according to the purest principles of ancient Freemasonry; no innovations would be attempted under his rule, and if in any minor particulars the lodge had departed from that standard, he should attempt ruthlessly to pull it back again. He hoped the lodge would increase in all the Masonic virtues, for he believed that was the true strength of a lodge, and though new members might be desirable, he would rather see a small lodge of Masonic Masons than a large lodge of unmasonic brethren. In his opinion a man is a Mason in heart and life before his initiation, as he could not imagine that merely going through the ceremony worked a magic change in motives and actions, and great care should therefore be exercised in the selection of candidates at the beginning. The W.M. resumed his seat amid prolonged cheering. Bro. Woodrow, P.M. 469, P.P.G.J.D., then proposed "The Retiring W.M. and Officers." The I. P.M. responded on behalf of himself and officers, thanking the brethren for all their help and confidence, and the officers for their ready co-operation during the past year, assuring them of his undiminished interest in all the affairs of the Craft. "The Other Lodges in the Province," "The Visiting Brethren," "The Newly-initiated," "The Charities," "The Ladies," "The Tyler's toast," were also proposed and suitably acknowledged. Bro. Terry in the course of an eloquent response to "The Charities" touching most feelingly on the irreparable loss the province and the Craft had sustained in the death of Bro. Sutcliffe. Bros. M. Smith, Distin, and Carter continued to entertain the brethren with their vocal powers, as also did Bros. Woodrow and Bolton, to the great delight of all present, and thus terminated certainly the most numerous attended gathering that has taken place in the "Hundred of Elloe."

BIRKENHEAD.—Mersey Lodge (No. 477).—The annual installation meeting of the members of the above lodge, perhaps the strongest in the province of Cheshire, took place on Thursday afternoon, the 10th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Argyle-street, Birkenhead. Bro. W. Pulford, W.M., occupied the chair at the opening of the lodge, and his position was subsequently taken by Bro. Samuel Jones, P.M., Secretary, who initiated two candidates. Bro. Pulford at the conclusion of this ceremony, again took the chair of K.S., and very efficiently installed Bro. John Dutton as the W.M. of the lodge for the ensuing year. The following were the officers appointed elected, and invested: Bros. W. Pulford, I.P.M.; T. Brown, S.W.; W. Bennett, J.W.; D. Fraser, P.M., Treas.; S. Jones, P.M., Secretary (for the fourth time); J. Woolley, S.D.; E. K. Gardiner, J.D.; F. Thompson, I.G.; G. Dicken, D.C.; E. Gross, Organist and S.S.; W. Hopkinson, J.S.; G. Lloyd, A.S.; H. Seaman, A.S.; and Ottaway, Tyler. The retiring W.M., Bro. Pulford, was presented with a P.M.'s jewel in recognition of his valuable services to the lodge, and a letter was read during the evening from Bro. Lord De Tabley, Prov. G.M., expressing regret at inability to attend in consequence of other business.

ST. AUSTELL.—Peace and Harmony Lodge (No. 496).—The annual meeting of this prosperous lodge was held in the New Masonic Hall—a very neat little structure and well-proportioned—close to the County Court—on Tuesday the 8th inst. About twenty or thirty brethren were present, including Bros. T. J. Smith, W.M.; W. Mason, S.W.; Rev. F. B. Paul, P.P.G.C.; E. G. Dyke, P.P.G. Org.; W. Eny, P.P.G.D.C.; and C. Truscott, P.P.G.S.B. Visiting brethren: Revs. G. Ross, P.M., 1121, P.P.G.C.; F. Williams, P.M.; W. H. Durant, W.M. of No. 977; and Bros. N. Lamb, P.M. 977; J. Stephens, P.M. 1151; W. P. Smith, W.M. 856; Emra Holmes, P.M., P.P.G.R., and P.P.G.C., Suffolk. The ordinary business of the lodge having been transacted Bro. Mason, who had been previously elected to that honourable position, was installed into the chair of K.S., and duly obligated as W.M., for the ensuing year, the interesting and impressive ceremony being very ably conducted by Bro. Truscott. The Master then appointed the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year: T. J. Smith, I.P.M.; A. White, S.W.; J. Job, J.W.; R. Stephens, S.D.; A. Luke, J.D.; C. Beggs, I.G.; C. G. Pedlar, D.C.; A. Hodge and B. Ousley, Stewards; Rev. F. B. Paul, Chaplain; W. Eny, Treasurer; C. Tozer, Secretary. The lodge having been duly closed in ancient form and with solemn prayer, the brethren adjourned to the White Boar Hotel where an elegant banquet was spread, to which ample justice was done by some five and twenty of the brethren. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, and the W.M. took occasion to remark that the brethren were specially required to be loyal to the Queen when they remembered she was patron of the Order, and three of her sons held the foremost positions in the Grand Lodge of England. Bro. Ross responded to the toast of the Past and Present Prov. G. Officers, and in doing so passed a very high encomium on the Provincial Grand Master, the Earl of Mount Edgumbe, whose heart was so thoroughly in all that concerned the welfare of Masonry. Bro. Emra Holmes proposed the toast of the Installing Master, Bro. Truscott and spoke in flattering terms of the admirable way in which the installation ceremony had been performed that evening. A number of other toasts followed, including "The Visitors," "Host and Hostess," whose catering on the occasion was warmly eulogised, "The Ladies," and "The Tyler's Toast" brought the formal proceedings to an end. A very pleasant evening was spent. Some of the brethren contributed to the harmony of the evening.

SALISBURY.—Elias de Dereham Lodge (No. 586).—The annual festival of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 10th inst., when there was a numerous attendance of members and visitors to witness the ceremony of installing the W.M. elect, Bro. T. Norwood, S.W. The ceremony was ably performed by Bro. E. Booth, P.P.J.G.W. Hants and Isle of Wight. The W.M. appointed and invested the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year: Bros. F. J. Russell, I.P.M.; A. Tucker, S.W.; H. C. Card, J.W.; J. Rumbold, P.M., Sec.; H. Cross, S.D.; W. Haskell, J.D.; Hannen, I.G.; T. S. Fletcher, P.M., D.C.; J. Folbott and Bartlett, Stewards; Silverthorn, Tyler; and Goodridge, Assist. Tyler. Amongst the members present were Bros. Lord H. F. Thynne, M.P., P.S.G.W. England; Blackmore, P.M., P.P.G. Reg. Wilts; Griffin, P.M.; Stoddart, P.M., P.P.G. Purst. Wilts; Powning, P.M. 1373; Booth, P.M., P.P.J.G.W. Hants and Isle of Wight, &c. The visitors included Bros. Higgs, P.M.; and Cox, 106; Robbins, 472, P.G. Reg., Dorset; Parry, 195; and Butcher, 892. During the evening Bro. P.M. Blackmore on behalf of the lodge presented a handsome P.M.'s jewel to Bro. Russell, I.P.M., and also to Bro. J. Rumbold, P.M., both of whom returned thanks in a graceful and feeling manner. The annual banquet took place after the closing of the lodge, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and ably responded to.

HOLYHEAD.—Lodge of St. Cybi. (No 597).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Monday the 7th inst., in the Masonic Rooms at the Town Hall, Holyhead. In the absence of the W.M. the lodge was opened at 3 p.m. by Bro. John Peters, P.P.G.S.W., supported by the following officers:—Bros. R. J. Edwards, S.W., W.M. elect; W. P. Elliott, J. W.; James Lloyd, Treasurer; Owen Roberts, Sec.; John Weston, S.D.; John James, J.D.; Robert Parry, Organist; and William Jones, I.G. The members present included Bros. John Ellis, P.M.; John Lloyd Griffiths, P.G.S.B.; William Lewis, P.M.; W. R. Jones, John Hughes, R. R. Lewis, A. A. Elliott, E. P. Griffiths, G. Lewis, T. Varian, J. Hazlitt, Thomas Jones, Owen Hughes, Henry T. Barber, H. T. St. Williams, A. L. Williams, J. Jones, E. Evans, S. Rowlands, and William Roberts. The visitors present were Bros. M. Henderson, P.M. 659; Charles Hunter, P.P.G.M. Aberdeenshire East, and P.S.G.W. of Greece, P.M. 755 and 1615; Wm. E. Thomas, J.S. 384; D. Wynn Williams, J.U. 384; W. R. West, 721 and 1477; George J. Hughes, J.W. 1113 and 1488; Samuel Nightingale, J.W. 606; Charles P. Boucher, Treasurer 606; J. Sidney Boucher, I.P.M. 606 W.P.G.C.; T. H. Warrington, W.M. 1113; and W. G. Lewis 1113; W. Bro. W. Bulkeley Hughes, M.P., D.P.G.M. of North Wales and Shropshire, and R.W. Bro. Charles Hunter having been severally announced and introduced to the W.M., and saluted by the lodge according to ancient custom, the W.M. presented the D.P.G.M. with the emblem of power, which he retained until the minutes of the last regular meeting had been read by the Secretary and confirmed. When this had been done, the D.P.G.M. vacated the chair, returning the emblem of power to Bro. Peters. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the W.M. elect (Bro. R. J. Edwards) was then presented by Bros. J. Lloyd Griffith and John Ellis for the benefit of installation. After the usual charges had been read by the Secretary, the lodge was opened in the Third Degree when all the brethren below the rank of Installed Master withdrew. A Board of Installed Masters was then opened, and Bro. Peters, assisted by Bros. G. P. Griffiths, John Ellis, J. Lloyd Griffith, W. Lewis, T. H. Warrington, and J. Sidney Boucher, placed Bro. R. J. Edwards in the chair of K.S. On the readmission of the brethren the newly-elected W.M. was saluted according to ancient form in the several degrees. The Installing Master delivered the charges in the several degrees in his usual impressive and solemn manner. The W.M. then appointed the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year, and they were duly invested by the Installing Master, namely, W. P. Elliott, S.W.; Owen Roberts, J.W.; James Lloyd, Treasurer; Henry S. Barber, Secretary; John Weston, S.D.; John James, J.D.; Robert Parry, Organist; G. Mawby, and W. R. Jones, Stewards; John Peters, Director of Ceremonies; W. Jones, I.G.; W. Williams, Tyler. "Hearty good wishes" were accorded by P.G. Lodge of North Wales and Shropshire, and P.G. Lodge of Aberdeenshire East, and from Lodges 755, 1615, 606, 659, 384, 1488, 115, 1113, 721, and 1477. The lodge being then closed, the brethren adjourned to the Royal Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet had been provided by Miss Lyall in her usual excellent style. On the removal of the cloth the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were ably given and eloquently responded to, interspersed with a few capital songs, finely rendered by some of the brethren. A most enjoyable evening was spent.

NEWPORT.—Isca Lodge (No. 683).—A meeting of this lodge was held on the 16th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Dock-street, where in the absence of the W.M., Bro. W. Parfitt, the lodge was opened by Bro. W. Hitchcox, P.M. After reading the minutes, Bro. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray, P.A.G.D., D.P.G.M., of the province, was received in due form; he then took the chair and passed the lodge to the Third Degree, after which he raised his son, Bro. S. Geo. Homfray, jun., to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason. After reducing the lodge, Bro. Walter West was presented for installation as W.M., and the ceremony was performed by the D.P.G.M. in his usual impressive and masterly style. After appointing his officers the W.M. closed the lodge, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet at the King's Head Hotel, when a most enjoyable evening was spent.

SEACOMBE.—Combermere Lodge (No. 605).—The annual celebration of St. John's Festival by the members of this lodge, which occupies a prominent position in the province of Cheshire, took place on Thursday, the 17th inst., at the Seacombe Hotel, Seacombe, near Birkenhead. There were altogether about eighty members and brethren present. Bro. Thomas Shaw, the retiring W.M., presided at the opening, and amongst those present were Bros. M. McNeerney, I.P.M.; E. Davies, P.M. C. Staley, S.W.; J. Sillitoe, P.G.P.J.D.M., Treas.; T. Gregory, S.D.; R. C. Mellor, P.P.G.J.D., D.C.; J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W.; H. Williams, P.M. 249 and 1264; W. J. Stanton, W.M. 1289; J. Hindley, S.D.; D. Fraser, P.M. and Treas. 477; W. Bennett, J.W. 477; F. Thompson, I.G. 477; J. Calton, W.M. 477; C. Hennecke, 1370; W. Matthews, P.G.S., J.W. 1276; F. Chesworth, W.M. 1576; A. Morrison, 241; T. C. Jonglum, 477; G. Lloyd, 477; J. Moles 477; T. Dixon, 477; J. Ridehalgh, 1275; J. Lambert, P.M. 537; F. J. Cooper, 43; J. Taylor, P.M. 1276; R. Carr, 249 (N.S.); H. Skinner, W.M. 1276; M. Ellaby, 1276; H. Tabinair, 477; B. Elvis, 477; H. Martin, P.M. 477; W. M. Asher, 477; E. Jones, M. Bielby, J. Clarke, T. Evans, D. Davies, E. H. Harris, S. Williams, C. Bowen, and others. After the transaction of some preliminary business, Bro. J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.D., took the chair, and proceeded to instal Bro. Charles Staley, as the W.M. for the coming year, the ceremony being most admirably performed. The following were the officers appointed and invested:—Bros. Thomas Shaw, I.P.M.; Edward Jones, S.W.; Thomas Gregory, J.W.; Joseph Sillitoe; P.G.J.D., P.M., Treasurer, (re-elected); J. R. Simon, Secretary; R. Foulkes, S.D.; A. E. Coveney, J.D.; F. Lea, P.P.G.S. of W., P.M., D.C.; W. Parry, Organist; G. J. Davies and W. Parry, Stewards; B. F. Kettle, I.G.; and J. Hollaway, Tyler. During the afternoon a handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. M. McNeerney, P.M., to the I.P.M., Bro. Thomas Shaw, the presentation and acknowledgement being made in exceedingly eloquent terms. An excellent banquet was served by Mrs. Stokes, and during the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed.

LIVERPOOL.—Alliance Lodge (No. 667).—The annual installation meeting of the brethren connected with the Alliance Lodge, No. 667, was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the evening of the 15th inst. There was a very large attendance of members and visitors. Bro. G. S. Willing, W.M., occupied the post of honour, and amongst those present were Bros. J. E. Jackson, I.P.M. P.G.S.; J. Bolton, P.M.; J. Devaynes, P.M.; G. Ockleshaw, P.M.; J. Ellis, S.W.; H. Firth, J.W.; J. W. Gregory, Secretary; T. Peake, S.D.; D. Lloyd, J.D.; A. Bucknall, I.G.; P. Ball, Tyler; James Lees, J. Bond, F. Hall, H. Formby, J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; W. J. Chapman, W.M. 1609; S. Bushnell, T. J. Luya, R. J. Hudson, R. Foulde, R. Derwin, T. Moore, R. Wright, B. Catlow, W. E. Berks, J. Archdeacon, J. Goldie, R. H. Taylor, T. Haslan, J. Cohen, J. Bowyer, R. G. Elman, H. Eve, J. Downey, M. Creak, L. C. Craghill, R. Ellery, J. Catlow, W. Barry, T. Wood, J. S. Gregory, and others. The long list of visitors embraced the names of Bros. B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B.; P. B. Gee, P.M. 1264; A. Cotter, P.M. 1264; J. Holden, 1182; J. T. Callow, P.M. 973 and 1505; W. T. May, P.M. 673; P. W. Oglesby, Sec. 825; H. Burrows, W.M. 673; M. Lothhouse, 418; T. A. Collinson, P.P.G.D.C.; R. Dolbie 1161; W. Ballard, 1391; S. Gore, 1396; W. Marshall, W.M. 1547; J. Walters, 1094; W. Wilson, P.M. 823; W. Ladyman, 1347; J. Nelson, 673; E. Mac-cabe, 203; H. Pritchard, 1356; F. Shaw, P.M. 823; J. C. Webb, J.W. 1264; and others. Owing to the recent death of Bro. W. Doyle, P.P.J.G.D., who was a P.M. and Treasurer of the lodge, the brethren appeared in Masonic mourning. Bro. G. S. Willings closed his year in the chair by most efficiently initiating one elected candidate. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Bro. Willings said the duties of that chair were usually mingled in their character, some of sorrow and some of joy, and that had been his experience during his year's occupancy of it. It was to him a matter of deep regret that his closing act should be one of so painful a nature, not only to himself, but to many other brethren in the lodge. But he should never forgive himself if he quitted that chair without expressing his grief and sorrow, a sorrow and grief which must be felt by every brother, at the loss they had sustained by the sudden and unexpected death of the late Bro. William Doyle. He (Bro. Willings) did not know what steps the lodge would take to perpetuate the memory of their esteemed deceased brother. The calamity had come so suddenly, and had occurred so recently that there had not yet been time to take that point into consideration, although he had no doubt it would be done at an early period, when the W.M., P.M.'s, officers, and brethren would give the subject the consideration which it deserved. But he should be wanting in his duty if he should allow the lodge to proceed to the electing of a successor to Bro. Doyle in his capacity of Treasurer without first marking the high esteem felt for his character, memory, and merits. Indeed, this was a subject upon which his feelings would not allow him to say much. Bro. Doyle was well known and highly respected by all in that lodge and throughout the province of West Lancashire. All who knew him recognised in him a zealous, earnest, and indefatigable Mason. Many present that evening knew him as a warm-hearted and sincere friend, courteous in his manner, generous in nature, and most benevolent in his disposition. His unassuming and gentlemanly address, his affable smile, and the generous warm-heartedness endeared him to every one who came into contact with him. He (the W.M.) therefore proposed the Secretary be instructed to enter on the minutes of the lodge the members' expression of profound grief at the loss they had sustained in the death of Bro. Doyle, as some mark of the esteem felt for him as a man and a Mason; and also that the Secretary be instructed to write a letter to his nearest surviving relative (a sister), enclosing this minute and conveying the feelings of sympathy of the brethren with her in her affliction. Bro. J. E. Jackson, P.M., P.G.S., who was very much affected, seconded the resolution which was carried unanimously. On the motion of Bro. Foulds, seconded by Bro. Hudson, Bro. T. Ockleshaw, P.M., was elected Treasurer of the lodge, in room of the late Bro. Doyle. The chair in the E. was then taken by Bro. B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B., who in the most efficient and impressive manner, installed Bro. John Ellis as the W.M. for the ensuing year. The following were the officers invested: Bros. G. S. Willings, I.P.M.; H. Firth, S.W.; J. W. Gregory, J.W.; T. Ockleshaw, P.M., Treas.; T. Peake, Sec.; D. Lloyd, S.D.; A. Bucknall, J.D.; R. Foulds, I.G.; J. Bailey, S.S.; L. C. Craghill, J.S.; and P. Ball, Tyler. Owing to the death of Bro. Doyle, the usual installation banquet stands postponed till March.

DEVIZES.—Wiltshire Lodge of Fidelity (No. 663).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place at the Town Hall, Devizes, on Tuesday week, the 15th instant. There were present Bros. T. Raymond, W.M.; Dr. J. W. Burman, S.W.; W. H. Burt, J.D.; D. A. Gibbs, P.M., Treasurer; W. Nott, P.M., Secretary; Rev. T. F. T. Ravenshaw, P.M., P.G.C. Eng.; H. J. Ward, P.M.; Thomas H. Chandler, P.M., P.S.G.W. Wilts., and many other members of the lodge, whilst amongst the visitors were Bros. R. de M. Lawson, P.M. 632, P.P.S.G.W. Wilts.; W. Munro, P.M. 326, P.P.G.D.C. Bristol; W. H. Dill, P.M. 906, P.G.P. Somerset; G. F. Tuckey, P.M. 326; Rev. W. C. Lukis, S.W. 837; A. Browne, Secretary 632, and others. The W.M. after opening the lodge, and having had the minutes read and confirmed, announced that since the last meeting he with several members of the lodge had as a deputation from the lodge attended the funeral on the 28th ult. of Bro. Holloway, a P.M. and member of the lodge, and a vote of condolence to his widow on her loss was unanimously passed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree by the W.M., who then requested Bro. William Nott, P.M. and Secretary, 663, and P.J.G.W. Wilts., to take the chair. This was done, and Bro. Nott then proceeded according to ancient custom to instal the W.M. elect, Bro. Dr. J. W. Burman, S.W., in the chair of K.S. for the ensuing year, which ceremony being completed, and the brethren re-admitted, the customary salutes were given and proclamations made. The officers were appointed and invested by the W.M., the Installing Master addressing them collectively and individually as to their duties and the manner in which they ought to be performed. The list of officers was as follows:—Thos. Raymond, I.P.M.; T. H. Chandler, P.M. 355, P.S.G. Wilts., S.W.; Harry Howse, J.W.; Rev. H. Richardson, P.M., Chaplain; D. A. Gibbs, P.M., Treasurer; W. Nott, P.M., Secretary; W. Day, S.D.; J. A. Randall, J.D.; W. E. Tulford, I.G.; Thos. Waite, P.M., M.C.; G. S. A. Waylen, and W. H. Bush, Stewards; and John Hayter, Tyler. The usual addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren were delivered by the Installing Master. After sundry routine business, letters of apology for unavoidable absence were read from many brethren, including one from the D.P.G.M., Bro. Goldney, and another from Bro. Watson Taylor of Erlestoke Park, who at the same time announced that he had sent a supply of venison and game for the banquet. Two new candidates for initiation were proposed for ballot at the next meeting. The alms bag was sent round in aid of the charity fund of the lodge, and the lodge being then closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet at the Crown Hotel. After the banquet the customary loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. The W.M. in responding to the toast of his health mentioned that he should shortly be leaving Devizes, but that his idea of the importance of his office was such that he should not make any professional arrangements which would interfere with punctual attendance to his duties during the ensuing year. Bro. Nott took occasion, on being requested to propose the toast of "The Masonic Charities," to remind the brethren that he was going up as Steward for the province to the festival of the Girls' School in May, and solicited the support of the brethren, in consequence of which a considerable number of subscriptions then and there was made to his list.

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No 700).—The regular monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, William-street, Bro. S. Waters, W.M., in the chair, supported by the following officers and Past Masters: A. Woodley, S.W.; J. Warren, J.W.; Past Masters T. Butt, T. Ward, E. Bowles, W. Graham, C. Norman, G. Crawford, and C. Hobson, the latter filling the responsible office of Treasurer; and J. Henderson, Sec.; J. Wilkins, S.D.; W. McCoy, I.G.; G. Beaver, D.C., and B. Norman, Tyler. Among the visitors present were, Bros. G. Spinks, W.M. 1536; E. West, P.M. 1472, 1076, 1327, and P.P.G.S.D. Herts; J. Gaskell, P.M. 1076; E. Lloyd, I.G. 1472; G. Barth, 913; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). A most extraordinary slackness of Masonic work prevails at the present time in Woolwich, and this is the second meeting that this most excellent lodge has gone through its business without an initiate, the only work before it on the present occasion being the raising of Bro. Epsom to the Sublime Degree. After that beautiful ceremony had been rendered in rare form by the W.M., it was decided by the unanimous vote of the lodge that the winter banquet should be held a month hence at Bro. Plaisted's Hall on Angelsea Hill, Plumstead, and a committee was formed to carry out the wishes of the lodge in that respect. It was then proposed, on the motion of Bro. C. Hobson, that the proceeds of the "Broken Column" gathered that night should be devoted to the widow of the unfortunate Station-master who lost his life on Friday, the 11th inst., at the Royal Arsenal Station in endeavouring to rescue a woman who had fallen upon the rails in front of an advancing train, a task he successfully accomplished, but lost his own life in the noble action, and we are happy to say that the sum of £2 4s. was the response to the call of the W.M. The lodge was then closed, and after the brethren and visitors had partaken of a nice little supper at Bro. Prance's house, the Duke of Wellington, opposite, who as well provided the refreshment in the hall, they re-assembled, and drank the usual loyal and Masonic toasts with eclat. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. Butt, the I.P.M., in felicitous terms, and met with a very brief response from that brother, who, although a man of great and good deeds, is evidently not given to many words, particularly when it concerns himself. In proposing the toast of "The Visitors," the W.M. dwelt with a little excusable pride on both the number and influence of the visitors that usually visited the Nelson Lodge. He said it was one that was always welcomed by the brethren of the lodge with enthusiasm. That night they had visitors from a young sister lodge, the Henley, and one of them, Bro. West, was not only one of the old initiates of the Nelson, but was a Past Master of several lodges, and a Past Provincial Officer of Herts, which province he honoured the Nelson Lodge by representing that night. (Cheers.) They had as well the W.M. of the United Military Lodge, a good and worthy Mason, and several brethren of the district lodges. In the name of the Nelson Lodge he gave them a hearty welcome. (Applause.) Bro. West in reply said that was the first time he had visited his mother lodge for the last three or four years. He was initiated in the Nelson Lodge in 1861, and for special reason that he need not now enter into, he had seceded from it, but he should always remember with pleasure his connection with it. (Cheers.) His association with the province of Hertfordshire as one of its P.P.O.'s was a source of gratification to him, but nothing pleased him more than to see around the social board of the Nelson so many old faces who were his brethren years ago of that lodge. (Applause.) Bros. Gaskell, Spinks, Bath and Lloyd, as well responded. Bro. Butt replied for the Past Masters generally, and Bro. Hobson, in a few kindly words, spoke of the long illness suffered by their oldest Past Master, Bro. J. Rowland, who as the father of the lodge, he declared had their warmest sympathy in his long and terrible indisposition. He wished him a speedy relief from his suffering, and a happy return to his brethren of the Nelson Lodge. (Loud Cheers.) "The Officers' Health" was then drank, and Bro. Woodley replied. A pleasing recognition of the services of our representative then took place, to which Bro. Jolly replied, and then the Tyler's toast concluded the business of the evening.

BRIGHTON.—Royal Brunswick Lodge (No. 732).—On Thursday, at the Royal Pavilion Rooms, Brighton, Bro. Alderman Davey was unanimously elected W.M. of this lodge. There was a very numerous assembly of the brethren, including Bro. the R.W. Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M. of Sussex, and his officers. At the close of the lodge, the brethren adjourned to the banquetting room, where a sumptuous repast was provided by Messrs. Mutton, the old-established caterers of King's Road, who gave the utmost satisfaction to the company, which numbered in all 100. The W.M., Bro. Davey, presided, supported by his provincial officers, as follows: Bro. J. H. Scott, D.P.G.M.; Bro. J. Dixon, S.W.; Bro. C. P. Henty, J.W.; Bro. H. M. Dewey (Rev.) Chaplin; Bro. H. Crosskey, Treasurer; Bro. V. P. Freeman, Secretary, Bro. Thos. J. Byass, S.D.; T. H. Crouch, J.D.; Bro. G. A. Wallis, Superintendent of Works; Bro. J. M. Kidd, D.C.; Bro. C. Sandeman, A.D., of C.; Bro. G. Marin, S.B.; Bro. A. King, Organist; Bro. W. Rintz, Pursuivant; Bro. W. G. Sharp, Steward; Bro. J. A. Farncombe, Steward; Bro. W. J. Nell, Steward; Bro. F. Holford, Steward. The visitors present included the Mayor of Brighton (Bro. Alderman Mayall); Bros. Alderman Lamb, Martin, Cox, Abbey, and Bridgen; also Councillors E. Martin, W. R. Wood, Hayllar, Nell, W. J. Smith, Bennett, and Soper. There were also present the following members of the lodge: J. Solomon, Immediate P.M.; J. N. Kidd, V. P. Freeman, W. Reed, C. G. Reed, Walter Smith, George Smith, G. Day, S. Martin, E. Carpenter, A. Partridge, H. N. Jenner, G. H. Evershed, J. W. Douglas, Joseph Newham, J. Rutter, E. Hirstead, J. T. Chappell, R. W. Mard, T. Hughes (Tyler). The general company present included Bros. W. R. Wood, jun., J. McWhinnie, F. Willard, W. A. Butt, S. T. Foat, C. G. Reed, P. Capon, J. H. Capon, C. J. Corder, Rose, W. H. German, R. B. Smithers, T. J. Nell, Thos. Wilkinson, W. Marchant, F. Willard, W. Wright, G. de Paris, C. Wren, Jas. Curtis, T. J. Sabine, C. Hudson, Sandeman, F. Tillstone, H. Freeman, Kuhe, Cole, D. Smith, F. Noakes, Cunningham, Dr. Pierpoint, G. Gale, J. Anderson, J. Fabin, G. G. Stone, (Newhaven), J. W. Hughes, Nash, Bennett and others. After the banquet, the usual toasts appropriate to the Craft were given, and "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Davey," was received with the utmost enthusiasm. The Mayor of Brighton responded to the toast of "The Visitors" in a most eloquent speech, and Sir W. W. Burrell delivered a truly able exordium to the brethren on the duties of Freemasons. During the evening, Bro. Kuhe, P.G.O., favoured the company with one of his exquisite pianoforte performances, and the proceedings were enlivened by some excellent singing by Bros. Soper and Willard. The evenings entertainment passed off with the greatest success.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—The regular meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on the 16th inst., at the Royal Sussex Hotel, when there were present: Bros. B. S. Wilmot, W.M.; J. Read, P.M.; W. B. Bacon, S.W.; H. D. Williams, J.W.; J. Bates, Sec.; C. Graham, acting S.D.; J. Burton, J.D.; Dunkely, I.G.; Deadman, Org.; G. Strange, Tyler; Gilbert, Bass, Waterman, Griffiths, Spencer, Farrer, and others. Visitor: Bro. Spencer, P.M. 1063. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree. Bro. T. Elliot being a candidate for raising, the W.M. put the usual questions, which were answered in a very satisfactory manner, whereupon he withdrew, and the lodge being opened in the Third Degree, he was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The lodge having been resumed to the First Degree, the ballot was taken for Mr. Montague W. Williams, which proving unanimous, he was initiated into the mysteries of the Order. The ceremonies of both degrees, especially the E.A. charge, being performed in an impressive manner, which drew forth the approbation of the brethren present. As the working of the lodge was nearing its conclusion, the W.M. called the attention of the brethren to the case of a distressed brother, whom P.M. Read had taken a great interest in, and proposed that £5 be taken from the lodge funds next meeting. There being no other business before the lodge, it was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent repast, and at its conclusion the usual toasts were given and responded to, after which the Tyler's toast, at 10 o'clock, brought the proceedings to a close, the brethren having spent a most enjoyable evening.

FOWEY.—Fowey Lodge (No. 977).—The annual meeting of the above lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, on Monday, the 7th inst., when there were present a large number of members of the lodge, about sixty or seventy attending on the occasion, including Bros. N. Lamb, W.M.; Dr. Davis, P.P.G.J.W.; W. Tonkin, P.M. Visiting brethren: Dr. Le Legh, P.M.; and W. P. Smith, W.M. of the St. Matthews Lodge, Lostwithiel; J. C. Stephens, P.M.; St. Andrew's Lodge, Tywardreath; and others. The lodge having been opened by the W.M., and the minutes confirmed, he resigned his gavel into the hands of Bro. Davis, P.P.G.J.W., who proceeded with the ceremony of initiation, and admitted Mr. Anthony Hanson to the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry. Bro. Tonkin, P.M., then assumed the gavel and proceeded to instal Bros. H. W. W. Durant, as W.M. for the ensuing year with the customary ancient formalities. The W.M. then appointed his officers as follows: Bros. Percy Davis, S.W.; R. Gould, J.W.; A. Luke, S.D.; J. Walton, J.D.; T. Richards, I.G.; W. Tonkin, Sec.; H. W. Durrant, Treas.; Rev. Dr. Treffy, Chap.; F. Williams, P.M., D.C.; Dr. Davis proposed and Dr. Treffy seconded the nomination that Bro. Emra Holmes, P.M., P.P.G.R. and D.C., Suffolk, should be a joining member of this lodge. The other business of the evening having been disposed of the lodge was closed, and the brethren proceeded to the Commercial Hotel, where a very excellent banquet was served in Bro. Richards' best style. From 40 to 50 brethren were present; the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair and cordially responded to by the brethren. Bros. Davis and Treffy briefly responded on the part of the Past and Present Prov. Grand Officers. The Rev Doctor then proposed the toast of the visitors and made some very pertinent remarks as to the great progress of Masonry, the increase of lodges, and large accession of members, and expressed a wish that more care was shown in the selection of candidates. He ended by proposing "the Visitors" in complimentary terms. Bro. Emra Holmes in reply enlarged on the great advantage of brethren visiting different lodges in order to see the different working, to learn as much as possible about Masons and Masonry, and above all, hospitality, for the social bond was the strongest to make friends. He could not help calling attention to the recent action of the Grand Orient of France in eliminating the name of the Supreme Being from their official documents, and thus becoming as it were the supporters of Atheism. He was glad to see the Grand Lodge of Ireland had excommunicated the Grand Orient for this conduct, for they were destroying the landmarks of the Order which distinctly laid down that no stupid atheist could become a Mason. The Grand Lodge of England had also taken action and appointed a committee to consider and report on what the Grand Orient had done, and the Freemason of last week stated that the Grand Committee of the Scotch Grand Lodge was also acting in the matter with a view to following the example of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. It was very necessary that we should speak out now lest our enemies should accuse us as well of being atheists. The brethren might rest assured that the fall of Masonry was very near when Masons once forgot there was a God. The sentiments expressed were evidently approved by the brethren. Bro. DeLegh also responded. The toast of the "I.P.M."—proposed by Bro. Tomkin and briefly responded to by Bro. Lamb in a humorous speech—that of the "Installing Master," the "Wardens," &c., all followed in their proper place, and the brethren enjoyed a very agreeable evening and separated at a reasonable hour.

LIVERPOOL.—Prince of Wales Lodge (No. 1035).—The annual celebration of the Festival of St. John, in connection with this lodge, took place on Thursday, afternoon, the 10th inst., at the Skelmersdale Hall, Westminster-road, Kirkdale, Liverpool, where there was a very large attendance of members and visitors from other lodges. Bro. A. Willis, W.M., opened the lodge in due form, and amongst others present were Bros. J. F. Newell, P.M.; J. W. Turley, P.M., P.P.G.J.D.; G. Sculthorpe, P.M.; J. W. McWean, S.W.; T. McWean, J.W.; G. Morgan, P.M., Treasurer; R. R. Forshaw, Secretary; J. Whaites, S.D.; J. P. Bryan, J.D.; A. C. Forshaw, O.; W. Forrester, I.G.; and H. Cruice, Tyler. C. Bowen, W. Nicholson, G. Mitchell, E. T. Gee, R. Wilson, C. Burchall, R. Seddon, J. Bunting, P.M.; J. Pratt, T. Gardner, T. Ormiston, J. Colderwood, A. Barton, G. D.

Peake, W. Nelson, S. Garden, R. Pritchard, A. Eadow, J. King, N. Rees, J. Curtis, L. Beake, J. Fegan, J. Davies, G. Stephens, M. Warmsley, W. March, W. Chicken, H. C. Ewing, &c. The visitors present were Bros. J. G. Townsend, W.M. 1086; J. Barlow, 440; J. Lunt, P.P.G.D.C.; J. C. Lunt, P.M. 1086; D. Birrell, 250; C. G. Bryan, J. R. 1313; C. Birch, 203; J. McArthur, P.M. 1086; J. W. Bottomley, J.W. 1675; J. Duncan, S.W. 1473; C. Muirhead, 1473; R. W. Hickson, J.D. 1713; J. W. Burgers, W.M. 1325; R. Davidson, 673; J. H. Bradshaw, S.W. 1325; J. Whalley, 1086; Captain J. Ainscow, 1398; and 371 (S.C.); J. Hocken, P.M., Treasurer, 1505; James Skelly, 675 and 1505; T. Maudeles, 1356; C. Lloyd, 1356; W. T. May, P.M. 673; and 1393; J. Brotherton, 2410; G. E. Hammer, P.M. 1086; T. Daniel 1520; J. J. Durant, 1473; S. E. Ibbes P.P.G.S.B.; T. K. Hughes, P.M. 1013; J. Wells, P.G.S.; J. Ellis, P.M. 1016; T. Berry, P.M. 155; and others. After the minutes had been read, the chair was taken by Bro. J. F. Newell, P.M., who proceeded to instal Bro. J. W. McWean as the W.M. of the lodge for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was most effectively performed by Bro. J. F. Newell, P.M., by whom the charges were also impressively given to the following officers: Bros. A. Willis, I.P.M.; T. McWean, S.W.; R. R. Forshaw, J.W.; G. Morgan, P.M., Treasurer; W. Donkin, Secretary; J. Waite, Assistant-Secretary; J. P. Bryan, S.D.; W. Forrester, J.D.; John Smith, I.G.; W. Nicholson and R. Seddon, Stewards; and H. Cruice, Tyler. The brethren subsequently banqueted in the large dining room of the hall, the catering of Bro. Casey, 1086, being of a satisfactory kind. The W.M., who presided, proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, and during the evening a valuable P.M.'s jewel was presented to Bro. A. Willis, I.P.M., in recognition of services to the lodge. The toast of "The P.G.M. and Officers" was responded to by Bro. S. E. Ibbes, P.P.G.S.B., Bro. J. Lunt, P.P.G.D.C., and Bro. J. Wells, P.G.S. Bro. Willis proposed "The Health of the W.M.," who, in responding, assured the brethren that he would use his utmost talent to uphold the position of the Prince of Wales Lodge. An excellent musical programme was given by Bros. J. Barlow, C. Waterson, T. Foulks, A. C. Forshaw, R. N. Hobart, W. Forrester, J. P. Bryan, and C. E. Bryan. Bro. H. Gill, S.S., 1086, again created the greatest enthusiasm by his really artistic performance on the "fairy bells."

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge (No. 1353).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Leonard Gate, Bro. F. G. Dale, W.M., in the chair. Bros. Wolfendon, S.W.; Ellershaw, J.W.; Bell, P.M., Treas.; Acton, P.M., Hon. Sec.; Parkes, S.D.; Hartley, J.D.; Clemenston, I.G.; Bell, S.S.; Stork, J.S.; Coulton, I.P.M.; Oglethorpe, Org.; Hartley, P.M.; Heald, P.M.; Taylor, P.M. 1051; J. Simpson, Woods, Beckett, Blizard, Stirzaker, Huntinghall, W. Bell, J. Hartley, Huntingdon, Dutton, King, Proctor, Dobson, Drinkall, Richmond, Barlow, Hall (Kirkham), Allison, Tyler. The lodge was opened by the W.M. with solemn prayer, the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed, Mr. W. Howson, corn merchant, was balloted for and unanimously accepted. Bros. King, E. Huntingdon, and Dutton were afterwards separately passed to the degree of F.C. by the W.M. The working tools were presented by the S.W. The lodge was resumed to the 1st degree, when Mr. Howson was admitted and initiated with the secrets and mysteries of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons by the W.M. The working tools were presented the J.W. Bro. Heald, P.M., then brought forward his motion, of which he had given notice on the previous lodge-night, that ten guineas be voted out of the funds of the lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons. The motion having been put by the W.M., was carried with acclamation, and Bro. J. D. Moore, P.G.S.B., of England, was unanimously appointed Steward to represent the lodge; after the usual proclamations, which were heartily responded to, the lodge was then closed. The W.M. has decided to call an emergency meeting on the 6th proximo, for the purpose of raising Bros. Lacey and Wilkinson to the sublime degree of Master Masons, it was intended they should have received this degree last lodge-night, but, through unavoidable business, they could not attend. The Choir with the Organist were in attendance, and rendered charming effect to the ceremonies.

INSTRUCTION.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—At the last meeting of this lodge, held at the Mitre Hotel, Goulborne-road, Notting Hill, there were present: Bros. Smout, sen., W.M.; Murliss, W.M., S.W. Penn, J.W.; Tettenborough, S.D.; Poulter, J.D.; Spiegel, I.G.; Savage, P.M., Preceptor; Luhtwitz, Bartle, jun., Wood, De Haye, Hatton, and others. The lodge was opened, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and the ceremony of initiation rehearsed. The Secretary then read the report of the committee appointed to arrange the Bye-laws, which, after a little discussion by Bro. Wood, were approved of, and ordered to be printed. The W.M. then handed to the Secretary the programme of the Earl of Carnarvon Lodge Ball, for distribution amongst the members. By the same we find the committee, presided over by Bro. Penn, W.M., have appointed Friday, the 22nd February, at the Ladbroke Hall, Notting-hill, and for double tickets they will charge 16s.; Gentlemen's 10s 6d., Ladies' 7s. 6d., including supper, to be obtained of the Stewards, or Bro. Murliss, P.M., Hon. Sec., 154, Lancaster-road, W.

[Several Lodge reports, which arrived too late to appear in their proper places, will be found on page 52.]

Public Amusements.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—"Fatherland," as the adaption of M. Sardou's celebrated melodrama, "Patrie," is entitled, has been produced at this theatre with considerable success. An adaptation of this play has appeared across the water called "Dolores," and another in the provinces, by the experienced author of "Charles I.," called "Betrayed;" but strange to say, until the present time, no version of this far-famed work has appeared at a West-end theatre. That this drama should have been passed over, in these days when three out of four pieces are taken from the French, is, and has been, a theme for wonder, and Mr. Labouchere is to be highly commended for at last giving all lovers of the drama an opportunity of witnessing M. Sardou's serious masterpiece. True it is, we do not see it in all its grandeur—we miss the final scenes that in the original made the blood run cold, that kept an awe-stricken audience spellbound till the curtain fell on the weird and tragic death of the sensuous heroine by her remorseful paramour; but we must be content with what we can get, and if our mock turtle lacks the richness of the real, nevertheless, perhaps it is more wholesome for our delicate English digestion. To us it appears individually a terrible sacrifice; by M. Sardou doubtless it would be regarded as an unwarrantable sacrilege, and an insult to the Goddess Art. Still we strongly advise our readers to see "Fatherland," for though the giant hath lost a right arm, there still remains vigour and strength enough for a dozen ordinary milk and watery dramas that grace our theatres. The acting is, taken all together, feeble, and the artistes engaged misplaced. With two exceptions no one has succeeded in realising the parts allotted to them. Miss Hodson, one of the most charming comedy actresses we know, who plays or rather trifles with the part of the infatuated wife, should never have undertaken a part so thoroughly unsuited to her. Mr. Billington should have had Mr. Brooke's part, and vice versa. There are however, as we said, two exceptions. The part of the Governor is played by Mr. Herman Vezin in a manner that leaves nothing to be desired—we cannot say more; and secondly, the part of Donna Inez is played by Miss Maud Milton, a young lady almost new to the stage, so ably, that she fairly surprised us. We had seen her previously when playing Juliet to Mr. Conway's Romeo, and in some minor character in "The Wandering Heir," and in both parts she pleased us considerably—but by no means so much as she has now in this part. If we are not mistaken she is destined for a successful career. The mounting of the piece is excellent, and altogether we can honestly congratulate Mr. Labouchere on producing the best melodrama that has been produced for years.

GLOBE THEATRE.—Mr. Byron's new comic drama, "A Fool and His Money," was produced on Thursday, the 17th of January, at this theatre, before an appreciative audience composed principally we should think of the author's friends and relations, who went for the sole purpose of applauding, and who it must be admitted fulfilled their mission with Spartan fortitude. But fifty times the applause would fail to make this new comic drama a successful play. For once in a way we will attempt to describe the story upon which Mr. Byron has contrived to hang his three-act farce. In Act the First we are introduced to an old servant of a late Mr. Ransome, "Chawles" by name, at Ramsdale Hall, Sussex. We find that "Chawles" had been woefully disappointed, in not receiving some handsome momentum on the old gentleman's death, as he anticipated and that his services, which had consisted principally in rubbing his master's back and embittering his master's mind against the old gentleman's rightful heir—one Percival Ransome,—has been unrewarded. In default of a will the property had come into the possession of the said Percival Ransome, and "Chawles," who had formerly had his own way, was now more than likely to have a rough time of it with his new master. The heir arrives and is mistaken by "Chawles" for a footman seeking a situation, of course a natural mistake, seeing that the young gentleman was dressed as only a gentleman could dress, and might as easily have been mistaken for the ghost of "Hamlet." Things being explained, everything seems progressing satisfactorily, when, of course, as is always the case, the old lawyer, who had previously carefully looked through the legal documents left by the deceased, happens to find a will cutting off the nephew and leaving all to "Chawles." Whereupon "Chawles" becomes the master, and the disappointed heir of course immediately volunteers to become his late servant's valet—we say of course, because an educated gentleman would unquestionably accept the post of a menial. This little episode terminates the first act. In the second, we find "Chawles" at his Welsh retreat, with Percival still as his valet—where Brabazon Vandeleur, Esq., and his fortune hunting daughter have come to pay the owner a visit with no excuse and no invitation. Here another mistake occurs, for "Chawles" is taken for the valet, and "Percival" for the owner, by Mr. and Miss Vandeleur, who, finding out their mistake, proclaims Percival an impostor, and soft-sawder the irate "Chawles," ascertaining however that the owner was once a servant in the kitchen. Mr. Vandeleur seizes hold of "Chawles" by one arm, whilst the incensed Percival lays hold of the other, and the act drop descends on "Chawles" being pulled and pushed like a policeman in a pantomime. In the third act, Mr. Vandeleur, who has made it up on second thoughts, proposes a match between the wealthy "Chawles" and the penniless Kate, but in the meantime (without "Chawles" knowing anything about it), the will has been set aside, and the property comes back to the rightful heir, who of course, marries the guileless maid and sets up the luckless "Chawles" in a public-house. We were not aware that the Court of Chancery set aside wills without giving all parties concerned a right to defend their interests, but Mr. Byron knows otherwise. All parties concerned did their best for the commonplace parts allotted to them, Mr. Righton giving a comedy finish to the part of Vandeleur, and Mr. Toole a farcical one to the part of "Chawles." The author was called twice before the curtain. Notwithstanding the reception, in our opinion the play is not worth the paper it is written on. The first Toole and Righton Matinee at the Globe Theatre will be given this day (Saturday). The bill-of-fare is more than usually attractive. Mr. Toole will play his original character in Mr. Clement Scott's successful little drama "Off the Line," and Mr. Righton the part of "Major Shoreshot" in Messrs. Romer and Bellamy's comedy "Flirtation." The entertainment will conclude with "Bardwell v Pickwick," in which Messrs. Toole and Righton sustain the leading parts.

Reviews.

"The Fight between Aleck and Hamid at Dame Europa's School;" E. W. Allen, Ave Maria Lane.

This is one of the numerous pieces d'occasion which the Turko-Russian War has called forth. Like many similar "brochures," it is written with animation and humour. Whether or no our readers will approve of its sentiments or accept its apparent conclusions, we must leave them to settle themselves. It is impossible for us, in our absolute neutrality, to express any opinion on the subject, as though Freemasons are "par consequence" humanitarians in the highest degree, we are not justified in enlarging on political questions, or even diplomatic disputes. We have no doubt, however, that, like several other jeux d'esprit of a similar category, it will be read by many and applauded by not a few.

"Speak to the Earth;" by J. G. FOSTER; Wm. Poole, 12a, Paternoster Row.

This is a very different little pamphlet from the above, and is, in fact, a Lay Sermonette. In the Freemason it is obviously very difficult to review sermons, but we may fairly say that we have perused this little contribution of Mr. Foster's with pleasure and approval. It deals no doubt with an important truth, often overlooked, undervalued, and misunderstood, and is well written, and forcibly expressed. If we are correct in assuming the real teaching of the "Tractate" to be as follows, as Freemasons we can cordially approve of its teaching, and warmly applaud its words. It is, as we gather it, this. This world in all its teeming forms of life and marvel, its animate and inanimate creation, its mineral, its floral, its oceanic, its terrestrial world, is entirely under the governance and control of T.G.A.O.T.U., and while we may seek in science for an explanation of the natural laws which apparently direct and mark its onward course, we must look to the Bible for an explanation of spiritual creation of its Divine life. We fancy that in this view all our educated brotherhood will warmly concur, and therefore, agreeing with Mr. J. G. Foster, we are glad to commend to the notice of the thoughtful amongst us a modest little essay on a great subject, which is in happy contrast to many of those more pretentious utterances just now of the sceptical or unbelieving school. When belief and unbelief seem marshalling their forces, it is well for us, as Freemasons, at once to declare on which side we openly and manfully range ourselves. We are glad to have read a "Lay Sermonette," so well expressed, and so straightforward in its adherence to the Bible, as the word of God.

"Irish Freemasons' Calendar and Directory for 1878." Freemasons' Hall, Dublin.

This very admirably got up Pocket-book has come to hand, and deserves alike notice and commendation from all Masons.

If Bro. Oldham is the Editor of it he deserves all "Kudos" for his neat and effective work, and we congratulate him sincerely on a result as creditable to him as it is to the Irish Craft, and most useful to the fraternity in Ireland—yes, and out of Ireland. We are among those who always feel great sympathy for our Irish brethren, knowing their many admirable qualities of head and heart, and while we feel bound to speak in honest terms of laudation of the "Irish Freemason's Calendar and Directory," and offer all "heartly good wishes," for our Hibernian friends, we cannot but express the hope that we may yet be enabled to give more reports of Irish Masonic doings, for the perusal of our English and Cosmopolitan brotherhood. This is a "consummation devoutly to be wished for" by us all.

"The Public Ledger Almanack, 1878."

We have received this useful almanack from Philadelphia, and fully concur in the statement from personal perusal, that it is "a treasury of useful information on local subjects and general events." For the inhabitants of Philadelphia, U.S., it is and must be really invaluable. For all visitors and strangers to that important city of the commonwealth of the United States it is almost a necessary "vade mecum."

"The City Diary," 1878. Fifteenth year of publication. Published by W. H. and L. Collingridge, City Press Office, 128, and 129, Aldersgate-Street, E.C. One Shilling.

This is a very useful almanack and diary, and is well worthy the attention of all to whom such publications are both useful and necessary.

A New Italian Weekly Journal has appeared in London this week entitled La Posta di Londra.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

At a General Assembly of the Royal Academy of Arts, the following gentlemen were elected as Associates, —Mr. Briton Riviere, painter, Mr. Joseph E. Boehm, sculptor and Mr. Alfred Waterhouse, architect.

Mr. Gladstone will contribute an article entitled "The Coming Peace" to the February number of "The Nineteenth Century."

The Diploma Galleries of the Royal Academy, containing the works deposited by members on their election as Academicians, and other works the property of the Academy (including the Gibson sculpture), is now open, free, to the public from eleven to four daily—Sundays excepted.

A large increase in the exportation of telegraphic wire, &c., occurred last year. From £814,849 in 1876 it reached last year to £1,248,403.

M. Victorien Sardou has completed a new piece—Les Bourgeois de Pontarcy—for the Paris Vaudeville, a sketch of bourgeois life in the provinces.

The Athenæum says that the Princess of Wales has expressed to Bro. Erasmus Wilson, in a very graceful and flattering way, her appreciation of the liberality and public spirit which he has shown in defraying the cost of transporting Cleopatra's Needle from Egypt to England.

At a meeting of the Edinburgh Botanical Society on Thursday last week, the name of Oscar II., King of Sweden, was unanimously placed on the list of Royal Honorary Fellows.

The Memoirs of Prince Metternich, which will soon be published, in eight volumes, will not contain the whole of the Prince's papers and correspondence. Part of the notes left behind by the Chancellor are written in a diplomatic cypher of which the key cannot be found.

An Art Exhibition is to be held in March at Bombay, which it is hoped will prove the first of a series. It will be held in the building of the School of Art now being erected, and Lord Lytton has promised to lend a number of works.

FREE LIBRARIES.—The Bishop of London presided on Friday last at a meeting of the Metropolitan Free Libraries Committee, held at the London Library, St. James's-square. There were also present the Rev. W. Rogers, Mr. James Heywood, F.R.S., Mr. Robert Harrison, Professor Leone Levi, Mr. E. J. Watherston, Mr. H. R. Tedder, and other members; and Mr. E. B. Nicholson, secretary.

Some curious Manuscripts have been lately discovered in the Jesuit College at Rome. When the Government took possession of the College, it was found that many valuable articles recorded in the library catalogue were missing, and for some time all search was vain, until two ex-Jesuits offered to unearth the hiding-place. Accordingly some of the missing treasures were found stowed away in an upper room between the floor and the ceiling of the room below, and it is believed that the remainder are concealed in a similar manner. Amongst the MSS. found was a copy of the constitution of the Society of Jesus, dated 1293, the only one known to exist; a curious map-case, consisting of a cylindrical leather box with hinge and lock, containing three sheaths enclosing maps, the oldest dated 1455, and showing the seaports prominently; and a "Florilegium"—coloured drawings of garden flowers—dated 1678. The Jesuit Fathers refuse to acknowledge the concealment of any further MSS., and the authorities are in doubt whether to pull the rooms to pieces or leave the result to chance.

A Clock modelled on the Famous Time-piece in Strassburg Cathedral is now being exhibited in Washington. The maker, when an apprentice at Strassburg in 1847, secretly copied the cathedral clock, and set it up in a deserted house. A malicious rival discovered his secret, and the apprentice was banished from the country, but he returned in disguise and carried off his treasure to London. He did not, however dare to exhibit the clock, and eventually died mad, his wife and son subsequently selling it to its present owner.

Memorial Cards across the Atlantic are now ornamented by a ship with black crape sails, the hull of the vessel being made of white rosebuds, and the masts of pansies, while a white dove, holding a spray of forget-me-nots, surmounts the mainmast.

BRITISH HANDICRAFT.—"An Art Workman" writes to The Times:—"Mr. J. P. Seddon, in The Times of Saturday last, complains that 'art work in England at the present time is a myth.' In the name of architecture he breaks into lamentation that this should be, and complacently charges the catastrophe upon the apathy of journey-men carvers and others because they have failed to become artists on workman's traditions and workman's pay, and in other words, architects having habitually encouraged workmen to adopt a sterile antiquarianism corresponding with their own, affect astonishment that art is not apparent in the result. All this seems little less than mockery.

An expedition having for its object the thorough examination of the natural resources of Russian Turkestan is about to leave St. Petersburg. M. de Middendorf, the famous explorer of Siberia, and M. Smirnof, Conservator of the Botanical Museum of the University of Kazan, will be among its members.—Athenæum.

The Baroness Burdett Coutts, who has been elected an associate of the Royal Historical Society, has made the library of the institution a magnificent present of books, including the publications of the Camden Society.

The Empress of Austria is still at Cottesbrooke, where she hunts regularly, and excites great admiration by the boldness with which she rides to hounds.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JANUARY 26, 1878.

MOST TRUE.

Since the appearance of our little "note of warning" we have had several communications, literary and personal, which convince us how true, "most true" says a good friend of ours, were the humble words we then thought it well to pen. We fancy from what we hear, that we have greatly underrated the evil. Like the "Gaul" of old, it is "at our gates," in our very midst, and unless we "put our foot upon it," unless we check it and crush it with a firm but kindly hand, it will, so to say, eat out the very life of Freemasonry in our lodges. So, first, let us see how it is working now, and it is likely to work in the future. We find when we receive our lodge summons a long list of proposals for initiation or "joining," the names of those of whom we know nothing. And though no doubt, as Bishop Butler would have said, both faith and probability must be our guides, more or less, in this life, yet we feel we should like to know a little more of those whom we are about to admit into our lodge. We are, therefore, about to suggest a change in the bye-laws of many of our lodges which we know has worked well. It is this, that each candidate should be proposed two months before the lodge, that is, that Bro. Jones should announce his intention in January of proposing in February Mr. Trotter as a member of the Lodge Generosity, and that the notice appears in the summons for February as well as in March, when Trotter is balloted for. Of course, we feel, that there is an objection peculiar to London lodges—which is, that as they only meet in November, January, February, March, April, and May, for the most part, such "hanging up" of the candidates for two months will restrict the possible number of initiates. We do not, however, think, that such an objection is insuperable, and it would undoubtedly let all the brethren know who are those new members who seek admission into the good old lodge. We have often heard it said, "Ah! we made a mistake, we were in too great a hurry, we knew little or nothing about him; he ought never to have come into our lodge." Too often within our knowledge has the entire harmony of a lodge been impaired by the admission of one uncongenial brother; too frequently have cliques and coteries been the consequence of yielding to the unwise dictation of some pig-headed or perverse brother, who looks upon the rejection of the candidate he proposes as a personal affront to himself. We cannot be too cautious in regard to those whom we admit into Freemasonry. And then, again, let us look at the social "status" of our lodges, which is too often endangered by this hasty admission of those of whose antecedents, nay, of whose actual position we know absolutely nothing. It must be remembered our charities are not mere eleemosynary institutions, on the principle of a benefit club or as material benefits, but are meant for decayed freemasons and for decayed freemasons alone, those whom untoward fortune or unforeseen calamity have reduced from affluence to poverty, from comfort to adversity, or for those widows and orphans who have been bereft of their natural protector in the inscrutable dispensations of T.G.A.O.T.U. We cannot expect, nor would it be well or wise, to make our charities co-extensive with our numbers, and, therefore, our object always has been, and is necessarily now, to guard their administration with checks and counter checks, to render them in fact alike truly useful, truly valuable, truly charitable, and truly Masonic. They constitute, in fact, in one direction, the "outcome" of all our professions, the expression of the beneficent teaching of Freemasonry. No doubt there are many other ways in which true Masonic charity is felt and becomingly expressed, but in our great Masonic Institutions it finds alike a happy freedom and a sensible manifestation. We ought not then to admit those who from certain antecedent conditions are pretty certain to swell the already overpowering demands on our charities. For such there are many valuable benefit orders in existence, external to Freemasonry; and there let them seek the material aid they are certain ere long to require. Too many are seeking Freemasonry not for what it is, but for what it may be to them, and we cannot conceal from ourselves or our brethren that unwise precipitancy in the mode and means of admission to our lodges must if persisted in be productive of most serious consequences sooner or later. They say one illustration is worth a hundred arguments, and we take one to conclude what some may deem a rather long-winded address. We shall have at the Boys' School election in April seventy-eight candidates. There were forty-six unsuccessful candidates in October, and there are forty to be elected. But as the list has already increased thirty-one since October, we have no reason to doubt that in October we shall probably have very nearly another list of seventy to deal with. When all these alterations are completed, we shall be educating 500 children in the two schools, and we feel strongly that this is not only a very wonderful, but a very serious fact to contemplate per se. We therefore, as we said before, greatly deprecate the undue extension of our Order which is going on amongst us as we feel sure that it can but have the result we have already ventured to predict. But as we think it always right to recognize the certainty that there are two sides to every question, we propose in the next Freemason to call attention to another view, which has occurred to us while writing, and may have occurred to others, and which perhaps we may be disposed to accept as a satisfactory answer on the whole to this somewhat trying question. Though we may be "peripatetic" philosophers, we neither profess to belong to the "cynical" or the "howling" school, and we think it well always to obtain what consolation we can, amid the doubts, the difficulties, and the conflicts of life.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

We find in the Bauhütte of January 5th, edited by our esteemed Bro. J. G. Findel, of Leipzig, a passage which we cannot understand, and which we shall be obliged to any German brother to explain fully. Bro. Findel takes, as will have been seen from our pages, a very strong view indeed, as regards the question of the Grand Orient of France. In this he differs from all our English brotherhood. For we in England, just as in Scotland, and Ireland, and America, and Canada, decline to give up the unwavering declaration of Freemasonry to please the "libres penseurs" of France. Bro. Findel does not like either the resolution of our Grand Lodge, or the remarks of the Freemason, or the speeches of our brethren. That we can clearly understand and appreciate. But in the Bauhütte of January 5th, he uses words which we do not profess to comprehend in any measure. Speaking most kindly as he always does of the Editor, and expressing his regret at our English view, and insular perversity, he then closes with these remarkable words. "Frotz dem tout aus dem munde jedes Englischen Frmmers aus Kreuz mit ihm," and "der Jude wird verbrannt." For those of our readers who do not understand German it may be sufficient to observe that the import of these words is as follows:—Nevertheless there echoes from the mouth of every English Freemason. "To the cross with him, and the Jew will be burnt." Now we beg to say to Bro. Findel, that this charge against English Freemasons, whatever it may really mean, is as unjust as it is absurd. There is no such tolerant body in existence as the English Grand Lodge. Since 1813 that Grand Lodge has practically declared for universal toleration, and in the recent struggle in Germany against the unwise exclusion of Hebrews, the toleration of the English Grand Lodge has more than once been appealed to by Bro. Findel himself. It is rather too bad, that because he disagrees with us as to our view of the French Grand Orient question, he is to denounce our English Craft as persecutors and intolerant, in terms which we must beg leave to say to our good friend Bro. Findel are equally offensive and untrue. We persecute no one, we excommunicate no one, we condemn no one. All we have ever contended for is this, that in this unwise and uncalled for revolution, the French Grand Orient has departed from the acknowledgment of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, which in some shape or other has ever been made belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. Under the special circumstances of the case in France, the practical result of this violent change, is to pave the way for the admission of non-believers in God—and that we hold to be a great mistake for French Freemasons, as well as a grievous wrong to Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. But having said this we stop here to-day, and we think we shall be conforming to the wishes of our readers, when for the present at any rate, we close this untoward discussion in our pages.

A FEW WORDS TO OUR KIND CORRESPONDENTS.

Some little disappointment having been expressed by not a few old friends of ours, at the non-appearance of lodge reports in our hebdomadal impression, we beg to call their attention to one or two little facts in connection with that subject. First of all we wish to point out that such delay is sometimes unavoidable owing to press of matter. No one but those who have to deal with it, can well realise or tell, what is the difficulty of the case often in this respect. At special periods of the year, lodge reports become "few and far between." But every now and then, as now and for some time to come, the demands on our weekly space, are often quite overpowering. Our general rule, and the fairest we believe for all, is according to the old adage "first come first served," and we print reports as we receive them in order of time. Of course there is in this, as in everything else here, no rule without an exception, and some lodge reports, from special circumstances, or general importance every now and then appear to claim at our hands a preference, alike for the welfare of the Craft and the information of the brethren. But we must ask those good friends of ours, who are sometimes disappointed at the non-appearance of their lodge meetings to make those allowances which a fraternal feeling might suggest, or the actual facts of the case may fairly demand. And then in the next place, some of our ready and agreeable correspondents are a little oblivious of "times and seasons," of the data we announce, of the information we give. We do not profess owing to the exigencies of printing arrangements, to accept for the current week, reports after twelve o'clock on Wednesday, but we often receive reports on Thursday morning, yes, and on Thursday evening, with a request for their appearance, when it is utterly impossible for us to comply with such applications. To use a technical term we "machine" at two o'clock on Thursdays, and therefore reports and advertisements must equally be in our hands at by twelve o'clock on Wednesdays. That we may occasionally print special reports and pressing information is no doubt true, but we are not dealing now with abnormal reports and the like; we are treating upon what is the normal and necessary arrangements of every newspaper. The Freemason loses somewhat by its appearance on Friday morning, though its subscribers gain greatly, and it is this early appearance which necessitates our wretched arrangements, and seems sometimes to make us a little behind hand in the reports of lodge meetings. We should then urge on all our ready willing friends and correspondents to send us their reports early in the week. We feel bound here to express our heartfelt thanks to those many warmhearted brethren of ours, who so zealously help and earnestly support the Freemason, by reports, which are often marked by happy condensation, and much felicity of expression. We trust that they will add to our sense of "favours received," by the continuance of "favours to come," and we thank them by anticipation for their valuable communications, and their always welcome contributions.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.

We congratulate our esteemed Bro. Erasmus Wilson, as well as Mr. John Dixon, C.E., on the safe arrival of this interesting obelisk, after all the perils of the "stormy main." We shall allude more fully to the subject in our next.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

We publish with pleasure the letter of our worthy and distinguished Bro. Thevenot.

Bro. Lakeman probably only meant that 78 lodges (the minority) had protested by their vote against—in his and our opinion—a most unwise vote on the part of the French Grand Orient. "Pace" our esteemed Bro. Thevenot, we fear that the modification introduced into French Freemasonry is only too well interpreted and understood by all Freemasons in Great Britain, just as it is in Canada and America.

A la Gloire du Grand Architecte de l'Univers,
GRAND ORIENT DE FRANCE,
Supreme Conseil pour la France et les Possessions Françaises,
O. de Paris ce 17 Janvier, 1878.

A. M. George Kenning, Propriétaire-Directeur du journal "The Freemason," à Londres.
Monsieur et Très cher Frère,

On lit dans votre estimable journal "The Freemason," No. 461, du 5 Janvier, 1878, à la page 10 et à l'article "Freemasonry in Scotland," la mention suivante :

"Bro. Lakeman said that between seventy and eighty French Lodges had protested against the change, and he submitted that Mother Kilwinning Lodge ought to do all in their power to support these lodges in the stand they were making for the right."

C'est pour moi un devoir, Monsieur et Très cher Frère, de vous faire remarquer que la citation du Bro. Lakeman ne repose sur aucun fondement véridique, et que rien ne la justifie.

Le F. Lakeman est tombé dans l'erreur la plus complète en annonçant au sein de la mère Loge de Kilwinning que 78 loges avaient protesté contre le vote qui a modifié l'article 1er de la Constitution du Grand Orient de France.

Pas une seule loge en France n'a protesté contre ce vote, et pas une seule loge, à la suite de ce vote, ne s'est séparé du Grand Orient de France. J'affirme ces deux faits devant la Maçonnerie universelle, et je mets un défi le Bro. Lakeman ou tout autre frère de citer le nom d'une loge ou d'un Maçon qui se soit détaché du Grand Orient de France par suite du vote dont il s'agit.

Les paroles du F. Lakeman comme les divers articles publiés par les journaux Maçonniques de la Grande Bretagne, concernant le vote de notre dernière assemblée générale prouvent surabondamment aux esprits sérieux et sans parti pris que la modification apportée par le Grand Orient de France à sa constitution n'est pas comprise et qu'elle est surtout fort mal interprétée.

Je vous serai très reconnaissant, Monsieur et Très cher frère, de vouloir bien insérer cette lettre dans un des prochains numéros de votre estimable journal.

Agréez, Monsieur et très cher frère, l'assurance de mes sentiments fraternels les plus distingués,
Le Chef du Secrétariat,
THEVENOT.

(TRANSLATION.)

Sir and very dear Brother,—

One reads in your admirable journal the Freemason, No. 461, January 5, 1878, at page 10, under the article "Freemasonry in Scotland," the following passage :—

"Bro. Lakeman said that between seventy and eighty French lodges had protested against the change, and he submitted that Mother Kilwinning Lodge ought to do all in their power to support these lodges in the stand they were making for the right."

It is, sir, my duty to remark to you that the citation of Bro. Lakeman does not rest on any truthful foundation, and that nothing justifies it.

Bro. Lakeman has fallen into the most complete mistake in announcing in the Mother Lodge of Kilwinning that 78 lodges had protested against the vote which has modified Article 1 of the Constitution of the Grand Orient of France.

Not one lodge in France has protested against this vote, and not one lodge in consequence of this vote has separated itself from the Grand Orient of France. I affirm these two facts before universal Freemasonry, and I defy Bro. Lakeman and every other brother to cite the name of a lodge or of a Freemason who has separated from the Grand Orient of France in consequence of the vote to which reference is made.

The words of Bro. Lakeman, like the different articles published by the Masonic journals of Great Britain concerning the vote of our last General Assembly, superabundantly prove to serious and unprejudiced minds that the modifications introduced by the Grand Orient of France into its Constitution is not understood, and is very badly interpreted.

I shall be very grateful to you, Sir and very dear Brother, if you will be so good as to insert this letter in the next number of your estimable journal.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my very distinguished and fraternal sentiments,

The Chief of the Secretariat,
THEVENOT.

Original Correspondence.

OUR MASONIC CHARITIES, ELECTIONS, &c.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Neither hard "leaders" nor anonymous "old Stewards" will prevent me speaking the plain unvarnished truth, in season and out of season, especially when that truth has reference to our Charities, which ought to have an interest for every assembly of Masons; nor shall any vested interest of any kind ever prevent me speaking my mind upon this subject on any occasion.

I neither consider myself a "Pope" nor an "infallible" authority, but I am old enough to know the meaning of Justice and Mercy. These hard personal hits have often fallen to the lot of men who have sought to remedy known and admitted abuses, and I must expect them too.

I must take exception to the statement that I said there was "jobbery" in "all" our charities. I said, and say again, that there is more or less jobbery in all those charities that elect by vote, and permit canvassing and polling days. It is notorious that this is the case, but men don't like the odium of mentioning it in public much less bringing cases to light. Indeed this latter operation is a most difficult as well as a painful one. But the fact is well known—dozens of our brethren have in my hearing deplored it. What does your own "warning" of late mean but this, that men come into Masonry for mercenary motives, that is, amongst the rest, to get the benefit of our charities?

But I contend it is not so much at the ballot as at the entrance to the charities that you are to put a stop to this jobber's march. And yet, though you have good reason to believe in the existence of this evil leaven working in the Craft, and warn us against it, you would probably find it difficult to prove it by facts.

The work of sham charges and commissions went on many years before the case of a Manchester firm lately threw light on it.

In my humble opinion the thing to be deplored is not my speaking the plain truth on this matter, and stating it at the time and place I did, but the inconvenience of having Secretaries present at every banquet who feel it a duty to consider our charities perfect, and to take offence when any exception is taken to any course of action of which they do not approve.

Nothing I said, need have caused a single shilling to have been withheld from the charities, and I feel sure neither Bros. Terry nor Little would have so regarded it.

Be assured, dear Sir and Brother, the "hobby" I am riding to death will win the race in the long run, but will have to face many a wide ditch along which the stream of conventional benevolence flows noisily, and many a thorny fence which bold and bare-faced jobbery has created without let or hindrance.

I venture to assert I have made no mistake—have nothing to withdraw—and shall continue to uphold "the high moral line" in relation to admission into Charities so long as I hold my present definition of true charity, and act on old Shakespeare's well-known charge "Be just and fear not."

Yours fraternally,

R. J. SIMPSON.

[We publish with pleasure our worthy P.G. Chaplain's letter, though we cannot admit either the facts he asserts, or assent to the charges he brings forward against our charities. We feel quite sure that he is riding his hobby to death.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The time appears to have arrived for us to unite in protesting against the remarks of the V.W. Bro. R. J. Simpson, M.A., P.G.C., and a few others, as to the "jobbery" in connection with our Masonic charities, and their objections to the present system of "elections," and so I heartily join with you, as the Editor of the Freemason, and with my fellow correspondents in stating, once for all, that we are not to be meddled with as some appear to think, and be told what to do with our own properties and institutions, unless it can be proved that our Committees and officers have forfeited their claim to our support and confidence.

I have had a considerable experience now, as manager of the votes for our "great Masonic charities," on behalf of the Province of Cornwall, and have been Steward several times for our annual festivals, as well as honorary collector for years for these institutions in my province, and so am entitled to give an opinion on the subject, especially as few—if any—take a more lively interest in their prosperity.

Now the result, so to speak, of my labours on behalf of these institutions, has been most satisfactory, (a) for not a single candidate who was unworthy of aid has been admitted from our province, (b) the expenses attending their election during the last ten years have not amounted to over three pounds per annum (and frequently even less), (c) not five pounds have been spent in printing, (d) the necessary work of the elections has not been done in any way by the mothers of the children, or the candidates seeking admission, (e) and in most cases the candidates adopted have been elected on the first application.

During this period I have received the greatest assistance from the Secretaries of the several institutions, who have during office hours and at other times been ever ready to counsel and to promote all matters affecting the interest of the institutions, and their many attentions will always be gratefully remembered by my province and myself. Every question I have had to ask to the conduct of these institutions, financially, scholastically, and domestically, have been most satisfactorily answered, and all who have partaken of their substantial benefits, or are still so doing, have spoken in the highest terms of the management generally.

As to the mode of election, so far as the provinces generally are concerned, there cannot be a better one, and in fact not another so good, according to my experience, for it is impossible for any other system in the ordinary way to have so many safeguards against imposition. 1. A Committee appointed by the "Prov. G.L. in open Prov. G.L. assembled," investigates the claims of candidates and selects the most eligible. 2. The lodge adopting the candidate by its members certifies to the worthiness of the candidate. 3. The Committee of the institution, after all the many preliminaries have been attended to, accepts the applicant for the list of candidates. 4. The Quarterly Courts, if satisfactory, agree to the same, and then (5) the appeal to the subscribers has to be made, and the election terminates the matter. I have never yet secured a candidate by the votes of our province alone, and I mention this to show that others than ourselves have had to do with the election of our candidates. Now, can there be more precautions used than those noted as at work in the Provincial Grand Lodges generally? I leave out of the question many other pre-requisites, such as the period of subscription to a lodge, the certificates of the "minister of religion" and the Grand Secretary, registers of birth, marriage, &c., and press the question home to the subscribers, for we believe that our institutions are worthy of support, and should receive the hearty co-operation of all lovers of the Craft. I believe also that our three festivals this year will be a great success.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN, P.G.D.
P. Prov. G. Sec. of Cornwall, Vice-Patron,
R.M.I. for Boys, &c.

A SUGGESTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

It has occurred to me that there must be a large number of Masons in the metropolitan lodges who are not volunteers.

Do any of the brethren think it desirable, and possible, to form a volunteer corps in the metropolis to be composed exclusively of Masons?

If considered desirable, and any brethren of influence and energy will take the question up, and bring it before Grand Lodge, I think good would result.

A circular addressed from Grand Lodge to the various suburban and metropolitan lodges, asking for a return of the names of members who would join such a corps, would readily test the question as to the probability of success of such an undertaking.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

F.

A QUESTION OF LAW.

Dear Sir and Brother,

The following query has cropped up. Its solution in the Freemason will be esteemed a favour. A candidate is proposed in open lodge in regular form for initiation, and a minute of the fact entered on the rough minutes, and in due course should be placed on the agenda paper for the next lodge meeting. In the meantime, the W.M. (for good reasons perhaps, in his opinion) instructs the Secretary to take no further notice of the proposition, and the result is, it is not inserted in the agenda paper for the succeeding meeting, and as a consequence the lodge is precluded from taking action in the matter, and no record of the transaction appears in the minutes. The contention is that the W.M. has no right thus to act, but that the proposition having been accepted by the lodge in accordance with the "Book of Constitutions," it rests with the lodge, and not the W.M., to say what course shall be pursued with it. The W.M. rules in opposition to this view, and ignores the right of the lodge to take action on it. The question is, which is the correct view?

Yours fraternally,

A MEMBER OF THE LODGE.

The following is a copy of a Bye-law of the lodge:—"The Secretary shall keep the books of the lodge, and accurately enter the proceedings of each lodge in the minute book, issue summonses to each member at least seven days previous to each lodge meeting, stating the business to be then transacted, and the name, profession, and residence of each candidate."

[It is quite clear to us that the W.M. has acted "ultra vires." The proposer and seconder can demand that the name be entered on the agenda paper, and submitted to the ballot. The W.M. can then state his reasons to the lodge, if he think well, but in our opinion he has no authority "proprio motu" to reject a candidate and prevent a regular motion being submitted to the lodge.—Ed.]

CONSECRATION OF THE URMSTON LODGE, No. 1730.

Masonry in Manchester and its vicinity is in an extremely flourishing condition and is rapidly extending. Whilst the city itself is in the Province of East Lancashire, many of the residential suburbs are included in the western division of the county Palatine, and it is not surprising that business men should desire to establish lodges "for the convenience of their several dwellings," near to their houses. The village of Urmston, some four miles from Manchester, has become, thanks to the recently-opened "Cheshire Line" route to Liverpool, a popular place of residence, and the strength of Masonry in the neighbourhood is evinced by the fact that the lodge consecrated on Wednesday, the 10th inst., commences with upwards of forty joining members, and eight candidates for initiation. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.P.G.M. of West Lancashire, had intended to perform the ceremony, but the necessity of attendance upon his parliamentary duties obliged him to delegate Bro. Horace S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary, to occupy his throne. The Consecrating Master had the valuable assistance of Bro. the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, W.M. 216, acting P.G. Chaplain; Johnson, P.G.J.D. as S.W.; Bowden, P.P.G.S.B. as J.W.; and J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., as Secretary. The beautiful ceremony of consecration has scarcely ever been more impressively performed, the whole of the P.G. Officers doing the work in the best possible manner. In the course of his inaugural address Bro. Alpass, referring to the publicity given in the newspapers to the subject of Masonic charities, said he somewhat deprecated the diffusion of such information, inasmuch as he feared that unworthy persons sometimes gained admission into Freemasonry, attracted in a great measure by the magnitude of the sums announced in the public prints as having been subscribed by brethren of the Craft, and he urged the greatest possible amount of care in the proposal of candidates. Alluding to the ballot as the means of preventing the admission of undesirable candidates, Bro. Alpass, whilst admitting the undoubted right of "black-balling," strongly recommended the members of the new lodge to avoid it as much as possible, and pointed out that a far more desirable course was to mention to the Worshipful Master privately that there was likely to be opposition, so that he could recommend the proposer to withdraw the name. The acting P.G. Chaplain delivered the following charge:—

Brethren—We regret very much the absence of the Prov. Grand Chaplain to-day, and still more regret that his absence is caused by severe illness, and I am sure you will cordially join with me in the expression of hope that it will please the Great Architect of the Universe to restore to our brother again, and that soon, the blessings of health. We are assembled here to-day for the important work of establishing and consecrating a new centre whence will be disseminated more widely in this district those principles of love and charity which form at once the foundation and keystone of the Masonic structure, and this duty, being about to be entrusted, to some extent, to new hands, guided by brethren of some experience in the Craft, it were not amiss, I think, if I briefly examined the first principles of our Order, and if I as representing the Prov. Grand Chaplain gave some few words of counsel as to these moral duties for the proper discharge of which we as Freemasons, are all responsible. We are instructed in the first degree that Freemasonry is founded upon the purest principles of piety and virtue, civil, social, religious and moral. We are led to understand by this that the good Mason must be a true and loyal subject, paying due obedience to all lawfully constituted authorities, and supporting them on every occasion when properly discharging their official duties; that nothing shall be powerful enough to weaken our family affections, or draw us away from the proper discharge of those domestic duties which render English homes the national pride of our people. That not only must we be not revilers of religion, but, whatever the faith we hold, lovers of our brethren and faithful servants and worshippers of the Architect and Ruler of the Universe, who must be worshipped in spirit and in truth. Although no true religion can impose on us absolute withdrawal from the world, and from the many good and beautiful things that the Most High has given us for our use, yet all true religion and therefore Freemasonry, and even nature herself, teach us to be temperate and discreet in the use of those pleasures which are so enticing to us in our present state, and which when used to excess tend to lead us into practices which would place us outside the pale of these which may be called moral, but by a prudent well-regulated course of discipline to preserve our mental and corporeal faculties in their fullest vigour, that we may be able to utilise them to the greatest possible extent, to the honour and glory of our God, and the best welfare of our fellow-creatures. These, the very first principles of our Order, are calculated to fix upon our minds, by continued repetition, the high duties which are laid upon us children of the Most High, as citizens of the world, as heads of our respective families, and as individuals, and are intended to strengthen us in our purpose of discharging those duties with the most unremitting care and attention. Thus it is.

that we should bear ourselves in our conduct with the world, lest we bring discredit upon this most honourable fraternity, and bring a stain upon this heritage which has been handed to us pure and unsullied. We should also be careful as to our own conduct within lodge. There are those essential rules laid down for our guidance in the ancient charges of the First Degree, to which we should always pay the strictest attention and obedience; but there is one consideration to which in conclusion I must bring under your notice. It is nowhere referred to in the charges and addresses which are used in conferring the several degrees, but their truest beauty is not realised, nor their highest object attained, unless we think continually of the various lessons they inculcate, and allow them to have a proper influence to regulate our lives and actions according to the Masonic line and rule; so that as time rolls on, and the things of time pass away from our grasp, we may, on entering the dark, deep valley of the shadow of death, look forward with a reasonable hope that, on rising from the tomb of transgression we may shine like stars in that grand lodge above, where the world's Great Architect lives and reigns for evermore.

After the consecration Bro. W. Goodacre, P.M. 104 and 1558, P.P. G. P. Cheshire, was installed as W.M., and invested the following Officers. Bros. George Barber, S.W.; J. R. England, J.W.; Thos. Royle Higginson, Treas.; C. F. Allison, Sec. T. A. Crompton, S.D.; M. A. B. Wheeler, J.D.; J. Wasnidge, Steward, the remaining officers being unavoidably absent.

Amongst the visiting brethren present we took the names of the following:—Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec; Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, W.M. 216; W. Bowden, P.P.G.S.B.; H. Galloway, 62, P.G. Registrar; J. Skeaf, P.G. Organist; R. Baker, P.G.D.C., (Cheshire); J. R. Goepel, P.M. 155, 823, P.P.G.D.C.; W. G. Vines, P.M. 220, P.G.D.C.; H. W. Johnstone, P.G.J.D.; J. H. Shillitoe, P.M. 317; P.G.D.C. (East Lanc.); Thomas Newton, S.W. 287; T. A. Crompton, J. W. 1588; C. F. Allison, 162; John W. Wasnidge, 933; C. J. Bosustow, 163; G. G. Woolton, M.M. 1565; Thos. Sumner, 317; Thos. Laycock, P.M. 678; G. W. Wilson, 1009; G. F. Smith, S.W. 1009; M. A. B. Wheeler, 44; J. Hancock, P.M. 992; Geo. Barber, Sec. 1588; W. Sykes, P.M. 104, 1588; Thos. Ball, 1213; W. Alcock, W.M. 1045; J. B. Seel, 1147; J. R. England, 287; J. R. Higginson, 1588; S. Davis, W.M. 1052; W. H. Clegg, 1083; W. H. Wakefield, P.M. 104, P.M. 1588; J. Andrew, P.J.W. 268, 1213; D. Edwards, P.M. 1052; Thos Fiddes, 54; W. Donbavand, W.M. 317; S. S. Faulkner, 1588; W. H. Pike, 663, 1588; H. Swift, 1588, and others.

The brethren afterwards partook of a most excellent banquet, and in the course of the evening the customary loyal and Masonic toasts were duly proposed and responded to.

This lodge will hold its regular meetings at the Lord Nelson Hotel, Urmston, on the last Monday in every month.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The Lodge of Benevolence met on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., Senior Vice-President, was in the President's chair; Bro. James Brett, P.G.P., Junior Vice-President, in the Senior Vice-President's chair; Bro. C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P., in the Junior Vice-President's chair. There were also present Bros. John Hervey, Grand Secretary; H. G. Buss, Assist. Grand Secretary; W. Dodd, and S. Rawson, P.D.G.M., for China; James Mason, P.P.S.B.; Joseph Smith, P.G.P.; H. C. Levander, C. P. Cobham, H. Garrod, John Constable, Edwd. Cox, E. F. Storr, Charles Atkins, H. Massey, (Freemason); H. Phythian, M. D. Loewenstark, F. Woodward, J. M. Case, Charles Greenwood, Col. Somerville Burney, Dr. Waterworth, John Sharland, William Stephens, Herbert Dicketts, and Obed Roberts.

Grants to the amount of £365 made at last Lodge of Benevolence, were first confirmed, and the brethren then proceeded with the new cases, of which there were twenty-five on the list. Of these there were two cases deferred, and the remainder were relieved as follows:—one (£50); four £40 (160); eight £20 (£160); one £15 (£15); five £10 (£50); four £5 (£20); and one £3 (£3). Lodge was closed after having sat three hours.

THE HENRY MUGGERIDGE TESTIMONIAL.

The committee have the pleasure to announce subscriptions amounting to £215, and beg respectfully to request intending subscribers to forward (at an early date) their subscriptions to the fund, as the time is approaching when it will be advisable to close the list.

The committee feel that if the brethren will communicate this well deserved testimonial movement among their friends, many will be anxious to contribute.

Any sums forwarded to the Hon. Sec., Bro. Francis Fellows, Cleveland Villa, 19, Montague-road East, Dalston, E., will be received with thanks and immediately acknowledged.

"HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR IS DUE."—We omitted to add to the notice of the election of Bro. Hughan, P.G.D., as honorary member of the Franklin Lodge, Philadelphia, U.S.A., that a similar compliment was paid our zealour Bro. James H. Neilsen, P.M. 620, Dublin, P.S.G.W. of Egypt, &c. We congratulate him as we did our Bro. Hughan, on such a recognition of Masonic worth from that famous lodge.

The Baroness Burdett Coutts has become one of the lady Patrons, and has given £10 to the Provident Surgical Appliance Society, 37, Great Ormond-street Bloomsbury. V. V.

A SHAKESPERIAN MENU.

CONSECRATION OF THE KING'S CROSS LODGE No. 1732.

The consecration of this lodge will take place on Wednesday next, January 30th, at half-past three o'clock, at the Metropolitan Club, 269, Pentonville-road, King's Cross. The ceremonies will be performed by Bro. James Terry, P.M., Grand Director of Ceremonies, Hertfordshire, assisted by W. Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, and W. Bro. W. Clarke, P.M. 114, G.D. of C. Suffolk. The officers designate are Bros. J. J. Michael, P.M. 1107 and 1507, W.M.; W. M. Stiles, Secretary 1507, S.W.; J. T. Briggs, P.M. 157, J.W. The musical portion of the ceremony will be performed by the Masonic Quartette Party, consisting of Bros. Burgess Perry, Edwin Moss, Arthur Thomas, and George Musgrave.

A SCULPTOR'S STUDIO.

A few days back we were kindly permitted to walk through the studio of Mr. J. Rowe, the eminent sculptor, (of 157a, Buckingham Palace Road), and to inspect the numerous beautiful objects of art which have sprung from his hand. Besides numerous busts in all stages of progress from the rude lumps of clay to the exquisitely finished and life-like portraits of such eminent men as Lord Cairns, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, Right Honourable W. H. Smith, M.P., First Lord of the Admiralty, &c.; there were beautiful statuette portraits of children in terra-cotta. One admirably finished specimen is a likeness of the royal daughter of our Most Worshipful Grand Master the Prince of Wales; another, the name of the young lady that it represents having for the moment escaped us, is exquisitely modelled, in the act of speaking to a greyhound, (also a portrait) that lies at her feet. Besides these and other examples, too numerous to mention, of realistic art, there are several pieces of ideal sculpture well worthy of attention, one that we particularly noticed being the overthrow of Satan by Our Lord in the Temptations in the Mount.

Speaking of this group leads us to mention a picture on the same subject, painted by Mr. Rosenberg, which happened to be at the time of our visit in the same studio.

As it is our intention, if permitted by the editor, to contribute shortly some sketches gleaned in art studios, to the "Masonic Magazine," we shall not further describe the numerous skilful works of Mr. Rowe's art, but recommend our readers meanwhile to obtain his permission to see and admire them for themselves, a permission which we doubt not will be as graciously accorded to them as to us.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.

The Cleopatra, with the Alexandrian Obelisk on board was safely moored in the East India Docks. Every preparation was made for her reception by Mr. Aslett, superintendent of the East India Docks; Sir William Baynes, chairman of the East and West India Dock Company; Captains Marrable and J. Hales Dutton, dockmasters; and Colonel du Plat Taylor, secretary of the dock company. It was resolved to give her the "railway berth," the best in the whole dock, just opposite the superintendent's office.

The following message from Her Majesty to Mr. John Dixon, through Colonel Sir Thomas Biddulph, was despatched from Osborne:—"The Queen is much gratified at hearing of the safe arrival of the Needle."

The Cleopatra will not occupy her present berth in the East India Docks longer than a day or two. Meanwhile it is intended to apply to Captain Burstall, secretary to the Thames Conservancy, for a convenient berth alongside one of the landing-places on the Thames Embankment, for the convenience of her being shown freely to the public, for a period of a fortnight or three weeks at least during which she will be open to everybody, under suitable arrangements.

The Prince of Wales will, on the occasion of his approaching visit to Dorset as the guest of Lord Allington, at Criche House, be accompanied by the Princess of Wales. The visit will be of a private character, but the people of Dorsetshire are, nevertheless, bestirring themselves to make a demonstration of welcome at Wimborne.

NOT HOPING AGAINST HOPE.—"If it wasn't for hope, the heart would break," as the old lady said, when she buried her seventh husband.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatment is easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits, such are the ready means of saving suffering when any one is afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints by which so many persons are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.—Avt.

THE APPROACHING FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The second meeting of the Stewards for the next festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, which will be held on Wednesday, the 13th February, took place on Thursday, in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., President, was in the chair, and there were also present Bros. Edward Cox, Treasurer; James Terry, Honorary Secretary; the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, the Rev. H. J. Hatch, C. W. Noehmer, G. Ward Verry, James K. Killick, J. Tanner, Charles Perceval, H. C. Soper, J. M. Klenck, H. Phythian, Major Barlow, Col. Shadwell Clerke, Edward Terry, Major Williams, J. J. Cattle, F. A. White, Capt. J. Wordsworth, R. B. Webster, S. Ellison, Danl. P. Holmes, T. S. Taylor, Thomas Huntley, N. Gluckstein, R. J. Smith, John T. C. Winkfield, Angus Sherrard, J. W. Zambra, Geo. Graham Bell, Edward Jones, George Corble, Wm. Clarke, Wm. Henry Farnfield, R. N. Field, F. H. Rooke, and W. E. Gamble.

Bro. James Terry having read the minutes of the last meeting, read a letter received from Grand Secretary in answer to his application for the use of the Grand Hall for a musical entertainment on the evening of the festival. Grand Secretary's reply was, that the Board of General Purposes had much pleasure in granting the application on the usual conditions.

Bro. Terry said that those conditions were that no refreshments of any kind were partaken of in the hall.

A vote of thanks to the Board of General Purposes was then passed.

Bro. Terry then submitted the plan of the musical arrangements, which are to be under the direction of Bro. F. Lemeyer. The list of the artistes comprise some of the best known members of the musical profession.

The Ladies' Stewards were afterwards chosen, the following brethren will serve, the Rev. James Amos, Bros. Burroughes, Edgar Bowyer, George Graham Bell, William Clarke, W. T. Gamble, N. Gluckstein, Thomas Huntley, D. P. Holmes, E. Jones, George Kenning, J. M. Klenck, C. K. Killick, E. C. Mather, John Mason, C. W. Noehmer, H. Phythian, Henry Smith, D. Steinhauer, R. J. Smith, T. S. Taylor, H. Vickery, G. Ward Verry, Captain J. Wordsworth, R. B. Webster, J. A. White, John T. C. Winkfield, and J. W. Zambra.

Bro. the Rev. Henry Hatch proposed that a chief ladies' Steward should be appointed, and defined the duties he should have to perform. The Rev. brother said his object was to prevent confusion, and in order that the ladies might be fully informed as to the places they were to occupy.

After some discussion the meeting resolved upon the directions to be given to the Ladies' Stewards.

Bros. the President, the Treasurer, Tanner, Verry, Capt. Wordsworth, Phythian, Corben, and T. S. Taylor, were appointed the Wine Committee.

The Reception Committee were then appointed, the brethren being the President, the Treasurer, Bros. Griffin, Webster, Major Williams, and Major Barlow.

A ballot for places was afterwards taken, and the Stewards' banners at the table arranged.

Bro. Terry then stated that with regard to the announcement on the lists at the festival this year there were 210 Stewards; last year there were 270; and the plan adopted then was instead of announcing each Steward's name with the subscription he brought in, to read the total of London, and the total of each province. Two days afterwards the full list with the Steward's names and the amount of each Steward's list was published in the report of the festival in the Freemason and other papers, and he would suggest that this plan should be adopted on this occasion.

The brethren agreed to this course, and the meeting was adjourned till 4 o'clock on Tuesday, the 24th February.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman, proposed by Bro. Jones, W.M. 192, and seconded by Bro. Gluckstein, concluded the proceedings.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

GIBRALTAR.—Inhabitants Lodge (No. 153).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place on Friday, the 28th ult. The lodge was opened at 7 p.m., the outgoing W.M., Bro. J. Cunningham, in the chair, supported by the following Past Masters: Bros. E. J. Barker, I.P.M.; J. J. R. Morgan, Beale, 325 I.C.; Francis, 325, I.C.; McCormick, 325, I.C.; Hollidas, 325, I.C.; Ross, 325, I.C.; and the following W.M.'s: Stanley, 278, E.C.; Jackson, 325, I.C.; and Valarino, 115, E.C. the two former of these W.M.'s being members of the lodge. It can easily be seen what an excellent and truly Masonic feeling there exists in this little world of Gibraltar, when so many old Masters, and of different constitutions, unite on an occasion of this kind. The following officers were present: Bros. J. Conroy, S.W., W.M. elect; Jackson, W.M., acting J.W.; Hunt, Treas.; Bacon, Sec.; Briggs, S.D.; Roberts, J.D.; Giles, I.G. The lodge was opened in due and ancient form, the minutes (so far as concerned the election) of the last regular meeting read and confirmed. The business was stated by the Secretary, and the lodge raised to the Second Degree (Bro. Stanley, W.M., here replaced the W.M. elect in the S.W.'s chair), when Past Masters Bros. Morgan and Barker presented the W.M. for installation. After the usual charges had been read by the Secretary, and suitably acknowledged the lodge was raised to the Third Degree, and all brethren below the rank of Installing Master withdrew. The Installing Officers having placed Bro. J. Conroy, in the chair, the brethren were re-admitted and proceeded to salute the newly-appointed W.M. in the usual manner. The ceremony was performed by the outgoing W.M., who was congratulated much on the energy and perseverance displayed on this occasion, as well as through the whole tour of his office. The W.M. then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. E. Bacon, S.W.; W. Briggs J.W.; H. Hunt, Treas.; B. White, Sec.; Beavon, S.D.; Button, J.D.; W. Batchelor, I.G.; J. King, Org.; W. Davis, Steward; and Ghis, Tyler. The brethren then pledged the health of the W.M. in a loving cup, most kindly and deliciously concocted by Bro. M. Baglietto, and the W.M. returned thanks and wished the whole of the brethren prosperity. The I.P.M. proposed, and P.M. Bro. Barker seconded, a vote of thanks to all the Masters, Past and Present, who had so ably assisted him, carried nem. con. P.M. Bro. Francis proposed, and Bro. Morgan P.M., seconded, "A vote of congratulation to the I.P.M. for the finished style he had performed the ceremony," carried with eclat. Bro. Davis proposed, and Bro. H. E. Batchelor seconded that a P.M. jewel should be presented by the lodge to Bro. Cunningham, I.P.M., for the untiring zeal exhibited by him during the year, carried unanimously. The lodge was then called off from labour to refreshment, and the brethren to the number of about fifty adjourned to the Friendship Lodge Rooms, so kindly lent by the W.M., Bro. Stanley, in which the banquet was laid out in the well known style of Mr. Miranda, and which the brethren did ample justice to. After the cloth had been cleared the usual toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," and "The Three Grand Masters," were given and loyally received. Subsequently the I.P.M., Bro. J. Cunningham, proposed "The Health of the W.M., Bro. Conroy," and in so doing, alluded to the great assistance he had received from him while S.W., and he had not the slightest doubt he would shew that assiduity and proficiency which had characterised all his working since he had been in this garrison; this was received with the highest honours. In replying, the W.M. hoped he, with the able assistance of his officers, would be competent to work as his predecessor had done, who had elicited from an old P.M. of the lodge when present at his working the Third Degree that in all his numerous visits to many different lodges, he had not seen it performed in the impressive and solemn manner that the I.P.M. had worked it, and he trusted when he had completed his twelve months as Master to hand the lodge over to his successor in the same flourishing state it was now in. The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Retiring Officers," congratulating them on their successful year, which was the result and reward of patient industry, coupling with it the name of P. J. W. Bro. Collins, who responded in a few select terms and called on his conferees to drink the health of the whole of the brethren. The I.P.M. now toasted "The Incoming Officers," remarking on the excellent choice the W.M. had made, and flattering each individual with a few chosen observations. The S.W., Bro. Bacon, responded in thanking the I.P.M. for the eulogiums he had given the newly-appointed officers, after which the W.M. proposed "The Health of the D.G.M., D.D.G.M., and Past Masters of 153," to which Bro. Barker, P.M., replied: the Visiting Brethren's health was proposed, by the W.M. coupling with it the names of Past Master, Bro. Ross, W.M., Bro. Valarino, and Bro. Forsdike, 960 E.C., Cardiff, each of these, in felicitous terms, had watched the great progress of Masonry in Gibraltar, and hoped this lodge would continue to prosper as it had done during the last two years. The I.P.M. could not forget to specially drink the health of P.M., Bro. Beal, who is a regularly grey-headed brother in the service, for in returning thanks he alluded to lengthened career in the Craft, and stating he had never known a better W.M. since he became a P.M. in 1849, than the late one. Other toasts succeeded, after which Bros. Bacon, Forsdike, Briggs, Batchelor, Nolan, Barker, &c., &c., contributed greatly by a few and appropriate songs to make the evening a very enjoyable one.

SWANSEA.—The Indefatigable Lodge (No. 237).—On Monday, January 14th, the installation of Bro. W. T. Canton, as W.M. of this lodge took place at the Masonic-hall, Caer-street. The lodge was opened at four o'clock, a large number of brethren being present. The W.M. elect was introduced for installation to the presiding W.M., Bro. J. Woolley, by Bro. T. R. Robinson

Prov. G. Supt. Works., and P.M. of the Indefatigable. The duties of Installing Master were fulfilled with marked ability by Bro. George Bradford, Past Prov. G. Supt. Works. The installation ceremony having been gone through, the newly-installed W.M. proceeded to invest his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. Thomas M'Kimm, S.W.; Henry Symons, J.W.; Thomas Powell, P. Provincial G. Dir. Cer.s, Treasurer; J. R. Gwynne, Sec.; Llewellyn J. Powell, S.D.; John Leworthy, J.D.; Charles Levy, I.G.; G. Bradford, P.M., Dir. of Cer.; T. H. Davies and W. H. Headdon, Stewards; George Bullerwell, Tyler. "Hearty good wishes" were then conveyed to the W.M. on his installation by Bro. James Livingstone, W.M. of the Caradoc Lodge, on behalf of that lodge; by Bro. Jones Hewson, on behalf of the Talbot Lodge; by Bro. T. James, P.M. of the Cambrian Lodge, 464, on behalf of that lodge; and by Bro. E. R. Roberts, P.M. of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, London, 192, on behalf of that lodge. The Immediate Past Master, Bro. J. S. Woolley, was then presented with a Past Master's jewel, in recognition of the very able way in which he had conducted the business of the lodge during his year of office. Bro. John Rodgers, P.M. of the Caradoc Lodge, and Prov. J.W.; Bro. W. Brown, P.M. of the Indefatigable, and other prominent members, were present. The lodge having been closed, the brethren, between 50 and 60 in number, sat down to a banquet at the "Cameron Arms" Hotel, which was served up by Bro. Clare in a way which reflected the highest possible credit on the resources of that well-known establishment. The usual list of toasts were gone through. Soon after the cloth was withdrawn, the Worshipful the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Marmaduke Tennant, accompanied by Bro. E. S. Hartland, Bro. W. J. Rees, Bro. T. M. Smith, and other brethren, who had been prevented attending earlier, owing to their being present at the presentation at Neath to Bro. E. J. Morris, late and Deputy Provincial Grand Master, entering the room, were heartily welcomed. During the evening it was stated that the Indefatigable Lodge had recently received the centenary jewel, and was consequently the oldest lodge in the province. It also possessed its own Masonic Hall—a freehold worth £2000; and that there had recently been added to the lodge, placed in a gallery erected for that purpose, a very handsome organ, built by Mr. Philip Rogers, of Swansea, who, in the construction, had displayed considerable taste and ability. In the course of the evening there was some excellent singing, in which Bros. White, Jones, Hewson, T. R. Robinson, H. W. Williams, John Burnhill, and others took part. Bro. Gilbert Legge presided with his accustomed ability at the pianoforte, and the proceedings were of the most successful and enjoyable character throughout.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—The members of this lodge held an emergency meeting at the Masonic Hall, on Monday evening. Bro. George W. Statham, who was installed W.M. at the last ordinary meeting was in the chair, and there was a numerous attendance including several visitors. Three new candidates having been balloted for, Bros. Scott, Coulson, and Dr. Johnstone, (Assistant Medical Officer of Health for the borough), who had previously been passed to the degree of Craftsmen were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons, Bros. M. Alister, P.M.; and Smith, P.M. assisting the W.M. in a most able and impressive performance of the ceremony. Bro. Scott who is the Organist of Victoria Church, Leicester, was afterwards appointed Organist of the lodge, and duly invested by the W.M. At the supper which followed the business of the lodge Bro. Scott gave a spirited rendering of the Harmonious Blacksmith, and by the performance of that and several other pieces gave a very gratifying assurance of the valuable acquisition his services will be to St John's Lodge.

LEWES.—South Saxon Lodge (No. 311).—On Wednesday, Jan. 16, the annual meeting of the lodge was held at Freemason's Hall, when Bro. Thomas Reader White was installed as W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. Joseph Farncomb, P.M. 311, and Prov. Grand Steward. The W.M. appointed the following officers:—Bros. S. Tanner, S.W.; J. G. Braden, J.W.; H. Freeman, I.P.M.; R. Crosskey, Treas.; Joseph Farncomb, D.C.; Rev. W. E. Richardson, Chaplain; A. Holman, Sec.; R. Blaker, S.D.; F. J. Holman, J.D.; R. A. Stock, I.G.; S. Starnes, Org.; H. Hall, Tyler. The lodge business ended, the brethren dined together at the White Hart Hotel, Mrs. Huntley providing a very enjoyable repast. Among those present in addition to the officers above-named, were Bros. W. R. Wood, P.P.G.S.W.; V. P. Freeman, Prov. Grand Sec.; W. T. Nell, Prov. Grand Steward; Rev. E. F. Cave-Brown-Cave, W.M. 40; H. Davey, W.M. 732; S. T. Foat, W.M. 315; G. Stone, W.M. 1303; H. Hacker, P.P.G.J.D., Hampshire; C. Atkins, P.M. 27; Calway, 1619; Higham, 217; J. C. Lucas, P.M.; W. W. Turner, P.M.; and several members of the lodge. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and an agreeable evening was spent.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Peace and Harmony Lodge (No. 354).—The festival of St. John, and installation of the W.M. of this large and flourishing lodge for the year ensuing, took place on Monday, in the presence of a very full attendance of brethren, the Board of Installed Masters numbering twenty. The ceremony was performed by Bro. T. P. Payne, P.M., who subsequently received a cordial vote of thanks for officiating with more than usual impressiveness. The newly-installed Master invested the officers as follows: Bros. John Clark, I.P.M., Arthur, S.W.; G. Tilling, J.W.; J. R. Weston, P.M.; Treas.; A. J. Miller, P.M., Sec.; Andrews, S.D.; Jones Algar, I.G.; W. Walters, P.M., D.C.; Westley, Org.; Biggs, Tyler; and Vane and Astley, Assistant Tylers. The installation banquet which followed was supplied by Bro. Dartnall, who as usual gave every satisfaction. It was attended by nearly sixty brethren, including the Masters of the Lodge of Economy, Winchester; the Royal Gloucester, the Southampton, Clausentium, and a Cape of Good Hope Lodge, and proved a most fraternal and pleasant gathering.

BRIGHTON.—Royal Clarence Lodge (No. 271).—On Friday evening, the 18th inst., the annual meeting and installation banquet of this Royal Lodge took place at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, Bro. C. Raymond Burrell, son of the Prov. Grand Master, Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., being installed for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro. J. H. Scott, Deputy Prov. G.M., who retired from the chair. The following officers were appointed: Bro. T. Wilkson, S.W.; Bro. P. M. Smith, J.W.; Bro. F. Sundius Smith, Secretary; Bro. P. R. Wilkinson, Treasurer; Bro. T. C. Woodman, S.D.; Bro. A. King, J.D.; Bro. Prideaux, Owen Rickards, D.C.; Bro. J. Lieubette, Organist; Bro. J. Dennant, I.G.; Bro. T. Hughes, Tyler. The brethren afterwards partook of an elegant banquet, supplied by Messrs. Mutton. About 120 were present, including nearly the whole of the Prov. Grand Officers, who were specially invited in honour of the occasion. The Right W. Prov. Grand Master, in response to the toast of his health, said he regarded his visit to the Clarence Lodge as a "red letter" event, for he had seen his son pass through three offices, and finally take the W.M.'s chair of the lodge. He was especially pleased to find that his Parliamentary duties enabled him to leave London, and that no anticipated voting compelled his hasty return. Sir Walter concluded his able response with some sound practical advice as to the duties of Masonry, and expressed a hope that he should soon be again enabled to visit the Clarence Lodge. During the evening the proceedings were enlivened by some glees and songs, exceedingly well rendered by Bros. T. Baxter, G. T. Carter, Montem Smith, and T. Distin. Bro. Kuhe, Grand Organist, also played some excellent selections on the piano.

RAMSGATE.—Royal Navy Lodge (No. 492).—According to ancient custom, the installation of the Worshipful Master elect of this lodge took place on Wednesday, Jan. 2nd. The choice of the brethren falling on Bro. Charles Andrews, S.W., to fill the chair of King Solomon, for the ensuing twelve months. The following Past Masters and brethren were present:—T. G. Snowden, P.M. 429, 2109, P.P.G.J.W.; L. Finch, P.M. 429, 1209, W. Winch, P.M. 429, W.M. 1209, P.P.J.G.D.; J. Emmerson, P.M. 429, P.P.J.G.D.; G. Hawkes, P.M. 127, P.P.G.S.B.; W. Call, P.M. 1209, P.P.J.G.D.; J. Hazledine, P.M. 429, P.G.D.C.; G. Page, P.M. 1209, P.J.G.D.; W. T. C. Harrison, P.M. 429; J. Crawford, W.M. 127; J. O. Eve, S.W. 1209; and Bros. Crane, Barrett, Smith, Foat, Fenner, Bush, &c. In consequence of the heavy amount of business to be disposed of before the installation, the lodge was called for 1.30 p.m., at which hour it was opened with solemn prayer. The business consisted of three raisings and one passing. Two raisings and the passing were most ably performed by Bro. W. Harrison, P.M., 429. The remaining raising, traditional history and the ceremony of installation by Bro. W. Call, P.M. 1209, P.P.G.D.C. The impressive manner in which Bro. Call performed the important duties of Installing Master, elicited from the Past Masters and brethren the highest encomiums for the skill and ability displayed by him in performing the ceremony of installation, that a special vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes of the Lodge. The W.M. (Bro. C. Andrews) then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bro. G. Hiller, S.W.; Bros. J. Marrable, J.W.; the Rev. G. W. Sicklemore, P.M. 1209, P.P.G.J.W., Chaplain; L. Finch, P.M. 429, 1209, P.P.G.D.C. Treas.; J. Hazledine, P.M. 429, P.P.G.D.C., Secretary; J. C. Hiller, S.D.; J. Jones, J.D.; J. Fenner, I.G.; Foat and Adams, Stewards; R. T. Rolfe, P.M. 429, Tyler. This concluding the business of the evening, the lodge was closed in the usual form, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet, served with Bro. Hiscocks' usual good taste. The pleasure of the evening was much enhanced by the way in which the musical arrangements were carried out by Bro. Aubrey, of the Union Lodge, 127, Margate.

INSTRUCTION.

THE ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—This lodge, held at the Deptford Lecture Hall, had a meeting on Thursday evening, the 10th inst., when a large number of its members and friends assembled to testify their esteem to Bro. George Andrews, Preceptor of the lodge, for the zeal and ability displayed in the important office for nearly four years. Wines and dessert were provided, and, assisted with harmony, a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present. P.S.—The above lodge opens every Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

FINSBURY PARK (Master Masons) LODGE (No. 1288).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway, on Friday, the 18th inst. Present: Bros. P.M. Rogers, Preceptor; Walker, Egyptian, 27, W.M.; Dunn, jun., S.W.; Press, J.W.; Davis, S.D.; Edmunds, J.D.; Oldis, I.G.; Past Masters Davis and Piggott; and Bros. Jeffreys, W.M. 902; Campbell, and others. Lodge opened. Minutes read and confirmed. Lodge opened Second Degree. Lodge resumed to First Degree, Bro. Maudwell, W.M. elect, S.W. No. 27, candidate for passing, examined, entrusted, and retired. Lodge resumed to Second Degree, and ceremony rehearsed. Bro. P. M. Rogers presented Bro. Maudwell as W.M. elect, and Bro. Walker performed the ceremony of Installation, and Bro. Maudwell invested the officers. Proposed seconded, and carried unanimously, that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Walker, for working the installation ceremony. Bro. Dunn, jun., was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Bro. Maudwell was elected a member of the lodge. Lodge closed.

Royal Arch.

STOCKPORT.—Chapter of Stone of Friendship Ezel (No. 287). The installation of Principals and investiture of Officers took place on Thursday, the 16th inst., at the "Dog and Partridge" Inn, Stockport. Companion James Hall, P.P.G.A.S., was the Installing Principal, assisted by Companion J. H. Bladen, P.Z. 516, and it is superfluous to say that the ceremony was most impressively performed. The following is a list of the Officers invested: Comp. A. W. Graham, Z.; Comp. W. Shepherd, H.; Comp. John Turner, J.; Thomas Newton, P.S.; James Palin, Treasurer; Chas. Booth, E.; F. T. Tapp, N.; R. C. Blakehurst, P.A.S.; C. Robinson, 2nd A.S.

Mark Masonry.

MARYPORT.—Whitwell Lodge (No. 151.) The regular meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Thursday, the 17th inst. The M.M.M., Bro. Thomas Mandle, P.G.R. of M. in the chair, supported by the following officers: Bros. Jos. Nicholson, P.M., P.G.M.S.W., Treas.; James Gardiner, I.P.M., P.G.M.M.O.; J. R. Banks, S.W.; J. Smith, P.P.G.M. Org.; T. Carey, Reg.; J. H. Banks, P.G.M., I.G.; T. Dixon, P.M. 1400, Chap.; P. Dodgson, P.G.M. Steward, M.O.; J. Quay, Rec., as S.O.; J. W. Robinson, J.O.; W. Stoddart, S.D.; G. W. Thompson, J.D.; R. Heatherington, I.G.; R. G. Harris, Tyler, and a number of other brethren. Bro. Young, P.G.P., and P.M. 1400; and J. Futton, J.W. 371, being in attendance, they were advanced to the honourable degree by Bro. Gardiner most impressively, and as usual, the working of the subordinate officers were perfect. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment, which was served by Bro. J. H. Banks, who never tires in his endeavour to make all comfortable. The usual toasts were given from the chair, interspersed with numerous songs, by Bros. J. R. Banks, G. W. Robinson, J. H. Banks, and G. W. Thompson, the Tylers' toast bringing a very pleasant evening to a harmonious termination.

CUMBERLAND BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The sixty-third annual ball in aid of the funds of this institution was held at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Friday evening last. The objects of the institution are to grant allowances by way of pensions to indigent natives of the county and their widows. The ball was under the distinguished patronage of the Lord Lieutenant of the county, and a long list of titled lady patronesses and ladies of the county; the whole of the county and borough members were amongst the list of Stewards. The company numbered nearly 250—amongst whom were, Mr. and Mrs. George Rawlinson and family, Mr. Graham King, and Miss Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pattinson, Mr. Tom Studholme, and the Misses Hookway, Mr. F. Hookway, Mr. Sidney King, Mr. Bayliss, Mr. Wood, Mr. Robert James, Mr. Robert James, Mr. Robert Wrightson, and the Misses Wrightson, Miss Nuttall, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stagg, Mr. T. W. Pridmore, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jones, Mr. G. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hicklin, Mr. and Miss Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. R. Thomlinson and daughter, Mr. Rickwood, (Secretary), and Mrs. Rickwood, Mr. J. Eddy, Mr. Lewis Edgar, Mr. J. Bushell, Mr. G. Woodlands, and others.

The company adjourned to the spacious and elegant supper-rooms for which the establishment is so famous, shortly after twelve o'clock. The chair was taken by Henry Nicholson, Esq., the indefatigable Honorary Secretary of the institution, who after the toast of "The Queen," proposed "Success to the Cumberland Benevolent Institution," and gave a hearty welcome, and thanked all present for their attendance. Mr. Graham King who again acted as honorary M.C., proposed "The Health of the Cumbrian Ladies," which was received with great enthusiasm, on behalf of whom Mr. Robert Wrightson returned thanks. The company then returned to the ball-room, and dancing was kept up to the admirable quadrille band of Mr. Dan Godfrey—personally conducted by that gentleman—the company retiring shortly before five o'clock, after Sir Roger and reels, which were danced with great spirit, every one expressing themselves greatly pleased with the success of this old established and excellent ball.

FREEMASONRY IN PHILADELPHIA.

It is now a well-established fact that a lawfully-warranted Masonic lodge was established in Philadelphia in 1730, and that a Grand Lodge was organised here in 1735, and these facts were first proven in The Keystone, in its issue of July 11th, 1874. We are now able to go fifteen years further back, and by the aid of Bro. Horace W. Smith, of this city, prove, from an original letter in his possession, that there were Freemasons in Philadelphia as early as the year 1715, and at that time they were accustomed to meet for Craft purposes. The letter we are about to reproduce is of great Masonic value and interest, and has never before appeared in print.

This letter was written by Bro. Moore, the King's Collector at Philadelphia, to James Sandelar, of Chester, Pa., and is as follows:

Philadelphia Port, in Pennsylvania, March 10, 1715.

It is my design to inform you that there is in my care a small bell, which is intended for St. Paul's Church of your parish, which has been delivered at this Port free of charges or duty—likewise a rich cloth and a neat chalice, which are the gift of Sir Jeffry Jeffries. You will inform me by what means they shall be delivered to your hand. You will remember me kindly to ye Rev. George Ross, and to my friend Jasper Yeates, Esq. I would be pleased you would any of you stop with me, when you come to Philadelphia. I am now in my new house on ye Second street above ye new church.

Ye winter has been very long and dull—and we have had no mirth or pleasure, except a few evenings spent in festivity with my Masonic Brethren.

I subscribe myself, with all dutiful respect, Your dutiful Humble Servant,

To James Sandelands, Esq., Uplands,

These.

This is the letter to which Bro. Smith refers, in his article in another column of this issue of the Keystone, entitled "Early Masonry in Pennsylvania." We understand that Bro. Smith intends to have the letter lithographed, and then to present the original to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, for preservation in the Grand Lodge Library.

We may add that Bro. Horace W. Smith, the custodian of this letter, is the great-grandson of Bro. Rev. Dr. William Smith, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania; the grandson of Bro. William Moore Smith, Grand Master of Pennsylvania, and son of Bro. Richard Penn Smith, of Lodge 72, of this city; and the granddaughter of Bro. John Moore, the writer of the above letter, intermarried with Bro. Rev. Dr. Smith.

This letter is evidence that there were Freemasons in Philadelphia two years before the Revival of Freemasonry in England, and establishment of this Grand Lodge, in 1717. Massachusetts Brethren say to this?—Keystone.

Masonic and General Tidings.

Bro. C. Raymond Burrell, son of Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. Grand Master of Sussex, was installed W.M. of the Royal Clarence Lodge, No. 271, on Friday, the 18th inst., by Bro. J. H. Scott, I.P.M., Deputy Grand Master.

A Grand Masonic Concert was given in the Public Hall, Aberavon, on Thursday, the 24th inst., under the patronage of Bro. Sir George Elliot, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. G. Master for South Wales. A large number of brethren were present in full Masonic costume. We shall give a full report in our next.

Bro. Sir Frederick Martin Williams, Bart. M.P., the D.P.G. Master of Cornwall, we are informed has been appointed the Provincial Grand Prior of Cornwall.

Bro. Archibald Forbes delivered a lecture in St. James's Hall on Thursday last on his personal experiences as a Correspondent in the present war.

The twenty-five girls who were elected at the Quarterly Court in October last, on the motion of Bro. R. B. Webster, as well as the ten girls who were elected to fill vacancies created by others leaving the School, were admitted on Thursday, the 24th inst.

Mr. W. Dieseldorff tells the following story of a Picture:—In The Times of the 10th inst., mention is made of a Pieter de Hooghe, "Girl Feeding Chickens," in the possession of Baron Rothschild. Pictures sometimes undergo strange vicissitudes. This one, now a dweller in the gallery of the Baron, was discovered by the late Mr. S. M. Mawson, at a public sale in a dingy place in the outskirts of Paris about the year 1842. The picture was in so neglected a state that it was being passed over without a bid, when Mr. Mawson, offered 1000., and it was knocked down to him. It was cleaned, framed, and then excited general admiration. Baron Rothschild showed great fondness for it, and Mr. Mawson parted with it for £800,—although purposing to hold it at £1000. It is now the Pieter de Hooghe, "a thing of beauty, and a joy for ever."

The Deutsche Zeitung states that Dr. Slade, the spiritualist, lately arrived in Vienna, but was not granted permission to stay there by the police authorities, owing to his inability to account satisfactorily for his profession.

Hospital Sunday collections in Liverpool, bad times notwithstanding, this year has been more successful than last, the result being £7608, against £7542 last year.

Neptune Lodge (No. 22).—The Installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street on Thursday last, a report of which will appear in our next.

At a special meeting of the Local Board in Committee, the official seal was attached to a deed of security to the Bank of England for the loan of £155,000 in respect to the purchase of the local gas and water undertakings for Ramsgate.

The Annual Ball on behalf of the funds of the Licensed Victuallers School will take place at St. James's Hall, on Thursday next, the 31st inst.

A somewhat remarkable volume of poetry entitled "The Lovers Curl, and other verses" has just been issued by Messrs. Remington. The poems, though crude, display a latent power of pathos and prove, at least that the author, Mr. Stickwood, possesses the tender feeling proper to all poets of whatever degree.

Lord Rosslyn was received on Monday by the King of Spain and delivered to his Majesty a letter from the Queen, and presents from the Prince of Wales. Admiral Fourichon and General Goeben were also received as the representatives of France and Germany.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.—On Monday the Lord Mayor received a draft for £1,000, from the Mayor of Hobart Town, being the second contribution from that city in aid of the Indian Famine Fund. The former donation of a like amount had been remitted direct to Madras, but it had been found cheaper to forward the remainder through the Mansion House. A communication was also received from the Mayor of Brisbane, stating that £1500 had been collected there and sent to Madras, and adding that the long drought under which a large portion of the colony had been suffering had greatly militated against the success of the appeal. A letter, giving particulars of the collection of £4000 at Dunedin likewise came, as well as a despatch from the Mayor of Christchurch, New Zealand, stating that £5000 had been collected there, among a population of 72,000 and remitted to India. On Saturday Lord Derby forwarded to the Lord Mayor a draft for £38 9s. 6d., collected among British subjects in the Province of Coquimbo, and a sum of £15 16s. 2d., the balance of Masonic contributions at Hong Kong has also been received. The fund now amounts to £504,000.

A prospectus has been issued of a company entitled the "Mont de Piété of England," with a capital of one million, divided into certificates of £10 each. The object is to establish here large pawnbroking institutions based on the principle that has been current for many years abroad. The rate of interest to be charged to borrowers is 12½ per cent., being a considerable reduction on the present authorised and legal charges made by pawnbrokers. It is supposed to pay the certificate holders 7 per cent., and from the balance pay expenses, &c., and form a sinking fund for the redemption of the certificates at £20 by annual drawings. The originator of the scheme is to be paid for all "his claims, past, present, or future," 3 per cent., and presumably (although the prospectus does not mention it) this is to be on the capital subscribed.

THE FORGERY BY A CHINAMAN.—At the Hampshire Assizes on Monday, Tom Fat, a young Chinaman, was indicted before Mr. Justice Mellor on several charges of forgery, with intent to defraud his master, Bro. Lord Charles Beresford, commander of H.M.S. Thunderer. It appeared that the prisoner was bought of his father in China by Lord Charles some nine years ago for twenty-five dollars. He proved an apt servant, and under his master's tuition became an expert penman, and his duties included the care of Lord Charles's cheque-book. He began forging in 1874, since which time he has defrauded his master of upwards of £14,000, his plan being to tear out a cheque and counterfoil, and make the former payable to self, and signing Lord Charles's name, the forgery being such as almost to defy detection. He would destroy the vouchers as they were returned from the bank, and it was only by an accident that the frauds were discovered. He pleaded guilty to three charges, and sentence was deferred.

Bro. Farmaner will be installed as W.M. of the Old King's Arms Lodge on Monday. We hope to give a report of the proceedings in our next.

LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE.

HAVE IT IN YOUR HOUSES; it gives instant relief in Headaches, Sea or Bilious Sickness, and quickly cures the worst form of Eruptive or Skin Complaints. The various diseases arising from Constipation, the Liver, or Blood Impurities, Inoculation, the results of breathing air infected with FEVERS, MEASLES, or SMALL-POX, are frequently prevented and certainly cured by its use.

Sold by all Chemists, and the Maker, in patent glass-stoppered bottles, at 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s.; and 21s. each.

The great reputation of this remedy having called forth spurious imitations, whose only merit is a transposition of the words of my label and wrappers, without any of the health restoring properties, it is needful to observe my name and trade-mark as above, on a BUFF-COLOURED WRAPPER, without which the Saline cannot be genuine.—113, HOLBORN HILL, LONDON, E.C.

UNITED MARINERS LODGE (No. 30).—

The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Guildhall Coffee-house, Gresham-street, on Tuesday, the 15th ult. Bro. Thomas Smith, W.M., presided at the opening of the lodge, supported by Bros. A. T. Gladwell, S.W.; and Charles Davey, J.W. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. then vacated the chair to Bro. Joseph Driscoll, P.M., who gave the brethren a rich treat by the very impressive manner in which he installed Bro. A. T. Gladwell, S.W., as W.M. for the ensuing year. The following brethren were then inducted and invested to the offices annexed to their names: Bros. Charles Davey, S.W.; J. Clark, J.W.; the Rev. J. Sugden, Chaplain; Jesse Turner, P.M.; Treas.; Joseph Driscoll, P.M., Hon. Sec.; J. Clark, S.D.; W. Crossley, J.D.; A. Couldey, Organist; W. C. Nickinson, D.C.; Lewis, Steward; Wm. Grant, Tyler. Unanimously Resolved—"That the best thanks of the lodge are especially due and are hereby tendered to Bro. Joseph Driscoll, P.M., for the very able and efficient manner in which he discharged the duties of installing Master, and that the same be recorded on the minutes. Bro. Charles Davey, W.M., having kindly consented to represent the lodge at the ensuing festival in aid of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, the sum of fifteen pounds was voted from the funds. Bro. J. Driscoll, P.M., then severally addressed the W.M. and his principal officers in his usual effective manner, and the brethren pledged the health of their new W.M., who in a few appropriate remarks thanked them for placing him in such an exalted position, and trusted at the end of his year of office they would have no occasion to regret the choice they had made. The members present were: Bros. Thomas Smith, W.M.; A. T. Gladwell, S.W.; Charles Davey, J.W.; the Rev. James Sugden, Chaplain; Jesse Turner, P.M. and Treas.; R. E. Barnes, P.M., Hon. Sec.; J. Clark, S.D.; H. Cosedge, J.D.; S. Hoare, D.C.; J. W. Crossley, I.G.; A. Couldey, Org.; also Past Masters W. Ansell, G. J. C. Smith, Joseph Driscoll, A. Lefaux, I.P.M.; J. Harling, A. F. Abbutt, and H. Bethell; and Bros. T. E. Davey, C. A. Cosedge, J. Shipley, W. C. Nickinson, John Lewis, Thomas Obelin, S. Sturkop, Thomas Woodgate, P. J. Marks, B. Olendorff, J. Hildreth, F. Campbell, and E. Bailey. The visitors present were Bros. F. C. Cozens, Org. No. 907; H. D. Martin, 1309; George Musgrave, 1507; H. W. Gladwell, W.M.; J. Pownceby, J.W. 55; W. Bonsor, W.M. elect, 1580; H. Manger, P.M. 1314; W. J. Miller, P.M. 766; J. B. Crossley, 1673; T. C. Diddin, H. W. Blake, 834; R. Toosey, 834; E. Rolfe, 317; James Aston, 946; Thos. W. Naylor, 697; W. D. Way, J. Linscott, 1042; W. J. Farthing, P.M. 55; G. H. Hunter, 1298; A. E. Gladwell, S.D. 172; John Hills, P.M. 157; H. Potter, 58; T. Noton, 1509; S. Goddin, S.D. 862. After some routine business the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet. The grace was exquisitely rendered by our professional Bros. H. D. Martin, A. Thompson, F. Cozens, and G. Musgrave. The W.M. after the dinner gave the usual loyal toasts with an expression of the combined loyal sentiments towards "The Queen and the Craft." Bro. P.M. T. Smith proposed "The Newly-installed Master, Bro. A. T. Gladwell," advertising especially to his punctual attendance to the duties of the lodge and the interest he evinced for the welfare of the Craft. Bro. Gladwell in reply observed that as there were so many sweeter voices than his present on the occasion he would use as few words as possible—he felt very proud and grateful to the lodge for the unanimity displayed in the honour they had paid him, and he trusted that when his year of office should expire that, notwithstanding his many shortcomings, the unanimous verdict of the brethren would be "he has done his best, he deserves well of us." The W.M. proposed "The Visitors," which toast was duly received and acknowledged. The next toast was "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. Thos. Smith." The W.M. observed that he felt great pleasure in seeing him in the high position of I.P.M. The zeal and assiduity he evinced in the welfare of the lodge had gained the approbation of his brethren, and he felt assured the same zeal which had characterised his year of office would be continued as one of the pillars of the lodge. Bro. Past Master Thos. Smith, in reply, said he could scarcely find words to express his thanks to the brethren for the kind manner in which they had responded to the toast as proposed by the W.M. He could assure them that his year of office has been one of very great pleasure to him, consequent upon the many acts of brotherly kindness which the brethren had evinced towards him, and he would take this opportunity of thanking them one and all for the same, and also to express his gratification to the officers for their able assistance. He also desired to tender his thanks to the lodge for the Life Subscribership which they had presented him with in place of the usual P.M.'s jewel. The W.M. next proposed "The Past Masters of the Lodge," coupling the name of Bro. Harling. Bro. Harling, P.M., expressed his acknowledgements for associating his name with the Past Masters, of which he was very proud, but having a Prov. Grand Officer to follow him, he would not say more than express his thanks to the W.M. and brethren. Bro. Driscoll, P.M., said: I thank you sincerely for your reception of "The Past Masters," and notwithstanding the proceedings of the evening have been most harmonious, I feel the necessity of alluding to P.M. Harling's good humoured badinage on my promotion to Provincial Grand honours. I am sure no one is more pleased than himself at the distinction, and coming from one who so highly distinguished himself while in the chair is encouraging to myself, but brethren there is a better and higher motive, I conceive, to be considered in what our W.M. called the "good old toast" of "The Past Masters." It should remind the younger brethren that by worthily aspiring to the seat of honour in their lodge they not only become better qualified to take part in the future debates and general business, but when they are relegated to what has been called the "Upper House," they will be held in remembrance on such occasions as the present. I would therefore, as an old P.M., encourage them, and if possible beg of them to make themselves proficient in their duty as minor officers, that when by the suffrages of the brethren they should be called to discharge the higher duties of W.M. they may feel at home, and not find their seat uneasy from diffidence, only to feel as comfortable at the close of their year. I therefore beg of them not only in their own interest and the welfare of the Craft, but in the interest of the P.M.'s themselves, to try and excel their predecessors, which will not only be remembered and respected, but will convey a "halo" over the older P.M.'s, hiding as it were all their shortcomings in forgetfulness, and keeping only in memory those brighter glories reflected on them by their younger and more distinguished successors. We shall hail with pleasure such additions to our ranks, and will all join to maintain that unanimity which has so long characterised the United Mariners Lodge. "The Health of the Officers" was duly received and responded to. The toast of "Prosperity to the United Mariners Lodge, No. 30," was next given. The Tyler's toast closed a very enjoyable and interesting Masonic gathering. The musical arrangements were entrusted to Bro. H. D. Martin, and the selections chosen met with great "ecclat."

FITZROY LODGE (No. 569).—There was an unusually large attendance of members and visitors at the installation meeting of this lodge, which was held on Friday, the 25 ult., at the Head-Quarters of the Hon. Artillery Company, Finsbury, under the presidency of Bro. Ensign W. J. Spicer, W.M. Mr. Lewis Ratto was then balloted for, and having been unanimously elected, was initiated by the W.M. into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry. Bro. R. G. Webster, late S.W., and W.M. elect, was then impressively installed by Bro. Captain J. Eglese, P.M., into the chair of K.S., after which the W.M. proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bros. Captain Helsham, P.M., Treasurer; Captain J. Eglese, P.M., Secretary; A. D. Everingham, S.W.; J. C. Sanderson, J.W.; Ensign F. J. Stohwasser, S.D.; Quarter-Master W. G. Brighton, P.M.; J. D.; W. Birdseye, P.M., I.G.; and W. Jolliffe, D.C. In presenting a jewel to Bro. Spicer on his retirement, the W.M. congratulated him on having fairly earned it by the praiseworthy and satisfactory manner in which he had performed his duties during his year of office, and in a few appropriate words Bro. Spicer expressed his acknowledgements. Two candidates were proposed for initiation, and three brethren for joining, after which the lodge was closed and a banquet followed, where everything passed off with the greatest harmony. During the evening Bros. A. Thomas, J. Ion. Cantle, F. H. Cozens, and H. P. Matthews, enlivened the entertainment with some capital songs. As there were upwards of forty visitors present, we can only record a few of the names we noticed among them, viz., Bros. R. P. Bent, P.G.C.; P. De Long, S.G.D.; J. Coutts, P.G.P.; R. Gooding, W.M. (Grand Master's Lodge); Major Venn, P.M. (St. John's); R. H. Pearson, P.M. (Urban); J. Bingemann, P.M. (Constitutional); F. Binckes, P.G.S.; Henderson, W.M. (St. John's); Harfield, P.M. (Tranquillity); Cantle, P.M. (Ivy); Gould, P.M. (Moria); Farnan, P.M. (St. Albans); E. Miry, and Sir Thomas Kirkpatrick, Bart.

WILLIAM PRESTON LODGE (No. 766).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at Cannon-street Hotel, on the 24th ult. Bros. S. D. Ewins, occupied the chair of W.M.; C. R. Cutmore, S.W.; E. Kidman, J.W.; W. Worrell, P.M., Secretary; Captain G. J. Kain,

P.M., Treasurer; W. Drake, S.D.; W. J. Roberts, J.D.; W. J. Collens, D.C.; G. Newman, P.M., Steward; W. F. Smart, I.G.; W. Grant, Tyler. There were also present Bros. W. J. Miller, P.M.; B. Abbott, P.M.; A. Brann, P.M.; J. Pringle, P.M.; A. C. Rees, P.M., and several visitors. Bro. J. Turle Lee was raised, and Bros. C. Pay, E. Wood, and W. J. Heath, were passed, the ceremonies being performed by the W.M. in an impressive manner. After the transaction of some business, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, at which the W.M. presided, and proposed the usual toasts, which were suitably responded to, especially by Bros. Captain G. J. Kain, P.M. and Treasurer, and W. J. Miller, P.M. The charity-box having been passed round, and liberally contributed to, the contents, on the proposition of the W.M. were voted to the Tyler. The vocal efforts of several brethren augmented the pleasures of a most agreeable meeting.

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—The election meeting of this well-established lodge was held at the White Swan Hotel, 217, High-street, Deptford, on Thursday, January 24th. Bro. J. J. Pakes, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes of the previous and an emergency meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The work, done in a careful and impressive manner, was the raising of Bro. T. Weston, passing Bros. G. Hill and J. Stanley; the bye-laws were then read. The elections were all unanimous, Bros. G. T. Limn, S.W., for W.M.; Wm. Andrews, P.M., Treas., re-elected; J. Bavin, P.M. 147, Tyler, re-elected. The elected Auditors, in addition to those provided for by the bye-laws, are Bros. J. G. Thomas, J. Buhler, and W. Harris, I.G. The usual five-guinea Past Master's Jewel was voted from the lodge funds to be given to the W.M., Bro. J. J. Pakes. On the motion of Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Midx., P.M., seconded by Bro. G. Andrews, P.M., D.C., and unanimously resolved: "That ten pounds be taken from the lodge funds and be given to the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, in the name of the J.W. for the time being, in memoriam of Bro. W. Myatt, P.M." The lodge was closed, and adjourned to Friday, February 28th, 1878, to meet at 4.0 p.m. There were present besides those named, Bros. R. Harman, J.W.; J. G. Vohmann, S.D.; G. Harvey, J.D.; W. Harris, I.G.; H. J. Fisher, Org.; H. J. Tuson, P.M.; and about forty members. The visitors were Bros. W. Keeble, 913; T. H. Seaton, 384; J. A. Smith, 548; and others. The usual good banquet followed.

EBURY LODGE (No. 1348).—The regular meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Tuesday, 22nd ult., at the Morpeth Arms, Grosvenor-road. Bro. A. J. Ireton, W.M., presided, assisted by Bros. E. Jacobs, S.W.; W. J. Edmunds, J.W.; J. Coutts, P.G.P., P.M., and Treas.; W. Bourne, P.M. and Sec.; T. Foinelle, J.D.; G. Stacey, P.M., Org.; Simeon Jacobs, W.S.; W. H. Richardson, I.G.; J. Verity, P.M.; J. Elliott, I.P.M.; J. Palmer, P.G. S.W. Bucks and Berks; and about forty of the brethren. Among the visitors we noticed Bros. W. H. Gulliford, W.M. 1017; F. White, P.M. 22; J. Edgar, 1287; S. Harrison, Org. 386; R. Michell, 1614; George Coleman, 1614; T. A. Dickson, 1614; and H. Moore, 1329. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, the minutes of the previous meeting were read confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. J. Frame, W. H. Read, and R. H. Johnson being candidates for raising, and having answered the usual questions, were entrusted and retired to be prepared. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and Bros. Frame, Read, and Johnson raised in a most faultless manner by the W.M., who then proceeded to explain the traditionary history, which he did in a very impressive manner. The lodge was then resumed in the First Degree, and Bros. W. E. Thomson, J. H. Tilney, E. Moody, and E. D. Hook being candidates for passing, and having answered the questions satisfactorily, retired to be prepared. The lodge was resumed to the Second Degree, and they were duly passed. The W.M. then explained the tracing board in the Second Degree in a very efficient manner, not requiring one word of prompting. The lodge was resumed to the First Degree. A ballot then took place for the following gentlemen for initiation, viz., Messrs. J. Stacey, C. Wigley, H. Fincham, and J. C. Hall, which being unanimous in their favour, and they being in attendance, were initiated into Ancient Freemasonry, when the W.M. delivered the ancient charge to them in a very faultless and impressive manner, indeed, it is impossible to praise the excellent working of the W.M. too much. Another gentleman was proposed for initiation. The W.M. intimated his intention to represent the lodge at the next festival of the Aged Freemasons, as Steward, and the lodge having voted £10 to his list, the lodge was closed, and the brethren retired for refreshment, which they well deserved after four hours' beautiful and faultless work. "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," "The Pro G.M.," and "The D.G.M." toasts having been proposed, Bro. J. Coutts, P.G.P., responded. "The W.M.'s" health was proposed by the I.P.M., in which he very deservedly praised him for his working of the ceremonies that evening and considering this was the first meeting since he, the W.M., was installed, it showed how hard he must have worked, and that whoever succeeded him must look to his laurels. "The Initiates," and "The Visitors," who, one and all, complimented the W.M. on his excellent working; "The P.M.s," "The Officers," and "The Tyler," all of which were most enthusiastically responded to, and one of the most pleasant evenings we have ever enjoyed was spent.

HAMPTON.—Hemming Lodge (No. 1512).—This lodge met at the Lion Hotel, on the 17th ult. There were present Bros. John Hammond, W.M.; C. W. Fox, S.W.; J. C. Jessitt, J.W.; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. Midx., Sec.; T. W. Ockenden, S.D.; F. W. Kent, I.G.; J. Hurst, I.P.M.; B. Sharp, P.M. 84, &c.; J. E. Hunt, D.C.; J.W. Hiscox, W.S.; T. Moody, A.W.S.; and Bros. Tozer, Forwood, Murphy, Hole, Knowles, H. Jones, H. Tagg, Aston, T. G. Tagg, Chilcott, Andrews. The visitors were Bros. J. Long, W.M. Westbourne, Lodge; C. H. Stokes, No. 2, (Irish Constitution). The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. initiated Messrs. Cole, Crunden, and Davey, and raised Bros. Hole, Forwood, and Jones, both ceremonies being well performed. Several propositions were brought forward and apologies for absence read; amongst them was one from the P.G.M., Bro. Col. Burdett, expressing his regret at his inability to attend. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent repast, well catered for by Bro. Murphy. The toasts were duly proposed by the W.M. with his customary spirit and commendable brevity. Pros. W. Hammond and B. Sharp responded for "The P.G.O.'s," Bros. Stokes and Long for "The Visitors," and Bro. Hurst for "The Masonic Charities." The proceedings were agreeably enlivened by the vocal contributions of several of the brethren. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the third Thursday in the present month.

ST. DUNSTON'S LODGE (No. 1589).—A meeting of this flourishing local lodge was held on the 18th ult., at Anderton's Hotel, when there were present Bros. Wellsman, W.M.; Dalwood, S.W.; Dodson, J.W.; Dwarber, I.P.M.; A. Tisley, Secretary; Turner, S.D.; Woodbridge, J.D.; Manners, I.G.; Low, D.C.; Bull, S. The visitors were Bros. V. Sarti, 180; Stiles, Sec. 1507; Rogers, 1670. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. most ably passed Bro. A. N. Clemow and Bro. Robinson to the degree of F.C. The election of W.M. resulted in favour of Bro. Dalwood, S.W. The choice of the lodge again unanimously fell upon Bro. Praed, G.S.L., for the position of Treasurer, and Bro. Gilbert, P.G.T. of Middlesex, was also unanimously re-elected Tyler. It was proposed by the I.P.M., seconded by the S.W., and carried unanimously, that a Past Master's jewel of the value of five guineas should be presented to Bro. Wellsman. This lodge vote was afterwards supplemented by the members present to the extent also of five guineas. Bros. Beningfield and W. E. Farrington were appointed to audit the lodge accounts on the 4th of February. There being no other business before the lodge it was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was well served by Bro. Clemow and assistants. Upon the removal of the cloth the customary toasts were duly proposed and responded to. The brethren after passing a most agreeable evening separated at an early hour, until the third Friday in the present month, when Bro. Dalwood, S.W., P.M. of the "Dalhousie," will be duly installed W.M. for the year ensuing.

SCARBOROUGH.—Old Globe Lodge (No. 200).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 16th ult., when Bro. W. A. Tomlinson was duly installed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was ably performed by Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., assisted by Bros. W. H. Smyth, P.M., D.P.G.M. Lincolnshire; J. W. Taylor, P.M.; D. Fletcher, P.M.; and G. H. Walshaw, P.M., P.P.G., D.C. The W.M. appointed and invested the following brethren as officers: R. Y. Powley, I.P.M.; C. Emerson, S.W.; W. B. Richardson, J.W.; J. W. Woodall, P.M., Treas.; J. R. Dippie, Secretary; G. Dippie, S.D.; C. Roberts, J.D.; B. Shaw, Org.; E. Cooper, I.G.; S. Middleton, D.C.; R. Hume and W. S. Meek, Stewards; J. Verity, Tyler. There was a large muster of members and visiting brethren. The usual annual banquet afterwards took place.

TRURO.—The Phoenix Lodge of Honour and Prudence (No. 331).—The brethren of this lodge celebrated the festival of St. John at their Masonic Hall, Public Rooms, on the 21st ult. There was a very large attendance to do honour to the occasion of installing Bro. John Jose, of Mellinsey, W.M. for the ensuing year, the ceremony being most impressively conducted by Bro. J. F. Penrose, P.M., P.S.G.D., assisted by an Installing Board of twenty-six P.M.'s of the "Phoenix" and other lodges. The newly installed W.M. then invested as his officers Bros. W. Sharp, I.P.M.; John Jeffery, S.W.; J. H. Ferris, J.W.; Rev. J. H. Blackmore, Chaplain; S. Serpell, P.M., Treasurer; S. Stephens, Secretary; J. J. Hawken, S.D.; F. Christoe, J.D.; J. Reynolds, D.C.; W. Michell, Organist; J. Christoe, S.S.; R. H. Carter, J.S. S. Harvey, I.G.; and W. Rooks, Tyler. After business, the brethren adjourned to the banquet at the Red Lion Hotel, and the re-union was the largest and most successful since 1861, over sixty guests being seated, under the able presidency of the W.M., supported by Bros. W. Sharp, I.P.M.; E. Trewbody Carlyon, P.M.; J. F. Penrose, P.M.; Captain W. E. Michell, P.M.; W. Tweedy, P.M.; E. D. Anderton, P.M.; W. H. Jenkins, P.M.; W. J. Hughan, P.M., W.M. 131; John Jeffery, jun., W.M. 318; T. Oliver, jun., P.M.; N. B. Bullen, P.M.; W. H. Kinsman, P.M., &c.; the vice-chair being filled by the S.W., supported by Bros. H. F. Whitefield, P.M.; Thos. Hicks, P.M.; John Thomas, P.M.; W. H. Treseder, W.M. 589; John Paull, P.M., W.M. 699; W. P. Hugoe, P.M.; John Ninnes, P.M.; J. F. Hooper, W.M. elect 699, and others. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to, interspersed with songs, and a very convivial evening was spent.

HALIFAX.—St. James's Lodge (No. 448).—On Tuesday the 22nd ult., the St. James's Lodge met at the Freemasons' Hall, St. John's place, at 3.30 p.m., to celebrate the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, and to install the W.M., and appoint the officers for the ensuing year. There was a large gathering of the brethren, and Bro. C. T. Rhodes, the retiring W.M., was the installing officer. Bro. Thos. Whitaker, S.W., was duly installed into the office, and he then proceeded to invest his officers with their collars, as follows: Bros. Austin Roberts, S.W.; Wm. Swale, J.W.; Wm. F. Wilkinson, P.M., Treas.;

Councillor Richard Worsick, Secretary; Geo. H. Radcliffe, S.D.; Walter Walshaw, J.D.; A. H. Booth, M.C.; James G. Lee, I.G.; John C. Crocker, C. T. Kendall, Stanley Dickenson, and J. Holroyd, Stewards; and John Greenwood, P.M., Tyler. After the conclusion of business in the lodge before closing, Bro. Richard Jessop, P.M., stepped forward and handed to Bro. Lieut. Col. Sir Hy. Edwards, Bart., and asked that he would present to Bro. C. T. Rhodes, the installing officer and retiring W.M., on behalf of the lodge an exceedingly chaste P.M.'s jewel in gold, which the R.W. Prov. Grand Master did in highly complimentary and eulogistic terms, observing that he never saw the ceremony better performed, it being all gone through in a manner most impressive, and without the slightest hesitation. The jewel bore the following inscription:—"Presented by the brethren of St. James's Lodge to Bro. C. T. Rhodes, as a mark of their esteem and in recognition of his services as W.M." The presentation was highly prized and warmly accepted by Bro. Rhodes, who stated that he should always look upon the jewel as one of the most valuable of his treasures. The lodge was then closed, and 76 brethren sat down in the dining hall to a splendid banquet, served in excellent style by Bro. Crocker, of the White Swan Hotel. The menu and toast list, beautifully got up, were interspersed with apposite Shakespearian quotations. During dinner, Bro. W. Hemingway's band played selections of excellent music. Bro. Thomas Whitaker, the newly installed W.M., presided, and was supported on his right by R.W. Prov. G.M. Lieut. Col. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart.; J. Fisher, P.P.G.T.; T. Perkinson, P.P.G.J.W.; J. Booth, Prov. G.S.W.; Councillor F. Whitaker, P.P.G.J.D.; G. Normanton, P.P.G.J.D.; Edwin Walshaw, Prov. G.S.B.; W. Gaukroger, W.M.; H. Waghorn, S.W.; G. Scarborough, J.W., of Probit (61). On the left of the chairman were Bros. C. T. Rhodes, I.P.M.; Richard Jessop, P.M.; J. Gaukroger, P.M. 61; J. Menzies, P.M. 61; Nelson, Heckmondwike; Hartley, P.P.G.J.D. East Lancashire; Bro. Siddal, Todmorden; Tilley, Bradford; and the W.M.'s of Savile (Elland), Prince Frederick (Hebden Bridge), The Three Graces (Haworth), Rhyburn (Sowerby Bridge), Amphibious (Heckmondwike), Zetland; (Cleckheaton), and several other distinguished brethren. The Chairman, who conducted the business of the evening with more than ordinary ability, and in his usual happy style, was greeted with enthusiasm on rising to give the toast of "The Queen, the Royal Family, and the Craft," which was honoured as only Masons know how, and followed by the National Anthem. The second toast was "The M.W.G.M. of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales; M.W. Pro Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon; the R.W. Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present." This was given from the chair in complimentary terms, and having been cordially received, was responded to by Sir H. Edwards. The Chairman gave "The R.W. Prov. G.M. of West Yorkshire, Bro. Lieut. Col. Sir H. Edwards, Bart; the W. Dep. Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Thos. Wm. Tew, J.P., and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present." Sir H. Edwards also responded to this, and was followed by Bro. C. T. Rhodes, I.P.M., who warmly proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master of St. James's Lodge," which was drunk with exceptional heartiness. The Chairman feelingly replied, and proposed in eulogistic terms "The Health of the Installing Officer," which Bro. C. T. Rhodes acknowledged. "The Visiting Brethren" was given by Bro. Edwin Walshaw, Prov. G.S.B., and responded to by the W.M.'s of the different lodges represented. The Chairman then gave "The Health of the Senior and Junior Wardens and Officers of St. James's Lodge," which having been well received, was acknowledged by Bros. Austin Roberts, S.W. Bros. G. Normanton, as the oldest P.M., and C. T. Rhodes, as the youngest, responded to the toast of the "Past Masters and Past Officers of St. James's Lodge," and Bros. W. Gaukroger and F. Whitaker replied to "The Health of the W.M.'s and P.M.'s, Officers, and Brethren of the Sister Lodges in Halifax." Bro. Sir H. Edwards proposed "The Masonic Charities," and after Bro. G. Scarborough had replied, Bro. Walter Walshaw, J.D., in graceful terms proposed "Lady Edwards and the Ladies," on behalf of whom Sir Henry Edwards responded. The last toast, "To all poor and distressed Masons throughout the Universe, and speedy relief to them," was given by the Chairman. The proceedings were very enjoyable, being enlivened by songs, &c., by Bros. Sir Henry Edwards, Siddal (288), Todmorden; F. Whitaker, E. Walshaw, and others.

BIRKENHEAD.—Zetland Lodge No. 537).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, the 16th ult., when the W.M., Bro. Sutton, installed his successor, Bro. Walter Milner, who had been unanimously elected to the office of W.M. at the previous meeting. After the various officers had been invested, the Treasurer's accounts were duly passed, and the interest of the evening was enhanced by the retiring Master being presented with a P.M.'s jewel, a life-governorship of one of the Masonic charities, and a handsome silver goblet with an appropriate inscription, as a mark of the high esteem in which he has been held by his brethren during his two years of Mastership of the lodge.

LIVERPOOL.—Derby Lodge (No. 724).—The brethren of this highly successful lodge met on Wednesday evening, the 23rd inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-st., Liverpool, for the purpose of assisting at the annual installation of the W.M. Bro. G. Becken, W.M., occupied the chair at the opening of the lodge, and amongst an attendance which numbered upwards of 100 were the following:—Bros. Stedford, P.M.; J. W. Ballard, P.M.; R. Cairn, P.M.; Davison, P.M.; A. Hart, Sec.; R. Cruspe, J.W.; T. Chesworth, P.M. 1502, Secretary; H. Trevitt, S.D.; P. Armstrong, J.D.; W. Vaughan, P.M., I.G.; M. Williamson, Tyler; J. Jacobs, G. Gordon, E. McSwiney

H. Ellis, J. Comins, T. Hunt, W. H. Kerr, J.W. Edwards, W. Ellis, H. T. Evans, H. J. Morris, J. Sharples, F. Groom, G. Galbraith, E. Gadd, T. T. Smith, G. Hutchin, P.M. 241; H. Galway, A. Emanuel, J. Humphreys, W. McGauley, T. Hole, E. R. Hoblyn, T. D. Carr, J. Parkinson, J. W. Chadwick, J. Miller, M. Hynes, J. D. Griffiths, R. Sherrington, J. Pendleton, J. E. Ellis, H. Jones, E. Foxall, A. Foote, R. Prichard, and others. The visitors included Bros. J. W. Burgess, W.M. 1325; H. Ashmore, P.M. 1325, S.W. 823; S. Jones, P.M. and Sec., 477; D. Fraser, P.M., and Treas., 477; L. Hart, 1502; G. Dicken, D.C. 477; J. G. Adam, P.M. 477; H. G. Ellis; 1021; J. Saber, 1502; W. G. West, 1356; W. Walker, 1086; R. Beckett, 1086; Henochberg, 1502; J. Holden, 1356; J. P. Bryan, 1035, 203; A. C. Forshaw, 1635; Pemberton, P.P.G.S. of W.; A. Cotter, I.P.M. 1264; J. Douglas, 823; J. Holden, 853; G. J. Townsend, W.M. 1086; J. T. Callow, P.M. 673, 1505; H. Fairclough, 1276; T. Shaw, P.M. 923; H. Burrows, W.M. 673; J. P. Helan, 594; W. Brasse, 823; W. T. May, P.M. 673, and 1393; R. C. Mellor, P.P.G.J.D.; J. Lecomber, W.M. 594; J. D. Thomas, 594; W. H. Jewitt, S.S. 1393; W. Jones, P.M. 220, 1299, 1675; R. Williams, 594; J. Dictz, 673; J. Davidson, 332; C. Waterson, 1035; J. B. MacKenzie, J.W. 1609; A. J. Henochberg, P.M. 1502; and S.J. Henochberg, J.D. 1502. Brother George Becken, W.M., after the transaction of some formal business, proceeded to install Bro. Asher Hart as his successor in the chair. The ceremony was well performed by Bro. Becken, who also gave the charges to the officers invested:—Bros. G. Becken, I.P.M.; J. W. Ballard, P.M., D.C.; R. Crispe, S.W.; H. Trevitt, J.W.; T. Chesworth, P.M., Treasurer (re-elected for the tenth time); M. Hart, Sec. (re-appointed for the second time); P. Armstrong, S.D.; W. Hawksworth, J.D.; G. Gordon, I.G.; Gadd, S.S.; Pendleton, J.S.; J. Comins, A.S.; and M. Williams, Tyler. Before the closing of the lodge, a valuable P.M.'s jewel and apron were presented to Bro. Becken, I.P.M. The brethren subsequently dined under the presidency of Bro. A. Hart, the newly chaired W.M., and during the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, and cordially responded to.

KESWICK.—Greta Lodge (No. 1073).—The installation festival of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 22nd ult., at an emergency meeting, the day after the ordinary meeting, when the minutes of the December lodge were read and confirmed. The summons stated the hour as "high twelve precisely," but it was a quarter-past one before the door was tyled. There was only a moderate attendance of members, from a variety of reasons, principally business and sickness, amongst those coming under the latter category being Bro. Rev. R. Rutherford, P.M. and Chaplain, P.P.G. Chaplain, who, to general regret, has been confined to his room for many months. Bro. T. D. Wivell, W.M., took the chair, and opened the lodge, assisted by as many of his officers as were present, the principal positions, however, being filled by visitors. Subsequently, Bro. W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. Lodge 1002, Cockermouth, P.G. Organist, assumed the presiding officer's duties, when Bro. William Lamonby, W.M. elect, P.P.G. Reg., was presented for installation. After the lodge had been raised to the Third Degree, and all below the rank of I.M. having retired, a Board of Installed Masters was duly opened by the proper officers. The W.M. elect was then re-admitted, and, after the obligation, Bro. W. F. Lamonby, P.M. Lodge 1002, P.G. Reg. (Freemason), took up the remainder of the ceremony, including the proclamation, the presentation of the working tools, investment of officers, and addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren. The following officers were invested in person or by proxy:—Bros. J. D. Wivell, I.P.M.; D. Pape, S.W.; R. P. Hunter, J.W.; Rev. R. Rutherford, Chaplain; Jos. Barron, Treasurer; W. Wilson, Secretary; J. Scott, S.D.; W. Hodgson, J.D.; J. Armstrong, I.G.; G. P. Abraham, Organist; W. Gaspey, M.C.; J. Martin, and T. Mayson, Stewards; C. Thompson, Tyler. The lodge being closed in form, the brethren adjourned to the Royal Oak Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet, provided in Bro. Wilson's best style, awaited them. Bro. W. Lamonby, W.M., presided, faced by Bro. D. Pape, S.W. The W.M. having given the usual loyal toasts, Bro. T. Mayson proposed "The Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces," coupled with the name of Bro. Corporal Thompson, 3rd C.R.V., who replied. Bro. Gaspey then gave "The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese," with which he associated in, feeling terms, Bro. the Rev. R. Rutherford, P.M. and Chaplain, and on whose behalf Bro. J. Wood, P.M. 1073, P.P.G. Org., returned thanks. The W.M. proposed "The Health of the M.W. Grand Master of England," which was followed by that of "The M.W. Pro Grand Master, the R.W. Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers," by Bro. W. F. Lamonby. Bro. R. Bailey, Lodge 1002, gave "The R.W. Prov. Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland, the Earl of Bective, M.P." and Bro. A. Pettitt, 1073, proposed "The R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Colonel Whitwell, M.P., and the Provincial Officers, Past and Present." Bros. A. Taylor, P.M. Lodge 310, Carlisle, P.P.G.S.B.; and J. Wood, P.M. 1073, P.P.G. Org., replied, followed by Bro. W. F. Lamonby, P.M. 1002, P.P.G. Reg.; who said his office, though really that of legal adviser to the province, one of his predecessors having been Her Majesty's present Judge Advocate General, seemed nothing more or less than a sinecure. However, since he came to Keswick that day, his legal opinion had been asked as to whether the installation meeting of Greta Lodge, not being held on the regular lodge night, was en regle. His opinion therefore was, that the installation meeting of that day was simply a lodge of emergency, duly convened for that special purpose. He (Bro. Lamonby), on the other hand, had been informed that a brother of Greta Lodge was so satisfied in his own mind that it was unconstitutional to instal the W.M. on any other day than the regular meeting, that he had placed himself in communication with the Grand Secretary. He trusted that the brother named would find his (Bro. Lamony's) dictum correct. His advice was freely given, and though he had not exacted any fee for the same, as was the custom of other men in the legal profession, it was none the less sincere. (Laughter.) Bro. Lewthwaite, P.G. Organist, likewise returned thanks. Bro. J. Wood, P.M. 1073, then proposed, in complimentary terms, "The Health of the Newly-installed Master of Greta Lodge," who was the oldest member—in fact, his was the only name now left on the warrant. The W.M., in response, said he thoroughly appreciated the high honour and the responsibility attached thereto, which had been conferred on him that day, and it should be his firm intention during the ensuing year to endeavour to bring back a return to that prosperity and importance which characterised Greta Lodge some years since. The W.M., having given "The Immediate Past Master," to which Bro. Wivell replied, he proposed "The Newly-invested Officers," coupled with the names of Bros. Pape, Barron, Wilson, and Gaspey, who responded. Bro. Wivell gave "The Retiring Officers," in a very lugubrious strain, and trusted that the new W.M. would be better supported than he was. Not one of the retiring officers was present to give an account of himself. The W.M. then proposed "The Installing Masters," Bros. Lewthwaite and W. F. Lamony, both of whom replied, the latter adding that the W.M. and he first saw light within a couple of months of each other in Skiddaw Lodge, thirteen years ago, and that was one good and sufficient reason for being present. Bro. Pape proposed "The Visiting Brethren," which he coupled with the names of Bros. Lamony, Bailey, Robinson, Peacock, and Lewthwaite, of Lodge 1002, and Bro. J. Quay, of Lodge 1400. Bro. Lamony, in reply, enlarged on the great advantages resulting to brethren visiting lodges when travelling from town to town,—in fact, it was a sort of duty, and one that could not fail to make them better acquainted with the principles of Masonry, and more thoroughly "au fait," in working. Such could not be acquired by limiting attendance to one's mother lodge alone. A deal of stiffness, bashfulness, and reserve got worn off; there was always something new to learn in visiting strange lodges; whilst they could always expect the warmest welcome and hospitality, whether in English or Scotch lodges. He would mention a little circumstance, which had arisen out of his visiting a lodge in Scotland some three months ago. Being shown the archives of a now defunct lodge, a brief perusal of which was most interesting to him as a Masonic student, it had occurred to him that there was abundance of material in the history and associations of the older lodges in Cumberland and Westmorland, over the heads of two of which more than a century of time had rolled, to compile a very interesting and instructive book, and he had therefore conceived the idea of collecting the points of interest in connection with the whole of the nineteen lodges in the province. That was one result of visiting other lodges, and whenever he started the compilation of his literary venture it would prove a labour of love. The remainder of the visiting brethren having returned thanks, Bro. Gaspey proposed "The Masonic Charities" "The Tyler's toast," followed by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," brought to a close a very enjoyable meeting. Bro. Lewthwaite, P.G. Organist, presided at the pianoforte, and excellent harmony was contributed by that brother, as also Bros. Brash (Lodge 1002), (Usher 1073), W. F. Lamony, and others.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge was held on Tuesday, the 22nd ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-st. Bro. W. J. Chapman, W.M., occupied his seat in the East, and amongst those present were Bros. J. Bennett, I.P.M.; B. B. Marson, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., D.C.; J. B. Mackenzie, J.W. (acting as S.W., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Lindo Courtenay, S.W.); J. Skeaf, Prov. G. Org., Acting J.W.; J. Atkinson, Secretary; A. Woodbruck, Treasurer; W. Sandbrook, S.D.; W. Savage, J.D.; H. P. Squire, Acting S.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; H. Leslie, A. G. Leslie, C. Courtenay, W. Hildyard, R. Brough, Williams, P. Buck, Mattison, Penny, R. F. Carter, R. Evers, J. C. Duckworth, J. Brown, Dr. Johnson, J. S. Macbeth, Berleure, Turvey, and others. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Professor Brown, Hemming, J. Lecomber, W.M. 594; and others. Messrs. Cornish and Wilkinson were initiated into the mysteries of the Order, and Bros. Bond, Duckworth, and Robertson were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons, both degrees being given with much efficiency by the W.M.. Bro. Joseph Bell gave notice that at the next meeting of the lodge he would propose that the initiation fee for non-professional brethren should be raised to eight guineas. The brethren subsequently adjourned to the banqueting room, and after a plentiful supply of "creature comforts" several loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to; several excellent vocal and recitative items being given by Bros. Woolrich, Hemming, Robert Brough, Turvey, Cook, Penny, Dr. Johnson, Mattison, and others.

INSTRUCTION.

WHITTINGTON LODGE (No. 862).—The first meeting of this Lodge, at its new quarters, Mr. Hyde's, the Red Lion, Poppins Court, Fleet Street, took place on Wednesday, January 30th. Bro. Marston, W.M. Skelmersdale, in the chair. Bro. Fate, S.W., I. S. Brown, J.W., Thompson, S.D., Abell, J.D., Fox, J.G., Long, P.M., 435, Preceptor, and a good number of brethren. The third ceremony and lecture were very ably performed by the W.M. It was generally felt that this old-established Lodge was commencing a new career of prosperity.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—A meeting of this lodge of instruction was held on Friday, the 25th ult., at the Mitre Hotel, Goulborne-road, Notting-hill. Present: Bros. W. J. Murlis, P.M.; W.M.; Penn, S.W.; Adkins, J.W.; Tenterboro, S.D.; Spiegel, J.D.; Smout, jun., I.G.; Savage, P.M., Preceptor; Crabb, Wood, Hutton, Newland, Sutton, and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, then Bro. Savage worked the First and Second Degrees. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Hutton being candidate. Bro. Sutton, Excelsior, No. 161, Dublin, was elected member of the lodge. Bro. Savage announced that the Bye-laws did not arrive from the printer, as promised, last week, but they will be in hand next Friday for the members. Bro. Penn, S.W. was elected W.M. for next week.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners Chapter (No. 249).—The regular meeting of this chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the 17th January. The chapter was opened at 5 o'clock by Comps. P. B. Gee, M.E.Z.; J. E. Jackson, H.; and T. Ockleshaw, J. The companions were admitted, and the minutes were read and confirmed. Before commencing the balloting, the M.E.Z. alluded to the loss sustained by the death of the late Comp. W. Doyle, P.Z. of that chapter, a loss he said, which would long be felt by every companion in that chapter. They little thought at the last meeting that he would never be in their midst again, and therefore the stroke came with all the greater force. Those companions who knew him best would mourn his loss the most, but it was a great consolation to hope that he had gone to the Grand Lodge above. Although it was a loss to them who remained, still let them hope it was a gain to him who was gone, and benefit by the sad event. The ballot was then taken for Bros. T. Peake, 667; J. S. Warden, 1264; G. Crute, 1264; and W. Peter, 1264; each of whom was unanimously elected. Comps. John Hayes, H. Wynne Parry, and Robt. Collings, from the Temple Chapter, 1094, were also unanimously elected joining members. Bros. Peake, Warden, Crute, and Peter were then exalted, Comps. Gee, M.E.Z., giving the signs; J. E. Jackson, H., the symbolic lecture; and T. Ockleshaw, J., the first historic lecture. Comp. Gee, M.E.Z., again drew attention to the death of the late Comp. P.Z. Doyle, and moved that a letter of condolence should be sent from that chapter to his nearest relatives. He also proposed that a minute be recorded in the minute book, expressive of the heartfelt loss sustained by the companions. M.E. Comp. Jackson, H., seconded, and M.E. Comp. Ockleshaw, J., supported the motion, which was carried in silence. Comp. Gregory proposed Bro. James Lees, 667, for exaltation; this was seconded by Comp. Ellis, S.E. The chapter was then closed.

Mark Masonry.

HAMMERSMITH LODGE (No. 211).—The first meeting of this lodge since its consecration last December was held on Saturday, January 19th, at the Windsor Castle Hotel, King-street West, Hammersmith. Bro. John Mason, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes of the consecration meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. Ballots taken separately were unanimous in favour of the admission of Bros. E. Gilbert, 22; E. J. Hart, Bon Accord; J. Barney, 133; and A. Haynes, 108, as joining members. Bros. J. Austine, 1567; T. Goodall, 1567; A. Tisley, 1275; J. Graham, 1567; J. H. Pearson, 1423; T. Lamb, 1567; S. Page, 1326; M. Clark, 1423; J. Bartlett, 1423; and R. F. Potter, as candidates for advancement. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.J.O., P.M., took the chair, and in his usual admirable manner he advanced Bros. J. Austine, T. Goodall, A. Tisley, J. Graham, J. H. Pearson, S. Page, and R. F. Potter to the ancient and honourable degree of Mark Master Masons; Bro. T. Poore, G.I.G., rendering good suit and service during the ceremony. Several names were given in both for joining and advancement. Business being ended, the lodge was closed, and adjourned to meet on the third Saturday in April. The officers were all appointed where any vacancy wanted filling, and are now, Bros. J. W. Baldwin, S.W.; T. C. Walls, J.W.; W. Dunham, M.O.; E. J. Hart, S.O.; A. Tisley, J.O.; F. Walters, P.G.I.G., P.M., Sec.; D. Smith, A.S.; J. Austine, R. of M.; A. Haynes, J.D.; T. Goodall, I.G.; J. H. Pearson, D.C.; S. Page, W.S.; J. Graham, C.S.; R. F. Potter, Tyler. A splendid banquet and dessert followed, which reflected the greatest credit on mine host, Bro. E. Gilbert. The usual toasts were given and responded to. Songs and recitations brought a pleasant meeting to an agreeable close. There was only one visitor present, Bro. W. Wigginton, G.S. of W., P.M. 181.

HAYLE.—Cornubian Lodge (No. 87).—The annual festival of this lodge took place in the Freemasons' Hall, and was well attended. Bro. N. J. West, P.P.G.J.W., installed Bro. James Pool, P.P.G.J.O., as W.M., and he afterwards appointed and invested his officers as follows:—Bros. F. H. Pool, I.P.M. and Treas.; G. B. Pearce, S.W.; J. G. Osborn, J.W.; H. Warren, Chap.; J. P. Smith, Sec., and Reg. of Marks; F. W. Pool, M.O.; J. J. Taylor, S.O.; B. Spray, S.O.; T. Mills, S.D.; J. Wearne, J.D.; J. Lovell, I.G.; John Coombe, P.M., Steward of the Cornwall Annuity Fund; and J. V. Bray, Tyler.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—Advr.

THE ORDER OF THE TEMPLE IN IRELAND.

INSTALLATION OF H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AS GREAT PRIOR.

On Monday last, 28th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Dublin, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught was installed Great Prior of the Order of the Temple in Ireland, in presence of a large assembly of Knights, including several from England. The Earl of Skelmersdale, Great Prior of England, who had been deputed by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master, to represent him on the occasion, and to assist at the ceremony, was unable to be present owing to the crisis in Parliament. However, there were at their posts Viscount Powerscourt, Great Constable of the Order; Lord Dunboyne, the Grand Master's Standard Bearer; the Earl of Huntingdon, the Great Prior's Standard Bearer; together with Lord Edward Pelham Clinton, Sir David Roche, Bart.; Captain Fitzgerald, Captain Percy Bernard, and Captain Newenham, and a host of Knights from the city and provinces, including the following:—Captain N. G. Phillips, G.D. of England, Holt W. Archer, James Allen, Dr. Browne, Major Bayly, John A. Baker, George Bell, Jessop Browne, Samuel Benner, Major Bailey, James Baird, H. H. Bottomley, John F. Bewley, Captain Cosby, D.L.; Thomas J. S. Casey, Diverport Crosthwaite, LL.D.; Pro Chancellor, Wm. Comyns, Dr. Cameron, Rev. Dr. Cresswell, M. J. McCoy, Andrew Carleton, Major Cooper, George Crowe, William Curtis, Thomas Dockrell, George Drury, Captain Dawes, Major Davoren, Samuel Dobbin, Thomas Drought, W. P. O'Donoghue, Mus. Doc.; John D. Elliott, Major Elliott, James W. Fair, Joshua Fay, Dr. Finney, Wm. Boyle Fitzsimons, of White Abbey, county Antrim; C. Fox, H. Florence, H. Fiaville, junr., James Flynn, John Forsyth, St. George Freemann, of Waterford; Rev. Joseph A. Galbraith, F.T.C.D.; Henry Gibson, Robert Wm. Griffin, LL.D.; Charles O. Grandison, Richard Garnett, Dr. Hamilton, Wm. J. Hepburn, M.D.; Harry Hodges, John Hodges, Captain George Huband, Richard Harvey, Wm. G. Huband, John H. Jessop, Alexander D. Kennedy, H. C. Kelly, Thomas Kennan, H. G. B. Kane, Wm. B. Kelly, Edward H. Kinahan, D.L.; Thomas W. Kinahan, John V. Legge, John A. Lee, W. B. Leonard, Rev. J. J. MacSorley, James H. Macaulay, James Creed Meredith, LL.D.; George Mitchell, Wm. Henry Newenham, James H. North, Samuel B. Oldham, A.G. Sec, Plato Oulton, Wm. D. Pattison, Phillip R. Patman, Henry E. Phillipson, Joseph Phillips, Robert Reeves, Wm. H. Reilly, Wm. Sanderson, M.D.; Wm. Shaw, George Speer, Wm. D. Sharpe, Arthur St. George, Colonel St. George, Theophilus E. St. George, Edward D. Thorpe, Robert Warren, D.L.; Joseph S. Wilson, Thomas George Wills Sandford, D.L.; Wm. Whyte, Richard L. Whitty, Joseph Winton, George Woodworth, Joseph H. Woodworth, David Wood, A. K. Young, and others.

At four o'clock the knights assembled in the Grand Lodge Room arrayed in their panoply. Each wore a tunic with a red cross on the left breast, and a mantle with the cross of the Order on the left shoulder. They were armed with swords in black scabbards, the hilts also black, and fashioned into a skull and crossbones. The Preceptors of the various encampments were distinguished by crimson hoods. On the right hand side next the dais the Knights Commanders formed up, and opposite to these the Great Prior's Council, while the Preceptors and their Knights clustered around. They had not long to wait surveying each other or the splendid decorations of the Grand Lodge Room when a flourish of trumpets and a rataplan on the drums proclaimed the arrival of his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Grand Prior Designate, and who was received by Captain Huband, Acting Great Prior, and conducted to the robing room. A special Great Prior was opened in the Prince Mason's Chapter Room, Capt. Huband, Acting Great Prior, on the throne. Thither the Duke of Connaught was conducted by Viscount Powerscourt, Great Constable of the Order, and having halted at the foot of the throne, the Acting Great Prior presented to the Great Prior Elect the Grand Master's patent of his appointment, and asked him the usual questions, which His Royal Highness answered in a very satisfactory manner. The Primate—represented in the absence of the Most Rev. Lord Plunket, Bishop of Meath, by the Rev. John James MacSorley—recited the prayer for the occasion. The Acting Great Prior then asked the Great Prior Designate whether he was willing to take the obligation of the office, H.R.H. replying in the affirmative, was conducted to the Priory Chapel, which, with its stained glass windows in mullions and tracery, and the altar lit up with tapers, and the assembly of the Knights, recalled the days of the Crusades and tournaments. Here the Prelate administered the obligation, which was announced to the Knights without by a roll on the drums and a flourish of trumpets. A procession having been formed in the following order, conducted H.R.H., the Great Prior, to the Grand Lodge Room, where the main body of the Knights waited to witness his installation, and express their fealty:—

Two Guards, carrying halberds.

Choristers.

Knights Commanders.

The Sub-Marshal.

Great Prior's Standard. Grand Master's Standard.

Captain of the Guard. Captain of the Guard.

Great Marshal of the Order. Great Constable of the Order.

Arch-Chancellor of the Order. Primate of the Order.

Capt. of the Guard. Convent General.

The Vexillum Belli.

The Beauseant.

Captain of the Guard.

Captain of the Guard.

The Herald.

The Sword Bearer.

THE GREAT PRIOR DESIGNATE.

The Great Prior of England. The Acting Great Prior of Ireland.

Aide-de-Camp. Aide-de-Camp.
Knights Grand Crosses.

The Great Officers of the Great Priory of Ireland.

Col. Howard St. George acted as Sub-Marshal; Lord Huntingdon carried the Great Prior's standard; Lord Dunboyne the Grand Master's standard; Captain Richard Donovan and Captain Willes-Sandford acting as Captain of the Guard; and Bro. Maxwell Close, M.P., D.L., Capt. of the Guard of the Convent-General. Sir David Roche, Bart., bore the Vexillum Belli, and Capt. Percy Bernard the Beauseant; Capt. Cosby, D.L., and Capt. Newenham respectively acting as Captains of the Guard, while Mr. Theophilus E. St. George was Herald, and Capt. Byng, A.D.C., Sword-bearer, the Aides-de-Camp being Lord Edward Pelham Clinton and Capt. Fitzgerald. During the procession the following hymn, composed expressly for the occasion by Bro. John Francis Waller, LL.D., V.P.R.D.S., member of the Order of the Temple, was chanted to the music of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," composed by Arthur Sullivan, Mus. D.:-

Raise we hearts and voices
In glad minstrelsy,
Brothers of our Order,
Christian Chivalry.
Ours the mightiest Captain,
Worshipped and adored,
Sin and Death He vanquished—
Christ, our King and Lord.
Raise we hearts and voices,
In glad minstrelsy,
Brothers of our Order,
Christian Chivalry.
Ours no earthly Temple—
That is past and gone—
Ours the Temple mystic,
Christ, chief corner stone.
Prophets and Apostles
Its foundation sure,
Firmly framed, the building
Living stones secure.
Raise we hearts and voices, &c.
Loyal homage give we
To our Patron-Queen,
Long, o'er widespread nations,
Be her happy reign,
Where the Arctic regions
Freeze in icy chains,
Where the Indies burning,
There Victoria reigns.
Raise we hearts and voices, &c.
Honour the Grand Master
Whom those nations own,
Through her vast dominions
Heir to England's throne.
May he count it ever
Knightliest place to be Master of our Order,
Christian Chivalry.
Raise we hearts and voices, &c.
Greet with heartiest welcome
Him who bears each name*
Dear to Christian Ireland,
Dear to England's fame.
May those names their splendour
Round our Prior fling—
Holiest saint of Erin,
Briton's knightliest king.
Patron, Master, Prior,
Love to each accord;
Glory, honour, worship
Unto Christ our Lord.
Amen!

The accompaniment was played on the organ by Bro. Charles O. Grandison. At the conclusion of the hymn the Great Officers and Grand Crosses took the positions assigned to them on the dais by the Sub-Marshal, and the Acting Great Prior assumed the throne. The Great Prior Designate was then led to the foot of the throne, supported by two Knights. His warrant of appointment having been produced, the Acting Great Prior installed His Royal Highness as Great Prior, assisted by Viscount Powerscourt, who, on behalf of the Grand Master, invested the Great Prior with the Grand Cross and Ribbon of the Order. The Herald (Bro. Theophilus E. St. George) then proclaimed, after a flourish of trumpets and roll of drums, the titles of His Royal Highness in the east, in the south-west, and in the north-east, viz.:- "By the authority and in the name of the Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, I proclaim H.R.H. Prince Arthur William Patrick Albert, Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, and Earl of Sussex in the peerage of the United Kingdom; Duke of Saxony and Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Knight of the Most Ancient and Most Noble Order of the Thistle, Knight of the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, and Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, one of her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Counsellors, personal A.D.C. to her Majesty the Queen, Lieut.-Col. of the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, Hon. Col. of the Isle of Wight Artillery Militia, Hon.-Col. of the East Kent Mounted Rifles, and Col. of the London Irish Rifle Volunteers, Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Temple and Great Prior of Ireland."

*Arthur Patrick.

The drums again rolled and the trumpets sounded, after which the organ pealed forth an accompaniment to the National Anthem, which was sung by Dr. O'Donoghue, and joined in with one accord by all present.

The Great Prior, as his first official act, appointed Capt. Huband Sub-Prior, and installed him to that office, presenting him with his abacus and warrant.

The Great Officers then passed by the foot of the throne one after another, and having promised fealty and obedience to the Great Prior, returned to their places.

All the Knights, with drawn swords, also marched past the Great Prior, the officers saluting him with their swords. Having returned to their places, the procession of the Great Officers was re-formed, and conducted the Great Prior to the chapel, where, having assumed the throne, he ordered the Great Priory to be closed.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND THE ORDER OF THE TEMPLE IN IRELAND.

The ancient and illustrious Order of Freemasons have promptly availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the death of the late Marquis of Conyngham to testify their loyal respect and esteem for the Duke of Connaught, by electing him to the vacant office of Great Prior of Ireland. We give in another page an account of the interesting and impressive ceremonial which took place on the occasion, and we feel sure that no more gratifying or acceptable proof of the popularity of His Royal Highness has been given since the Prince became a sojourner amongst us. In every part of the country which His Royal Highness has visited he has been received with the utmost cordiality by all classes of the people. The warmth of the reception is, no doubt, due not only to the attachment felt for his Royal mother, but to his personal qualities, which conciliated the good-will of all parties. While such is the feeling with which His Royal Highness is regarded throughout Ireland, which claims him as her own, the Order of Freemasons were glad to be enabled to offer a special token of respect, which the Prince would be likely to appreciate. To those who are uninitiated in the mysteries of the distinguished Craft the names which the officers bear will appear singularly quaint, but they possess a significance which every member understands, and the proceedings are stamped with a solemn character which is intelligible to every one. The assailants of Freemasonry, who bring reckless charges against it, may well be perplexed and disappointed when they come to read the details of the imposing ritual which was performed. His Royal Highness is now the Great Prior of Ireland, the head of a flourishing branch of the grand array of Masonry. The ceremony, which was gone through with stately and reverential pomp, was no idle pageant, but suggestive of religious impressions. The services of the Prelate of the Order were gone through with becoming solemnity in presence of the Preceptories who took part in the scene, representing the great body of Freemasons throughout the whole country. The obligation which was administered to His Royal Highness, the solemn prayer which was offered up, the hymn of praise which was sung as the brethren marched in procession amidst the pealing of the grand organ—the whole ritual of expressive forms and symbols conveyed to the mind of the spectator impressions worthy of an Order of sacred chivalry, in which even Royalty itself might feel honoured in being allowed to bear an official part. Every brother will join in congratulating the Great Prior on his installation, and the whole Masonic body in having its highest offices filled with such distinction. If any incentive were needed to stimulate their loyalty it would be supplied by the fact that they have enrolled in their highest ranks the Heir Apparent to the Throne and another son of their beloved Queen.—Dublin Daily Express.

RESIGNATION OF THE EARL OF CARNARVON.

(From a Correspondent.)

All England must have heard with profound regret the announcement that our respected Pro Grand Master had resigned into the hands of the Sovereign his office of Secretary of State for the Colonies. Needless to say that we regret it too; not more for that our fellow-countrymen, many of them too brethren in a double sense, in the colonies will have lost the services of an administrator no less conscientious than farsighted, one too, whose guiding hand was especially needful in the case of one colony just passing through the trial of a great crisis in her history, than that we ourselves have lost a firm hand, a clear head, and a warm heart, just in that critical moment whereon hangs either peace or war. Remembering how one great conflict was prevented, how lives were spared, how money took the place of precious blood, in the Transatlantic dispute that was so happily settled by a brother, now active amongst us no more, we deeply deplore that in this hour of difficulty, doubt, and danger, another of our brethren has resigned his command in the ship of the State.

With the political aspect of the question we have, of course, nothing whatever to do, but as an attack has been made upon our distinguished brother in certain of the public prints, it is our bounden duty, as his brethren, to say to his brethren and ours a word in his defence. One such paper, retailing a sorry anecdote, represents Lord Carnarvon as the one dissentient and persistent juror who looks upon the other eleven as the most obstinate men he ever met; now this is exactly the reverse of the present case, for his lordship—we do not say being a Mason—but we do say, being possessed of a feeling heart which every Mason should possess—whilst jealous of the honour of his Sovereign and his country, is still jealous of his brothers' lifeblood; he therefore has not been able to agree with his colleagues in taking as immediate action as they have done. In this he felt that he stood alone. Once more—not because he is a Mason but because he is imbued with that Masonic instinct that tells him that Unity is Strength—he perceives that one halting voice would weaken the hands of his colleagues, whose action in such a crisis as this should be unanimous, and he has withdrawn—a noble action, from which his fine spirit will doubtless reap satisfaction, although a sorrowful one, a noble action that fills us as Masons with admiration, whilst as Englishmen it overwhelms us with regret.

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

St. John's Day was celebrated by the Bangalore Lodge, No. 1043, in good old Masonic style. The lodge opened at 7 a.m. for the installation of the W.M. Bro. Captain McCleverty was inducted into the chair by the out-going W.M., Bro. Pratt, ably supported by a Board of Installed Masters, consisting of Bros. Nepean Smith, J. W. Hayes, Champion, Balfour, Cockburn, Brindley, and Morrison. After the appointment and investiture of the officers, the lodge was adjourned, and the brethren repaired to the dining-hall, where an excellent breakfast was laid out, to which ample justice was done. At 6 p.m. the labours of the day were resumed, and after some formal business the lodge was closed.

In the evening, a grand Masonic ball was given at the Cubbon Hotel by the lodge, which was most numerous attended, not alone by one clique or class, but by the best representatives of every class forming the European community of the cantonment. We must congratulate most heartily the Bangalore Lodge on the zeal and energy which have been manifested in its management during the past year. Financially, the lodge is in a most flourishing condition, and it has recently taken rapid strides towards commanding the respect and support of all who are interested in the welfare of Freemasonry.

It is a subject of regret that the W.M., Bro. McCleverty, will be unable to remain in possession of the chair very long, as his regiment, the 45th, the gallant Sherwood Foresters, leaves for England towards the end of this trooping season, but the greatest discretion has been evinced in the selection of the officers, and we are quite certain the interests of the lodge and the welfare of the Craft in the Mysore Province will not suffer under the care of Bro. Balfour Cockburn, 31^o, the Immediate Past Master, and Bros. A. M. Hayes and Burr, the Senior and Junior Wardens.

It is but scant praise to remark that as regards the ball and its great success, the highest credit must be accorded to Past Master J. W. Hayes, the indefatigable Honorary Secretary of the Ball Committee. We have also to notice that at the last regular meeting of this lodge, a Past Master's jewel was voted to the retiring W.M., who has indeed well earned this token of the brethren's appreciation of the excellent manner in which he has conducted the duties of the lodge. A pretty design for this jewel, Oriental in character, and appropriate to the Province of Mysore, was suggested by his Immediate Past Master, and this has been forwarded to Bro. Keating of London, who doubtless, will carry out the idea into a practical form with his usual taste and skill. We recommend our Masonic friends now home on furlough, to look in at Bro. Keating's and take a wrinkle from this jewel. There are numerous lodges all over India that might get up exceedingly pretty and appropriate designs for their P.M.'s jewel. All we have visited so far as we know have been content to go in for the old stereotyped pattern. A little novelty in those affairs is always desirable.

FREEMASONRY IN JAPAN.

A meeting of more than the usual interest to Freemasons took place on Saturday evening, the 19th Nov., when the brethren of the Rising Sun Lodge, No. 1401, E.C., met to instal the W.M. and officers for the ensuing year. The installation ceremony is one that always brings together a goodly number of the Craft, but in this case the interests were enhanced by the honour paid to the lodge by the presence, at the special invitation of the brethren, of the District Grand Master for Japan. Bro. Chas. H. Dallas, who holds that office under patent from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, G.M. of the English Constitution, had never before paid the Rising Sun Lodge a visit, although he has held the office for four years, but the occasion will be long remembered by the Freemasons of Kobe. The meeting took place in the Masonic Hall, kindly placed at the service of the Rising Sun Lodge by the brethren of the Hiogo and Osaka Lodge, 498, S.C. and the installation ceremony was performed by the R.W.D.G.M. Bro. Dallas, at the desire of W.M. Bro. Hughes, assisted by no less than ten P.M.'s, viz.:-Bros. A. Mitchell of the Yokohama Lodge; A. Longfeldt of the Ototosama Lodge; W. H. Stone and A. Weiller, of the Nippon Lodge; H. St. J. Browne and D. H. Tillson, of the Hiogo and Osaka Lodge; S.C., and W. G. Sands, (D.D.G.M.), J. Marshall, G. Whymark and R. Hughes of the Rising Sun Lodge.

The following officers were installed for the ensuing year:—Bros. T. J. Larkin, W.M.; R. Hughes, I.P.M.; G. Whymark, P.M., Treasurer and Hon. Sec.; T. C. Thornicroft, S.W.; T. M. Rymer-Jones, J.W.; P. A. Nicolle, S.D.; J. Gillingham, J.D.; W. Bristow, I.G.; A. Haalt, Tyler.

After the meeting the brethren partook of an excellent supper, which had been provided at their own room, No. 16, Mac Machi, at the conclusion of which, after the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been given from the chair, the following were proposed and responded to in the order named: "The R.W.D.G.M., Bro. Dallas," by Bro. Larkin, responded to by Bro. Dallas; "The R.W.D.D.G.M., Bro. Sands, and the rest of the D.G. Officers," by Bro. Larkin, responded to by Bros. Sands and Weiler; "The Newly-Installed Master," by Bro. Hughes, responded to by Bro. Larkin; "The I.F.M.," by Bro. Larkin, responded to by Bro. Hughes; "The P.M. of the Rising Sun Lodge," by Bro. Dallas, responded to by Bro. Marshall; "The Officers of the Rising Sun Lodge," by Bro. Stone, responded to by Bro. Thornicraft; "The Sister Lodges of the District," by Bro. Thornicraft, responded to by Bros. Mitchell, Langfeldt, and Weiler; "The Sister Lodge Hiogo and Osaka," by Bro. Rymer-Jones, responded to by Bro. Tillson; "The Rising Sun Lodge," by Bro. Tillson, responded to by Bro. Larkin; "The Visitors," by Bro. Marshall, responded to by Bro. Browne; "The Ladies," by Bro. Browne, responded to by Bro. Eaton; "The Masonic Charities," by Bro. Whymark, responded to by Bro. Stone; the Tyler's toast, by Bro. Hazlett.

The brethren spent a most enjoyable evening, the slight intervals between the toasts being enlivened by a few good songs.

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER.

The following is the agenda for Wednesday, 6th February, 1878:—

The minutes of the last Quarterly Convocation to be read for confirmation.

The Report of the Committee of General Purposes:—

The Committee of General Purposes beg to report that they have examined the Accounts from the 17th October, 1877, to the 15th January, 1878, both inclusive, which they find to be as follows:—

which balances are in the hands of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., Bankers of the Grand Treasurer.

The Committee have likewise to report that they have received the following Petitions:—

1st. From Companions James Mander as Z.; Edward James Harty as H.; John Henry Watts as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Eclectic Lodge, No. 1201, London, to be called the Eclectic Chapter, and to meet at Freemasons' Hall, London.

2nd. From Comps. the Rev. Charles William Arnold as Z.; Thomas Cawley Eager as H.; Harry Will Charlton as J.; and nine others for a chapter to be attached to the Weyside Lodge, No. 1395, Woking, to be called the Weyside Chapter, and to meet at the Crown and Anchor Inn, Woking, in the county of Surrey.

3rd. From Comps. Richard Thomas Elsom as Z.; Francis Buckland as H.; Richard Cartwright as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Dobie Lodge, No. 889, Kingston-on-Thames, to be called the Dobie Chapter, and to meet at the Griffin Hotel, Kingston-on-Thames, in the county of Surrey.

4th. From Comps. Joseph Christopher Lambert as Z.; Richard Dowling as H.; Thomas Charles Storer as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the St. Helena Lodge, No. 488, St. Helena, to be called the St. John's Chapter, and to meet at James Town, in the Island of St. Helena.

5th. From Comps. Joseph Copeland Gillman as Z.; Edwin Banks Harding as H.; Henry Parker Jones as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Trafford Lodge, No. 1496, Moss Side, to be called the Trafford Chapter, and to meet at the Alexandra Hotel, Moss Side, in the Western Division of the county of Lancaster.

6th. From Comps. James Glaisher as Z.; Ernst Emil Wendt as H.; George Brooke as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the St. Mary's Lodge, No. 63, London, to be called the St. Mary's Chapter, and to meet at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, in the Parish of Ealing, in the county of Middlesex.

The foregoing petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

The Committee beg further to report, that there now stands to the credit of the Grand Chapter, invested in the Three per Cent. Consols, a sum of £3400, and they recommend, as no immediate claim is likely to be made on the funds of Grand Chapter beyond the ordinary current expenses, that the following grants be made to each of the Masonic Charities, and be transferred to their respective Trustees, viz:—

The Royal Masonic Institution for Girls	...	£500 Consols
The Royal Masonic Institution for Boys	...	500 "
The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution,
Male Fund	...	500 "
Do. Female Fund	...	500 "
(Signed)	JOHN CREATON, President.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—A certain remedy for diseases of the skin. Ringworm, scurvy, scrofula, or king's evil, sore heads, and the most inveterate skin diseases to which the human race is subject, cannot be treated with a more safe and speedy remedy than Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which act so peculiarly on the constitution, and so purify the blood that those diseases are eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure is obtained. They are efficacious in the cure of tumours, burns, scalds, glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism, contracted and stiff joints. These medicines operate mildly and surely. The cure effected by them is not temporary or apparent only, but complete and permanent.—ADVT.

CONSECRATION OF THE STAR CHAPTER, No. 1275.

The Star Chapter, No. 1275, was consecrated on Wednesday, the 23rd January, 1878, at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, by Comp. James Terry, P.Z., G.D.C. Herts., who was assisted by Comps. Bumstead, P.Z., and Halsey, P.Z., as H. and J. Comp. R. W. Williams acted as Minstrel, and Comp. Kipps as Organist. The companions who were present were Comps. Dr. Moore, P.Z.; Tattershall, P.Z. 140, (one of the founders of Star Lodge); Roberts, 79; Trill, 79; Jardine, 140; Dr. Gooding, 259; General Roddey, 26; Green, 79; Major Gant, 890; Brown, Gibbs, Manners, 197, and the following petitioners, Major W. E. Williams, H. Keeble, T. Perridge, P.Z.; C. W. Williams, R. W. Williams, A. Tisley, H. J. Green.

The chapter was formally opened, and the beautiful ceremony of consecration proceeded with, in the course of which Comp. Terry gave the following oration:—

The beautiful ceremony prescribed to be used at the consecration of a new lodge or chapter includes as a prominent feature, an oration on the merits of Freemasonry. We should be doing the wisdom of our ancient brethren who advised this ceremony, a great injustice if we supposed that this was meant to be confined to an eulogium on the system or on those who profess it. The former is unnecessary, for the science of Freemasonry speaks for itself, neither would the latter be congenial to its spirit, for the practice of Freemasonry carries with it its own reward to those who practice it aright, and they value not the praise or flattery of men. The purpose of an Oration has a higher and a nobler aim, for as every human institution is liable to be deteriorated and corrupted by the wear and tear of ages, it is intended to carry the mind back to the first principles of the Order, to trace the stream of Freemasonry through the quicksands which beset its course, to clear away the rocks and shoals which time has accumulated until we reach the clear pellucid fountain from which flow the pure and dry-tal waters of charity, morality and justice. It is intended to enforce on the members of every new chapter that they are to guard its landmarks with jealous care and to extend its principles with unflinching, self-denying zeal. Such is, I believe, the object of this prescribed oration, and I could only wish that I had power of language sufficient to enforce upon you the importance of exercising this care. I pray you to remember that on you is thrown the responsibility of evincing to the Craft at large that the confidence placed in you by the Supreme Grand Chapter has not been misplaced. I trust you will never forget that this chapter should be so conducted as to improve the quality of Freemasonry rather than to increase the number of professing Freemasons. Above all, that it may be a great centre for the diffusion of brotherly love, relief, and truth; brotherly love as shown in mutual forbearance and forgiveness, mutual aid and sympathy—joy in a companion's joy, and grief in a companion's grief—relief of his wants, freely and ungrudgingly given, relief not only to his bodily but to his mental wants, relief not only to himself, but to those who are nearest and dearest to him, in the persons of his widow and his orphans; and above all this, that the hand of a brother given to a brother Mason should be the sure pledge of brotherhood, aye, and when given to any of the outer world should be received as an obligation, binding as any the law of man could devise, because given by a Mason. Above all, let charity and benevolence by your motto, words tending to the same end, but by different means. Charity to give, when you have the power, to every one of your fellow creatures in the hour of their need, and her handmaid benevolence to wish well to and to strive well for every good cause, even as in the Apostle's case, "silver and gold we have none" to give. Remember that the noblest instinct of man, his noblest attribute, is labour, to work through the morn, to work through the noon, to work through the evening of life, until "the night cometh when no man can work." And what man is in muscular life, he should be in the higher domain of spiritual life. The highest and most complete state of man, which his nature most longs for, and in which it fulfils its most sublime instinct is work, bodily and intellectual, leading up to moral and religious work. For, as the race began with an outward paradise, which being lost, may yet offer the type of a higher paradise to be gained, so each individual life begins with muscular life that passing through the hard struggles of work, in which body, mind, and soul are alike engaged, it may carry its ideal with it, and emerge at last into a state of inspired liberty and spontaneous beauty. It may be a gigantic task that which has been sketched out for us by the wisdom and self-denial of our forefathers in the Order, but if any of the objects of human activity are worth living for at all, if on the whole, it is not the highest wisdom to say, "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die;" it is impossible to imagine a nobler or more stirring object of ambition, a cause to which a man could with more complete satisfaction, or in which he would be sure to meet with a fuller or purer reward, and to which he could devote all the energies of his life as a Mason, than to carry out to their limit the principles inculcated by Freemasonry. Let each in his own sphere, each according to the talents with which God has endowed him, take up his share of the work which lies at his door waiting to be done. There is work for all, and if Masons would but do the work which they should do, then would they be fulfilling indeed what they had undertaken in the First and Second Degree to perform. Then of them it would be said, and if deserved, how sweet would it be to hear it said, "When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me then it gave witness to me, because I relieved the poor that cried, and the fatherless to him that had none to help him, the blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy." God imposes on us serious duties, we must struggle in the interests of humanity against the strong when they abuse their power. From time to time the struggle is interrupted to contemplate its fruits, the oppressed delivered from the tyrant, the poverty or disease-stricken man snatched from the abyss of want, and sent forward rejoicing on a new career of life; the widow encouraged, protected, and supported when she believed that she was forsaken by all the world; the orphan once wan and emaciated, now lighted up and rosy, in the splendid dawn of its young life. Thus do we pass from indignation to tenderness, and we understand the aim of life. Then may we thank God, who, giving us the task to combat the powerful and the wicked, gives us also to succour the innocent and the feeble, and who, side by side with the grave duties of life, has placed the cheerful ones, the latter to uphold the former. The man who so understands and practices Freemasonry, even if he has not progressed beyond this degree, and even if he does not care to display one single jewel, is a better Mason and better acquainted with its symbolical teaching than he who having taken every degree under the sun, has never carried into every-day life the principles and teachings which Freemasonry has perpetually enjoined upon him. He is a Mason who can, and he is not a Mason who cannot.

Grasp the whole world of reason, life and sense,
In one close system of benevolence;
Happier, as feeling in whate'er degree,
The height of bliss in height of charity.

The ceremony was then proceeded with, and at the conclusion of the consecration Comp. Terry installed Comps. Major W.E. Williams, H. Keeble, and Perridge P.Z., as J.; Comps. Major W. E. Williams and H. Keeble, as H.; and Comp. Major E. Williams as Z.; and when the companions were admitted, Comp. R. W. Williams, (W.M. Star, 1275), was installed S.N.; Comp. C. W. Williams (S.W. Star, 1275), was installed S.E.; and Comp. Tisley, P.S.

On the motion of Comp. M.E.Z., seconded by Comp. H., a vote of thanks to Comp. Terry, the Consecrating Officer, and his election as honorary member of the chapter, were carried unanimously in the affirmative.

Comp. Terry having returned thanks, a long list of brethren seeking admission to the Order was then proposed and seconded, the chapter was then closed, and the companions adjourned to the banquet, when the usual Royal Arch toasts were given.

In responding to the toast of "The Consecrating Officers," Comp. Terry said that he was only too pleased to be the means of bringing into life the Star Chapter, and he heartily wished it to succeed, and as the charities had so well and nobly succeeded under the patronage of our Gracious Majesty the Queen, who had three sons Freemasons, so ought this chapter to succeed in its station, as the M.E.Z. also had three sons Freemasons.

The evening was much enlivened by the brilliant pianoforte playing of Comp. Kipps, and the excellent singing of Comps. Williams, Brown, Trill, Gibbs, and others.

MOZART A FREEMASON.

Music is not only charming to the senses, and one of the highest arts, but it is especially contained in the "liberal arts and sciences inculcated in the Second Degree." It is gratifying, therefore, to find that one of the greatest composers of his day, Bro. Wolfgang Mozart, belonged to, and loved our Order. At the present day many musicians of high standing, both as executants and composers, are numbered in our ranks—Sir Michael Costa, Dr. William Sparks, and others. We now turn to a most interesting address, delivered after the initiation of two brethren, of distinguished musical ability, in the Lodge Aurora, "Tur grunen Raute," and "Der drie Schwerter." What brother would not, on hearing that noble song of the Masons, "In diessen hed'gen Hallen," "In these Sacred Walls," be reminded of Bro. Mozart? When we find associated with this great name those of Lessing, Herder, Wieland, and Goethe, some of the greatest and noblest minds of the day may well exclaim, "Wonderful Masons!" To his connection with Masons Mozart is indebted for many impulses, in as much as the "Zauberflöte" (the Magic Flute) was not only in plan and text founded on Masonry, but the musical ideas also were essentially controlled by it. Mozart also wrote music for the lodge, among which we may mention the following, viz., the "Gessellenreise," composed March 29, 1785; another song composed earlier, is accompanied by the organ, and has a chorus for tenor and bass voices. He composed a cantata in honour of Bro. Born, in 1785 which was published and sold for the benefit of the poor. Again, another cantata in 1794, under the title of "Lob der Freundschaft" (Praise of Friendship). Another composition of wonderful beauty is the Masonic funeral services, written in 1785, for orchestra, on the occasion of the death of Prince Mecklenburg and Esterhazy, both Masons. That Mozart was an enthusiastic Mason is evidenced by his writing on the subject of "Death." This was a letter to his father. He says: "Since death is the true end of our life I have for a few years past made myself so well acquainted with this best friend of man, that its image has not only nothing terrible for me, but is full of rest and comfort! and I thank my God that He has granted me the good fortune to provide for me the opportunity you understand me) to learn to know Him as the key of our true happiness." We may return to this subject again at another time.—Scottish Freemason.

The Queen, according to the present arrangements, is expected to remain at Osborne till about the middle of next month, keeping the anniversary of her wedding day, the 10th February, in the Isle of Wight.

Reviews.

"Popery: What It Is." By LEON DELBOS.—F. Case, 12, Booksellers' Row.

It is always very difficult for Masonic scribes to review a professedly polemical work in a Masonic journal. Those for whom we write proclaim allegiance to an Order which specially deprecates the "odium theologium," which equally ignores controversy and believes emphatically that the world is, after all said and done, wide enough for us all. And though we give Mr. Leon Delbos (Bro. are we to term him?) all credit for good intentions, sincere opinions, and much energy and emphasis of expression, the pamphlet he has been so good as to send us for review is practically "unreviewable" by us. For we could not treat it properly, or even partially, without finding ourselves at once in a very "debateable land" indeed of incrimination and recrimination. We agree with the writer, that anything more childish, and useless, or more unwise in itself than the anathematizing spirit of the Church of Rome, as against persons, doctrines, books, Freemasons &c., never was exhibited in the history of the world, and that it is one which for sane and religiously minded persons is alike painful and humiliating to realize and remember. But having said this, we stop here. We are not justified as Freemasons in attacking Rome, qua Rome, nor is it part of our duty as Masonic reviewers to dilate upon charges many and great, which go to impugn the constitution, the tenets, the practices of the Church of Rome as such. There are plenty of newspapers in which such accusations can be reproduced, in which the honest and indignant opinions of Leon Delbos could find vent, but they have no place properly in the pages of the Freemason. We have said thus much for fear of being misunderstood. Our Masonic motto is always, "Defence, not Defence," and we Masonically object to all embittered controversies, as it would be most contrary to all our kindly teaching, if we allowed our pages to become the medium of the angry inculcation of this or that religious body, however hostile that body may be to Freemasonry. Even supposing that the Church acts unfairly by us Freemasons, as it clearly does, condemning all Freemasonry, though ignorant of our true principles, and unable to appreciate our good work, that is no reason why we should turn our peaceful Freemason into a polemical or religious journal. Moreover we confess that we have, as Freemasons especially, little sympathy with that sensational literature just now which deals largely in "spicy" and vehement railing against all religious organizations. These intrepid, and excited penmen often seem to remind us of the old waiter at Vauxhall, who when asked what orders his "missus" had given him replied, "Says she to me, Robert, she says, keep on perpetually a cutting ham sandwiches." Seriously, while we deprecate angry logomachies in the Freemason we are quite aware, that there is a most important side to the question, but it must be settled elsewhere, and certainly not in the Freemason.

"Der Bund;" edited by Hugo Mandello and Dr. Ludwig Rosenberg, Pesth.

This is a new Masonic serial, edited by two well-known Hungarian brethren, one of whom has for some time past been the editor of the "Hajnal," an Hungarian Masonic paper. There are splits in editorial as well as ministerial cabinets and some equally meaningless, and it seems that Bro. Dr. Rosenberg has set up an opposition paper to the "Hajnal," or rather a rival paper, with the assistance of a co-editor. We do not exactly discover the point of difference or the aim of our learned conferees; but we think it well to note the appearance of "Der Bund." It appears to be ably edited, is well printed, and has a good deal of Masonic information.

"Scripture Extracts; compiled and pointed as a Musical Service for the various Masonic Ceremonies;" by Bro. DAVID PRICE OWEN. Simpkin, and Marshall, London.

Agreeing as we do with the proposition that music may most fitly be introduced into our Masonic Ceremonial, and acknowledging gladly the efforts of some able musical writers in this direction, we are not quite prepared to say that we can conscientiously approve of the present work. It seems to us to print too much. Its points and rubrics are too plain to be misunderstood, and much which is so complacently given to the profane world, ought to be reserved in our humble opinion for the lodge, and the lodge alone; but then we belong to the old school. We think the idea of the writer not a bad one, and had it only been carried out in due subordination to the dictates of Masonic reserve, we should have been ready to welcome it and glad to commend it. As it is, we fancy our humble criticism will be the one which will occur to Masons generally on running through it. At the same time we wish to encourage the great and goodly use of music in Masonic Ritualism, and call the attention of all brother organists and "sweet singers" to the work.

ICELANDIC LAW.—Mr. Jón Jonsson the secretary to the Governor of Iceland, is now industriously occupied in the study of trials by juries in England, and in the pursuit of records bearing on the early history of this subject. Iceland seems to be waking up to the memory of her former self. In her laws and literature are found the earliest and at the same time the fullest records of "trial by jury." Certain antiquaries hold it to be an institution brought into England by the Danes, which in itself is very likely—indeed, extremely so—although it does not prove its prior non-existence among the Anglo-Saxons, kith and kin of the Danes themselves. After the union with Norway in the latter half of the 13th century trial by jury fell into desuetude in Iceland. Now that the Danes are, after laborious inquiries, on the point of adopting the English mode of procedure with regard to the jury, Iceland wants to inquire for herself, too, on the point.—Athenæum.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—Professor Dewar commenced on Friday week a course of lectures on the chemistry of the organic world. The special scope of the course is to bring together all the work on the subject done most recently by observers in many countries, but yesterday's lecture was occupied with a preliminary sketch, commencing with Priestley's observations from 1771 onwards. The Professor has collected and printed extracts from Priestley's writings, which show the sequence of his experiments, and these notes, put in chronological order for the first time, we believe, are of value to students of the subject. Priestley found that air in a confined space, while vitiated by the burning of candles, was restored by plants under certain conditions, and this condition he found after many experiments was that the plant was in a vegetative state. Jegen-Housz, interested in Priestley's work, found in 1779 that the meaning of plants having this effect was that "this wonderful operation is by no means owing to the vegetation of the plant, but to the influence of the light of the sun upon the plant." Jean Schebier, in 1792, communicated a paper to the "Journal de Physique," in which he pointed out the probability that carbonic acid gas is decomposed by plants in vegetation. Many of the historical experiments were reproduced, and the action of light on phosphorescent bodies was shown, illustrating a phenomenon which set the minds of the early observers at work in connexion with the influence of light on vegetation. From this starting-point the subject is to be worked out in the subsequent lectures. Its development has latterly been so rapid that frequent issues of text books have hardly kept pace with it.

The first cocoa house belonging to the Public Cocoa House Company was opened at Leeds the week before last.

Some very successful experiments with the telephone have been carried on lately at St. Petersburg, the result being an order from the Government to establish telephonic communications between the Exchange and the Telegraph Department. Arrangements have also been made for the extensive use of the telephone on the Warsaw Railway.

Marble identical with the famous yellow Italian Marble—the Giallo Antico—has been found in California, at Tehacepa, Kern County. The Californian stone is white, with amber-coloured veins, and the discovery is highly prized, as the quarry from which the yellow Italian marble was procured has been unknown for centuries.

Mayfair states that in a biography of Jacob Böhme, contributed to the "Dictionnaire de la Conversation," M. Bouchitte has credited him with the authorship of certain "Reflections sur les Bottes d'Isaac"—a title which is all the more comical from the fact that Böhme was a shoemaker. It appears, however, that the work was really an essay on a theological dissertation of Professor Isaías Stüefel, "Stüefel" being German for boots.

Literature in Germany, which has languished considerably since the Franco-Prussian War, bids fair to recover itself. Last year 16,437 new books were published throughout the Empire, an increase of 2000 on the average of the past eight years.

DAMP.—The rainfall at Portree, Skye, during 1877 was 93.26 in. The least rainfall in any month occurred in April—viz., 1.77 in. The heaviest was in November, 15.69 in. On October 14th 4.98 in. fell within 24 hours. Rain fell on 283 days during the year.—British Medical Journal.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The English Opera Season at Her Majesty's Theatre will soon close, as the Italian Opera Season will this year commence at an unusually early period. During the brief recess the house is to be redecorated, and, among other structural improvements, additional staircases are to be constructed on both sides of the house, improving the already spacious access to both the pit tier and the grand tier.

Fires in London during 1877, to which the Fire Brigade were called, numbered 1708, of which 106 were false alarms; while 14,057,165 gallons, or about 65,400 tons, of water were used for extinguishing conflagrations. There were 165 persons endangered by fire, but only twenty-nine lost their lives.

THE CLEOPATRA.—The monolith ship with her precious freight is still lying in the East India Docks, only a few minutes' walk from the Blackwall Railway Station. Many thousands of persons have visited her since her arrival.

A public meeting has been held at Oxford, at which resolutions in support of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Railway Accidents, that compensation be given to railway servants for accidents, were passed. Both Sir W. Harcourt and Mr. Hall, the members for the city expressed their sympathy with the cause. Sir William Harcourt said he could not understand why a guard or other railway servant who was injured while travelling in a train which met with an accident should be the only one amongst the passengers who was not entitled to compensation.

The Fashionable Bracelets worn by Transatlantic Belles this season must be serious weights to the wrist. Oriental bangles are the favourite style, and appended from them is a miscellaneous collection of miniature articles in gold or silver, relieved by black and red enamel, such as kettles, opera glasses, traps, goblets, skulls with ruby or diamond eyes, mice, horses, dogs, eggs, keys, scissors, shoes, Cupids, and harlequins, columbines, clowns, and pantaloons in striped enamel or silver encrusted with gems. The necklace to match is made of Japanese amber, with a transparent locket containing a fly apparently alive.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday last, at the Havelock Hotel, Albion-road, Dids-on, Bro. Bernard Meyer being installed W.M. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

Bro. Col. Francis Burdett, Grand Sovereign of the Red Cross Order, has appointed Bro. the Rev. J. Marsden, B.D., M.P.S. of the Maurice Conclave, 112, and P.M. of the St. Peter's Lodge, No. 476, to succeed as Intendant General for Carmarthenshire, the lamented Bro. Rev. Latimer Maurice Jones, B.D., Deputy Grand Master for the Western Division of South Wales, a very distinguished Mason, and large-hearted brother, whose loss will be long deplored.

On Monday last Bro. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, S.G.W., was installed Great Prior of Ireland, in the room of the late Marquis Conyngham. The ceremony took place at the Masonic Hall, Dublin, in the presence of a large assembly of the brethren representing the City and Provincial preceptories of the Great Priory of Ireland. Amongst those taking a prominent part in the proceedings were Viscount Powerscourt, the Earl of Huntingdon, Capt. Huband, and Capt. N. G. Philip.

The annual ball of the Earl of Carnarvon Lodge, No. 1642, takes place on the 22nd inst., at Labroke Hall, Labroke Grove-road, Notting-hill. The whole of the proceeds will be devoted to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF VETERINARY SURGEONS.—At a meeting of the Court of Examiners held on Saturday, the 12th ult., under the provisions of the new Supplemental Charter granted by her Majesty on the 23rd of October, 1876, in order more effectually to promote and encourage the study of veterinary medicine and surgery, it was ordered that a new class of members, to be called "Fellows," should be created, making it imperative for each candidate, prior to such examination, to pass a higher order of examination and to produce a certificate of graduation in arts at a university, or certificate of liberal education after an examination by the College of Preceptors, under the direction and supervision of the Council. The examination for fellowship to be oral and written, and the subjects to be on physiology and comparative anatomy, pathology, therapeutics, surgery, sanitary science, dietetics, and epizootiology. We are pleased to notice among seven successful candidates the name of our late respected citizen, Bro. Robert Ward, of Goldsworth Lodge, Woking, as having passed a successful examination, admitted to the Fellowship Degree, and received the diploma.—Hampshire Chronicle.

The meetings of the Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction, No. 1278, will in future be held at the Salmon and Ball (Bro. H. Smith's), Bethnal Green-road, every Wednesday evening, instead of Friday, at half-past eight o'clock.

We are in a position to state that the Queen will hold a Drawing Room at Buckingham Palace on Thursday, Feb. 28, at three o'clock, on which occasion Her Majesty will also receive the Corps Diplomatique, under the usual regulations of the Diplomatic Court.

Her Majesty will also hold Drawing Rooms on Thursday, March 21; Tuesday, May 7; and Thursday, May 9.

Bro. Emra Holmes is bringing out a new tale in The Masonic Magazine, commenced in the Christmas number, called "Amabel Vaughan,"—the author takes the side of the boys as to the administration of Christ's Hospital—and the editor, in a foot note to the first chapter, says:—"We are among those who much regret the sensational excitement about Christ's Hospital, but we have thought well to let our brother speak for himself." The story, as containing the reminiscences of an "Old Blue," promises to be interesting.—Civilian.

THE RECORDERSHIP OF LONDON.—The announcement of the resignation, through ill-health, of the Right Hon. Russell Gurney, M.P., as Recorder of London, though not unexpected, has caused sincere regret throughout the corporation. There are, already two candidates in the field—namely, Sir Thomas Chambers, M.P., who has filled the office of Common Serjeant for 20 years, and who acted as Recorder during Mr. Gurney's absence in Jamaica and the United States, and Mr. Robert Malcom Kerr, LL.D., the Judge of the City of London Court, and one of the Commissioners of the Central Criminal Court. The names of Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, Q.C., and Mr. W. Digby Seymour, Q.C., Recorder of Newcastle-upon-Tyne are also mentioned. The appointment is in the gift of the Court of Aldermen, a body of 26 members. The first known Recorder of London was Jeffrey de Norton, who held the office in 1298. Sir Edward Coke was Recorder in 1591, and the notorious Judge Jeffreys was elected Common Serjeant in 1670, being then only 23 years of age, and Recorder of London in 1678. Lord Chancellor King was Recorder in 1708. Stow says that the Recorder of London must be "a grave and learned lawyer skilful in the customs of the City," and qualified to be "the chief assistant of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen for their better direction in matters of justice and law."

Lord Hartington has given £500 towards the extension of the University of Edinburgh.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will hold a Levée on her Majesty's behalf at St. James's Palace on Saturday, the 9th February, at 2 o'clock, and another at the beginning of March.

Will any brother kindly send to the Editor of the Freemason a copy of Loomis's Musical and Masonic Miscellany for November and December.

no good ever has come to any in this world by adopting a cynical or lachrymose tone, and that our duty and mission seem to be never to forget our professions, and above all, to endeavour to carry into practice those truths we declare that we admire, and which in the concrete as in the abstract, undoubtedly are for the happiness and comfort of our race.

PEACE.

We have always been among those, who sincerely hoped that a stop some time might be put, to a barbarous and mournful war. But though we are anxious for Peace, and though we deplore War, yet we are not "Peace-at-any-price" men. We quite admit that at times in the history of our race, War is patriotic, War is honourable, War is absolutely needful to vindicate the rights of a people, or to uphold the true interests of humanity. We rejoice to be able now to advert to the fact that the War in the East is for the time at an end, that an armistice has been agreed to, and that we may ere long expect the assurance of happier Peace. It is no part of our duty, nor does it consort with our inclination, to dilate here upon the political aspects of the case, the controversies of Governments, or the "pourparlers" of statesmen? We simply as patient and not uninterested observers, Freemasons that we be, of the world's progress and the world's affairs, record the fact, that a state of War in the far Orient has been exchanged, happily, for prospect of Peace. Such a fact deserves to be noted and commended in our pages. Peace is a good thing for the world and for all, for trade and industry, and as peaceful Freemasons, rejoicing in the onward tranquil march of our race, we are bound as it appears to us to rejoice when we are told to-day that War, with all its attendant horrors, is about to give way to the vivifying blessings of Peace.

THE PRO GRAND MASTER.

All our brethren will have heard with deep regret of the resignation of our distinguished brother of his high office in the service of the Crown. We are all well aware of his many qualities of head and heart, his statesmanlike views, and his sincere honesty, and we shall all deplore that at such a crisis the country is deprived of his great abilities and that the councils of the Sovereign have lost his presence. We know enough of him, however, to be sure that he has acted most conscientiously, and we feel that we cannot well say more to day. We call attention to a communication on the same subject elsewhere.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

We publish this letter with great pleasure. We heartily sympathize with Bros. Hubert and Lechaut and those seventy-six brethren who voted in the minority. Any help that we can give them with be gladly offered, and any representations of theirs will always find place in the Freemason. We are with them heart and soul. All honour to Bro. Hubert.

To the Editor of the "Freemason,"

Respected Sir and Brother,—

Knowing, as I do, the deep and brotherly interest you bear towards those French Masons who will not abandon the strength and "raison d'être" of our noble and humanitarian Institution, and feeling sure that you will sustain us in our legal and loyal fight against the revolutionary intruders that made so disastrous work last September, I take the liberty to address you and I hasten to inform you, that last Monday, the 21st inst., our esteemed Bro. Hubert, the able and devoted editor of the "Chaine d'Union," although unanimously elected W.M. of the Lodge "Le Temple des Amis de l'Honneur Français," over which he has presided so efficiently during many consecutive years, has declined to accept the proffered honour, on account of his principles, and the utter impossibility for his conscience to adhere to the Grand Orient of France, in its departure from the great and universal principles that lay at the foundation of our Order, and give to it strength, wisdom, and beauty.

In taking such a resolution Bro. Hubert was deeply and sadly moved, and so were all the brethren present, but duty spoke and its stern dictates had to be obeyed.

As we mean to stay with our brethren of the mystic tie all over the civilized and religious world, we hope and pray that you will not forsake us in this dutiful, but hard and painful contest.

With much respect, I remain dear brother, fraternally yours,
LUDOVIC LECHAUT.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I am much obliged to you for your report of the proceedings arising out of my motion at the Quarterly Court of the Girls' School, and for your comments thereupon. My remarks, however, were not intended to convey that "too much attention was paid to the elementary education," on the contrary, I said, or intended to say, that there were people—subscribers—who objected to the growing tendency to make fine ladies of the pupils, by teaching them Latin, geometry, French, drawing, &c., &c., and to disregard such essentials as plain needlework, cutting out, getting up linen, cooking, &c.

I was glad to find from the observations of the Chairman that all these receive due attention, and I trust, therefore, that those who carp at the system of education will now cease to animadvert. I am glad also to know through you that the girls get on creditably after they leave the school, but I have often asked myself what kind of positions do the majority procure.

I feel sure that good must result from the discussion upon the motion; indeed, I think it has already done good, as witness your suggestion that the pupils should have instruction by a qualified cook.

We all know how difficult it is to get domestic servants in these days, and I believe it arises in a great measure—not because they are educated morally, religiously, or intellectually—but because they are educated above their position in life.

I was sorry that my remarks were supposed to be directed against the House Committee, nothing was farther from my intention. My sole object was to call attention to the fact that there were people who entertained the idea that accomplishments, and not practical instruction in housewifery duties were the aim of those who conducted the education at the school, and I am glad to have the assurance of the Chairman and yourself that this is not so. Yours faithfully,
RAYNHAM W. STEWART.

THE ANCIENT CHIVALRIC ORDER OF CONSTANTINE.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I have recently been perusing the "General Statutes of the Imperial Ecclesiastical and Military Order of Knights of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine," and as I feel strongly that certain "points" in such statutes might be greatly amended, for the good of the Order, I think it well to trouble you with my ideas, valuable or worthless it matters not, on the subject. I know you are quite alive to the necessity now-a-days, every thing being "realistic" in the highest degree, and equally with myself, would object to anything which might cause an appearance of incongruity or absurdity to attach to our own Masonic, or any quasi-Masonic Order! I do not see in the first place that it need be contended that any Masonic connection exists as between the Order of Constantine and Craft Masonry. There certainly is none properly, neither need any be assumed, as each has its own object, so to say, of work and utility.

If we concede, as I think we fairly may, the consistency of a Christian Order, with a partly Masonic organization, the whole controversy is at an end. It may indeed, be said that the universal theory and the limited theory are not consistent. No more they are, but all that can be alleged after all, is a greater or less degree of inconsistency in us most consistent mortals.

I object, imprimis, to the assumption of the knightly character. The assertion that any knighthood can be conferred in a council or conclave is absurd. As all the old heraldic writers would tell you, (ask our distinguished Bro. Sir Albert Woods), the "Soverayne is the only true fountayne of honoure." And though it is true that the sovereign can delegate the power of conferring knighthood to a vice roy or special representative, yet that is an exception to the rule. In olden times knighthood was conferred on the field of battle, by sovereigns or great commanders, whether under the banners (hence Knights Banneret), merely as Knights Military. But beyond this no creation of knighthood was known. In the days of chivalry, distinguished knights conferred the honour on young aspirants with the sovereign's permission, but that habit by degrees passed away. The statement that the Grand Masters of the Military Orders conferred knighthood is not or as far as we know, correct. No one could be admitted into those Orders, except knights as such, and if esquires were ever raised to the knighthood, it was in Palestine on the field of battle, for great deeds of daring, and then they must be of knightly birth.

If the history of this Order can be traced back to the Abbé Giustiniani, it is quite clear that his claim as a Grand Cross, to confer the Red Cross, is very doubtful indeed, and I know of no collection of "statutes" which gives any such power.

I for one cannot believe, therefore, that any such authority exists, except by express sanction of the Sovereign, and certainly I cannot understand how Sir Knight Thomas Tippeton, excellent man as he is, can affect to confer the honour of Knighthood on our worthy brother, Samuel Higginbotham. I fear that the assertion of such unfounded claims, and the fact of such questionable usurpation of sovereign power, excites the risibility of the serious, and perpetuates the tendency in the outer world, to laugh at many worthy brethren who continue such usages, however much within "two walls."

But the gist of my long letter is, that I do not see why the Order may not be made very useful and still more expansive. Sweep away all the paraphernalia of alleged knighthood. Make it a chapter of the companions of the resuscitated Order of the Red Cross. Do away with the Sovereign, leave the ruling authority to the Grand Master, and declare the object of the fraternity to be the perpetuation of the promulgation of Christianity by Constantine, and the relief of decayed companions and their widows, and the Christian education of their orphan children of both sexes. Such an order would have both a definite aim and a distinct status, it would be divested of all unreality, and would commend itself to many who now keep aloof from it, in consequence of doubts as to its historical, its authentic, and its veritable character. I think I see how it can become a world-wide Christian order of great utility. I may be wrong, but I venture to submit my humble opinion to you to-day, and am, dear Brother Kenning, yours,
A LOVER OF REALITY AND TRUTH.

A QUESTION OF LAW.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

In the case referred to in this week's Freemason I should have remarked that the W.M.'s contention was "that he acted in accordance with the wish of the proposer of the candidate." I presume that even were this the case it would not alter the legality of the action, and that his decision would be equally unjustifiable as their (the proposer) wish cannot be allowed to cancel and supersede the lodge's prerogative to act on the proposition in regular course. Is this view correct?

The constitution is simply this—that under no circumstances can a proposition for membership that has been duly received by a lodge, be withheld from the usual course of procedure by the mere dictum of the W. Master. With many apologies for again troubling you.

I am, yours fraternally, A MEMBER OF THE LODGE.

[In principle we agree with our worthy correspondent; practically if the W.M. acted in accordance with the wishes of the proposer and seconder, it no doubt does somewhat affect the main question.—Ed.]

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Would you be kind enough to inform me

1. What is the meaning of "Mark" Mason?
2. Is there any means of joining an English Lodge and so obtain the Royal Arch or Rose Croix Degree under the English Grand Lodge, without going to England?

It is understood that I have my honourable discharge from Cadiz Lodge working under the Sup. Con. of France as M.M., and possess the necessary qualifications and knowledge for the degrees alluded to.

Yours very truly and fraternally,
SEVILLE. P.

THE GRAND LODGE OF CUBA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I forward per book post to your address a collection of our Official Masonic Review "The Voice of Hiram."

This paper will post you fully regarding the situation and prospects of the fraternity in this country. The Grand Lodge of the Island of Cuba, founded on the 6th Aug., 1876, by the thirteen lodges of Havana, Matanzas and Cardenas, which were tired of a fruitless life under the rule of the Supreme Council of the A. and A. S. Rite, has been recognised by the Grand Lodges of New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Rhode Island, Colorado, Idaho and Manitoba.

I am, dear Sir, fraternally yours,

JUAN DE LA C. PEREZ,

Grand Lecturer.

[We are glad to publish this letter from our esteemed correspondent.—Ed.]

TRURO CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of the "Royal Cornwall Gazette."

Sir,—I have read with great interest the account of the meeting held at Truro last week on the subject of the Cathedral.

It has struck me that it would be well to try and rouse the feeling of the whole diocese, so as to build an edifice worthy of Cornwall.

I venture to suggest, therefore, that each parish should be separately canvassed for subscriptions, and that every benefited clergyman should be appointed local secretary for his own particular district. The Bishop's generous proposal to give himself £100 a year for ten years, I trust, will be met by many like offers, and I, for one, should be very happy to give £5 a year for the same period towards so good an object. Another idea suggests itself to me as worthy of consideration. The Freemasons are a large and, I suppose, influential body. They have done some thing of late years in the south and west of England in the restoration of Cathedrals, although the Grand Lodge could not see its way clear to give a penny towards the restoration of St. Paul's, though one of its earliest Grand Masters, Sir Christopher Wren, was the architect of the building, which some call the glory of London. But provincial Masons have proved themselves large-hearted or more mindful of the fact that our historic fanes were built by their ancestors, the travelling Freemasons of the middle ages. Worcester Cathedral, Bath Abbey, Gloucester Cathedral, St. Mary Redcliffe Church, Bristol, and the Cathedral there, all bear witness to the fact that Freemasons, if they cannot work with their hands as operative masons, can at all events give of their means to beautify and adorn such noble structures. Let the Freemasons of Cornwall take the matter up, and with a little of the zeal they can show in supporting their own charities, much may be done to make the Cornish Cathedral, now a dream, into a reality.

Pardon these ideas for they come from a stranger, a zealous Churchman, and

A POOR CIVIL SERVANT.

A COMPLAINT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Whilst the question of "jobbery" is on the tapis, might I ask if there is not a little too much of it going on with regard to the election of officers of our lodges? For instance, a brother refuses to pay up unless he has the promise of being made I.G. next year, another says he thinks he shall resign; but the W.M. elect has a friend of his own whom he intends to put in, merit being altogether left out of the question. I have spoken to several old Masons, inquiring if it was usual to have so much backstairs work to get into office; the answer I got was, "They are all alike." I hope it is not true. Would it not be just as well that we had a lottery of all those who were competent, and wished to take office? Hoping you will think this worthy of insertion in the Freemason,

I remain, yours fraternally,

A YOUNG M.M.

[Our young brother seems to have fallen among the "Philistines." We do not think that any such complaints are justified, except in very particular cases.—Ed.]

"DER JUDE WIRD VERBRONNT."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. Findel's words refer to Bro. Lessing's Dramatic Poem of "Nathan the Wise," act four scene two where the patriarch of the Christians is talking with the Templar about Nathan, and says that under any circumstances the Jew will be burnt, because he has committed an offence against the Christians. Bro. Lessing meant, and Bro. Findel applies it in the sense that however worthy the individual, the law must take its course—and in reply to the arguments of the Templar, his invariable remark is "Thut nichts! du jude wird verbrannt." "It matters not! we'll burn the Jew." Meaning that however really good and noble, precedent is greater than virtue.

On the main question I do not agree with Bro. Findel. I hope this will reach in time for Saturday's number. I write in haste as my Freemason has been delayed.

Yours truly and fraternally,

KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE.

THE ORDER OF THE TEMPLE IN IRELAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As it is probable that you will take some notice in your paper, the Freemason, of the installation of the Duke of Connaught as "Great Prior of the Order of the Temple in Ireland," of which you may see notice taken by all the Dublin newspapers, I enclose you a cutting from the Dublin Evening Mail of the 29th inst. (last evening). It is the only correct report which has been published, as you will, no doubt, perceive (if you be a member of the Order of the Temple) from the phraseology and the erroneous terms used in all other Dublin newspapers.

Should you think fit to take any notice of this matter in your publication, you may as well have a correct version of the ceremonies which took place, and with this object I enclose the cutting.

I am, Sir,

A SUBSCRIBER TO YOUR PAPER FROM ITS COMMENCEMENT UNTIL THE PRESENT TIME.

[Many thanks; we had already received the account.—Ed.]

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

We have seen an official account of the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire on the 10th of January, which was a largely attended one, and we think it well to notice the following points in it.

The lodge was opened in the three degrees by the W.M. and officers of Sincerity Lodge, No. 1019, at 1.15 p.m., and at 1.30 p.m., the R.W. Prov. G. Master, the W.D.P.G.M., and the Prov. G. Officers entered, and Prov. G. Lodge was opened in due form; solemn prayer was offered, and a portion of Holy Scripture read by the Prov. G. Chaplains.

The R.W. Prov. G. Master was then saluted according to ancient custom, and delivered an address, of which we give the main portion:—

Brethren,—In compliance with established custom, I embrace the opportunity of meeting you thus assembled in this Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire, to address to you a few words on topics of interest. I need only express to you the pleasure I experience in being present with you to-day. In acknowledging your salutation, I appreciate most highly the reception again accorded to me, and, let me assure you, I am proud not only of belonging to your body as Freemasons, but that I am called upon to preside over these quarterly gatherings. Allow me to offer the congratulations of the new year to every brother in this hall, and to express the hope that as new year succeeds new year, our distinguishing characteristics may still tend to bind us together in those bonds of brotherly communication for the promotion of peace and the extension of charity which have existed for so many centuries, as principles of the Craft. It is our good fortune to meet under the banner of the Lodge of Sincerity, in Wakefield, at this wintery season of the year. We have an agreeable recollection of a previous occasion when, under the banner of Unanimity, April, 1876, we assembled in this same most hospitable town. I observe that Freemasonry is on the increase in Wakefield, and that Sincerity Lodge, the youngest of the three, founded in 1864, is growing up into a wide-spreading tree. Under its banner have been enlisted brethren of personal influence, who will carry the principles of the Craft wherever they go, so that wherever the name of Sincerity Lodge is mentioned, and wherever the names of its Worshipful Masters are spoken of, there also will this lodge be respected. Sincerity Lodge numbers in its ranks 50 members, some of them active business men of the town. It is, I am informed by my Deputy, a popular lodge, and of which the present Ex-Mayor of Wakefield had the honour of being elected the first Master. From the annual returns, I learn this lodge has had a steady course of prosperity. Bro. Wm. Clayton has earned the highest honour his brethren could confer upon him, viz.,—electing him W. Master for 1878. We thank him for the excellency of the arrangements to receive the brethren of this Provincial Grand Lodge to-day. The prosperity of Wakefield appears to follow the prosperity of its three lodges. A visitor coming to the town now, after the lapse of a few years, would at once notice the change which is taking place in the architectural appearance of the streets. Wakefield will not be behind other towns in the Riding, and will shortly possess a magnificent Town Hall, a necessity which has long been felt. On Saturday, the 25th November, 1876, under the auspices of Lodge No. 495, I was present on that wet November day, at the commencement of a noble pile of buildings for the relief of suffering humanity—the Clayton Hospital, a credit to the town and its principal contributors, amongst others, Bro. Col. Charlesworth, and the family of our respected D.P.G.M., Bro. Tew, and which is approaching completion under its able architect, Bro. Bakewell, of Leeds. Much of this architectural extension and educational expansion of Wakefield is due to the individual efforts of the Freemasons of the three lodges, and more particularly acting under the untiring exertions of Bro. W. H. Gill, who has shown himself to be, not only an eminent speculative Mason in the science of jurisprudence, either Masonic or legal, but we may venture to call him also a scientific operative master builder.

I must make a brief remark upon the recent proceedings of the Grand Lodge of England relative to the position which that body has taken up towards the Grand Orient of France and the Berlin Grand Lodge. This Provincial Grand Lodge must endorse the individual opinion of the Pro Grand Master of England in regretting the course which the Grand Lodge of the "Three Globes," of Berlin, has followed. But we have faith in the wisdom and expediency of the course which our Grand Lodge has taken, lest we should be interfering with the internal regulations of an independent Masonic body, with which perhaps English Freemasons have not at present an opportune time to bring to the notice of the Emperor of Germany, through our Grand Master, the Prince of Wales, certain recommendations, having for their object the removal from its constitutions of what may be most fittingly described as the "Jewish Disabilities."

The Grand Orient had proposed a startling innovation, which would be repugnant to the human mind and startling to the general intellect. It would be impossible for English Freemasons to act in harmony with those who would base their system of ethics upon such a doctrine as that of negation, a doctrine which has ever tended to retard the progress of the French nation, and which, in its very essence, must always mar the universal spread of those truly humanitarian ideas which include the exercise of every virtue, and by which the principles upon which the government of the Craft has been founded can only be effectually and logically inculcated, in conjunction with a firm and unhesitating faith in the Grand Geometrician of the Universe.

W. Bro. Tew, D.P.G.M., then offered, for the acceptance of Provincial G. Lodge, a complete set of Masonic clothing for all its officers, now laid before them, as some little token of the respect and esteem in which he held the brethren of the province (applause), as well as a slight acknowledgment of their hospitality. The clothing which now adorned the officers of the lodge had been in use since the establishment of that Provincial Grand Lodge, in 1823, and he ventured to hope that the emblems on the new clothing would also continue to be emblems of the beautiful principles of charity and brotherly love which West Yorkshire had advocated during the fifty-four years of its existence. He would offer one suggestion, that the old clothing, which has been repaired, should be preserved for public ceremonies outside the lodge, and the new clothing used for Prov. G. Lodge meetings only. (Applause.)

R. W. Bro. Sir Henry Edwards in feeling terms accepted the handsome gift, and thanked the W. Deputy Prov. G. Master in behalf of all the brethren for his unostentatious and munificent act. (Applause.)

Bro. W. H. B. Tomlinson, Chairman of the Charity Committee, stated that there were no petitions for relief but several candidates for the April and May elections, in which he hoped to be as successful as during the past year, when all were elected; he spoke in the warmest terms of the ability and energy of his Vice-Chairman, Bro. John Wordsworth, and embraced the opportunity to inform Prov. G. Lodge how much he esteemed and appreciated the voluntary assistance of Bro. Thomas Hill, his predecessor in the chair, who had scarcely ever failed to be present in London at the elections and give him the benefit of his knowledge and experience on those important occasions. He concluded his remarks by stating how highly he valued the office his brethren had conferred upon him.

An invitation from the seven Leeds lodges for the annual meeting in April was accepted by the Prov. G. Master.

Prov. G. Lodge was then closed in form at 3 p.m.

The banquet was served at the Bull Hotel, at 3 o'clock., the D.P.G.M., Bro. Tew, presiding. Owing to indisposition, the R.W.P.G.M. had been obliged to return home early.

[We are pleased to add that our brethren of West Yorkshire are as usual bestirring themselves for the various charities, and that while for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Festival they are preparing to send up eighteen Stewards and £330 in round numbers, they are also preparing to be represented at the Girls' School with twenty-seven Stewards and £335, and at the Boys' School with thirty Stewards and £450. These sums are in round numbers, and will probably be much increased. Let others go and do likewise.—Ed.]

MASONIC CHARITY BALL AT BOOTLE.

The fourth annual ball, organised and carried out chiefly through the instrumentality of the Masonic brethren connected with the Bootle Lodge, No. 1473, took place on Thursday evening, the 24th January, at the Town Hall, Bootle, and as the grand element of charity was again a conspicuous idea in connection with the festive gathering, the active brethren must be congratulated on the spirit which actuated, and the success which crowned their laudable efforts for the fourth time. The benefit of the funds of the Bootle Borough Hospital, an institution which has done and is still doing a very great deal of admirable work—was the object in view in giving the ball. No less a sum than £33 was realised by means of the ball last year, and it is expected that the seventy-eighth Masonic assembly of the brethren in the comparatively juvenile Borough of Bootle will realise nearly £40. All the arrangements were of the most admirable and satisfactory nature, and therefore genuine enjoyment went hand-in-hand with the highly successful and commendable charitable efforts.

The Lady Patronesses were the Right Hon. the Countess Bective, and the Right Hon. Lady Skelmersdale. The Patrons of the ball were his Worship the Mayor of Bootle, (Mr. Alderman Heintz, who was present); Bro. Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. England, R.W.P.G.M. West Lancashire; Bro. Earl Bective, R.W.P.G.M. Cumberland and Westmorland; Bro. Hon. Frederick A. Stanley, W.D., Prov. G.M. West Lancashire; W. Gosses, Esq., T. P. Danson, Esq., and Geo. Barnes, Esq.

The ball was entirely organised and carried out by the following Committee, most of whom were present:—Bros. Richard Roberts, W.M. 1473, (Chairman); Councillor S. E. Ibbes, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; Harold Wyatt, (Vice-Chairman); J. W. Turley, P.M., P.P.G.J.D.; Bros. John Duncan, S.W.; W. H. Clemmy, J.W.; J. C. Paterson, S.; Robert A. Hough, F. J. Mortleman, J. Lecomber, W.M. 594; S. Stott, Dr. Young, Dr. Willis, J. J. Doling, Dr. Hill, W. Humphreys, R. Harley, and Jos. Sharpe.

Bro. H. M. Molyneux, P.M. 823, was Master of the Ceremonies, and the onerous duties of Honorary Secretaries were most efficiently discharged by Bros. Councillor J. P. McArthur, J.P., and T. Pierce, town clerk of the borough.

The council chamber which was tastefully decorated, was used for the purpose of dancing (Mr. Martin's band supplying the music), and the lower apartments were used as supper, card, and smoke rooms. There were nearly 200 ladies and brethren present; and as the latter wore their Masonic jewels and clothing, the assembly was one of the most attractive kind. Bro. Dowling, of the Derby Arms Hotel, was again entrusted with the catering, and this gave the greatest satisfaction to all who attended the ball.

ROSLIN CASTLE.

Referring to Bro. Chirnsides letter under this heading in the Freemason of 19th January last, I take the liberty to ask him to be so good as mention the authority for stating that the dignity of Grand Master Mason of Scotland was conferred on William St. Clair, by James II., in 1455; and where that authority can be seen. From my knowledge of the subject, I am afraid Bro. Chirnside has no reliable authority for the statement in question. I will, however, be gratified to learn that he has, and what it is.

If Bro. Chirnside would take the trouble to look into Bro. Murray Lyon's history of the "Rise and Progress of Freemasonry in Scotland," he will find the subject ably and authoritatively treated by that learned Masonic author.

The name of the brother to whom Bro. Chirnside refers in his letter is not "Sker" but "Kerr," a well known and much respected member of the Scotch Craft.

Yours fraternally,

A P.M. of No. 1, S. C.

We learn that the Queen was graciously pleased to express her wish to confer the vacant Garter on the Earl of Beaconsfield, but the offer was, with Her Majesty's permission, declined.

THE ÆSTHETICS OF MASONRY.

The initiation of a candidate to Freemasonry is one of the most important duties of a Lodge; and, though the first great requisite is, that the R.W.M. and his office-bearers should be able to conduct the ceremony correctly and decorously, there are other matters by no means to be forgotten. It is the impression then made on the mind of the neophyte that induces him to become "a bright Mason," or a listless, idle drone. The R.W.M. must not only be word perfect, but he must confer the degree solemnly and impressively. The ritual is illustrated by symbols, those then should not be wanting, but should be present to the eye of the candidate. The floorcloth, the jewels of both kinds, the whole lodge furniture, should be in their appointed places. Instead of rude tables, the Master and his Wardens should have their pedestals of proper form and shape, surmounted with the three pillars, "Wisdom, Strength, and Beauty," and the grand pedestal with the Sacred Volume in the centre. Many of our brethren may say that this is being hypercritical, others that their lodges could not afford the expense. To these we would reply, the expense need not be great, in fact, a very few pounds would pay for every requisite. Moreover, it is better to do a thing well and properly, or not to do it at all. Without the symbols how can the candidate understand one-half of what is told him? and, without the tracing board before him how could he possibly understand the lecture thereon? Even a good Mason would get confused if he had to trust to his memory alone; at all events he would be unable to impart the necessary instruction impressively. Here again it will be said by some, Oh, the lectures are very rarely given! Others might even say, What are the lectures on the tracing boards? To the former we would reply, "More shame for you!" to the latter, "They are the means of imparting instruction to the candidate in the teachings and lessons of the degree he has received, and of assisting him in the examination that he will have to pass before being advanced to a higher." Here again we know we shall be met by the question, Is there any examination used in our Lodges? In many, very many, no doubt, None! But when such is the case, it is forgotten that "degrees are not conferred as a right, but to mark the proficiency and merit of the candidate." To render the ritual more perfect add suitable music. This not only renders the ceremonies more impressive but more enjoyable, especially to the cultivated mind. The introduction of music is not only applicable to the candidates, but to every member of the Lodge. To all our services and ceremonials the addition of music is a charm.

How often is it that we hear of brethren staying away from their lodge meetings, because they understood that no work was to be done! This should never be the case. If there are no Initiations, Passings, Raisings, Installations, or Finance debates, something else must be provided, some instruction, some food for the mind. Lectures on Masonry, its history, antiquity, symbolism, the grand architectural works of our operative prototypes, should be delivered by duly qualified brethren. Music should add charms to what, to the satiated, might appear a bald ceremony. Of music there is no lack; the great masters of that art were brethren of ours: even at the present day we number in our ranks many of the leading composers and musicians. The toasts, songs, and general music at our festivals should be conducted in an enjoyable and musicianly manner—we have means to do this also. Again, before we close our article, Has it never struck you, brethren, that an open night, free from business, might be of the greatest value? We have accounted for the impression to be made on the candidate; we have laid out our lodge in perfect form—jewels of both kinds, furniture, symbols, everything in place; the R.W.M. perfect and impressive in his work, and his officers zealously aiding him; we have charmed the ear of the cultivated with music. But before we can attain to perfect excellence, "one thing yet remains." Even though office-bearers may be perfect in their work, may indeed have not been long appointed, still you must look for a supply for the future. Death may enter your ranks, sickness may break up the happy home of Masonry, the call of duty may deprive you of some of your best workers, above all, a few should not monopolise the sweets of office—a healthy emulation should be excited as to who can best work and best agree. Need a regular meeting night ever come round, and end in nothing but the mere opening and closing? We think not. Rather should we gladly hail a free night for the instruction of our younger brethren in the duties of office, and helping those forward who are now on the lowest rung of the lodge ladder, so that they may hope in time to achieve their highest aim, the greatest honour their lodge can bestow on them, "the chair of K.S.!" Lodges so acting, and attending to apparent minutiae, will be filled with active workers, and true Masonic students, glorying in their Order, and a credit to their lodge and to themselves; and adding a vitality, a healthy and living vitality, to our Craft.

We are glad to hear that Lodge No. 2, "Canongate Kilwinning," has laid down such a programme of work, let them add the last of our recommendations—instruction of office-bearers—"and keep it up," then their existence will continue to time immemorial.—The Scottish Freemason.

AN AWKWARD SPLIT.

We regret to hear of a very awkward and unfortunate division in the old Lodge of Loyalty (86), meeting at Prescot, in Lancashire—a division which we fear, without some friendly settlement can speedily be arrived at, may injure the old lodge very seriously. So far as we can get at the facts, the dispute appears to have originated in some little misunderstanding which might easily have been settled, if the matter had been properly brought forward, but the breach has now widened to such an extent that much unpleasantness if not permanent ill-feeling will, in all probability, be the result, unless an "armistice" be proclaimed, and some friendly mediation takes place. At present, we regret to say, the feeling which exists is anything but one of a brotherly and Masonic character. The lodge, as most of our Lancashire readers will know, is held at Prescot, an old watch-making town about eight miles out of Liverpool, and it has existed there for upwards of a century. Of late years it has admitted many members from Liverpool, and most of the Prescot brethren, having passed through the chair, have gradually fallen off in their attendance, until practically the lodge became almost a Liverpool lodge, and certainly could not have been kept up if it had not been for the very regular attendance of the Liverpool brethren. In this state of things one of the more recent admissions, not having perhaps as much veneration for the town of Prescot as he had for the lodge, whispered a suggestion that it would be more convenient to remove the lodge to Liverpool. This seems at once to have aroused the Prescot brethren, who, if they rarely entered the lodge-room except at the annual installation, still retained their membership and a nominal interest in its association with the town. Therefore the Prescot brethren to a man naturally opposed the removal of the lodge from their town, and the S.W. for the past year being a Liverpool brother, it was secretly resolved to oppose his election as W.M. Accordingly at the October meeting, when the election was to take place, the Liverpool brethren, never dreaming there would be the slightest opposition to the ordinary course of progression in the lodge, and there being only formal business on the circular, mustered but few in number, whilst, to their great surprise, they saw a strong gathering of their Prescot confederates. When the election came on the S.W., who had passed through all the lower offices, and is personally much respected, was rejected in favour of a Prescot brother, an old P.M. of the lodge, but who had left years ago, and who, had only been re-admitted during the year as a joining member, after a strong opposition for some time, on the ground that when he resigned before he had been returned as a defaulter. As may be supposed, the Liverpool brethren were very much annoyed, especially as it was whispered that not only the S.W., but all the other officers who had been working the lodge for years, were to be entirely thrust aside in favour of Prescot brethren. So matters stood when the November meeting came on, all the arrangements having been made for the election of the W.M. elect, including a grand banquet and the invitation of visiting brethren from a distance. They had reckoned without their host, however, for at this meeting the Liverpool brethren, being in a majority, refused to confirm the minutes of the previous meeting, and so a fresh election had to take place. At the December meeting the Prescot brethren made a vigorous whip, bringing in even an old brother just on the verge of the grave, and others who had not been in the lodge-room for a twelve-month or more. Of course they carried their man again, and now at the January meeting, pursuing the same tactics, they have secured the confirmation of the proceedings, but no notice of the installation appearing this time on the circular, the ceremony could not take place. But the matter did not end even here, for a P.M. of the lodge, though not himself a Liverpool brother, gave notice for the next meeting of a resolution condemning in the strongest manner the way in which the S.W. had been passed over, without the slightest reason being assigned, and without any possible objection to him personally, seeing that he bore an irreproachable character, had creditably served all the lower offices, and was one of the most regular attendants at the lodge meetings. The resolution further expresses strong sympathy with him, protests against the election of one who is said to have been a defaulter to the lodge, and who is in point of fact the most recently joined member, and it calls upon him to withdraw, "in order that the harmony of the lodge may be restored."

This is how the matter stands, and this is the resolution which will appear, we suppose, on the circulars calling the next meeting, when the W.M. elect is to be installed. We can only say, in the interest not simply of this old Lancashire lodge, but of the Craft, we hope some friendly counsel will prevail to prevent such a scandal upon our Order.

THE OBELISK.

We congratulated Bro. Erasmus Wilson in our last on the successful result of his munificent enterprise, and we think it well to remind our readers of what has actually taken place.

The "Cleopatra" left Ferrol on the 15th inst. in tow of a paddle-tug, and the voyage to London was performed in six days and eight hours. The cylindrical ship, the ballast of which had been rearranged during her detention at Ferrol, behaved admirably during the passage, and, though some rough weather was encountered, no mishap occurred, and Captain Austin's opinion is that she had not made a wineglassful of water. The vessel anchored on the 20th at night off the Chapman Light, and early on Monday, the 21st inst., steamed up the river to Gravesend, where Mr. Dixon went on board, and where a telegram was received from the Queen announcing Her Majesty's gratification at hearing of the safe arrival of the Obelisk. As they passed up the Thames the steam-tug and the cylinder vessel which she had in tow attracted much attention, the wharves and piers on each side of the river being thronged with spectators, who cheered lustily, and the boys of the training ships "Cornwall" and "Chichester" manned the yards—a greeting which was acknowledged by the dipping of the ensigns on board the "Anglia" and "Cleopatra." Blackwall was reached by four o'clock on the 21st, and an hour later the Obelisk was safely moored in the East India Dock, the Company giving her a berth free of charge. The next thing will be to bring the "Cleopatra" up to the Thames Embankment, where she will be made fast to one of the landing stages, and, after being relieved of her freight, will remain for some weeks in order to give the public an opportunity of inspecting her, after which she will be broken up and sold as old iron.

We have reason to believe that the Obelisk will be permanently located in Parliament-square.

PROVINCIAL EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

We have for some time been animated by the conviction that these valuable and useful Institutions have a great part to play in the future for the welfare of the orphan children of our brethren. It must, we think, have struck all our readers, that our great Metropolitan Masonic Charities, especially our Educational Institutions, have nearly reached the limit of their capabilities and possible accommodation. By the autumn of 1878 we shall be educating 500 orphans, 300 boys, 200 girls, and though it is possible, that we might increase each Institution by another 100 inmates, at considerable expense, yet such increase must be final—on our present sites. What then are we to do? Our fraternity continues to expand, and we behold around us unmistakable signs that the demands upon our charities augment "pari passu," with the augmentation of our members. It seems to us that the answer to this query is to be found in the development of the "Provincial Educational Institutions." Not that we think that such in their present form can ever be of much avail as true Educational Institutions, but we are of opinion that in an altered direction and with an improved organization they may be rendered productive of great good and utility to our Order. What we mean is this. Let all such become subsidiary and preparatory Institutions for the Metropolitan Schools. We believe, and we feel sure, that Bro. Dr. Morris will agree with us when we state, that by the use of similar primers and school books, by the adoption of a common "factor," of education, the boys in the Provincial Institutions might be prepared on one uniform system throughout England, and thus gradually drafted by election as at present, or by scholarships, into the larger central Institutes. We are convinced also that the system of the Girls' School can equally be adapted to and adopted in provincial preparatory schools. Thus we should have a network, so to say, of good preparatory schools in our provinces, (two or three provinces may support one), all sending up year by year, as now under one efficient system, prepared pupils for the central schools. An objection will be raised at once, (as objections always are raised to any proposal of change), that this scheme seems to foreshadow a still greater extension of our Metropolitan Schools. But that, we beg to remark, is not under the present suggestion a necessity for some years to come, at any rate, and the object of this proposal is to obviate the need of any very large immediate further increase of our Metropolitan Schools. But we cannot and ought not to shut our eyes to the increasing demands upon the Schools, demands which if they continue at their present rate of increase, point unmistakably to still augmented accommodation, large as the present is, and far above any we should have contemplated as likely or needful a few years ago. We are disposed to think, on the contrary, that the education may be so good in our provincial schools, that only a small proportion of the pupils will go up to the Metropolitan Institutions, not much larger, in fact, than at present comes yearly from the provinces; but then we should not witness to us that always sad spectacle of so many orphans being disqualified by "over age," as they would be educated at home. And even if our plan did eventually lead to enlarged schools in the metropolis, that may well be left to the future, which often settles things better than we dream of in the present. But the plan we have hastily and roughly sketched out has this one merit in our eyes, that it will relieve the pressure on our central Institutions, and leave them as they are for some years to come. We are aware that the financial question, as regards the provinces, comes in here, but if the present educational institutions can be made available, they are a "nucleus" of a greater and more perfect organization. And we are quite certain of this, that the energy of our provincial brethren would soon raise sufficient funds for the purpose of carrying on such needful institutions. Our present provincial institutions, though good as far as they go, do not go far enough, and if they become the "start," so to say, of our provincial organizations, (saving, of course, the rights of subscribers to them in their present shape), they would eventually become a real blessing to many a poor orphan child in Masonry. The Leeds Educational Benevolent Institution has been in existence twelve months. It has already accumulated £536 7s. 8d., and has aided to educate six children. Its income is £51. This may seem a small beginning, but we look on it as the omen of better things, and greater things yet to be accomplished. It is a good step in the right direction, but can well go a step further. If then our educational institutions in Lancashire, Cheshire, Devonshire, Leeds, and elsewhere, can become the initial levers of a great provincial movement, we think that we can give our central Institutions rest for a few years to come, as regards building expenditure, and confine our efforts to raise the large sums required for their maintenance, and so prepare for the future. And if in the meantime our provincial brethren will connect their provincial Institutions with the central ones, a great and goodly work of Masonic education might be inaugurated and developed, alike for the credit of the Craft and the welfare and happiness of those poor orphans to whom as Freemasons we stand "in loco parentis."

ANOTHER SIDE TO THE PICTURE.

We said in our last, that we should call attention to another side of the picture, which a careful contemplation of the subject of rapid increase of numbers had suggested to our minds, and so we proceed to fulfil our promise to-day. It is a great mistake ever to take a too gloomy or morbid view of things, of events, of persons. Time has few "hard lines" which cannot be ameliorated, few dark days which are not followed by sunshine, no possible evils without a possible counterbalancing good. That there is a compensatory process always going on we, in the good Providence of T.G.A.O.T.U., firmly hold, and it is unwise in any of us ever to believe or to teach, that there is any heavy cloud without a "silver lining," any actual contingency of life, which has not some consolation for us! When then we lately denounced the too rapid increase of our numbers, and extended demands inevitably upon our charities in consequence, we felt, as we feel now, that having manfully protested against a great evil, we might find that with care and patience there was a brighter side yet to it all. If, for instance, increasing members led up to enlarged exertions for our Charities, what then? The very material prosperity of our great Order was a witness to us, that more would be demanded of us all in the best of all causes, Masonic Charity. Let us suppose that with new members come vastly increased demands on our charitable resources. Well! we must rise to the occasion, we must act up to the level of our duty and our privileges. It is a good thing for us all to bear in mind, that there is hardly anything on earth which cannot be mended if wrong—no gloomy situation which cannot be lightened up, no crooked path which cannot be made straight. Our mission here seems to be always to work on, and never to despair of anything, trying to improve, to amplify, to perfect, and to "leave the world better than we found it." If we may naturally regret, as regret we may and must, that our lodges are weakened by the admission of any incongruous element, if too many new members are "rushing in" to please us, yet as it is useless to "cry over spilt milk," let us seek to "make the best of a bad bargain," and increase our efforts to keep our Charity as nearly as we can up to the level of the wants of our fraternity. If some ideas thrown out in another column meet with approval, we have in them, perhaps, a means of obviating undue pressure upon and needless extension of our great Metropolitan Educational Institutions, and at any rate we may console ourselves with the recollection and the belief, that, if things are not going well, according to our pet notions,

CONSECRATION OF THE KING'S CROSS LODGE, No. 1732.

On Wednesday evening this new lodge was consecrated at the rooms of the Metropolitan Club, Pentonville-road. The consecrating officer appointed by the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, was Bro. James Terry, Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies, Herts, who is well-known as one of the most efficient consecrating officers in the Craft. It is needless therefore to say that the ceremony was most admirably performed, especially when we mention that he had the able assistance of Bro. W. Clarke, P.M., 114, Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies, Suffolk; who took the office of Director of Ceremonies; Thomas Cubitt, P.G.P., as S.W.; T. W. Knight, Past Prov. Director of Ceremonies, Kent, as J.W.; and Charles Reuter, P.M. 1107. Lodge was opened at half-past three, and the complete list of the brethren present at the consecration and installation were Bros. J. Terry, Prov. G.D.C. Herts; J. J. Michael, P.M. 1507; Wm. Stiles, J. T. Briggs, F. Saintsbury, Henry Stiles, H. J. Higgins, Lewis Solomon, Geo. Musgrave, 1507; J. Willis, P.M. 175; Thos. Puzey, W.M. 1107; A. G. Creak, S.W. 157; R. J. Tubb, 1305; B. Kingham, W.M. 1507; Morgan, 1385; J. G. Humphrey, 167; C. Buckhurst, 157; Louis Bamberger, 1366; Thos. Cubitt, P.G.P.; Thos. Walton, W.M. 157; T. W. Knight, P.M. 1107, 614, 615, P.Z. 824, P.P.G.D.C. Kent; W. Clarke, P.M. 114; Arthur Thomas, 1319; Charles Reuter, P.M. 1107; Burgess Perry, 1185; Edwin Moss, 1706; F. W. Sillis, 177; Charles Solomon, 23, U.S.A.; Henry Lovegrove, 1507; J. G. Edmonds, 1507; W. J. Murlis, P.M. 1642 and 1499; George Penn, W.M. 1642; Thomas Francis Peacock, 21; C. P. Kempe, 1615; H. Massey, P.M. 619, (Freemason); S. Beattie, 1507.

The ceremony of consecration having been performed Bro. Terry installed Bros. J. J. Michael, P.M. 1107, and P.M. 1507, in the W.M. chair; and the following brethren were invested as officers for the year: Bro. W. M. Stiles, Secretary 1507, S.W.; J. T. Briggs, P.M. 157, J.W.; Rose, Treas.; F. Saintsbury, Sec.; H. Stiles, S.D.; Higgins, P.M., J.D.; Lewis Solomon, I.G.; and J. Darby, T. Bro. Terry delivered the charge to the W.M. and the brethren, and Bro. Clarke delivered the charge to the Wardens. Votes of thanks and the honorary membership of the lodge were conferred on Bros. Terry, Cubitt, Knight, and Reuter, and in returning thanks for the compliment, Bro. Terry acknowledged in graceful terms the great assistance that had been afforded him by Bro. Clarke, who had acted as Director of Ceremonies. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a splendid banquet, supplied by Bro. Cox, the chef of the Metropolitan Club. After dinner grace was sung, and the usual toasts were proposed, between which excellent harmony was rendered by the celebrated Masonic quartette, Bros. Burgess Perry, Edwin Moss, Arthur Thomas, and George Musgrave.

Bro. Thomas Cubitt P.G.P., replied to the toast of "The Grand Officers," and in doing so referred to the great ability displayed by the Earl of Carnarvon whenever he appeared in Grand Lodge. Alluding to the Grand Officers he reminded the brethren that the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold held in the present year the offices of Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, and mentioned it as an instance of the great interest which the Royal Family of Great Britain took in the affairs of the ancient and honourable Craft.

Bro. James Terry proposed "The Health of the W.M." and trusted that the brethren would drink with all heartiness and sincerity the health of a brother who was the first W.M. of the King's Cross Lodge. The new W.M. would certainly not have been called upon to fill that high office unless he had been able actually, fully and conscientiously to discharge the duties appertaining to that office. He was a brother who had been tried in the Metropolitan Lodge and whom the brethren present knew how to appreciate. During the time he presided over the Metropolitan Lodge and the Cornwallis Lodge he acted with credit to those lodges and honour to himself. It was no light matter to be the first W.M. of a lodge, and it was Bro. Michael's distinguished privilege to be selected for that high office. There was a great responsibility attaching to the office, especially when it was a new lodge a brother was called upon to preside over. He had to consolidate the whole of the various interests which were combined in the formation of a new lodge, and to harmonise all jealousies which might exist. He had to bring all these into combination and to unite them for the general interests of the lodge. If he could not do this his year of office would not be a happy one. He was happy to say that Bro. Michael had the ability to do this, and he consequently looked on the future of this lodge as a glorious one. If it was his (Bro. Terry's) good fortune to be present at the end of the next twelve months he thought he might prophesy that he would then see that the brethren would accord to Bro. Michael their universal approbation of the way in which he had discharged his duties. He was certain he would never tolerate anything which was not in strict accordance with the Book of Constitutions, and that he would never permit the slightest deviation from the ancient landmarks of the Order. Following this course it would be found that the brethren would not regret having among them any brethren. He advised the brethren to exercise great caution in the admission of members, and that they should know something of them before they introduced them. Let them first ask themselves the simple question whether the man they were about to introduce was a man whom they would admit to their own private table, and if they could conscientiously answer that question in the affirmative they might admit him to Freemasonry, provided he was willing to come. On the other hand, if the man seeking admission was one they would not like to speak to if they met him in the street, or would not like to recognise them when they were walking with a friend, by all means let them not introduce him to Freemasonry. This course he thought would be of great value to them, and if they followed it in this lodge they would find they would have a good working lodge and one which would be a credit and honour to the Order.

The W.M. in reply, said Bro. Terry had alluded to the fact that he (the W.M.) had sat in the W.M. chair in two other lodges, but that he was for the first time the first W.M. of a lodge on this occasion. That alone was enough to make a man a little off his head, and he hoped the brethren would excuse him if he made any mistakes. Bro. Terry had spoken of the responsibilities of a W.M., and Bro. Terry being that evening in the same position as the G.M. he was really his mouthpiece. With respect to his (the W.M.) responsibilities there was no brother in the Craft that held them more than he. However much a Master might satisfy the brethren he would not satisfy himself, and although he (the W.M.) had twice before filled the office of W.M. he was not satisfied with the way he performed his duties. He had striven hard to please the brethren, but though they said he had done so it was not up to his own mark. There was something outside Freemasonry which he had never yet been able to arrive at. Strive as he would there was always something in Freemasonry that was not in him. There was something outside it better than himself. However he would strive to get at that still better position, and he hoped when he left that chair, he hoped he would leave it as he was sure he would, to a worthy successor. He trusted he should have instilled into his mind something he did not know, and that there was something which he might attain to. With regard to the admission of brethren to the lodge, he had often thought it was all very well for a Master to say he would do this or that, and admit only gentlemen who were A. I. If they ever departed from that principle, he thought it was on account of the great impetus given to Freemasonry, but if they did, it was the fault of Freemasons. A great many of the outside world were anxious to know what Freemasons knew, but why should this knowledge be sold for mere pence, and not given only to those who were worthy to receive it? The brethren forming this lodge were few in number, and why should they lose the power to exclude those whose introduction to Freemasonry might be inimical to its interests? Was it not their bounden duty from this night to see that only those who would care for the interests of Freemasonry should be admitted? Freemasonry was different to other institutions where pounds, shillings, and pence had great sway. Freemasons did not subscribe £40,000 in one year without an object in view. From the highest in the land to the lowest, they asked only for the admission of those who would be an ornament to the Craft, and it was not the man who had money only they wanted, but the man who had a great and noble heart. It was the object of the King's Cross Lodge to admit only such men. At present they had no initiate, and they would not introduce any with whom they were not satisfied. Let them keep that grand object in view, and only admit those who were fit to become members of the Masonic body.

The W.M. then proposed "The Health of the Consecrating Officer Bro. Terry," and said he did not know that he had ever listened with greater pleasure to the delivery of the charges on the nature and principles of the institution which Bro. Terry delivered. If the brethren carried those principles home and acted upon them, they would never disgrace the noble Order to which they belonged. Bro. Terry had had more eloquence than he (the W.M.). With this toast he included the names of Bros. Cubitt, Knight, Clarke, and Reuter.

Bro. James Terry, in reply said it would ill become him and would be a mere act of affectation, were he to say that he did not expect that his health would be proposed that evening, but to tell the brethren that he had any prepared form of words in which to return thanks would also be a piece of affectation. He would rather speak as he felt, than prepare any words and repeat them parrot-like. He was deeply thankful for the compliment they had paid him and the older brethren who had assisted him, and he appreciated very, very highly indeed the compliment of electing him an honorary member of the lodge. To have to be present as a consecrating officer was of itself a very high compliment, more especially when it was the 102nd lodge, and more, of which he was an honorary member. It was, therefore, not a novel thing for him to have to respond to this toast. He was pleased to see this lodge launched under such auspices, and he hoped it would be conducted, as he was sure it would be after what the W.M. had said on the broadest and fairest Masonic principles; and that there would not be the least desire to rush into Freemasonry any person who might present himself; but that there would be thought, judgment and discretion exercised. Under such circumstances he had no doubt that when it came to the ballot the candidate would be admitted. There could not be a more painful thing than for a gentleman to be blackballed. His own opinion was that when the summons came out if any of the members knew anything of the candidate named on it which would be prejudicial to the lodge the proposer and seconder of the candidate should be communicated with and asked to withdraw him, that he might not be subjected to the pain of being blackballed. He could only wish this Lodge God speed and that it might be a continuation of a long line of successes which during the time of the present Grand Master had occurred. During that time 500 or 600 lodges had been consecrated, and all of them were doing well and had made their mark in Freemasonry. No doubt the King's Cross Lodge under the rule of Bro. Michael would prosper; but he would most earnestly impress upon the brethren not to make undue haste in enlarging the number of their members. It was far better to have one good member introduced into it in one year than to find at the end of it that there were ten or a dozen they did not care for. Bro. Terry then passed a very high compliment on Bro. Clarke for the admirable way in which he discharged the duties of Directors of Ceremonies. The present was his first appearance in London in a Masonic character and he hoped sincerely it would not be his last. When he asked Bro. Clarke to attend and perform the duties of D.C., he knew he would have a brother to help him who thoroughly well understood the duties entrusted to him.

Bro. Clarke also replied. He had done the best that lay in his power. He had come simply out of love for Masonry, to do his duty so long as Masonry was conducted in the way it now was, with the volume of the Sacred Law open in the lodges, so long would it continue to succeed. The W.M. had said he was deeply impressed with the ceremonies that evening, and all the brethren must have been impressed who had listened attentively to Bro. Terry. He asked the brethren to take Bro. Terry's words home and carry them out with them in the world to-morrow. Let them practice the principles and tenets of the Craft, and say that Masonry taught them not only what to do in lodge, but what to do in every-day life.

Bros. Walton, Penn, Kingham, and Puzey responded to the toast of "The Visitors," and Bros. W. M. Stiles, Briggs, Saintsbury, and other brethren for "The Officers." Bro. James Terry in reply for "the Masonic Institutions," said that if every Mason would subscribe 5s. a year, and every lodge £1. they would not require an annual festival, or turn away any candidate who presented himself. What a grand spectacle would Masonry then present to the outer world. They would do away with the Charity Organization Society, and our friends who were so loud in our praise would defeat their own plans and would have nothing at all to speak about. One point however the brethren could not look over, and that was that they were not going to hand over to an irresponsible body the duties and responsibilities imposed upon them by those who had thought fit to place their money with the institution for the purchase of privileges which nobody could take away from them. He trusted that the day was very distant indeed when amidst all the voting charities of England the brethren of the Craft would give up the privileges to an irresponsible body. Bro. Terry then explained the progress the other Masonic Institutions had made, and the increased and still increasing number of candidates they were taking on their funds in order to keep pace with the great increase in the body of the Order, and the enlarged support which the Institutions were receiving. He afterwards made a stirring appeal on behalf of all the Institutions, and said although they could not ask for a Steward in a new lodge like the present, they yet hoped for the support of the brethren.

The brethren shortly afterwards separated.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER AT CAMBRIDGE.

The following very appropriate remarks from our esteemed contemporary the Graphic will be read with pleasure by all Freemasons:—

"The visit of the Prince of Wales to Cambridge passed off very successfully. The University gave him a genuine hearty welcome, and the inhabitants were, if anything, a little too enthusiastic in their demonstrations. This may be accounted for not only by the personal popularity of the Prince, but by the feeling still generally entertained for his ather. There are few things more remarkable in our recent history than the admiration for the Prince Consort which is still steadily maintained. While he lived, it cannot be said that he was a universal favourite. His manner was somewhat cold, and John Bull, who is rather suspicious, did not relish the idea of a foreigner interfering with British affairs, even when the foreigner was the Queen's husband. We have gradually learned, however, that it would not have been possible for any one in his difficult position to act with greater wisdom; and now that the importance of Art as an element of the national life is better understood, people are beginning to see how admirable were his attempts to cultivate the artistic sympathies of the very unesthetic community in which he lived. His efforts to encourage music were especially enthusiastic, and it is only now that we are reaping the full benefit of them. Within the last few weeks public attention has been drawn in a very marked manner to his opinions on the Eastern Question, and it certainly has not lessened the general esteem for him that he so thoroughly comprehended the intetests of his adopted country, and so ardently associated himself with them. Altogether, his career affords a striking proof of the influence which, even in these days of Constitutional Government, may still be exerted by the Court. If it is excluded from direct political action, it may wield power of a far more subtle kind, power that will make itself felt long after temporary political excitement is forgotten.

Bro. Dr. Rhys Williams, of Bethlehem Hospital, attended a meeting of officers of the Stuart Lodge, Bedford, of which he is W. Master, and met with a rather serious accident at Bedford Railway Station, by which one of the small bones in his leg was broken, several of the officers of the lodge being medical men every thing was done for him that could be done.

The meetings of the Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862, are now held at the Red Lion, Poppins-court, Fleet-street, every Wednesday, at 8 p.m., Bro. W. Long, P.M. 435, Preceptor.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

The ceremony of installing Bro. G. S. Graham, P.M. the District Grand Master elect of the English Constitution, and Bro. F. Whitaker as Provincial Grand Master of the Scotch Constitution in the North Island of New Zealand, which had been looked forward to with so much eagerness by the Craft, was performed on the 30th Nov., in the Choral Hall, Symonds-street. Nothing in the annals of Masonry in Auckland can compare with the grandeur of the spectacle, the solemn precision and regularity of the proceedings, and the evident sense of deep responsibility under which the prominent actors in the ceremony laboured. The success which has attended the entire ceremony, together with the great number of prominent and influential citizens who attended as members of the Craft—comprising representatives of trade and commerce in all their branches, of the learned professions, the arts and sciences, literature, and wealth and influence—could not but be struck with this proof of the great progress which Masonry has made in Auckland during the past few years. Old settlers, like Bros. Lazar and Whitaker, and many others, assembled in the Choral Hall, whose experience in Masonry ranges back to the extent of an ordinary life-time, could not but be gratified at the extension of that universal brotherhood, which, above all other human institutions, is calculated to disseminate and maintain the highest principles of social morality, to support law and order, to lift the soul to the contemplation of great and ennobling studies, and to combine men of all races, nationalities, and creeds in a common bond of sympathy, and to promote universal charity and benevolence. A great philosopher and thinker has remarked that, if another wave of barbarism were to sweep over the civilised globe, throwing down shrines and temples, and destroying the great public libraries and museums of art, and suppressing religious creeds, Freemasonry, from its universality, and its tenacious uniformity, would still preserve in its bosom the Book of the Sacred Law—the Holy Scriptures—an unsullied code of pure morality, and an imperishable standard of truth. For already Freemasonry has outlived monuments, empires, and creeds, which have "become the sport of doubt."

Yes, Nature's truths, extending through the past,
As through the present, change man's changeful tale;
And ancient landmarks, grounded deep, to last,
Those primal truths in graven symbols veil,
Our allegory claims them for its own,
Echoing a voice, which, laden with the lore
Through ages gone, repeats in earnest tone,
Their solemn formulæ for evermore;
And teaches Masons, an immortal lot,
In "Universal Charity" to found,
Whose centre may be struck at every spot,
And whose circumference no space can bound.
Those truths to us in allegory told,
With light in the beginning had their birth;
The banded wisdom of the Wise of old
Their moral treasure guarded for the earth.
And ever with the sun that from the East,
Will towards the West its living radiance shed,
The sacred flame to glow has never ceased,
Which for our use departed brethren fed,
That we might tend it in our turn; the while
They numbered years in stone on Carnac's bed,
Recorded seasons on Stonehenge's pile,
Or named the Stars from off the Pyramid.

Formerly, through the dim period of the middle ages Freemasonry carved its records upon the great public buildings of Europe, upon the tracery of the cathedral windows and the ornamentation of palaces, and in our day it is achieving work equally noble, comprehensive, and far-reaching. The sun never sets on its lodges, spread as they are over the whole habitable globe, among every race and in every clime.

But not only has Freemasonry embraced in its ample fold all climes, and tongues and families of the earth, but it has numbered in its ranks from the days of its foundation the highest and noblest. The grand principles of loyalty which it teaches have attracted Princes and Monarchs to the Order. Hence the intimate and constant connections of Sovereigns and members of the Royal Family with the Masonic Order. James I. of Scotland presided over the lodges in his kingdom, and was very regular in his attendance at their meetings. James II., of Scotland, appointed William St. Clair, of Roslin, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, Grand Master. In 1502, Henry VII., of England, presided over the lodges of his kingdom. He assembled a Grand Lodge in his palace, and with his own hands laid the foundation-stone of "Henry VII.'s Chapel" in Westminster Abbey. The Good Queen Elizabeth was "the most attached friend" of the Order. James I. was "a great friend" of Masons. Charles I., by the help of Freemasons, laid the foundation-stone of St. Paul's Cathedral. George IV. was patron. William IV. was patron for Scotland and Grand Master for England. At the present day four crowned heads of Europe are honorary members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. At the great Masonic meeting held at the Hague in celebration of the sixteenth anniversary of the installation of Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, as Grand Master of the Dutch Freemasons, the Crown Prince of Germany delivered a speech, in the course of which he said:—Nationalities have created frontiers; Freemasonry desires charity, tolerance and liberty, without distinction of frontiers. I am happy on this day, which I never shall forget, to be able to raise my voice in Holland to testify my adhesion to the principles of the order, and to express the hope that in the struggle engaged for the free development of the peoples and the liberty of the human mind, the final victory will remain with the order. The Crown Prince's speech was received with the greatest enthusiasm. In 1852, her Majesty the Queen

(God bless her) became Patroness of the Freemasons' Boys' School. In 1831, Queen Adelaide became Patroness of the Freemasons' Girls' School. In 1838, a piece of plate weighing 1800 ounces was presented to the Duke of Sussex by the English Freemasons on his completing twenty-five years as their Grand Master (the same period as was served by the late Earl of Zetland), and this same piece of plate was sent to the Grand Lodge as a gift by the Duchess of Inverness after the Duke of Sussex's death. During the Duke of Sussex's Grand Mastership, the foundation stones of the following buildings were laid by him, accompanied by the Duke of Leicester as Grand Master of Ireland, with full Masonic ceremonial:—The Hammersmith Suspension Bridge, in 1825; the London University and the Caledonian Asylum, in 1827; the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum, in 1828; and the Charing Cross Hospital in 1831. In 1822, the Duke of York laid the foundation stone of the Eton and Windsor Bridge; and in 1808, the foundation stone of Covent Garden Theatre was laid by the then Prince of Wales, both with full Masonic honours. The late King of Hanover was initiated into Freemasonry as Duke of Cumberland in 1796. His Royal Highness Prince William of Gloucester was initiated in 1795, and Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, was elected Grand Master in 1781. Their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of York and Gloucester were initiated in 1766. The Crown Prince of Prussia (Frederick the Great), was initiated in 1738, Frederick Prince of Wales in 1737, Emperor of Germany in 1735, and William the Third of England was initiated in 1690. So much for facts which are patent and well-known. According to a manual which is authorised by the Grand Lodge, and revised by a committee of skilled brethren every year, the connection between Freemasonry and the reigning family goes much further back still, for we read in it that Henry IV. was initiated in 1840; that Edward III. revised the Constitution of Masonry in 1358; and that Prince Edwin formed a Grand Lodge at York in 926, the year in which King Athelstan granted the Freemasons a Charter. So far back as A.D. 690 King Edgar was an illustrious Protector. In 826, Alfred the Great took a leading part in Masonry. At the present day, to us loyal Masons, it is a matter of deep gratitude to "The Most High," that the "Royal Princes" of England—the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, and Prince Leopold are members of the Craft, and that the "Heir Apparent" now honours himself by occupying "The Throne of King Solomon," as H.R.H. is the Most Worshipful Grand Master of Free and Accepted Masons of England.

Precisely at noon, Lodge Waltemata, E.C., was opened by Bro. Warren, W.M. The Secretary then stated the object of the meeting. The choir then sang—

Ode—"Hail, Eternal!"

Hail, Eternal! by whose aid
All created things were made;
Heav'n and earth Thy vast design;
Hear us Architect Divine.
May our work begun in Thee,
Ever blest with order be.
And may we, when labours cease,
Part in harmony and peace,
By Thy glorious Majesty,
By the trust we place in Thee,
By the badge and mystic sign,
Hear us, Architect Divine.

The lodge was then raised to the Third Degree, after which the choir sang in a very tasteful manner. "Behold how good and joyful a thing it is, etc."

The District Grand Master (elect) Bro. G. S. Graham, was then received with the customary honours, Brother J. Brown playing an organ march. Brother Lazar, R.W.D.G.M. of Westland, and Installing Master, was next received, and addressed the lodge as follows:—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Grand Master of Free and Accepted Masons, having been pleased, in the exercise of his prerogative, to grant a warrant for the District of Auckland to constitute a Grand Lodge, to be governed and presided over by Bro. George Samuel Graham, P.M., the honour has devolved upon me to consecrate and dedicate this Lodge to the honour and glory of the Great Architect of the Universe. Let us, therefore, in solemn prayer supplicate the Author of our Being to bless and prosper our undertaking.

The lodge was then solemnly consecrated, Bro. Moat spreading the corn of plenty, Bro. Leers the wine of joy, and Bro. Warren the oil of gladness. The choir then sang an Ode to Virtue.

Come, holy Virtue, by whose aid,
In heavenward steps we long to tread,
Bring love, bring truth, bring friendship here,
Bring peace and unity sincere.

Ode to Charity.

Come, Charity, with good crown'd.
Encircle in thy heavenly robe.
Diffuse thy blessings all around,
To every corner of the globe.

Anthem.

To Heaven's High Architect all praise,
All praise, all gratitude be given,
Who deigned the human soul to raise,
By mystic secret sprung from Heaven.
Sound all the Great Jehovah's praise,
To Him, the Dome, the Temple raise.

The Installing Master then addressed the lodge and formally constituted it a Grand Lodge. The D.G.M. elect then retired to prepare for investiture. The installing Master then appointed the following officers pro tem:—Bros. E. T. Wildman, Deputy D.G.M.; J. Doull, D.G.S.W.; Rev. C. M. Nelson, D. G. Chaplain; W. Sloane, D.G. Treasurer; Heather, D.G. Register; W. L. Mitchell, D.G.,

Secretary; A. Brock, D.G.S.D.; W. W. Batt, D.G.J.D.; J. H. Burns, D.G.D. of Ceremonies; Hydes, D.G. Sword-Bearer; Redfern, D.G. Pursuivant; C. Porter, D.G. Tyler. The Installing Master having declared the Grand Lodge duly opened, the Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. C. M. Nelson, offered up the following impressive prayer:

O, Most Glorious and Eternal God, the Infinitely Wise Architect of the Universe, we, thy servants, assembled in District Grand Lodge, would extol thy power and wisdom. Thou saidst, Let there be light, and there was light. The heavens opened and declared Thy glory, and the firmament spangled with thy handiwork. The Sun, who rules the night, surrounded with the Stars, so that there is one glory of the Sun, another glory of the Moon, and one Star differs from another Star in glory, and all by most wondrous signs and tokens, without voice, sound or language, solemnly proclaim Thy Divine mysteries. We adore Thee for our creation, for the breath of life, for the light of reason and conscience, and for all the noble and useful faculties of our souls which give so exalted a rank in the order of being, enable us to live answerably to our exalted privileges and happy destination. We beseech Thee to give us, Thy servants, at this and at all times, wisdom in all our doings, strength of mind in our difficulties, and the beauty of harmony in all our communications with one another. Grant that Thy servant, who has been solemnly invested with authority and rule over these lodges, may be endued with knowledge and wisdom, and may we, and all our brethren under his jurisdiction, understand, learn, and keep all the Statutes and Commandments of the Lord pure and undefiled. May brotherly love and charity always abound among us, and when we have finished our work here below, let our transition be from this earthly tabernacle to the Heavenly Temple above, there among Thy jewels may we appear in Thy glory for ever and ever. Bless and prosper, we pray Thee, every branch and member of this fraternity throughout the habitable earth. May Thy kingdom of peace, love, and harmony come. May Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven, and the whole world filled with Thy glory. So mote it be. Bro. Goldsbro' was elected D.G. Treas., and Bro. Charles Porter, D.G. Tyler for the ensuing 12 months. The D.G.M. Bro. Graham then re-entered, and was received under a splendid canopy of crimson velvet with gold mountings and the arched wands of the Stewards; and presented by Bros. P.M.'s Phillips and Goldsboro' to the Installing Master, who delivered an impressive address and administered the usual obligation. Choir, "Glory be to God on High." The Installing Master then invested Bro. Graham with the magnificent regalia of a D.G. Master, and conducted him to the chair.

Choir.

Hail Masonry Divine!

Glory of ages shine,
Long may'st thou reign.
Where'er thy Lodges stand,
May they have great command,
And always grace the land,
Thou art divine.
Hiram the Architect,
Did all the Craft direct,
How they should build.
Solomon, great Israel's king,
Did mighty blessings bring,
And left us cause to sing,
Hail! Royal Art!

The newly installed Grand Master was then proclaimed by Bros. Wildman, Brassey, and Kissling in the East, West, South respectively, after which the Installing Master delivered a solemn and impressive charge.

The investiture of the following officers of the R.W. D.G. Lodge was next proceeded with: Bros. W. Lodder, P.M. 679, W.M. Lodge Remuera, D.G.S.W.; J. Warren, W.M. 689, D.G.J.W.; C. M. Nelson, W.M. 1338, D.G. Chap.; C. F. Goldsbro' P.M., D.G.T.; W. H. Kissling, P.M. 1338, D.G. Reg.; H. G. Wade, P.M. 689, D.G. Sec.; W. H. Skinner, P.M. 1338, D.G.S.D.; W. F. Moat, W.M. Rodney, D.G.J.D.; G. N. Brassey, P.M. 1338, D.G.S. of W.; D. S. Wilcocks, D. of C. 1338, D.G.D. of C.; F. W. E. Dawson, S.W. 1335, D.G.D.C.; T. Cole, W.M. elect, 686, D.G.S.B.; C. Hesketh, Remuera, D.G. Org.; S. C. Dyer, J.W. 1338, D.G. Purs.; W. Ratray, Remuera, D.G. Purs.; L. D. Nathan, W. T. J. Bell, S. George, and J. Martin, D.G. Stewards; C. Porter, D.G. Tyler.

The Installing Master then delivered an address to the D.G.M. and brethren, after which

Bro. Graham, the newly-installed District Grand Master, addressed the assembled brethren in the following terms:

Right Worshipful Sir, and Brethren,—I have to thank you for the high and honourable dignity that has been conferred upon me, and it will be my constant endeavour by zeal and assiduity to discharge the duties of the office so as to reflect credit upon my choice. Gratitude is due to the Most Worshipful His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales our Grand Master in having so cheerfully granted the prayer of your petition, tending to prove that even in this remote part of Her Majesty's dominions the wishes and interests of the Craft have due attention. In the selection of my officers I have endeavoured to entrust the affairs of District Grand Lodge into the hands of brethren, who, by their eminence, merits, and abilities, will be conducive to the welfare of Masonry in general, and this D.G.L. in particular. It is gratifying to see around me such a distinguished and large gathering of brethren from all parts of the colony, and I have to tender my hearty thanks to the R.W.G.D.M. Westland E. C. Bro. Lazar, for the able manner in which he has conducted the Installation, and the visiting brethren for their attendance. It is also particularly pleasing to see in our midst the R.W.P.G.M., the Honourable Frederick Whitaker, his Officers, and the members of the Scottish Constitution who have met this day with a similar object in view themselves, and have extended to us the right hand of fellowship by joining in the ceremony. Time will not permit me to address you at any great length. To give an outline of such an ancient institution as Freemasonry, would be like repeating the history of the world, its area is so vast, its subject so multifarious, and the treasures gathered for ages into its archives are so numerous. The intellectual man is struck with Freemasonry as comprehending in all its varieties the whole of human life, the contemplation of which is inexhaustible. Suffice it to say, that a Mason, no matter what his creed may be, must be a believer in the Grand Architect of the Universe, he must be a law-abiding citizen, and he is taught to measure his actions by the rule of morality, as also to retain in their fullest splendour those truly Masonic ornaments which are the distinguishing characteristics of the Order, "Benevolence and Charity." From the earliest ages Freemasonry has been subject to opposition, but firm in its rectitude it has successfully withstood it, and even to this day there are those who deny it—knowing nothing of it, and from their ignorance, cannot comprehend its intellectual and moral development. It is that sacred bond that teaches us the immortality of the soul, that binds men of the most discordant opinions into one band of brothers, gives one language to all nations, and one altar to men of all religions. There are those who pretend to deny the existence of a Supreme Governor of the Universe, and death to them would be but an eternal sleep. What a faith for a rational being to hold in a world teeming with wonders of animal and vegetable life. We behold the waters of a noble river flowing ceaselessly onward to swell the mighty ocean; there they do not remain. The glorious sun, in its bright career, attracts the pure elements again to the skies, where, wafted by evening zephyrs over distant hills, silently at night it descends in gentle dew to cool the arid plain, or condensed in heavy clouds, in dark horizon and in lightning's lurid glare, precludes the approaching storm, pouring the treasures of heaven in liberal profusion over the vast field of human labour—causing the grass to grow, the grain to swell, the trees to bud, and the heart of man to rejoice. They cannot discern in this the handiwork of the Creator. The Freemason, however, learns that, when he has performed his allotted task, when this life is ended, it closes to open upon a newer and a higher one, where in a second temple and purer lodge, he will find "Eternal Truth."

For on Him he will calmly rely
To whom alone
All secrets are known,
Who reigns supreme on high.

At the conclusion of the address, Bro. Lazar offered up prayer.

Ode—"Now the Evening Shadows."
Now the evening shadows closing,
Warn from toil to peaceful rest;
Mystic arts and rites repose,
Sacred in each faithful breast,
God of Light! whose love unceasing,
Doth to all Thy works attend,
Crown our order with Thy blessing:
Build, sustain us to the end.
Humbly now we bow before Thee,
Grateful for Thy aid Divine;
Everlasting power and glory,
Mighty Architect! be Thine.

At 3 o'clock, the officers and brethren of Lodge St. Andrew assembled in the Hall, and the W.M., Bro. Walker, having raised the Lodge to the Third Degree, Bro. the Hon. F. Whitaker, Provincial Grand Master (elect), was received with the customary Masonic honours. The ceremony of the installation differed very slightly from that in the case of Bro. Graham, D.G.M., K.C. The consecration of the Lodge was performed by the Installing Master and Bro. Walker, W.M.; Bro. Murray, W.M., Sir Walter Scott; and Bro. Rodie, P.H., Sir Walter Scott, sprinkled the corn, wine, and oil.

After the consecration, a very beautiful opening prayer was offered up by the Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. F. Gould, P.G. Chaplain.

After the investiture of P.G.M., Bro. the Hon. F. Whitaker, the following officers were invested:—P.G.S.M., Bro. Anderson, P.M.; P.G.S.W., Bro. Brodie, P.M.; P.G.J.W., Bro. A. Dewar, P.M.; P.G. Treasurer, Bro. T. L. Murray, W.M.; P.G. Secretary, Bro. E. K. Tyler, P.M.; A.P.G. Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. F. Gould; (in the absence of the Chaplain elect) A.P.G.S.D., Bro. Martin; P.G.J.D., Bro. T. Ellison; P.G. Director of Ceremonies, Bro. W. Fraser; P.G.A., Bro. W. Wilkinson; P.G.A., Bro. Errington; P.G.S.R., Bro. Captain Goldsmith; Director of Music, Bro. Henry Brett, P.G. President of Board of Stewards, Bro. James Reid Hendry; P.G.I.G., Bro. Horne; P.G. Tyler, Bro. Rawdon.

In investing Bro. H. Brett as P.G.D. of Music, the Installing Master took occasion to say that, though he had conducted many installations, he had never attended one at which the musical portion of the ceremonies had been more tastefully and efficiently rendered than at this, and no where had he more enjoyed the singing and organ performances.

After the investiture
Bro. F. Whitaker, Provincial Grand Master, S.C., then addressed the lodge as follows:—Worshipful Masters, Past Masters, and brethren: The time has now come when it is customary that I should address you as Master of this lodge, but I shall endeavour to be exceedingly brief, because we have already gone through two ceremonies which have detained you a great length of time, and therefore I do not think this is a proper occasion on which I should occupy much more of your time. I will, however, avail myself of saying a few words, which I deem appropriate to the occasion, and then I will dismiss you and close for the first time this Provincial Grand Lodge.

Brethren, you are all aware that Freemasonry has two great characteristics—Operative Masonry and Symbolical Masonry. The foundation of our lodges, no doubt, in its origin, was operative. It commenced with the building of the Temple of King Solomon, but now a great change had taken place in Masonry, so far as relates to its operative character, for we have become symbolical or speculative Masons; we have abandoned operative Masonry altogether, and I daresay to a certain extent we have derived a large amount of advantage from the change. I hardly think it would suit me at the present time to perform the duties of Hiram, the Builder, or that it would suit you to cut timber on Mount Lebanon, or to quarry stones in Tyre. But what have we established in the place of that operative Masonry which, as regards our Order, no longer exists? We have established an institution of the grandest possible character upon that foundation of 3000 years ago; an institution which is flourishing in every clime, and among every race; there is none other like it in the whole world an institution whose greatness the brethren acknowledge with pride, an institution which all can seek entrance into with only two qualifications requisite—one being purity of character, and the other the acknowledgment of a Supreme Being. These are the only two qualifications required. Freemasonry is as wide as the world itself. It extends over Asia, Europe, America, Africa, and even Oceania and New Zealand, the most distant part of the world from ancient civilization. Over the whole civilized globe, and wherever civilized man sets his foot there we find Freemasonry in all its glory. The great principle of Freemasonry is that we are all equal as Freemasons. In this lodge every man is equal, except in so far as any of us may be put in authority over the others for the purpose of regulating the conduct of the brethren, and guiding the management of the institution. Freemasonry makes no distinctions as to creed or colour, Jew or Gentile, whoever they may be, all are equally acceptable; and as to religious belief, the recognition of a Divine Being as the Great Architect of the Universe is the only qualification necessary for admission to the brotherhood. Of course, brethren, this is a theme upon which I might descant at great length, but as I have already promised to make my remarks as brief as possible, I will fulfil that promise. But there are a few matters with regard to myself which I should like to refer to, because there are some members of the Craft who have recently arrived in this colony, who are not aware of the position I formerly held in connection with Freemasonry and how long I have been a brother—indeed many of you were not born when I first became a member of the Craft. I hold in my hand a document which reminds me of the 23rd of July 1839, when I was initiated as an apprentice in the mysteries of Freemasonry. I was in due course raised to the degree of a Master Mason, and in October, 1839, I was enrolled as a member of the Grand Lodge of England, on the records of which my name stands at the present time. Now during that time it has devolved upon me to perform some of the most important Masonic acts. In the first place having arrived in New Zealand, I assisted in 1842 in instituting Lodge Ara, existing up to the present time, and I was elected as its first Master. I recollect that a that period a gentleman of the Jewish persuasion came down from Sydney. I do not know how it is that the gentlemen of that persuasion seem to be more intimately acquainted with our ceremonies than anyone else. I recollect that fact, and it reminds me of the perfect and regular way in which Bro. Lazar conducted the ceremony to-day. You see St. Paul's Church there on the hill; I assisted subsequently to the ceremony in laying the foundation stone of that church. Five and thirty years ago is a long time, brethren, a very long time to look back upon. Again, you see the Supreme Court, and I dare say many of you will recollect that I laid the foundation stone of that building myself as a Master Mason in 1865. In 1877, one of the most pleasing incidents of my career in Masonry occurred, when I was invited to the Thames by brother Masons. You must understand that being an English Freemason, I had not yet become connected with any Scotch Lodge.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF DERBY.

This new Provincial Grand Chapter was consecrated at the Masonic Hall Derby, on Thursday, 1877. Comp. Terry, P.Z., Prov. G.D.C. Herts, installed the Night Hon. The Marquis of Hartington, M.P., as Grand Superintendent, H. C. Okover Esq., R.W.P.G.D. of England as Grand H., and John Gasby Esq., as Grand J.

The following companions were appointed as the Prov. G. Officers:—
W. Naylor, P.Z. 253..... Prov. G.S.E.
J. Campion, P.Z. 253..... Prov. G.S.N.
Thos. Horsley, P.Z. 253..... Prov. G.P.S.
F. Iliffe, P.Z. 731..... Prov. G. 1st.A.Soj.
R. R. Duke, P.Z. 1235..... Prov. G. 2nd.A.Soj.
Thos. Cox, P.Z. 731..... Prov. G. Treas.
Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, M.A. P.Z. 1235..... Prov. G. Reg.
R. Grundey, Z. 625..... Prov. G. Sw., B.
T. Turner, P.Z. 1235..... Prov. G. Sta. B.
G. T. Wright, P.Z. 731..... Prov. G.D. of C.
W. H. Marston, Z. 253..... Prov. G. Org.
T. Slinn, 253..... Prov. G. Janitor.

Comp. Terry performed the ceremony in an admirable manner. In the evening there was a banquet, at which the R.W.P.G.M. presided and was most cordially welcomed.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of the subscribers to this institution held their monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall. Col. James Peters in the chair. There were also present Bros. John Faulkner, S. Rawson, Thomas W. White, A. H. Tattershall, John Boyd, F. G. Baker, E. Spooner, W. F. C. Moutrie, H. Massey (Freemason), J. A. Rucker, Edward Cox, Thomas Cubitt, C. J. Rushworth, Thomas Massa, Joseph Smith, and F. R. W. Hedges for Secretary.

The motion of the last meeting and of the House Committee, Quarterly Court, and Building Committee and Audit Committee, having been read, authority was given to the Chairman to sign cheques.

Bro. Rawson asked whether a Chairman had been secured for the next festival, as the time was running short.

The Chairman said there had not, but this subject had engaged his attention, as well as the subject of the opening of the new building; and he suggested that Lord Suffield should be applied to with respect to it.

It was then arranged that Lord Suffield should be written to, to enquire what time would be convenient to Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, to open the building.

The Chairman said he had been informed by Bro. Hedges that there were already 100 Stewards for the next festival.

After some petitions had been received, the Committee granted permission to Bro. Little, Secretary, to conduct the business of the Institution at his home, on account of his ill-health, and the inclement state of the weather.

An addition of £10 a year was made to the salary of G. J. S. Peachey, the clerk in the Secretary's office, and the Committee then adjourned.

MASONIC CONCERT AT ABERAVON.

The pretty assembly room of the Aberavon Public Hall was well patronised on Thursday, the 24th ult., to hear a concert given under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, and under the patronage of R.W. Prov. Grand Master (Eastern Division of South Wales), Sir George Elliot, M.P., and of the W. Deputy Prov. G.M., Bro. M. Tennant, and the officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge. A number of distinguished Masons appeared in full Masonic costume, and a procession formed from the lodge room to the concert hall, the brethren of the Afan Lodge, and the W.M., Bro. David, leading, the Deputy Prov. Grand Master bringing up the rear. An excellent programme was provided, but from some reason at present unexplained, the Misses Gertrude and Jenny Lewis, who were engaged to sing, did not attend. As the matter somewhat affects the professional status of these popular artistes we trust that they will be able to satisfactorily explain their position in the matter. Their non-attendance caused much vexation and anxiety to the committee who had arranged the concert, and the circumstance was disappointing to an expectant audience. The latter showed much sympathy with the promoters, and their indulgence did not go unrewarded. The gentlemen who kindly gave their services redoubled their efforts to fill up the blank caused, and with a good measure of success. We have not space for lengthened details, but we may say the fine strong tenor voice of Bro. Videon Harding (Carmarthen) was heard to great advantage; Bro. David Rosser's (Aberdare) pleasing style and musical voice gained him a full share of popular favour. The cornet solos of Bro. Blake (Llanelli) and Mr. Levy were artistic performances, and the flute solo by Mr. Hall received appreciative applause. Bro. Ratcliffe, of Llanelli, and Mr. Taliesin Richards (Cwmavon) did good service as accompanists. The choruses by members of Afan Lodge were nicely rendered, and notwithstanding the drawback alluded to, the concert was a musical and, we hope, a financial success.

Public Amusements.

GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT.—There is no entertainment in London more pleasing, more innocent, and yet withal more mirth moving than German Reed's. The present programme includes a musical comedietta entitled "Once in a century," the plot of which turns upon a very happy conceit. We shall not tell the story, for the main charm of the piece consists of the surprise in store for the audience. The comedietta is followed by a new musical sketch entitled "The Musical Almanack," by Corney Grain. The musical sketches by this excellent singer, clever actor and thorough artist need no comment, their fame is universal, and of this new musical sketch we can only say that its one fault is its brevity; we longed for more, and this perhaps was the reason why the concluding piece "Our New Doll's House" pleased us not. We understand that a new piece will shortly take the place of the "Doll's House."

LYCEUM.—At this theatre Mr. Irving plays alternately in "The Bells," "The Lyons Mail," and "Charles the First." Of these plays the last named is by far the best, though the scope for the great actor is narrower than in either of the other two. Besides Mr. Irving never could play a good man very well, his forte is a villain, or at least a semi-villain. He made the character of Digby Grand, in "Two Roses," by the extra spice of hypocrisy which he threw into it. In "Charles the First" Mr. Irving does not even look the upright, noble, open gentleman that Mr. Wills depicts; he looks more like the Charles of protestant history. We do not know whether Mr. Wills or Protestant history is in the right as to "Charles the First," but we do know that Mr. Irving would have played the part of Cromwell to perfection.

FORTITUDE AND OLD CUMBERLAND LODGE (No. 12).—At the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street, on Monday, the 4th inst., there was a large assembly of members and visitors to do honour to the occasion of the installation of Bro. Daniel Nicholls into the chair and office of W.M. of the lodge. Bro. W. B. Kidder, W.M., presided, assisted by his officers, who, with one exception, were present, and supported by Past Masters Bros. J. B. Lemaitre, Joseph Clever, George Angold, Dudley Rolfe, Sydney Rolfe, Raynham Stewart, A. H. Lilley, H. D. Sandeman, P.D.G.M.; and the following lay brethren: Bros. W. J. Beadel, E. B. Kidder, jun., G. Snellgrove, Botenback, G. Hudson, F. Canton, L. Delavaux, J. W. Clever, J. Kent, Caleb Stranger, M. F. Cooper, A. Porter, C. Reif, Fountain, Meen, and others. We noticed the following brethren amongst the visitors present: Bros. L. Wood, Royal Oak, 971; T. L. Green, Villiers Lodge; Ambrose D. Bird, Royal York, 7; Mordimer Davis, P.M. 12; A. F. Rowley, P.M. 917; Curlier, P.M. 11; Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; J. Terry, Secretary of the Benevolent Institution; F. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' School; Massey (Freemason), and other distinguished brethren. The lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the last lodge meeting read, Bro. Frederic Cantor was passed to the Second Degree; after which Mr. David Matthews was balloted for, and being approved, was initiated into the mysteries of the First Degree. Bro. David Nicols, W.M. elect, was then presented to the W.M. to receive at his hands the benefit of installation, and having given his assent in due form to the ancient charges read by the Secretary, was obligated, and thereafter presented to and approved by a Board of Installed Masters and duly installed into the chair of K.S. After being proclaimed and saluted in due form by the brethren on their return to the lodge, the newly-installed W.M. proceeded to appoint his officers, who were invested by the Installing Master as follows:—Bros. W. H. Bateman, S.W.; H. Mower, J.W.; L. Ruf, Treasurer; A. Snellgrove, Secretary; Coombs, S.D.; Rutherford, J.D.; E. B. Kidder, jun., I.G.; Boutenbach, D.C.; Gilchrist, Tyler. The ceremony of installation was most ably performed by the outgoing Master, Bro. W. B. Kidder, who delivered the addresses to the officers, lay brethren and Master in a deeply impressive manner. On the conclusion of the ceremony Bro. Nicol, V.M., in a short but appropriate speech, presented to I.P.M. Kidder a handsome P.M. jewel, which had been voted to him by the lodge as a mark of their appreciation of his able management of the lodge during his term of office. Bro. P.M. Kidder in reply, thanked the brethren for the honour they had done him in placing the jewel on his breast, and assured them that it would ever be esteemed by him in the highest manner. He trusted that he might be spared to live long among them and that he should have the pleasure of seeing a similar jewel presented to many of the brethren now before him. The business of the meeting being now concluded, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet, which was served in Bro. Painter's best style. On the cloth being removed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and very heartily responded to, the intervals being pleasantly enlivened with some excellent vocal music by Bro. Lester, Mr. Thompson and Bro. Hubbard, the musical arrangement being under the direction of Bro. C. Warwick Jordan; M.B., Oxon. In reply to the toast of "The rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present," Bro. Sandeman said: I have much pleasure in responding to the toast that you have proposed; I am sorry to see so few Grand Officers standing up with me to such a toast, but such as do stand with me are worthy Masons, so that I feel well supported, though by very few. In responding for the Grand Officers there is always a suspicion that the speaker gives vent to self praise and laudation, but as I am a Past Grand Officer, I may perhaps, speak more openly than I otherwise could. No one knows until he has received the purple apron, the amount of work that is entailed upon him if he really does his duty and does it well. There is really a good deal of hard work and very important work to perform. I think I may without fear of being contradicted, just say one word on behalf of the Grand Officers, whose names are proposed with this toast, and I think that if the whole body of Freemasons had been polled, the choice would have fallen on the very men whom the Grand Master has appointed. In Golden-square we see a deal of work which is done by the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Earl of Skelmersdale, who works most assiduously, and I am very glad to say these few words in their praise. In conclusion I should like to congratulate the lodge in having you, Sir, as the Master for the coming year. We are all devoted to No. 12 on the register of the Grand Lodge of England, we Past Masters have all felt pleasure in filling that chair, and in asking you to fill it we have given expression to the confidence we feel that you are every way fitted to rule over this lodge. Bro. P. M. Kidder: It is my especial privilege this evening to be entrusted with the gavel for the purpose of proposing a toast—a toast that I am sure will accord with your feelings—"The Health of the W.M." In proposing that toast it is to me a source of great gratification to feel that the choice of the lodge has fallen upon a very worthy brother, and I am sure that for the same reason the toast will be received by you with equal gratification. It is especially gratifying to me to feel that I had the honour of assisting him into the proud position which he now holds. It is gratifying to me to know that I have effectively discharged that duty; otherwise you would not have responded in that hearty manner to the toast of the Worshipful Master. I am certain you will drink it in the most cordial manner, and wish him alike success and happiness during our year of office. Bro. Nicol, W.M.: I have to return thanks, to you certainly Bro. P.M. Kidder, for the honour you have done me this evening. This is a proud day for me, and one which I can never forget. I shall ever strive to perform the duties of my office, with credit to myself and satisfaction to the brethren. From my heart I thank you for the honour you have done me in placing me here, and for the good wishes you have just expressed towards me. "The Health of the Past Masters" was next proposed and duly honoured. The W.M. then in a short speech presented to Bro. Ruf, the Treasurer of the lodge, a handsome testimonial that had been accorded him by the brethren, in the shape of a handsome silver tea and coffee service. Bro. Ruf had been Treasurer of the lodge for eleven or twelve years. The lodge was his mother lodge, and he was now the father of it. He had always performed the duties of Treasurer with the greatest ability, and it was with the best wishes for his happiness and as a mark of affection for him and appreciation of his good qualities that this testimonial was presented to him. Bro. Ruf returned thanks, and in the course of a few appropriate remarks, stated that it was now twenty-one years since he had been installed Master of that lodge, but it never entered into his mind that he should ever be presented with such a mark of the esteem of the brethren. "The Health of the Initiate," "The Visitors," "The Secretary," and other officers were also proposed and responded to, and the toast of "The Success of the Masonic Charities" was coupled with the name of Bro. Terry, who responded with his accustomed eloquence.

NEPTUNE LODGE (No. 22).—On Thursday, the 31st ult., the brethren of this old lodge met at the Guildhall Tavern for the installation of the new W.M., Bro. George Phythian, who was unanimously elected at the last regular meeting of the lodge. The proceedings of the day commenced with the opening of the lodge by Bro. E. F. Storr, W.M., the other officers of the lodge being in their places. The list of brethren present during the evening comprised the names of Bros. E. F. Storr, W.M.; George Phythian, S.W.; W. Ashwell, J.W.; Isaac Wilcox, P.M., Treasurer; T. R. Eames, P.M., Secretary; John Holman, S.D.; Thomas P. Collings, J.D.; George Bird Gates, I.G.; W. R. Greaves, Organist; W. Neats, W.S.; A. J. Partridge, P.M.; Thomas White, P.M.; C. W. Gray, P.M.; John McLachlan, George Britton, Richard Catling, Charles W. Crowe, E. Hollands, A. J. Prothero, G. Waterall, R.M.; Thomas Fairweather, Jno. Harper, J. J. Slater, George Jones, James Norman, J. M. Thredder, W. H. Wise, jun., W. H. Keer, E. Y. Jolliffe, James Miller, H. S. Crawford, P.M.; Alex. Austen, George Salter, P.M.; Geo. Scotter, B. Pears, jun., Mark Hubbard, O. Sargent, E. R. Curtice, A. M. Dorman, W. Buszard, J. H. Batley. Visitors, Newington Bridges, W.M. 1669; H. Birdseye, 715; Francis Fellows, 192 and 1679; Nelson Reed, W.M. 1671; H. Phythian, P.P.G. Sec. Middlesex; H. Edmonds, 1679; E. H. Thiclay, P.M., P.P.G.S.B. Middlesex; J. Reinhardt, J.W. 23; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); D. Rees Copstake, P.M. 869; Fred. Keily, 1293, P.P.G.P. Middlesex; and James Curtis, 145. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of the lodge of emergency of the 10th inst., Bro. Partridge, P.M., ascended the W.M. chair, and duly installed in very impressive style Bro. George Phythian as Master of the lodge for the year ensuing. After the usual greeting, and the admission of the brethren below the rank of Installed Master, and the observance of the customary ceremonies in the Three Degrees, the following brethren were invested as officers of the lodge for the year ensuing:—Bros. Ashwell, S.W.; Holman, J.W.; Isaac Wilcox, P.M., Treasurer; T. R. Eames, P.M., Secretary; Collings, S.D.; Gates, P.M.; J.D.; G. Britton, I.G.; W. C. Greaves, Organist; Gray, D.C.; Neats, P.M., W.S.; and Parkinson, Tyler. After the delivery of the charges, the W.M. commenced his year's work by fluently initiating Mr. James Miller. The report of the Audit Committee was then read and adopted, and Bro. Storr, I.P.M., was presented with a massive and elegant P.M. jewel. Bro. Storr, in thanking the brethren for the gift, said it was not for the pecuniary value of the jewel that he prized it, but for the memorial it was of the brethren's estimation of his services to the lodge; and he trusted he should be spared for many years to do what he could for his mother lodge which he loved so much. Bro. Storr afterwards moved that ten guineas be given to the Boys' School; ten guineas to the Girls' School; and ten guineas to the Benevolent Institution; and the motion, having been duly seconded, was carried unanimously. The W.M. then informed the brethren that they had already a Steward for the Benevolent Institution. Ever since he had been a member of the lodge it had sent a Steward to each of the Institutions every year; but this year, for the first time, there was still a vacancy for a Steward for the Boys' School. He hoped however that the lodge would be true to its old traditions, and that a brother would come forward and offer himself to supply the vacancy. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Fairweather immediately rose and said he should be very happy to take the office upon himself. (Cheers.) Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The toasts were afterwards proposed, and "The Health of the Queen, the Grand Master, the Pro and Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Officers," received all the honours customarily awarded to princes and rulers. Bro. E. F. Storr, I.P.M., next rose to propose "The Health of the W.M.," and said that in doing so he should be speaking the sentiments of every brother when he mentioned that the chair of the lodge was now filled by one whose working, as they had seen that night, would do him credit as W.M. of the Neptune Lodge. The W.M. was like himself (Bro. Storr,) but young in Masonry. The W.M. was initiated next after him and had passed close to him in every office in the lodge. He felt therefore that they were like twin brothers. The W.M. he was proud to say had the assistance, as he himself had, of every officer, all of whom esteemed and loved him; and at the end of his year of office he would be able on taking a retrospect of it to say that he had had a very happy year. His (Bro. Storr's) sun set that night, and Bro. Phythian's rose. He hoped that it might shine in splendour and set without a cloud. The W.M., in the course of acknowledging the toast said it was now between seven and eight years that he first occupied the chair on the immediate right of the W.M. of the lodge, Bro. Waterall. He was quite astounded at the rapid manner in which he had moved from that position to the chair he now occupied. When he first entered the lodge there was but one brother that he knew, and that was Bro. George Jones, the oldest subscribing member of the lodge. Bro. Jones assisted Bro. Muggeridge in resuscitating the lodge in 1849, and he had been what the Audit Committee thought one of the best paying members, for they always had his money, and he very seldom came, having attended only three times since he (the W.M.) was initiated. Bro. Jones introduced him to the lodge. He had much pleasure in acknowledging that Bro. Jones taught him all his business experience; it was to Bro. Jones he went from school, and when he wished to become a Mason, knowing that Bro. Jones was one he asked him about it, and received for answer that he could not do better than join the Neptune Lodge. Bro. Jones proposed him, and their late lamented Bro. Ashwell seconded him. Both as a lad and a man he had always experienced the greatest kindness from Bro. George Jones, and as that brother had favoured the lodge with his presence that evening, he thought he could not do better than propose "Prosperity to the Neptune Lodge," and couple it with the name of Bro. George Jones, the oldest subscribing member. Bro. George Jones replied, and said he had not the slightest idea when he came to the lodge that evening that his name would have been proposed. Unfortunately, the oldest member next to him, Bro. Partridge, sen., was not present. He (Bro. Jones) was the oldest subscribing member, having been initiated in this very month, in 1848. He could merely re-echo the sentiments of all who had passed into the lodge since then, that it had been a happy thirty years, for he had always enjoyed himself when he had spent an evening with the brethren. True, during the last few years he had not been often at the lodge. Domestic and other circumstances called him away; but he had great pleasure in being there that evening, and especially in seeing his excellent old friend, Bro. George Phythian, holding the highest position in the lodge. When he (Bro. G. Jones) joined, they used to have ten, twelve, or thirteen members; now, however, they had sixty or seventy. He was very delighted at being present, and he hoped to be spared some few years yet to have the pleasure of coming again. The W.M. proposed "The Initiate." He knew that the brother who had been initiated that evening was one who would reflect honour on the brethren's choice, because he had been proposed and seconded by two of the most distinguished and respected members of the lodge. Bro. Miller, in reply, said he was not able to reply as he felt, but he could inform the brethren that he was highly pleased with the ceremony he had gone through, and he was certain he should never regret the step he had taken. The W.M., in proposing "The Health of the P.M.'s," said that no brother who like himself had been a member of the lodge for seven or eight years could fail to know the great value of the P.M.'s. No brother could appreciate more highly than he did the very valuable assistance the P.M.'s rendered to the officers of the lodge. They were ready and willing at any moment to give their time towards teaching the brethren. To mention but one instance: Bro. Gray had spent a great deal of time in coaching him (the W.M.) up in his work, and although he was sorry to say he was not quite perfect in it yet, he hoped to be better. If any question arose in the lodge, the Masters and brethren looked to the P.M.'s for advice and aid, and during his (the W.M.'s) year of office he should refer to them, and ask for their support. Bro. Past Master Storr had presided over the lodge in a manner which he (the W.M.) could not hope to excel, but he should strive to emulate it, and he sincerely trusted that when the time came for him to give up the gavel to his successor he should leave the chair with the same good feeling that accompanied Bro. Storrs that evening. The toast having been most warmly received, Bro. E. F. Storrs, I.P.M., who was called on by the W.M. to reply, said he had filled the important office of Master of the Neptune Lodge to the best of his ability. He was now among the ranks of the P.M.'s, and he felt very proud to be one of such a distinguished body as the P.M.'s of the old Neptune Lodge. If, as the W.M. had said, he had performed his duties to the satisfaction of the brethren, he was amply rewarded for any pains he had taken. He had endeavoured to live in the affection of every brother of the lodge, and, without wishing to be egotistical, that evening he had studied the comfort of the brethren individually, and of the lodge in general. He had learned by the jewel the lodge had presented him with that the brethren appreciated his endeavours. He should ever look upon that jewel with pride and gratitude. He did not mean to say he had earned the jewel as other P.M.'s had, but he had done the best he could, and if he had not met with the approval of the brethren, he was sure the brethren would not have been unanimous, as they were, in voting him that token of regard and esteem. It was not the pecuniary value of the jewel that he prized, but the brethren's affection, of which it was a memento. It was with this feeling that every P.M. looked upon the jewel which was presented to him, and he trusted that the W.M. would be spared to win a similar honour. Although he (Bro. Storrs) was the youngest of the P.M.'s, he knew he spoke the sentiments of every P.M. when he said God speed the lodge, spare the Master, grant that his year of office might be one of success, and that he might live in the esteem and affection of the brethren. The W.M. next proposed "The Visitors," and Bro. F. Kelly, in the course of his reply, remarked that he had experienced great pleasure in finding the lodge sent three Stewards to the festivals of the Masonic Institutions. It had struck him as highly honourable that when a Steward was asked for the Boys' School, Bro. Fairweather with such promptitude and readiness offered himself for the office. Bro. H. Phythian observed that when the W.M. proposed the health of Bro. George Jones he referred to a long time ago. He (Bro. Phythian) thought he could carry the W.M.'s recollection back a little further. Some years ago he and the W.M. were talking on various subjects, and the subject of Freemasonry cropped up, and they thought as several friends were Masons why should not they be Masons themselves. The W.M. told him that if he would go in and see what Masonry was like, and then tell him, he would go into it as well. He (Bro. H. Phythian) did go into it, and he was so very much taken with it that he could not help telling his brother that he would like it too. The result of the experience he got was shown by his brother being in the W.M. chair now. Bros. E. H. Thieley, Copestake, Birdseye, Curtis, Edmonds, Fellows, Nelson Reed, and Reinhardt also acknowledged the toast. Bro. Isaac Wilcox, P.M., responding as Treasurer to the toast of "The Treasurer and Secretary," said he had held the office for a number of years, and he hoped that the brethren would never find at their audit that they were in a worse position than they were that evening. The Neptune Lodge during the years he had been Treasurer had had its ups and downs like other lodges; but he thought the brethren had seen by the feelings with which many P.M.'s had gone through the chair that they had been actuated by one desire, that the prosperity of the Neptune Lodge might go on increasing. The Masters of lodges had a great and important duty to perform; not only to do the work well, but to keep down the expenditure during their year of office; and he ventured to say that no lodge had had better men to discharge these duties effectually than the Neptune. The lodge might rely on its present Master to emulate those who had gone before him. Bro. T. R. Eames, P.M., replying as Secretary, said that when he undertook the duties of his office he did so with a view of performing them to the best interests of the lodge, and he flattered himself and the lodge that he had done it satisfactorily. As long as he held the office of Secretary he should endeavour to perform its duties with satisfaction to the lodge. He was very much pleased to have to speak that evening, because the W.M. was an old schoolfellow of his. The W.M. had said that Bro. George Jones was the only member of the lodge he knew when he came into it, but if he would remember he (Bro. Eames) and the W.M. came together at King's College. He was, therefore additionally happy to be invested again as Secretary, when his old schoolfellow presided as W.M. The pleasant party then broke up. The brethren were entertained during the evening with some excellent singing by Bros. Pearce, Hubbard, Reinhardt, and Edmonds, who were accompanied on the piano by Bro. W. C. Graves, Organist.

OLD KING'S ARMS LODGE (No. 28).—This old lodge held its installation meeting on Monday, the 28th January, when there were present Bros. J. G. Wilson, W.M.; Paas, P.M.; G. H. Wright, P.M.; Tighe, P.M.; Horwood, P.M.; Loveridge, P.M.; Farmaner, P.M. 485; Crombie, P.M.; Shearman, P.M.; Richard Bell, J.W.; C. T. Church, I.G.; T. J. Thomas, S.D.; Stoneham, Hainsworth, C. D. Miller, W. R. Thomas, W. W. Rust, E. Bumpers, J. Davy, Lloyd, Corthorne, Ellis, Jores, Sadler, Cope, Scott, and Watkins. Visitors: Bros. Pike, 9; Probyn, 18; J. W. Abbott, 21; Brunning, 21; Fairweather, 22; Ward, 22; Faulkner, 22; Holman, 22; Lord, 25; S. Taylor, 28; W. J. Cooper, 43; T. Grove, 55; S. White, 101; R. Williams, 176; W. T. Jones, 181; J. B. Barter, 185; J. Terry, 228; Jas. Lovett 526; G. S. Smith, 534; Ingulisk, 534; Potter, 657; J.

Llewellyn, 657; A. B. Evans, 738; Rawlinson, 754; D. Ormond, 827; J. Mabe, 869; J. Forsyth, 868; T. Kendal, 1018; J. Williams, 1150; A. Lester, 1309; F. West, 1328; F. W. Kibble, 1426; Stamer, 1429; A. H. Miller, 1441; Thos. Stephens, 1475; Jackson, 1474; Penne, 1572; Allman, 1601; G. Taylor, 1613; G. S. Flack, 1615; Chapman, 1622; Nelson Reed, 1671; Stein, Geo. Clark, R. F. Carter, Geo. Rawlinson, Montem Smith, F. Binckes. Bro. C. D. Miller was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason, and Bro. Farmaner, P.M. 485, was then duly installed as W.M. of the Old King's Arms Lodge, by Bro. Tighe, P.M.; when he at once proceeded to appoint and invest his officers, as follows: Bros. I. G. Neilson, I.P.M.; T. J. Thomas, S.W.; C. T. Church, J.W.; D. Crombie, P.M. Sec.; W. R. Thomas, S.D.; J. Hainsworth, J.D.; W. W. Rust, I.G.; G. H. Wright, P.M., D.C. Bro. Paas having been previously elected to the office of Treasurer, was formally invested by the Worshipful Master. Bro. Thos. Woodstock having been duly proposed and seconded was elected as Tyler and invested with his sword of office. A vote of thanks was unanimously given to Bro. P.M. Tighe, for the able manner he discharged the duties of Installing Master. Several other matters connected with the lodge having been transacted it was closed in due form, until the fourth Monday in February, emergencies excepted, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was served in the large room of the Freemasons' Tavern, and great credit is due to the proprietor, for its variety, excellence, and attendance. No less than 48 visitors attended to do honour to the W.M.'s installation. A most pleasant evening was spent, enlivened by a beautiful selection of songs which was provided consisting of solos, duets, and trios, rendered in a most effective manner by Bros. A. Lester, Montem Smith, and others. The usual Masonic and loyal toasts were proposed and responded to with the accustomed zeal, and the brethren separated, happy to have met, sorry to part, and happy to meet again.

LODGE OF FAITH (No. 141).—The last meeting of this old lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street on the 29th ult. There were present Bro. Mallett, W.M.; C. Dairy, S.W.; Turnbull, J.W.; Carter, P.M., Treasurer; Stuart, P.M., Secretary; Whitby, S.D.; Morrison, J.D.; Heaphy, I.G.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, W.S. (Freemason); Clark, D.C.; and Past Masters Davis, Pope, Taylor, Themans, Waygood. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. with the assistance of his officers initiated Mr. Abrahams in a very painstaking manner. There being no other business before the lodge it was closed, and the members and visitors, numbering over sixty, adjourned to the banquet. Amongst the latter were Bros. Miller, P.M. 766, 1586; Faija, S.D. 1540; Van Raalte, J.D. 917; Butt, I.G. 907; Jones, S. 1431; Davis and Hayett, late 141; Dunn, 813; Yates, 948. At the conclusion of the banquet, which, was well served, the W.M. gave the preliminary toasts, briefly but to the point. The I.P.M. in proposing "The W.M." took occasion to remark that the members were to be congratulated on having elected Bro. Mallett to fill the onerous position of Master in so large and influential a lodge as the Faith was universally acknowledged to be. He, the I.P.M., looked forward to a very prosperous year of office for their W.M., and in conclusion he charged the brethren to drink the toast with all due honour and warmth. The W.M. having briefly acknowledged the compliment proposed "The Health of the Initiate," who had come, he said, that evening well and worthily recommended, and who would he believed do credit to the lodge of his choice. Bro. Abrahams having returned thanks in a few well chosen sentences, the W.M. gave "The Visitors." This toast having been received with excellent "fire," each of the visiting brethren responded by praising most highly the "working" and hospitality of the lodge. "The P.M.'s," "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers," then followed in quick succession. The latter toast was acknowledged at length by the S.W., Bro. Dairy. During the proceedings Bro. Davis, sen., Themans, Walls, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at an early hour after passing a most agreeable evening.

ST. THOMAS'S LODGE (No. 142).—The regular meeting of this old lodge for the annual installation of a Worshipful Master was held on Saturday last, at the City Terminus Hotel, and never since its centenary meeting, two years ago, has so large and distinguished a company assembled to do honour to its meetings. There was no business before the brethren but the confirmation of the minutes of the election meeting, the installation of W.M., the appointment and investiture of officers, and the reception of the report of the Audit Committee. The list of brethren present comprised Bros. James Williams Lambert, W.M.; Wm. Beattie, S.W.; Fred J. Macaulay, J.W.; W. Stainton Moses, Chaplain; Wm. Battye, P.M., Treas.; H. C. Levander, P.M. Secretary; George Powell, S.D.; James Lewis Thomas, P.M., D.C.; R. G. Scarth, P.M.; Fred Thomas Dubois, P.M.; G. A. Rooks, P.M.; F. C. Yockney, A. V. Haines, Mansfield Turner, F. S. Hobson, D. Calvert, H. A. Dubois, Chas. H. Evill, F. G. Bailey. Visitors: Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M. Middlesex; J. Collison Macartney, M.P., P.M. 12, Ireland; Col. H. Somerville Burney, P.M. 1615; Magnus Ohren, P.M. 33; Peter Laird, P.M. 12; F. W. Levander, W.M. 1415; Wm. Ganz, P.G.O.; H. Massey, P.M. 619, (Freemason); John Strapp, P.M. 33; Fred Webb, P.G.R., Surrey; Thomas Green, Herbert Dicketts, P.G.S.; John Davis, W.M. 33; R. F. Austin, Studholme; John O. Carter, Etonian, P.M.; Thomas Higgs, P.M. 106; Montagu Gosset, P.M. 66; H. Finlay, 33; F. B. Archer, P.M. 94; C. E. Saunders, 29; Chas. F. Hogard, P.M. 205; R. F. Gould, P.M. 92; H. W. Hunt, P.M. 463; W. Smallpiece, Secretary, 969; John D. Blake, P.M. 8; James Glashier, P.G.D.; Peter de Lande Long, S.G.D.; Henry Kent, 33; Faulkner Leigh, 404; J. Hare,

359; Fred. Plummer, 211; J. Large, 771; John Boyd, P.G.P., P.G.S.; and Dr. Davies. Bro. J. W. Lambert, W.M., presided, and the other officers named above were in their places. After the confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Lambert, W.M., proceeded to instal Bro. W. Beattie, S.W., who holds the important post of Assistant Locomotive Superintendent of the London and South-Western Railway Co., in the chair of W.M.; and Bro. Lambert, as an old pupil of the Emulation Lodge of Improvement, acquitted himself to the complete satisfaction and admiration of the brethren. The Board of Installed Masters numbered over thirty. Duly placed in the W.M. chair, Bro. Beattie proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows: Bros. F. J. Macaulay (Assistant Secretary of the London and South-Western Railway Co.), S.W.; George Powell, J.W.; W. Battye, P.M., Treas.; H. C. Levander, P.M., Sec.; W. Stainton Moses, S.D.; F. S. Hobson, J.D.; A. V. Haines, I.G.; James Lewis Thomas, P.M., D.C., and Rawles, Tyler. The ceremony was accompanied by an organ performance, beautifully rendered by Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, P.G. Org. Bro. Lambert delivered all the addresses, and at their conclusion received the hearty applause of the brethren. Bro. Battye, P.M. and Treas., then rose to move that a P.M.'s jewel be presented to Bro. Lambert, and assured the W.M. that he never felt greater pleasure in proposing a P.M.'s jewel to a retiring Master before. All the brethren knew that Bro. Lambert had won the esteem and regard of every member of the lodge, and the proposition would be heartily seconded and as heartily carried. Bro. F. T. Dubois, P.M., seconded the motion, which was put and carried unanimously. The W.M., in presenting the jewel to Bro. Lambert, said it was with feelings of no small pleasure that he attached this small token of the brethren's esteem and affection to Bro. Lambert's breast. It was unnecessary for him to repeat what had been said by the Treasurer, but he was sure that he gave utterance to the sentiments of the entire lodge when he said a P.M.'s jewel was never bestowed by a lodge on a worthier brother than Bro. Lambert. He only hoped he would live very many years to be among the brethren and wear this jewel. Bro. Lambert, I.P.M., in reply, said it was very pleasing for him at the close of his year of office to be received in such a cordial manner by the W.M. and the brethren. This jewel he hoped would always remind him with pleasure of the duties he had yet to perform. One thing at least it would do, it would remind him of the kindness he had received from the brethren of the lodge, a kindness which he felt would never be forgotten by him. Thanking the brethren sincerely for their kindness he trusted that the lodge would flourish, and that its existence would be sempiternal. Bro. F. T. Dubois, P.M., then gave notice of motion for raising the initiation fee of the lodge from the first of January, 1879. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren retired to a sumptuous repast provided by Bro. Rand, manager of the City Terminus Hotel. When this had been disposed of, grace was sung, and the usual toasts were proposed and honoured, the intervals between the toasts being supplied with some delightful music under the direction of Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, by Bros. Thomas Baxter, Faulkner Leigh, Frederick Penna, and Maybrick. Bro. Col. Burdett, P.G.M., Middlesex, in replying to the toast of "The Pro Grand Master, &c." said that he and the rest of the Grand Officers at the table had always the greatest pleasure in coming to see what was being done in the Masonic world. They had many opportunities of going about, and taking advantage of them they saw many descriptions of working. Speaking for himself he had been through many different parts of the world and had seen a great deal of working. He had seen much good working, but he had never seen any better than he had seen that night. And this he said not only of the P.M., but of the incoming Master. The incoming Master was not supposed to know all that an outgoing Master knew; but that evening the incoming Master had done his work most satisfactorily, both to himself, and every member of the lodge and the visitors. He had never spent a more agreeable evening than he had that evening; it had been a most pleasant evening, the Masonic working was good, the dinner was good, and the music was good. Bro. Lambert, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M." In the St. Thomas's Lodge they always had a W.M. whom they loved and respected, and in the W.M. of that evening, they had one who had not only worked up from the lower degrees, at every degree and every step in Masonry shewing himself a more able Craftsman, and fit to preside, but he had arrived at the summit of the ambition of a Mason, the Worshipful Mastership of his lodge. At every step he had gained the esteem and respect of the brethren. It was to him (Bro. Lambert), a great satisfaction to see his own S.W. in the chair of the lodge, he would not say honouring it, because the Master received honour from the chair. At the same time he believed there had never been a Master in the chair, or ever would be, who could more ably fulfil his duties than Bro. Beattie. The W.M. could support the honour of the lodge with dignity, firmness, and decision, determined that the duties of Freemasonry should be performed strictly, and that the brethren were to be Masons not in word only but in deed. The sole object and aim of Masonry was not the banquet, but the work and the principles of Masonry, and these were the sole ground and reason of Masons meeting together. Seeing such an excellent Master in the chair he proposed his health with as much enthusiasm as if he were in the chair himself, because he knew he was imbued with the same Masonic spirit himself, and with a desire to promote to the best of his ability the good of Masonry in general, and of this lodge in particular. The W.M. in acknowledging the toast said he did not regret his severe cold, he was labouring under for any reason so much as that for the moment it prevented his saying all we would like on the present occasion. He felt that he had received great honour from the St. Thomas's Lodge in being selected to fill the W.M. chair. It was an honour he had looked forward to for a long time, and now that he had obtained it he should never forget it. His old friend the Immediate Past Master, had made some kind remarks about him that evening, and he knew he was sincere in all he had said; but he (the W.M.) only wished he was deserving of one half of it. He would only assure the brethren that during the year in which he had the honour to preside over this lodge, it would be his constant endeavour to maintain the dignity and character of the lodge in every respect; not only socially, but as regarded the working, for he thoroughly agreed with Bro. Lambert that that was the fundamental part of Masonry. The cold he was suffering from must be his excuse for not saying more, but he would ask the brethren to believe him when he said how deeply sensible he was of the honour they had done him. In proposing "The Health of the Visitors," the W.M. said there many distinguished brethren present as visitors that evening, among them being many members of Grand Lodge. There were Bro. Macartney, M.P., for Tyrone, Col. Somerville Burney, Bro. Wilhelm Ganz, Bro. Boyd, Bro. Peter de Lande Long, and Bro. James Glaisher. They were always pleased to see visitors at their meetings, and he was sure the time would never come when St. Thomas's Lodge would not cordially greet them. There were altogether thirty-six visitors present, and to those thirty-six brethren he would only say in the name of St. Thomas's Lodge he greeted them well. It would be impossible to have a reply from each of the visitors, and he would therefore call on Bro. Macartney, M.P., to reply. Bro. Macartney in replying said, if anything were required to prove the hospitality of the Lodge of St. Thomas, he thought the standing up of so many visitors as thirty-six, who really outnumbered the members of the lodge would show that they did not fail in that respect. It was not the first time that he had had the advantage and pleasure of enjoying the hospitality of St. Thomas's Lodge, but he would echo in the most heartfelt and sincere way what was said by Bro. Col. Burdett, that he never saw better working in a lodge than he had seen that day. Perhaps the working in his own country was not quite up in many respects to the working; in others it was indifferent; and in some very indifferent. It depended on the officers. When a lodge had good officers the working was good; and he was told that St. Thomas's Lodge not only had the advantage of having good officers now, but it had in prospective for several years a crop coming up which would increase in good time, and guarantee for the lodge Masters and Past Masters quite as good as any who had preceded them. He must say that he congratulated St. Thomas's Lodge on its prospect. On behalf of himself and the other thirty-five visitors he begged to thank the lodge for their hospitality. They could not all return thanks. If they did the lodge would be in much the same position as a House of which he was a member, when the Obstructive Party stopped a bill. The brethren might say they were waiting too long for their wine or for the next toast. He could only say as an Irish Mason, he returned thanks. Masonry in Ireland, as they were all aware, had in recent years had to undergo difficulties not known before. It was under the ban of a power which had a very great sway in that country; but he was glad to say that although the utmost endeavours had been made to checkmate Masonry and stop its growth they had not been successful, and this was in no small degree due to the fostering of the Order by the reigning family. It was alive in the breasts of right-minded men in his country as in this, and the example set them by so many members of the Royal Family joining the ancient and noble Craft, had encouraged many others to join it too. He was proud to say that he had in the Mark Lodge given the degree to His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and also gave him the Royal Arch Degree in the chapter. He regretted to say he was absent (but he was absent on public business) when the Duke of Connaught received the 33rd Degree in the preceptory of which he (Bro. Macartney) was the Preceptor; and he was sorry also that he was absent when the Duke of Connaught was installed Great Prior of Ireland. However, it was a great pleasure to have our Queen as the protector of our Order, the Grand Master the Prince of Wales, as the patron of the Order; the Duke of Connaught as their Great Prior. In proposing "The P.M.'s," the W.M. regretted the absence of two of those brethren, one from indisposition, and the other from a domestic affliction. Bro. Lambert, I.P.M., said as the junior P.M. he could promise the W.M. that he might rely upon him for assistance. The P.M.'s of the lodge would not hesitate to do anything they might be called upon to do. The W.M. was the governor of the lodge, and the P.M.'s were not at all jealous of his performing the duties. He could say on behalf of the P.M.'s, in the words of "The death of Nelson," which they had just heard, "thus ending life as they began," every P.M. would "do his duty;" and he could assure the W.M. on his own (Bro. Lambert's) part, and the other P.M.'s, he thanked them most sincerely, and with regard to the jewel presented to him, he would take this further opportunity of thanking the brethren again. Bro. Battye, Treasurer, also thanked the W.M. and brethren, and hoped to enjoy the society of the members of the lodge for many years. The W.M., in proposing "The Health of the Officers," said the officers appointed for the ensuing year would, one and all, do their duty, and be a credit to the lodge. As regarded the senior officers they were old and tried members, the junior officers had to show what they could do, but he thought he might say for them that they would do their best to qualify themselves for their respective positions, and show their appreciation of their appointment to office by working up to the higher grades. As regarded the Senior Warden, he had so distinguished himself in his position of Junior Warden, that it was impossible for him to do more in his present capacity. Bro. Macaulay, S.W., replied, and said that having been deputed to reply to this toast, he begged to say that the officers of St. Thomas's Lodge thanked the W.M. most cordially for the very kind manner in which he had proposed the toast, and the brethren for the very gracious reception they had given it. On behalf of the officers of the St. Thomas's Lodge he took this opportunity of publicly assuring the W.M. that his kind remarks had not fallen on unfruitful soil, the evidence of which he hoped they would give the W.M. during his year of office. He begged further to say that the promotion the W.M. had given those who held office last year would be earned; and for those who now held office for the first time, he felt sure that he might say that all the W.M. had expected of them would be realised. He hoped he might be allowed the opportunity of saying a few more words of those who had held office under the I.P.M., and those words were words of public thanks to him for the very kind manner in which he had always dealt with them and overlooked their failings. To Bro. Lambert and others he felt very much indebted for the encouragement they had received during the past year. Had it not been for that encouragement on many occasions, some of the officers would have felt in difficulty. As it was, he had made their labours light, and their offices pleasure instead of routine duty. The Tyler's toast was then given, and the brethren separated.

HENRY MUGGERIDGE LODGE (No. 1679).—The fourth regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Prince George, Dalston, on Saturday, January 26th, when there were present Bros. Henry Muggeridge, W.M.; Francis Fellows, S.W.; E. F. Storr, J.W.; J. J. Lorkin, S.D.; J. H. John, J.D.; W. Darnell, D.C.; Sack, Dyer, Arnold, and others. Visitors: Bros. Weedon, P.M. Panmure; Christian, W.M. Beaconsfield; Dallas, and Taylor. The lodge was opened in due form, and Bro. Alfred R. Foster passed to the Second Degree in a very impressive manner. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a very nicely served cold collation. After the usual toasts were given, the W.M., being very unwell, was compelled to retire, without the usual songs being given at intervals.

ALL SAINTS' LODGE (No 1716).—The second regular meeting of this new and prosperous lodge was held on Friday evening, 1st inst., at the Town Hall, Poplar, E. In the temporary absence of W.M., Bro. W. H. Farnfield, his position was filled by Bro. J. Dennis, S.W., and P.M. 907, and the following officers, and brethren were present: Bros. F. A. White, as S.W.; J. K. Coleman, as J.W.; N. J. Fenner, Treas.; Leonard Potts, S.D.; J. S. Turner, J.D.; W. C. Young, I.G.; C. A. Smith, Org.; E. Witherstone, J. J. Abbott, R. M. Talbot, J. House, J. Mills, T. Bates, J. W. Marsh, C. Phillips, and F. Johnson. The following visiting brethren were also present: Bros. F. B. Daniel, P.M. 781; Bradshaw, Brown, I.G.; C. Brown 1362; H. J. Hancock, 1000; J. W. Martin, 141; and H. J. Bull; 781. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the previous regular meeting and of two emergency meetings read and confirmed. Ballot was then taken for Messrs. F. E. Bowkett, and Wm. Morris for initiation and in each case the ballot proved unanimous in the affirmative. The work of the evening was then proceeded with and Bros. Mills, Talbot, House, and Bates, raised to the third degree Bro. C. Phillips passed to the Second Degree and Messrs. Bowkett and Morris initiated. The manner in which the several ceremonies were worked elicited the admiration of all the brethren present. The W.M. himself then took the chair of K.S.; and apologised for his absence caused partly by indisposition but more particularly through having had to keep an important engagement at Westminster under the pressure of a subpoena, and he expressed his thanks to Bro. J. Dennis for so kindly undertaking his duties for the evening. Bro. J. Dennis, then proposed and Bro. L. Potts seconded that the code of bye-laws be referred to a Committee of the officers to consider and report upon; this was unanimously carried. It was also resolved on the motion of Bro. J. K. Coleman that a Lodge of Instruction be held at the Artichoke Tavern, Blackwall, on every Friday evening throughout the year in connection with the All Saints' Lodge, and on the motion of Bro. J. Dennis, for Bro. N. J. Fenner, Treas., who had left the meeting, that the sum of £5 be placed on the list of the W.M. from the funds of the lodge for the R.M.B. Inst., the W.M. having consented to act as Steward for No. 1716 at the forthcoming festival. A proposition having been made for initiation, the lodge was closed in due form with solemn prayer and adjourned. This being a non-banqueting lodge we are unable to chronicle any further proceedings except that after partaking of a social glass and a smoke only, the brethren separated after four hour's work.

WINCHESTER.—Lodge of Economy (No. 76).—The installation of Bro. W. G. Blanchard, as Worshipful Master of this (the senior lodge of Hampshire) took place last week in the presence of a numerous attendance of the brethren, both from the city and the district, including the Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Bro. W. Hickman); Bro. Frost, the Prov. G. Treasurer, Bro. Rake, Prov. G.J.W.; and the Masters of the Royal Gloucester and Peace and Harmony (Southampton) and the Basingstoke lodges. The ceremony was efficiently performed by Bro. J. Harris, Prov. G.W., and one of the Past Masters of the lodge, and at its close the newly-installed Master invested the following officers:—Bros. Goodwin, I.P.M.; Bryant, S.W.; Hutt, J.W. and Org.; Stopher, P.M., Treas.; Nixon, Sec.; Powell, S.D.; Murray, J.D.; Captain Moore, P.M., D.C.; Salter, P.M., Assistant D.C.; Captain Hall, I.G.; Harris, P.M., and Roles, Stewards; and Sims, Tyler. Before the lodge separated votes of thanks were awarded to the Dep. Prov. Grand Master and to the Installing Master; and it was incidentally mentioned in the passing of a vote of thanks to P.M. Sheppard, who has acted as Treasurer of the lodge for the past ten years, and is now leaving Winchester for Southampton, that since the members had resolved to reduce the subscription in order to leave attendance at the monthly banquet to the option of the brethren, not only was the lodge in a better financial position, but the arrangement had worked better than was expected, and the whole of the funds were now applied exclusively to charitable and Masonic purposes. At the subsequent installation banquet, served at the Royal Hotel, there was a capital attendance, including the Dep. Prov. Grand Master, and the Prov. Officers already named; the officers of the lodge, and several Past Masters, including Bros. Naish and Wily (Newport); the Mayor of Winchester, Col. Naghten, M.P., and several officers from the garrison. Mutual congratulations were exchanged on the state of Masonry in Winchester and the province generally.

KENDAL.—Union Lodge (No. 129).—The members of this old and flourishing lodge, founded in 1764, held their installation festival in their hall, Stramogate, on Thursday, the 31st ult., after the business of Kendal Castle Chapter, R.A.M., which is attached to Union Lodge, had been concluded. There was an excellent muster of the members, including Bros. R. J. Nelson, W.M., P.G. Steward; G. J. McKay, S.W., W.M. elect, P.G.A.D.C.; T. Baron, J.W.; G. B. Greenall, Treas.; J. Banks, Sec.; F. W. Watson, S.D.; J. Sisson, jun., J.D.; J. Holme, P.M., P.P.G.S.W.; J. Talbot, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; J. Bowes, P.M., P.P.G.J.W.; T. Wilson, P.M., P.P.G. Supt. Works; J. Bintley, P.M., P.P.G. Supt. Works; F. C. Grayson, P.M.; R. Godfrey, P.M., P.G. Supt. Works; W. Tattersall, P.P.G.D.C.; H. Craig, J. Pickthal, Jos. Hunter, T. Fearnside, E. O. Dwyer, H. F. Scales, W. Harrison, Geo. Waters, F. Medcalf, jun., Jas. Gooding, and others. There were also a number of visitors present, viz.: Bros. W. Dodd, P.M. 1074 and 995, P.P.G.J.W.; J. Mills, P.M. 1390, P.P.G.S.B.; G. Taylor, J.W. 1051; W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.W., P.G. Secretary Cumberland and Westmorland; John Bell, 281, 1353, 1390; Jack Bintley, and others. Apologies were received from Bros. Colonel Whitwell, M.P., P.M. 129, Deputy Prov. Grand Master Cumberland and Westmorland; Jas. Black, W.M. 1002, Cockermouth; W. F. Lamsonby, P.M. 1002, P.G. Reg. (Freemason); and others. After the lodge had been opened the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. McKay, having been presented in the Second Degree, the ceremony of installation was proceeded with up to the M.M.'s Degree, when the presiding officer's position was assumed by Bro. W. B. Gibson, P.G. Secretary. A Board of Installed Masters having been formally opened, numbering fourteen in all, Bro. McKay was regularly placed in the chair of K.S., according to ancient custom. The board being then closed, and the lodge successively reduced to the First Degree, the newly-installed W.M. appointed his officers, and they were invested as follows:—Bros. R. J. Nelson, I.P.M.; J. Banks, S.W.; F. W. Watson, J.W.; G. B. Greenall, Treasurer (re-elected); J. H. Hogg, Secretary; J. Sisson, jun., S.D.; J. Wilkinson, J.D.; R. Godfrey, P.M., D.C.; Eli Cox, Organist (re-appointed); J. B. Wilson, I.G. Bro. J. Bowes, P.M., delivered the address to the W.M., followed by Bro. Talbot, P.M., with that appertaining to the Wardens, after which Bro. Gibson, the Installing Master, delivered the usual address to the brethren of Union Lodge generally. A cordial vote of thanks was accorded to the Installing Master and his assistants, and the same was ordered to be recorded on the minutes. After those brethren had acknowledged the compliment, the third and last proclamation was put, which elicited the heartiest of good wishes from Lodges 112, Whitehaven; 281, Lancaster; 995, Ulverston; 1051, Lancaster; 1074, Kirkby Lonsdale; 1353, Lancaster; and 1390, Millom. The lodge was then closed in form, when the brethren, to the number of fifty, adjourned to the King's Arms Hotel, and partook of a sumptuous banquet, Bro. McKay, the W.M., presiding. The cloth being drawn, the W.M., in giving "The Health of Her Majesty," said she had endeared herself to her subjects generally as the Sovereign of this mighty empire; but, in particular, she was a warm supporter of our Masonic institutions. The W.M. also gave "The Princess of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family;" which was followed by "The Health of the M.W. Grand Master of England," drunk with all the honours. The W.M. then gave "The M.W. Pro Grand Master, Lord Carnarvon; the R.W. Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale; and the rest of the Grand Officers of England." He remarked that those who had the privilege of attending Grand Lodge could not but be struck with the ability displayed by the Earl of Carnarvon, especially at last Grand Lodge, when his lordship spoke so eloquently on the subject of the Grand Orient of France having eliminated the G.A.O.T.U. from its constitutions. The M.W. Grand Master could not find a fitter or abler representative than His Royal Highness's present Pro Grand Master, and long might he be spared to preside over the Grand Lodge of England. Bro. W. B. Gibson next proposed, in an eloquent speech, "The Health of the R.W.P.G.M. of Cumberland and Westmorland, the Earl of Bective, M.P.," which was succeeded by Bro. Holme, with "The R.W.D.P.G.M., Colonel Whitwell, M.P.;" and "The P.G. Officers," proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bros. Holme, Gibson, Talbot, Bowes, Dodds and others. Bro. Cartmel, P.P.G.D.C., the senior P.M. of Lodge 129, then gave in very complimentary terms, "The Newly-installed W.M. of Union Lodge," which was drunk with every honour. Bro. McKay, in reply, thanked Bro. Cartmel for his very kind expressions, and he desired further to tender to the brethren his most hearty thanks for the cordial manner in which they had received the toast of his health. He was thankful for their good opinion, and it should be his constant aim to secure it. They had that day conferred upon him the highest honour in the power of a lodge to bestow on any of its members, and he wished to assure them of his profound gratitude for and appreciation of it. To say that he would do his best to discharge the duties of his high office to the utmost of his abilities, and to merit a continuance of their confidence, was to say very little—that was only what they had a right to demand of him; and when he looked around upon the long and distinguished list of his predecessors, who had so worthily filled the chair of Union Lodge—many of whom had made their mark in the Craft—he might well feel the deep responsibility of the trust they had thought fit to repose in him. He called to mind with much pleasure and satisfaction that night five years, when in that very room he made his first Masonic speech, and he then made a resolve that it should be his ambition to attain the honourable position the then W.M. of Lodge 129 occupied. His ambition had been realised, inasmuch as he had that day been installed by his near friend, Bro. Gibson, ably assisted by Bros. Bowes and Talbot. He had held every office in the lodge—I.G.; Deacon; Sec.; J.W.; and S.W.; and to this he mainly owed his proud position that night. He now asked for the kind co-operation of the worthy P.M.'s, and especially his officers, without which he could not hope for a successful year of office. They would give him encouragement by attending constantly, regularly, and punctually. Let them be animated with one desire—the welfare and prosperity of the lodge. Union Lodge, No. 129, stood high in the Craft, and in the province of Cumberland and Westmorland. Let them, therefore, endeavour to raise it still higher, and they might be assured he would endeavour to discharge the duties connected with the chair, he trusted with honour to the Craft in general, and with satisfaction to the P.M.'s and brethren of Union Lodge in particular. (Applause.) The W.M. then proposed, in complimentary terms, "The I.P.M.," which was acknowledged by Bro. Nelson. Bro. Holme gave "The Newly-invested Officers of 129," and in doing so gave it as his opinion that the W.M. could not have found a better lot of officers, had he picked the lodge through and through. Bros. Banks, Watson, and the remainder of the officers responded in terms that augurs well for the prosperity and efficient working of the lodge. Bro. Nelson proposed "The Installing Officers," which was acknowledged by Bro. Bowes, Bro. Gibson, having had to leave for the north at an early period of the proceedings. The W.M. next gave "The Visitors," prefacing his remarks by saying that this was always a welcome toast in Lodge 129. He believed that visiting other lodges was very necessary, because it not only engendered kindly feelings amongst the brethren, but it gave them an opportunity of improving and perfecting themselves in Masonic knowledge. Lodge 129 was proverbial for her hospitality, and long might she continue so. The various visiting brethren present having replied, the W.M. proposed "The Masonic Charities." He said he intended representing the province for the second time at the Boy's School festival. (Applause.) Having detailed the great good the three Institutions were effecting, and of which Masons were so justly proud, he asked them to practise in a substantial manner the greatest of Masonic institutions, which they professed so much to admire, and send him up to London with a long list of subscriptions. (Applause.) They would thus do honour to their lodge, the province of Cumberland and Westmorland, and the distinguished brother who would preside on the occasion—the S.G.W. of England, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. (Applause.) He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Grayson, one of the most open handed members of Union Lodge, who made a modest reply. The proceedings, which throughout had been of a most successful and enjoyable character, were then brought to a close. The musical arrangements, both during lodge business and the post-prandial proceedings, were under the direction of Bro. R. Godfrey, in the absence through illness of Bro. Cox, the Organist. Excellent harmony was contributed by Bros. Bintley, Gooding, Scales, Geo. Taylor, and others.

WINSHILL.—Royal Sussex Lodge (No. 353).—The sixtieth anniversary of this prosperous lodge of Freemasons was held on Monday, the 28th ult., at the Swan Hotel, Winshill, when Bro. W. Boden was installed in the chair of King Solomon, the ceremony being performed by Bro. R. Howe, the Immediate Past Master. The Worshipful Master invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. W. J. Booth, S.W.; F. J. Roe, J.W.; W. Walters, Secretary; W. J. Drewry, P.M.; Treasurer; W. J. Gohard, P.M.; P.P.G.W., D. of C.; F. J. Gane, S.D.; W. Johnson, J.D.; W. L. Ball, I.G.; John Johnson, Tyler. During the ceremony a handsome gold watch and chain was presented by the members of the lodge to Bro. H. Turner, on his retirement from the office as Tyler, which post he has held for the long period of twenty-four years. The presentation was made in suitable terms by Bro. T. A. Jackson, P.M., P.P.S.G.D. The lodge having been closed, about forty brethren sat down to a banquet served by Bro. Spooner. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and heartily responded to, much gratification being expressed by the visiting brethren at the admirable manner in which the ceremony was performed, it being their unanimous opinion that this ancient lodge has a long and prosperous career before it. The harmony of the evening was much enhanced by some excellent singing. Letters of apology were read from Bros. H. C. Okover, D.P.G.M., Past J.W. England, and W. Naylor, P.P.S.G.W., P.G. Secretary, and several other brethren, regretting their unavoidable absence. The following is the list of visitors present:—Bros. T. Cox, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., P.G. Treasurer, 253; T. Horsley, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., 253; H. Hillam, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., 731; W. H. Marsden, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., 253; A. G. Taylor, W.M., 253; Jno. Smith, P.M., P.P.J.G.W., 731; E. Starey, P.M., P.P.J.G.W., 624; C. Graham, P.M., 624; S. Briggs, P.M., 624; K. Macrae, W.M., 624; T. B. Edwards, P.M., 296; J. Bland, J.D., 1391; J. H. Pragnell, 1085; W. Wright, (Ashby).

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The brethren of this lodge held their January meeting on the 30th ult., but under a great feeling of regret for the severe accident that befell the W.M., Bro. Dr. Rhys Williams, of Bethlehem Hospital, which we mentioned in our last issue. In his absence the chair was taken by Bro. Alderman Sergeant, P.M. and Treasurer, who opened the lodge, at which there were present Bros. P.M.'s Dr. Prior, Sec.; Alderman Bull, J.P., Steward; Cuthbert, Cookson, Billson, Capt. Green, Rev. Faussett Ward, and Boughton-Smith. Officers: Bros. Capt. Colburn, S.W.; Coombs, J.W.; Allan, S.D.; Thody, J.D.; Carter, I.G.; and Reynolds, Tyler; Bros. Leslie, Capt. Glubb, H. Allen, Stafford, Kilpin, Ayres, Pick, Jarvis, Hartis, Moon, and Chibnall; and visitor, Bro. J. R. Green, United Strength, 228. The minutes of the last lodge having been read and confirmed, a ballot, which proved unanimous, was taken for Mr. S. Foster, as a candidate for initiation. A ballot, which also proved unanimous, was taken for Bro. Thomas Vincent De Denne, of Lodge of Loyalty, 86, Northampton, as a joining member. Bro. Denne is a son of a late respected member of the Stuart Lodge. Dr. Prior then took the chair and initiated Mr. Foster. When the time for propositions came, Bro. Bull proposed, and Bro. P.M. Billson seconded a vote of sympathy with their W.M. in his suffering consequent upon his untoward accident. This vote, which was, of course, as hearty as it was unanimous, was directed to be conveyed by letter to Dr. Williams. A resident of Bedford was then duly proposed for initiation, and the lodge having been closed, about twenty brethren sat down to supper, and spent, as usual, a most pleasant evening.

EASTDEREHAM.—Sondes Lodge (No. 996). The annual meeting of the brethren of this lodge was held on Wednesday 30th ult. at the Eagle Hotel, for the purpose of installing Bro. F.W. Abram as W.M. for the year ensuing (this being the fourth time Bro. Abram has been elected to this position). The ceremony of installation was most impressively performed by Bro. F. B. Quinton, P.P.G.A. D.C., from Norwich, while the duties of D.C. were very efficiently rendered by Bro. Lord, P.P.G.S. of W. The W.M. chose the following brethren as his officers for the year ensuing:—I.P.M., Bro. E. H. Smith; S.W., Bro. J. Whear; J.W., Bro. F. Beck; S.D. Bro. W. H. Doughty; J.D., Bro. W. Fiske; I.G., Bro. A. Massingham; Steward, Bro. Tench; Secretary, Bro. L. E. Hatfield; Treasurer, Bro. W. T. Gidney; Tyler, Bro. W. Mayes. The brethren afterwards sat down to an elegant banquet provided by Host Bro. Minn, which we need scarcely say was of a character to sustain that worthy's reputation as a caterer; a meed of thanks is also due to Bro. McLaren for his generous supply of choice plants and flowers with which the table and room were embellished. The cloth having been removed, the Worshipful Master gave in succession, "The Queen and the Craft," "The G.M. of England (Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales)," "Earl Carnarvon, Pro G.M.," and "Lord Skelmersdale, D.P.G.M. of England," which were duly honoured. P.M. Edward Barwell followed with "Lord Suffield, the G.M. of Norfolk"—a good man and a good Mason. Bro. Lord directed the customary "fire" suitable to each toast, the W.M.'s health being greeted with musical honours in addition. Bro. E. H. Smith (in the vice-chair) proposed the D. Prov. G.M., Major Penrice, and officers of the Province. Bro. Lord responded for the past and Bro. Smith for the present officers. Secretary Hatfield next gave their "fourth-time Master," which of course met with uproarious applause; and in reply Bro. Abram enunciated some laudable Masonic sentiments, pointing out the necessity of younger brethren becoming aspiring Craftsmen, and how they might get to the top round of the ladder. He concluded by proposing the healths of Bros. Quinton and Lord, who had attended the annual gatherings of their lodge for so many years. They replied, and the W.M. gave "The Masonic Charities," showing from a case under their own eye the necessity of supporting those institutions. Acknowledged by Bro. Lord, a hard-working Steward of the province. Charity, one of the first tenets of Freemasonry, lost nothing at the hands of the speaker, nearly £4 being collected in the room on behalf of the homes and schools. "The I.P.M." met with a cordial reception, and Bro. Massingham said something appropriate for "The Lodge Officers." "The Visitors" brought up Bro. G. W. Page, P.G.S. (W.M. elect of Lodge Philanthropic, Lynn), and Bros. P. Soman and Spencer Stevens, of Norwich. Bro. Braun replied for departing and absent friends, and the Host for himself and spouse. Then Bro. Soman talked about the Press, and the ladies had a champion in Bro. Middleton. This brought the toast-list proper to a close—not that anything improper followed—far from it; but the W.M. having retired, his place was taken by Bro. Whear, who, through magisterial kindness, was enabled to keep the party together till midnight.

INSTRUCTION.

JORDAN LODGE (No. 201).—This lodge held its meeting on Wednesday, the 30th ult., at the Devonshire Arms, Devonshire-street, Portland-place. Bro. Goodwin, W.M. elect of the Westbourne Lodge, 733, in the chair, Bro. Long, S.W.; Franks, J.W.; Hiscox, S.D. and Treasurer; Hole, I.G.; and others. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the ceremony of passing was then rehearsed. Bro. Hole, candidate. Lodge resumed to First Degree, proposed by the W.M. "That the ceremony of Installation be worked on Wednesday evening, the 20th of Feb."—carried unanimously. A vote of thanks was proposed and seconded to the W.M. for the very able manner in which he had performed his duties in the chair, proposed by Bro. Hiscox. "That the S.W. be elected W.M. for the ensuing week." Carried unanimously. The lodge was closed in due form, and in perfect harmony.

EARLOF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—A meeting of this lodge of instruction was held at the Mitre Hotel, Goulborne-road, Notting-hill, on Friday, the 1st February. Bros. Penn, W.M.; Adkitts, S.W.; Smout, sen., J.W.; Spiegel, S.D.; Gable, J.D.; Woodmason, I.G.; Bro. Savage, P.M. Preceptor; Newland, Tettenboon, H. Dehane, Hatton, Oldrey, Chalford, 1425; and others. The First and Second Degrees was rehearsed, Bro. Oldrey being the candidate for initiation and Bro. Hatton for passing. Bro. Oldrey was elected a member of this Lodge of Instruction. Bro. Savage, P.M. Preceptor, begged of the brethren to be a little more punctual in their attendance, he is always at his post at half past seven o'clock, and regrets to say he has sometimes to wait half an hour to open the lodge. The brethren present pledged themselves, that the worthy Preceptor shall have no further complaints to make in this respect, and they promised one and all to be here in good time. Bro. Adkitts was elected W.M. for the next week.

KENDAL.—Kendal Castle Chapter (No. 129).—The annual convocation of this chapter was held on Thursday, Jan. 31st, at the Masonic Hall, Stramontgate. In the absence of the M.E.Z., E. Comp. John Bowes, P.Z., Prov. G. S. N., took the chair and assisted by E. Comps. Joseph Bintley, H.; John Talbot, J.; Titus Wilson, P.Z.; and W. B. Gibson, P.Z.; Prov. G.J.; opened the chapter, after which the companions were admitted, and amongst them we noticed Comps. John Holme, M.E.Z.; R. J. Nelson, Robt. Godfrey, Geo. J. McKay, J. Bell, T. Baron, J. Gooding, W. Tattersal, J. Banks, D. Cleary, and others. The minutes of the last convocation having been read and confirmed, E. Comp. Bowes was asked to instal the Principals for the ensuing year, viz., Joseph Bintley, Z.; John Talbot, H.; and George J. McKay, J. The other officers invested were Comps. Robt. Godfrey, S.E.; J. Bell, S.N.; John Banks, P.S.; who nominated Comps. Baron and Gooding his assistants, and Dan. Cleary, Janitor. The Installing Principal then proclaimed the new Principals and after they had been greeted and saluted he closed the ceremony with the benediction. A hearty vote of thanks was ordered to be placed on the minutes to E. Comp. Bowes for his services that day. A committee was nominated to frame bye-laws for the governance of the chapter, and four brethren were proposed as candidates for exaltation. There being no further business the chapter was closed and the companions joined their brethren of the Union Lodge at the banquet table.

Mark Masoury.

LANCASTER.—Moore Lodge (No. 146).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 28th ult., at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum. There were present Bros. F. Dean, Prov. G.J.O., W.M.; Dr. J. Daniel Moore, G.J.O. of England, as I.P.M.; Wm. Hall, S.W.; W. J. Sly, Prov. G.D., as J.W.; Edward Simpson, P.M., P.P.G.R. of M., Sec.; H. Longman, M.O., J. Stanley, S.O.; Crookell, J.O., and others. After the usual lodge business had been transacted, and the accounts audited and passed, the election took place for W.M. for the ensuing year, which resulted in the unanimous choice of Bro. Wm. Hall, S.W., to that important office, and Bro. W. J. Sly was elected Treas. The installation will take place on Monday, 25th March, on which occasion the founder of the lodge, Bro. Dr. Moore, will officiate as Installing Officer. Some instruction was given and other business transacted, after which the lodge was closed in due form.

Knights Templar.

NEWPORT.—Gwent Preceptory.—A meeting of this Preceptory was held at the Masonic Hall, Dock-street, on Tuesday, 20th January, when the Preceptory was opened by Sir Knt. W. Williams, as E.P.; and the following were present: Sir Knt. Captain L. Geo. Homfray, P.E.P.; W. Lawson, P.E.P.; Captain Haldane, M.; W. Watkins, Registrar; H. Howell, N. Wells, W. Pickford, and others. Bro. J. L. Hunter Little was then installed as a Sir Knight; after which Sir Knight W. Pickford was installed as E.P. for the next twelve months. Both ceremonies were performed in a most impressive manner by Sir Knight W. Williams. The preceptory was then closed, and the Sir Knights adjourned to a banquet at the King's Head, presided over by Sir Knight W. Pickford.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

NEWPORT.—Ivor Hael Chapter.—A meeting of this chapter was held at the Masonic Hall, Dock-street, on Wednesday, 30th January, where in the absence of Bro. Chambers, M.W.S., the chapter was opened by Captain S. Geo. Homfray, 30°, and the following were present, Bros. W. Lawson, 31°; J. Chandler, 30°; L. A. Homfray, 31°; F. Binckes, 30°; Captain Haldane, 18°; W. Williams, 18°; W. Watkins 18°, and several others. The ballot was then taken for Bros. Julius and Philips, who were unanimously elected, and being in attendance were duly perfected. Bro. Captain E. V. Haldane, was then unanimously elected as M.W.S., to be installed in July. A vote of thanks was passed to Bros. Lawson, Chandler, and Binckes for their kindness in visiting the chapter, which was suitably acknowledged, and the chapter was closed.

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER.

The Quarterly Convocation of Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England was held on Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Hall. The chair of M.E.Z. was occupied by the Rev. C. J. Martyn; that of H. by Comp. Henry Murray. The other companions present were:—John Hervey, S.E.; Capt. N. G. Phillips, S.N.; Peter De L. Long, P.S.; Hickman, 1st A.S.; Snell, 2nd A.S.; Gray, Hyde Pullen, J. M. Case, James Glaisher, Col. J. Creaton, Dr. Woodman, Benj. J. Head, A. J. Duff, Filer, Robinson, Joseph Smith, H. G. Buss, Col. Somerville Burney, E. H. Thielley, A. A. Pendlebury, J. Lewis, Thomas, F. Adlard, John Boyd, W. Stephens, F. G. Baker, Col. Shadwell Clerke, W. H. Smallpeice, John Mason, H. Garrod, J. Diprose, H. Bartlett, N. Loveland Loveland, T. S. Knyvett, Herbert J. Adams, David Roberts, Major Williams, W. H. Postlaus, Frank Richardson, F. Letchworth, E. J. B. Bumstead, J. W. Halsey, E. Moody, W. F. Laxton, R. H. Groombridge, C. B. Payne, G.J., and H. Massey (Freemason).

Grand Chapter having been formally opened and the minutes of the last Quarterly Convocation read and confirmed, on the motion of Comp. Col. Creaton, seconded by Comp. Gray, the report of the Committee of General Purposes (as given in the Freemason on Saturday last) was taken as read, and ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

The petitions from companions for the following chapters, recommended by the Committee to be granted, were severally moved by Comp. Col. Creaton, seconded by Comp. Gray, and granted unanimously:—

1. Comps. James Manders as Z., Edward James Harty as H., John Henry Watts as J., and six others, for a chapter to be attached to the Eclectic Lodge, 1201, London, to be called the Eclectic Chapter, and to meet at Freemasons' Hall, London.

2nd. From Comps. the Rev. Charles William Arnold as Z.; Thomas Cawley Eager as H.; Harry Will Charrington as J.; and nine others for a chapter to be attached to the Weyside Lodge, No. 1395, Woking, to be called the Weyside Chapter, and to meet at the Crown and Anchor Inn, Woking, in the county of Surrey.

3rd. From Comps. Richard Thomas Elsam as Z.; Francis Buckland as H.; Richard Cartwright as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Dobie Lodge, No. 889, Kingston-on-Thames, to be called the Dobie Chapter, and to meet at the Griffin Hotel, Kingston-on-Thames, in the county of Surrey.

4th. From Comps. Joseph Christopher Lambert as Z.; Richard Dowling as H.; Thomas Charles Storer as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the St. Helena Lodge, No. 488, St. Helena, to be called "The St. John's Chapter," and to meet at James Town, in the Island of St. Helena.

5th. From Comps. Joseph Copeland Gillman as Z.; Edwin Banks Harding as H.; Henry Parker Jones as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Trafford Lodge, No. 1496, Moss Side, to be called the Trafford Chapter, and to meet at the Alexandra Hotel, Moss Side, in the Western Division of the County of Lancaster.

6th. From Comps. James Glaisher as Z.; Ernest Emil Wendt as H.; George Brooke as J.; and six others for a chapter to be attached to the St. Mary's Lodge, No. 63, London, to be called the St. Mary's Chapter, and to meet at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, in the Parish of Ealing, in the County of Middlesex.

Col. Creaton then rose and said that the next matter before the Grand Chapter was the recommendation from the Committee of General Purposes, a recommendation which he thought would commend itself to Grand Chapter. Therefore he should simply move, that the following grants be made to each of the Masonic Charities, and be transferred to their respective trustees, viz:—
The Royal Masonic Institution for Girls ... £ 500 Consols
The Royal Masonic Institution for Boys ... 500 "
The Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution,
Male Fund ... 500 "
Do. ... Female Fund ... 500 "

He would move "that the recommendation of the Committee be adopted, and that these sums be granted."

Comp. Joseph Smith, said he rose with a very great deal of pleasure to second this proposition. It was carried unanimously at the Committee of Grand Chapter, and he hoped it would be carried unanimously by this Grand Chapter. He thought this was the way to lay out the money of Grand Chapter when they had any to spare. They had it to spare now, or it would not have been recommended to be so disposed of. He did not know any better use it could be put to than devoted to the purposes of these charities. It was the best way of supporting the charities of the Order when there were funds to spare. It was far better than sending lists round to young Masons as Stewards did when they wanted to make large lists for the charities they represented. When Grand Chapter or Grand Lodge gave away their money to the Boys' School, the Girls' School, the aged Masons and the widows, a lasting good was done to the Craft. He could not think of asking Grand Chapter to reduce the amount, for that was a very unpopular course. He did not expect any opposition to the motion, which he now most gladly seconded.

Comp. J. March Case said that fully concurring with Comp. Creaton who proposed the vote, he would venture to enquire whether it was considered more desirable to have the money transferred to the trustees of the Institutions than to have it handed over to the charities to be used in the way most convenient to them. If it was transferred to the trustees' names in the Bank of England each of the Institutions would benefit by its £500 only to the extent of £15 a year; whereas if the money was handed over direct to the Institutions they could appropriate to their use as much of the sum as they saw fit at any time. If it was invested in the names of trustees the good it would do would be limited in its operation. The several charities had recently incurred very heavy expenditure; they had largely increased the number of recipients of the several funds; and it occurred to him as not unlikely that if the money was handed over to the charities they could use it at discretion. He wished to know whether the question had been considered by the Committee, and whether they had after consideration of this point come to the conclusion that the course they now proposed was the more desirable of the two.

Col. Creaton in reply said that the matter was fully considered by the Committee, and it was thought more desirable to transfer the money to the several funds in the names of their respective trustees. He must, however, remind Comp. Case that it was always competent for the Quarterly Courts and General meetings of the Institution to withdraw the money from investment if they found it necessary to do so.

Comp. Joseph Smith observed that this fully answered the question of Comp. Case.

The Rev. C. J. Martyn said the money was transferred to Trustees for greater safety.

Col. Creaton said it was the most simple way of doing it.

Comp. Joseph Smith added that when the money once got into hands of the Trustees they might spend it the next year if they thought fit.

The motion having been read from the chair.

Comp. J. March Case asked whether it would not be better to pass each grant separately.

Comp. John Boyd said no, the money had been proposed to be given in a lump.

The Rev. C. J. Martyn hoped and trusted that this grant would be passed, and he would now put it for confirmation.

The motion was then put and carried nem. con. amidst much cheering.

The Rev. C. J. Martyn thought he might, perhaps, be allowed to say one word of very great congratulation to the companions upon this munificent grant, which had just been passed. To him, personally, occupying, most unworthily, as he did, the first chair in Grand Chapter that evening, it was a matter of most sincere congratulation and unfeigned delight that this recommendation had been passed. As Trustee for one of the charities, the Benevolent Institution, he begged to thank Grand Chapter, and he also begged to thank the companions in the name of the other charities, all of whom are most deeply grateful to Grand Chapter for the very liberal and handsome grants just made. He not only could say it was most thankfully received; but he was quite sure it would be faithfully applied. (Hear, hear.)

Grand Chapter was then closed with the customary formalities, and the companions separated.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held on Monday last in the Freemasons' Hall—the Most Worshipful the Grand Master Mason, Sir Michael R. Shaw Stewart, on the throne. Bro. F. A. Barrow, was in his place as Senior Grand Warden, and Bro. R. F. Shaw Stewart, Senior Grand Deacon, acted as Junior Grand Warden. There was a large attendance of the brethren; and amongst those present were Bros. Henry Inglis of Torsonce, Depute Grand Master; Col. Montgomerie Neilson, Provincial Grand Master of Glasgow; Lauderdale Maitland, P.G.M. of Dumfries; John C. Forrest, P.G.M. of Lanark; D. Murray Lyon, Grand Secretary; David Kinnear, Grand Cashier; the Rev. Dr. Gray, Grand Chaplain; William Hay, Grand Architect; Alexander Hay, Grand Jeweller; Thomas Halket, Grand Bible Bearer; Captain Hills, Grand Marshal; Wm. Mann, Past Senior Grand Warden; and W. H. Bickerton, Provincial Grand Secretary, Glasgow. The following representatives from foreign Grand Lodges were present:—Bros. F. S. Melville, President of the Board of Grand Stewards and representative of the Grand Lodge of Hungary; Wm. Officer, representative of Egypt and Pennsylvania; Dr. Loth, representative of the Grand Orient; Daniel Robertson, representative of South Carolina; Wm. Barton, representative of Tennessee; A. Thomson, representative of Illinois; John Baird, representative of Cuba; and R. S. Brown, representative of Kentucky. Apologies for absence were intimated from Bros. the Rev. A. Thomson Grant, Grand Chaplain, and Captain G. F. S. Colt of Gartsheirie, Grand Sword Bearer.

Reference was made in appropriate terms by the Deputy Grand Master to the death, in December last, of Bro. James Ballantyne, who had held the office of Grand Bard since 1861, and on the 7th ult. of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Kinnaird, who was Grand Master Mason in 1830-31, and at his death was Provincial Grand Master of Perthshire East, which post he had filled for the period of fifty years. The following resolutions, which had been prepared by Grand Committee, were then adopted, and the Grand Secretary was instructed to communicate their terms to the relatives of the deceased brothers:—(1) That the Committee desire to express their unfeigned regret at the grievous loss sustained by the Scottish Craft in the demise of their Grand Bard, Bro. James Ballantyne—a loss shared in by the Scottish nation. He was enshrined in the hearts of both; for to genius of a high order he united qualities which are not always, or even often, combined with it. His life was pure—his sympathies with all that was virtuous and good were unbounded—his affections towards all humanity had the true ring of Christian and Masonic charity and love; and he died, as he had lived, distinguished by the admiration and attachment of his fellow-men. (2) That the Committee have also to mourn the death of one of their Past Grand Masters—Bro. Lord

Kinnaird—a nobleman who added to his exalted rank that attribute so valued and appreciated by Freemasons—a life-long and unvaried devotion to their Order."

The minutes of Grand Committee brought up the question of the recent change in the constitution of the Grand Orient of France, whereby a profession of belief in God and the immortality of the soul is not now essential to admission as Freemasons in that body; and stated that Grand Secretary had intimated to the Grand Orient that should it be the case that such a radical change in the fundamental principles of ancient Freemasonry had indeed been confirmed by that body, Grand Committee would be under the necessity of recommending to Grand Lodge to sever the fraternal relations that have for so long a period subsisted between it and the Grand Orient of France. In connection with this subject, the Depute Grand Master had called attention to the letter, which, as he thought, had been very properly addressed by Grand Secretary to the editor of the Courant, pointing out that, instead of requiring to be urged by a subordinate lodge to its duty in regard to the obliteration of religion from French Freemasonry, Grand Lodge, as represented by the Grand Master and Grand Committee, had, some weeks previous to the resolution of Mother Kilwinning on the subject, communicated with the Grand Orient; and Grand Secretary had been thanked for his letter, and instructed to put on record that it was beyond the province of Mother Kilwinning or any lodge holding of Grand Lodge to communicate direct with any foreign Grand Lodge on the subject of Freemasonry. A reply was submitted from the Grand Orient expressing great astonishment at the proposal for the rupture of fraternal relations, and remarking that there seemed to be a belief that the Grand Orient, in modifying the first article of the French Masonic constitution, wished to profess atheism and materialism; but holding that this was an erroneous interpretation of the vote—an interpretation which there had already been occasion to protest against—and declaring without hesitation that nothing was more contrary to the feelings which dictated the revision of the article of the constitution. In concluding, the letter from the Grand Orient expressed the hope that the considerations set forth therein would be weighed by Grand Lodge, which counted among its members so many distinguished men, that when better informed on the question now occupying its attention it would refuse to take part in an act of intolerance which would be at complete variance with the real sentiments of the Masonic brotherhood, and that the fraternal relations now existing between Grand Lodge and Grand Orient would be continued. Grand Committee had expressed an opinion that the reply of the Grand Orient was not satisfactory, and this was confirmed by Grand Lodge.

Grand Lodge then proceeded to the election of the Grand Committee, the whole of the members of that body retiring on this occasion, in accordance with a new law of Grand Lodge. There were fifty-seven nominations for the thirty-six seats, and after a considerable amount of dividing the following were elected:—Bros. R. F. Shaw Stewart and Hugh Munro, Edinburgh; Alexandra Kelt, Dundee; William Mann, Edinburgh; John Baird, Glasgow; Dr. Carmichael, H. F. Gordon, William Hay, R. S. Brown, and Alexander Hay, Edinburgh; F. A. Barrow, Glasgow; George McLean, James Turner, F. S. Melville, and W. Officer, Edinburgh; William Barry, Leith; John Beveridge, John Davidson, Dr. Middleton, William Barton, William Niven, Charles L. Ramsden, W. J. C. Abbott, and G. H. Thoms, Edinburgh; W. H. Bickerton, Glasgow; Adam Thomson, Galashiels; A. N. Clarke, Edinburgh; Z. H. Heys, John Morgan, James Thomson, and Robert Nisbit, Glasgow; Peter Sinclair and Albert Apthorpe, Edinburgh; Farquhar MacGillivray, Lanark; J. B. MacNaught, Glasgow; W. MacDonald, Dundee.

Grand Secretary was instructed to issue charters in favour of the following new lodges:—"Ben Ledi," Callander, Perthshire (No. 614); "St. Andrew," Guenabeyan, New South Wales (No. 615); "St. John," Coquimbó, Chili (No. 616); and "Sir George Cathcart," Cathcart (No. 617). It was agreed to renege Lodge "St. John, Operative," Forres, under its old number, 37, it having been dormant since 1869.

Bros. Henry Knight, of Maurer, Joseph E. Salloch, and C. W. Johnston were appointed representatives of Grand Lodge to the Grand Lodges of St. John's of Hungary, the Island of Cuba, and Kentucky respectively.

Some statements were submitted as to the finances, and were extremely satisfactory. The income for the quarter ending 21st December last had exceeded the expenditure by upwards of £940.

After disposing of some other business, Grand Lodge was then closed in ample form.

Public Amusements.

AQUARIUM THEATRE.—One of the most successful pantomimes of the season is undoubtedly "A Frog he would a wooing go," the last nights of which is now announced. There is little to add to our previous notice beyond the fact that, within the last three weeks two new and very charming songs have been introduced, entitled "Gentle Zephyrs," and "The Fairy Dell," written by Mr. J. A. Cave. Both are exceedingly pretty songs, and "Gentle Zephyrs," as now rendered by Miss Ward especially so. We must again make mention of Mr. Fawn, who as "the Queen" in the Pantomime is the very life and soul of the piece, to hear him sing "Oh I can't forget the days when I was young," is something to remember. In the building itself the entertainment is as varied and amusing as ever, and is evidently a source of much gratification to the large audiences daily assembled within the spacious and comfortable edifice.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO DORSET.

The Prince and Princess of Wales left Dorsetshire for town on Saturday afternoon last after spending a week with Lord and Lady Allington at Crichel-house. They were accompanied to the Wimborne Railway Station by their host and hostess, and on their carriage passing through the village of Stanbridge the Princess was presented by Miss Glyn, the youthful daughter of Captain Glyn, with a bouquet. The Blandford and Wimborne troops of the Queen's Own Yeomanry Cavalry Regiment escorted the Royal party from the park to the station, where a special train with three saloon carriages was in readiness at 2.45. An address from the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorsetshire Freemasons was presented to the Prince on the platform by a deputation, headed by the Grand Master of the Province, Bro. Montague Guest. His Royal Highness promised to forward a reply. The train then moved on, amid immense cheering from the assembled crowd.

The loyal excitement, sure to prevail under ordinary circumstances, was heightened by the fact that the Freemasons of the Province of Dorset intended to present an address at the station to the Prince on his arrival there. The Wimborne station was crowded, and not a few persons were effervescing with loyalty. Part of the up platform was covered with crimson cloth, matting being laid on the steps and the pavement leading to the carriage way. Gay flags were displayed in profusion. On the Royal party reaching the station the cavalry drew up in the Square, and the Prince and Princess were accompanied by their host and hostess and Lord and Lady Bradford to the train, which was a special, comprising three very elegant saloon carriages for the accommodation of the august passengers. The train, which had been in readiness for some time, was in charge of Supt. Verrinder and Inspectors Hill and Grey, while George Lasham was the driver. As soon as the Royal travellers had ascended the platform a deputation from the Freemasons were seen to be ready with the address. This was beautifully illuminated and engrossed on vellum, being in the following terms:—

"To His Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, our Most Worshipful Grand Master.

"May it please your Royal Highness, our Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Masters, Officers, and brethren of the Provincial Lodge of Freemasons rejoice in having an opportunity of approaching your Royal Highness, our Most Worshipful Grand Master, and tendering our heartfelt congratulations and thankfulness for the distinguished honour your Royal Highness has conferred upon this province and county in coming amongst us. We avail ourselves of this auspicious occasion of tendering our thanks to your Royal Highness for condescending to become Grand Master of our ancient Order, and the aid and encouragement thereby given to it; as also the acts of kindness received by us as Masons at your hands! we, in common with every other Masonic brother, feel the deepest gratitude towards you. We also do assure your Royal Highness of our sincere devotion and attachment to the Throne of Her Most Gracious Majesty, and we pray that the Great Architect of the Universe may always watch over and protect the Queen, your Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales, and the members of the Royal Family, and that we and all Her Majesty's subjects may long enjoy the interest your Royal Highness ever takes in all institutions having for their object the welfare of Her Majesty's loving people, and the prosperity of our Order. Thanking your Royal Highness for your additional kindness in permitting us to present you, as our Most Worshipful Grand Master, with this our loyal and loving address, we remain

"Montague Guest, Provincial Grand Master of Dorset,

"J. P. F. Gundry, Deputy Grand Master,

"R. N. Howard, Grand Secretary,

On behalf of themselves and their officers and brethren of the Provincial Lodge of Freemasons of Dorset. Dated the 2nd day of February, 1878.

The Masonic deputation, for whose accommodation at the station a convenient space had been railed off, comprised Bros. Montague J. Guest, P.G.M.; J. P. F. Gundry, D.G.M.; C. W. Wyndham, P.G. Senior Warden; E. G. Legg, P.G. Junior Warden; the Rev. E. J. L. B. Henslowe, P.G. Chaplain; Robert Case, P.G. Treasurer; C. T. Robens, P.G. Registrar; and R. N. Howard, P.G. Secretary. There were also present on the platform Bro. J. W. Luff, P.P.G. Superintendent of Works, and others. The ceremony of presenting the address was necessarily brief. The Provincial Grand Master, approaching H.R.H., handed to him the address, which the Prince most graciously received, and which was taken as read, H.R.H. remarking he would send his reply. Bro. Montague Guest then introduced the other members of the deputation to the Prince, and after this the Princess shook hands with the P.G.M. We cannot but congratulate the Province of Dorset upon having so distinguished a P.G.M. on this occasion as Bro. Montague Guest, whose appointment by H.R.H. to that office proves that he is the right man in the right place. In accordance with the wish of H.R.H. the deputation to present the address was limited to eight members of the Prov. G. Lodge only; hence the deputation consisted of the Prov. G.M., the Dep. P.G.M., and the six officers holding rank next in order. Had it been convenient to H.R.H., there were very many influential and worthy brethren belonging to the Province who would have attended to testify their Masonic loyalty to their Grand Master, and we believe it was a source of regret to many very worthy brethren that the force of circumstances prevented their doing so.

A meeting of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Hampshire was held on Friday week, a report of which will be given next week.

Masonic and General Tidings.

As the paragraph in the report of the General Committee of the Girls' School, at page 69 in our last, referring to Bro. Little may lead to some misapprehension, we give the resolution of the Committee, which was worded as follows:—"Resolved that this Committee hereby relieves Bro. Little the Secretary, from attendance at the office in consequence of ill-health, and authorises him to do as much of his official work as possible at home during the critical period of the winter."

At the recent meeting of the Grand Stewards of the year, the following were elected the officers of the Board:—Bros. Ralph Gooding, M.D., B.A., W.M. Grand Masters' Lodge, No. 1, President; Charles Martin, P.M. 23, Treasurer; and Thomas Adair Massey, P.M. 21, Secretary.

The Prince of Wales has been pleased to accept a copy of Captain Crawley's "Billiard Book," dedicated by permission to His Royal Highness, and to express to its author his high appreciation of the beauty and completeness of the work.

The brethren of the South Saxon Lodge, Lewes, have resolved to erect a tombstone to the memory of their late respected Bro. Captain Charles Scott Knight, for many years holding an important appointment under the South-coast Company at Newhaven Wharf. Bro. Knight also belonged to the Hull Lodge, and was widely known and generally esteemed. Brethren wishing to join in the memorial can send the same to Bro. T. R. White, Cliffe House, Lewes, the present W.M. of the South Saxon Lodge.

The ceremony of installation will be worked at the Constitutional Lodge of Instruction, Bedford Hotel, Southampton-buildings, on Tuesday, Feb. 12th, 1878, by Bro. A. J. Melbush, the W.M. of the mother lodge. The lodge will be opened at 7 p.m. precisely.

George Kenning, 108, Fleet street, London, publisher of the London Freemason, for the "Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar." This contains a roll of all British Masonic and most others on the globe. Of this country it gives the Grand Bodies, and their officers. It is very valuable.—Masonic Token, U.S.A.

Mr. A. D. Dawney, C.E., engineer for the works, writes with reference to the report of the proceedings at the Westminster Police-court on the 30th ult. as to Mr. Hankey's buildings:—"The sub-structure of the roofs, floors, and corridors throughout the building is entirely of fireproof material six inches thick, but covered with small wooden joists and ordinary floor boards. It was this covering in the corridors to which objection was taken and not to the fireproofing. The staircases are also constructed of incombustible material, and have no woodwork whatever in any part of them, and the communicating corridors between the south and west blocks are similarly constructed, and have floors finished without woodwork as a further precaution."

During his swim up the Tagus, Captain Boyton was compelled to stop twenty-four hours at the village of Puebla de Montauban, in order to repair his dress, which had become torn. He has been everywhere well received by the villagers. Captain Boyton will continue his voyage without his boat, which he has sent back to Madrid. The Captain arrived on Sunday at Talavera, having received a slight bruise, but started again on Monday.

We are informed that our late Bro. R. Woolfe, F.S.A., has bequeathed the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, of which he was Registrar, £1000 for charitable purposes.

A copy of the London Freemason strayed off to Portland, Oregon, Maine having been omitted, but our kind Bro. Earheart, the Grand Secretary, sent it on to us. Will Bro. Kenning add Maine to our address.—The foregoing we noticed in the Masonic Token of Jan. 15th. We take this means of assuring our able confrere that his wish has received our immediate attention.

Bro. Archibald Forbes, one of the special correspondents of the Daily News, delivered his lecture on the Russo-Turkish War, at the Portland Hall, Southsea, on Monday last. There was a large audience, among whom were many military and naval officers. The lecturer was listened to throughout with great attention, and was frequently applauded.

"Debrett's Peerage, Baronage, and Knightage for 1878, the 16th year of issue, is announced for immediate publication. It has been amplified, improved, and remodelled by Robert H. Mair, LL.D.

Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales were present at a ball in honour of the Crown Prince of Austria at the German Embassy, Carlton House Terrace.

TURKISH COMPASSIONATE FUND.—Wednesday's subscription list of this fund was headed by a noble donation of £1000, from Miss Ann Dixoin, of Holden Park, Lincolnshire, and included contributions of £50 and £25 from "K. E. C.," and the editor of the Yorkshire Post respectively.

About 120 of the pupils of the Girls' School witnessed the pantomime and other entertainments at the Crystal Palace yesterday (Friday), at the invitation of the directors, through Bro. Edward Cox, Vice-President of the Institution.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked in the Eleanor Lodge of Instruction, on Wednesday week, the 20th inst., at the Angel Hotel, Edmonton, at 7 p.m. precisely. Bro. J. Tanner is the Preceptor.

ROBERT BURNS LODGE (No. 25).—A report of the installation meeting of this lodge will be given in our next.

A ball will be given on the 14th inst., at the Freemasons' Tavern, by the Carnarvon and Mizpah Lodges. Bro. Nelson Reed, Sec.

Mr. H. Poole, mason to Westminster Abbey, with reference to Dean Stanley's lecture on the re-interment of the remains of the Queen of Henry V., sends to the Times the full text of the inscription placed on the new coffin plate:—"The former chest, which for 99 years had decayed in the Villiers vault in the Chapel of St. Nicholas, was removed thence, and this new chest, including the Royal remains, was with the sanction of Queen Victoria, placed here, in this Chantry of King Henry V., by Thomas Wright, clerk of the works at Westminster Abbey, in the presence of Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, D.D., Dean of Westminster, A.D. 1878."

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales is expected to visit Berlin during the present month in order to be present at the wedding of the Princess Charlotte, eldest daughter of the Crown Prince of Germany, with the Hereditary Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, and of the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia, with the Hereditary Grand Duke of Oldenburg.

Lord Carnarvon has been entertaining Mr. Froude, Mr. Potter, M.P., Mr. A. Trollope, Sir L. Mallet, and Lord Donoughmore, at his seat, Highclere Castle, near Newburn.

On Thursday week their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales attended the lawn meet of Lord Portman's hounds. Nearly 12,000 persons from all parts of Dorset were present; but the frost was so severe that the sport was considerably delayed. Shortly before the start the Mayor of Dorchester and the members of the Corporation assembled in the library of Lord Arlington's mansion, when an address of welcome was presented to the Prince. The Prince thanked the deputation, and said he would send his reply by post. The hounds, under the Hon. W. H. B. Portman, then trotted off, the Prince and Princess following the pack. The hardness of the ground marred the sport. 1,290 head of pheasants were bagged for 10 guns. The weather during the week has been very dry.

A young gentleman recently drove to the establishment of a well-known watchmaker, and purchased a gold hunter for £48. Unfortunately he had left a £50 note on his desk at home. Would Mr. So-and-so kindly send a man with him to his business house—naming an eminent firm of ironmongers? The man might keep the change for himself. Mr. So-and-so hummed and hawed, and found means to communicate with the cabman, who, however, told him he had taken up his fare at the ironmonger's establishment in question, and that the "gent" was going down to Pychley. Thereupon the man was sent. Arriving at the establishment, the young gentleman ushered the watchmaker's assistant into the shop, and told the shopman to "give him that 50-pounder." So saying, he jumped into the cab, and drove off. The clerk, who had politely bowed and gone off to fetch the cash, then returned with a brown paper parcel, which he suavely handed to the man. "What's this?" asked the astonished messenger, "this isn't fifty pound." "Excuse me," was the reply, "it is. It's the fifty-pound dumb-bell the gentleman bought about an hour ago." The watchmaker still cherishes that dumb-bell.—Mayfair.

At the usual weekly meeting of the Metropolitan Chapter of Instruction on Tuesday last, it was unanimously resolved to adjourn the convocation until Tuesday, the 19th inst., to give the members the opportunity of attending the important meeting of the Prudent Brethren Chapter (public night), at Freemasons' Hall on Tuesday next.

The Bayard Chapter, No. 1615, will be consecrated this day week, at 33, Golden Square. The Consecrating Officer will be Most Excellent Comp. Lord Skelmersdale, grand H. of England. The Principals Designate are Ex. Comp. Lieut. Col. H. G. Somerville Burney, P.M., 1615, P.Z., 784, M.E.Z.; Ex. Comp. Frank Richardson, 1615, P.Z., 8, H.; and Comp. Capt. R. P. Leeson, W.M., 1615, J. A full report of the proceedings will appear in the Freemason the following week.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint His Grace the Duke of Athole, K.T., to be Her Majesty's Lord Lieutenant for the county of Perth, in the room of the late Lord Kinnaird.

"OUIDA'S" PLEA FOR THE DOGS.—A recent number of "The Whitehall Review" contained an article entitled "Dogs: a Plea on their behalf," by "Ouida." In language at once striking, bold, and picturesque, the brilliant Novelist makes a touching appeal for "a little justice in this world to my dear comrades—the Dogs; and at the close of a long and cogent argument, fortified by facts and enlivened by illustration, expresses her belief, founded upon considerable experience, "that the much-talked of rabies would never be known if dogs were rationally treated and free to be happy in their own natural way" "Ouida's" most able article has already had the advantage of the very large and influential circulation given to it by "The Whitehall Review;" but it is desired to give the celebrated Novelist's Sketch the widest possible publicity, in the single hope that all who read it will strive to ameliorate the condition and mitigate the sufferings "of the animal that has often been called by great men in the solitude of greatness—their one true friend." With this object in view, the article on "Dogs" has been reprinted from "The Whitehall Review" for gratuitous circulation, and will, we are informed, be sent by the Publisher of "The Whitehall Review" to all applicants on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.

Reports of the following lodges unavoidably stand over:—52, 107, 807, 966, 1076, 1472, and 1636.

THE "CLEOPATRA NEEDLE IN LONDON.

The voyage of the "Cleopatra" from Ferrol was of an uneventful character, that there is scarcely anything to record concerning it. She started at seven a.m. Sunday, the 16th inst., in tow of the "Anglia," with short lengths of hawser, and was found to steer very badly, defect which was to some extent remedied by lengthening the tow-ropes to about a hundred fathoms. The weather was beautiful during the whole voyage, the wind being very light and the sea smooth, with a bright moon all night. Communication was kept up between the vessels by means of signals, a black board being used by day and different coloured lights by night. On Sunday, the 20th inst., at ten p.m., the "Anglia" came to anchor off the Chapman Light, near Southwark, with the "Cleopatra" hanging astern by the tow-ropes. Next morning about seven the vessels were again in motion, and at ten o'clock had reached Gravesend, where they stopped two hours, and were visited by the Customs Officers, and where also Mr. and Mrs. Dixon went on board, and a congratulatory telegram was received from the Queen. The "Cleopatra" was then towed further up the river, and by four p.m. the "Needle" was snugly berthed in the West India Export Dock.

The "Anglia" tug is a paddle-boat, with three funnels, with engines of 140-horse power, nominal, but capable of working up to 700. She is the largest tug in the Port of London, and has done a great deal of ocean towing. Her navigating captain is Mr. John Tracey, and her towing captain Mr. David Glue, and she has a crew of seven men. The cable used at sea was a fifteen-inch hawser, but a much smaller one was substituted on reaching the river, when the length was also reduced to about fifteen fathoms.

The "Cleopatra" is built in the form of a cylinder, sharpened at each end, and is about 95 ft. in length by 16 in diameter. Upon her convex deck, about the centre of her length, is erected a structure which contains two small cabins, one for her commander, Captain Henry Carter, and the other for her crew, which consisted of five men. As soon as arrangements have been made with the Thames Conservancy Board, the "Cleopatra" will be brought up the river, and moored either alongside the Thames Embankment, or at some other convenient place, where she will for some time remain for public inspection; it being intended to remove some of her upper plates to facilitate the examination of the interior of the vessel, and exhibit the peculiar method in which her singular and valuable cargo is packed.

The vexed question of the most appropriate site for the erection of the Obelisk is, we believe, still unsettled, but whatever spot may ultimately be determined upon, it is to be feared that the damp smoke-laden atmosphere of our metropolis will soon have a very damaging effect upon the stone, which is a more favourable climate has lasted so long. The Pall Mall Gazette states, on the authority of a certain German doctor, that the Luxor Obelisk has suffered greater deterioration during the last thirty-six years by exposure to the atmosphere of Paris, than it did in the pure atmosphere of Egypt during the same number of centuries.

Bro. Professor Erasmus Wilson's striking and original act of public spirit, was first made known in the Times without his name. But the nation's anonymous benefactor could not be long hid, and what he forbade should be whispered in the ear has long been published on the house-tops. Till lately the eminent surgeon was, perhaps, better known to scientific men, especially of his own profession, than—but for such deeds of splendid charity as his saving the Medical College at Epsom from threatened financial collapse, by handing its treasurer a cheque for £18,500—he was to the world at large. Professor Wilson is of about the same age as Mr. Gladstone, having been born in 1809. His father was the late William Wilson, surgeon in the Royal Navy, of which hereditary connection with the United Services he speaks with patriotic pride as having greatly interested him in the proposed transfer of Cleopatra's Needle to London. In 1869 he founded the Chair and Museum of Dermatology in the Royal College of Surgeons, and, having been freely elected the first Professor, was made a Member of the Council of that body in the following year. Dermatology is the science of the skin in health and disease; it is a branch of surgery which he may almost be said to have created by his many learned and splendidly illustrated monographs on the subject.

The Professor, in what he himself styles "Wilson's Narrative," tells us follows the story of his own share in the Obelisk enterprise, and how he and Bro. John Dixon, C.E., were first brought face to face:—"In the autumn of 1876 I received a note from Sir James Alexander on professional matters, in which he referred to Cleopatra's Needle, which he was then busy in drawing attention to. As a seilor's son I took an interest in the matter; and on my return to London, having had a visit from Sir James, I was informed that a site for the Obelisk had been awarded by the Metropolitan Board of Works, on Sir James's solicitation; and that Mr. John Dixon, an engineer, had contemplated the means of effecting the object. A few days afterwards (we were then in November) I called upon Mr. Dixon, whom I had never seen before, nor heard of, save through Sir James Alexander. Sir James Alexander had left him a few minutes before I entered. I soon found that Mr. Dixon was a Freemason, hence all formality and ceremony was at once banished. He told me that he had long contemplated bringing the Obelisk to England, and hoped some day to do it himself, when he should be rich enough; he said that he and Mr. Fowler had talked over bringing it, but that political reasons had left the matter in abeyance. He then said, 'I should enclose the monolith in boiler plate, and roll it into the sea; I would then steady the cylinder by means of bilge plates, ballast it, fix a rudder, fix a cabin and spar deck, and then tow her to England.' He said he thought it might be done for £5,000, but he would enter into a contract to do it for £7,000. Some further conversation took place, and Mr. Dixon was so confident of his success, that we said this: The undertaking is not an easy one; there may be unexpected difficulties; we must succeed; you say you can do it for £7,000; will you undertake to set it up safely on the banks of the Thames for £10,000? No cure no pay.' 'Willingly,' was his answer, and we parted for the second time. 'Mr. Dixon, I have one more favour to ask of you, which is to give an interview to my friend, H. P. Stephenson, who is a civil engineer, and will influence us with his opinion; also a Freemason.' The following week we four met at the solicitor's office in Bedford Row, and agreed to the terms of a contract. Our next meeting was to sign that contract, in January. Mr. Dixon then went to work in earnest, the cylinder was built on the Thames banks, and sent out in pieces."

We are indebted for this interesting sketch to our admirable contemporary the Graphic.

"Points for Reference," &c. By Bro. JADU. WYMAN and Sons, 81, Great Queen-street, W.C.

We have received this little work, convenient alike for reference and the pocket, and we are glad to call attention to it. It is, for those who need it, a very useful aid as a "Masonic technique," and the "cue" judiciously employed and seasonably remembered, may restore the "lost links" of the oral ritual. We are not on the whole favourable to this "genre" of Masonic publications, but probably fewer objections can be made to "Points for Reference," than to any other similar publication. Practically we hardly know of any other work exactly analogous, and certainly not in its unostentatious and unpretending form. We, therefore with pleasure, mention to our many readers its special existence, its admitted correctness, and its intelligent utility as an "aide memoire," as the French have it, and while we make these remarks sincerely we must not be supposed to assent in any degree to the question of ritual publications. Of its undoubted evil we are fully assured, and as Freemasons feel strongly that it is distinctly opposed to the best interests and good work of Freemasonry. But we do not consider that this little work comes under that category, and regard it as intended to be of help to many of our brotherhood.

"The Liberal Freemason," Edited by Bro. ALFRED CHAPMAN, Boston, U.S.A.

We are glad to be permitted to call attention to this very well edited and admirably printed Magazine. We always find it to be original and worth reading.

"Night and Day;" Edited by Dr. BARNARDO.

This serial deals with a most interesting subject per se, the "Wild Boys" and the "Wild Girls" of London. It is often to us, as we fancy it is to all, a very sad fact to realize that amidst our wealth, our greatness, our civilization, there are "plague spots," in all large aggregations of our fellow creatures, which weaken and disgrace humanity, which serve to introduce disease, decay, and not infrequently despair, into the common course of what ought to be well ordered social existence. It boots not here to go into the recalcitrant causes of this untoward state of things; it is idle, it appears to us, to blame any one section for neglect or oblivion of their fellow mortals, when all are probably more or less equally to blame. But the sensible, the safe, the proper course, is to endeavour to rectify evils whose existence is admitted, to go to the root of matters, remembering that prevention is better than cure, the healing effort, than punitive sternness. Dr. Barnardo's seems to be a practical work, appealing to the sympathies and good will of all. He seeks the sufferers in noxious abodes of vice and squalor; he looks for the "wild animals" in their dens, which abound where such classes do "most congregate," even in this mighty London of ours, and he offers a home to the young of both sexes, friendly advice and help to others. Such a work as this is alas imperatively needed, and deserves to be commended and supported. Indeed, we wish to say this:—If the great black cloud of pauperism which now hangs over the history of our people is to be lessened and removed, if we are successfully to cope with those special forms of suffering which seem to be the product of civilization itself, we must break down those hedges which red tape and conventionality have erected around us, and throw ourselves into the good work, with earnestness, sympathy and sincerity. Talking is very fine, but working is far better. One of the most serious problems of the day is how to deal with that curse of degraded pauperism, which like a gangrened wound is spreading and is dangerous, because it undermines the great fabric of social security, because it shows,

"Of all the ills which human hearts endure,

How few there are which human laws can cure," if we may thus slightly alter these well-known lines. We want the emotion of genuine religious philanthropy to direct the head and heart of true charity, and until true charity comes to the rescue, in vain are Consolidated Orders or Boards of Guardians, in vain are Relieving Officers and the Workhouse Test, in vain Charity Organization Societies and official red tape, in vain the panacea of reform, in vain the hopes of economists. We must supplement the treatment of casual and permanent poverty by true-hearted religious sympathy. Instead of sending old couples to the workhouse, we must have parochial or denominational asylums for the aged, the decrepid, and the incurable. We must put an end to workhouse schools, the true foundation of a large amount of vicious views on the subject, and throw the children into Board Schools, National Schools, Orphan Schools, any where but workhouse schools. Such a subject is worth all the political disputes of the hour, and demands alike the consideration and study of the philanthropist, the patriot, and the statesman.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

On Wednesday a deputation from the Gaelic Society had an interview with the Duke of Richmond and Gordon at the Privy Council Office, Whitehall, to ask that a grant of money might be made for teaching the Gaelic language in Scotch schools. The deputation consisted of the Rev. Dr. M'Lauchlan (Edinburgh), the Rev. Alexander M'Kenzie, M.A. (Edinburgh), the Rev. J. Calder Macphail (Edinburgh), Mr. Hugh M. Matheson (London), Vice-President of the Gaelic School Society, and Mr. A. Macnicoll, Treasurer of the London Auxiliary to the Highland Schools. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon, in reply, said that the Estimates had been already given in for this year, and they did not include the grant now asked for. The Chancellor of the Exchequer was constantly complaining of the annual increase in the educational estimates. He reminded them that the teaching of Gaelic was not prohibited at present, and that School Boards were competent to authorize its teaching, although it was true that no grant from the Government funds could be made at present. It was matter of considerable doubt whether the intelligence of children in the Highlands would be enhanced by the teaching of the Gaelic tongue.

Mr. S. R. Van Campen has been asked by the Hon. B. A. Willis, of the Committee on Naval Affairs in the United States Congress, for a report on the Arctic expeditions abroad, and has complied with the request. Besides speaking particularly of the proposed expeditions of Holland and Sweden, Mr. Van Campen suggests to the Committee, as it has in charge the Bill now before Congress for an American expedition, proposed in accordance with Captain Howgate's scheme, the incorporation of a clause granting rewards upon a graduated scale to individual explorers of whatever nationality who may reach latitudes or make discoveries in Arctic territory beyond points hitherto attained.

Japan has an active archaeological society, bearing the title of Kobutsu-Kai (Society of Old Things). Its members, numbering 200, are scattered throughout the land, but meet once a month in Yeddo. They consist chiefly of wealthy Japanese gentlemen, learned men, and priests; the latter especially have been the means of bringing before public attention a vast number of ancient objects which have been hidden in the treasures of the temples or preserved in private families. H. von Siebold, Attaché of the Austrian Embassy at Yeddo and a member of the society, has lately published a brochure, which will serve as a guide for the systematic archaeological study of the land; Von Siebold has lately made a most interesting discovery of a prehistoric mound at Omuri, near Yeddo, containing over 5,000 different articles in stone, bronze, &c. In a recent communication to the Berlin Anthropologische Gesellschaft, he describes the origin of the terra-cotta images found in old Japanese burial grounds. It appears that up to the year 2 A.C. it was the custom to surround the grave of a dead emperor or empress with a number of their attendants, buried alive up to their necks, their heads forming a ghastly ring about the burial spot. At the date referred to, the custom was abolished, and the living offerings were replaced by the clay figures, which have hitherto attracted so much attention.—Nature.

The first Howard quinquennial prize, of the Institution of Civil Engineers, being that for the year 1877, has just been awarded to Mr. Henry Bessemer, member, as—in terms of the bequest—the inventor of new and valuable process relating to the uses and properties of iron.

COLOURS FROM COAL.—Professor Armstrong writes with reference to the short notice of his lecture on "Colours from Coal," in The Times of January 23:—"I am reported to have said that England is gradually falling further and further behind France and Germany as a colour-producing country, the reason being 'that our manufacturers do not attempt to employ the co-operation of skilled chemists.' The words used by me, I believe, were 'that English manufacturers do not sufficiently avail themselves and are not sufficiently aware of the importance of scientific aid.' Some few of our manufacturers, however, are certainly most fully alive to the benefit to be derived from scientific aid."—Times.

CHILD'S BANK.—The removal of Temple Bar is to be immediately followed by the rebuilding of Messrs. Child's bank, which when completed will form one of the most striking architectural structures in the locality. The new building will stand in two parishes, one portion being in St. Dunstan's parish, the other in St. Clement's, and will have a frontage to the south side of Fleet-street and the Strand of about 80 ft. in length. It will not only occupy the site of the present old structure, but will also absorb the two shops immediately on each side of it. The premises will also be carried for a considerable depth southwards, covering almost the entire area of Child's-place, which extends to a depth of about 60 ft. from the Fleet-street frontage. The intention is to erect the rear of the premises in the first instance; and, preliminary to commencing the new structure, the whole of the buildings in Child's-place are to be cleared away during the next few weeks, and after the erection of this portion of the bank is completed it will be opened for business before the old edifice facing Fleet-street is disturbed; and until this is demolished the arch and piers forming the south side of the Bar will remain standing. We understand that the designs for the new bank buildings have been furnished by Mr. John Gibson, architect.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1878.

BRO. HUBERT AND FRENCH FREEMASONRY.

Bro. Hubert, who is well known as the Editor of the Chaine d'Union, an independent and important French Masonic serial, and which is a credit to French Freemasonry, has, by refusing the unanimous election to the chair of the lodge he has served so well for years, openly protested against the revolution recently effected by the French Grand Orient. For his refusal is based simply on his unwillingness to follow the majority of the French Grand Orient into the "Caudine Forks" of revolution, and his fears as to the future. This is a very important step in itself, and one which may have important consequences for French Freemasonry. This announcement serves as a very striking commentary on the somewhat rash declaration of our esteemed Bro. Thévenot, which appeared in our columns the previous week. Knowing how great a discontent exists in French Freemasonry at the recent most unwise and uncalled for change, though we always prefer to let people speak for themselves, we were perfectly convinced that the letter of Bro. Thévenot must have but one result in France. Bro. Hubert voted against the change, and, like an honest man and true Mason as he is, finding he cannot any longer conscientiously go with the Grand Orient of France in its downward course, and in the discredit which is coming on French Freemasonry, he very wisely, in our opinion, openly and manfully says so, and declines the high honour offered to him by his brethren. If anything can open the eyes of the ruling party in the French Grand Orient to the gulf which is opening out before French Freemasonry this fact ought to do so, but we fear that at this moment, elate in the victory they have gained over the "indifferentism" of too many in French Freemasonry, nothing will induce them to pause in their ill-omened career, much less to think where they are, and where they are going to. Bro. Marchal, of the Lodge St. Jean de Jerusalem, Nancy, has also resigned the chair of the lodge, and the lodge itself only remains in obedience to the Grand Orient on the condition that the ritual of French Freemasonry is not to be interfered with. Everyone will, therefore, feel the greatest anxiety for the future position of French Freemasonry. We say all this with much regret, but we feel it to be our duty to say as much and to hold out the hand of brotherhood to the good Bros. Hubert, Marchal, Lechaut, Behr, and the 76 who so gallantly upheld the "good old cause" in the French Grand Orient.

ALL SERENE.

How very remarkable is the present position of English Freemasonry. Those of us who commenced Masonic life in England, say thirty years ago, must be struck with the onward progress, the rapid advance, of our Masonic phalanx. We can recall, many of us, less prosperous days. We can remember slovenly work, neglected æsthetics, the prevailing association of a "House of Call," the difficulty of finding sometimes a "quorum" to carry on the needful necessary work even of that famous old lodge. Now all is happily changed, and for the better. We may have other evils coming upon us, but we cannot complain either of the work or attendance of our brethren. Masonic ceremonial and Masonic ornamentation have latterly received befitting attention, and though much room still exists for further desirable changes in the latter respect, yet we do not despair of seeing ourselves a happy further amelioration of lodge life and work in many particulars. As it is, week by week the Craft is pushing on, new lodges are formed and forming, and brethren exhibit a vitality, an interest, and a zeal in things Masonic, which makes some of us old-boys Masons almost say with a sigh, "Ah, mihi præteritos si referet Jupiter annos." "Would I were young again to take my part in the good work of my lodge, and to meet pleasant faces, and sympathize with warm hearts as in happy days of old."

But thus it cannot be; old age is upon some of us, with benumbing powers, and weakened frames, and all we can do is to wish our old Craft "God Speed," to offer our "heartly good wishes" to the lodge, and to leave the prestige and the personality of Free masonry to the "young uns." May the care as much for the Brotherhood as we really did in our "little day." Two "points" seem to demand our attention. One is still more attention to the æsthetic adornment and the "locale" of our lodges, the other is, more economy in our "commissariat" arrangements, and rather larger offerings on the part of lodges to Masonic Charity. We know the difficulties attendant on both these points, and which are neither trifling or unreal, but we think it well to call the attention of our god brethren to them, as it seems to be a great pity to have any "spots" in our "feasts of charity," as it would greatly strengthen lodge life and Masonic prestige, if our balance-sheets could amply demonstrate more than they often do, that our professions and practice were properly squared?

GRANTS TO OUR CHARITIES.

All companions will rejoice to note that our esteemed and zealous Bro. Col. Creaton, always gallantly to "the fore" in every good work of Freemasonry, has given notice on behalf of the Committee of General Purposes of Grand Chapter of a vote of £2000 to our three great Metropolitan Charities. We highly commend the idea and the notice, and think that all will concur in the expediency of such a resolution. We trust that it will be carried unanimously, as we feel sure that no better use can be made of the money, which is not clearly wanted for any ordinary purposes of the Grand Chapter. Since we wrote this the Grand Chapter has, with happy unanimity, voted thus very wise and desirable grant.

THE PRESENT POSITION OF THE FRENCH GRAND ORIENT.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

As I have twice pointed out in the Freemason, the present alarming position of Freemasonry is as alarming as well it can be. Bro. Thévenot's assurance, recently published in your columns, that no French brother is dissatisfied with the decision of the Grand Orient is entirely overthrown by the march of events. Already Bro. Hubert refuses to be re-elected W.M. of one of the leading lodges in Paris, Bro. Marchal leaves the chair at Nancy, and your readers perused Bro. Lechaut's letter in your last number. And how, then, about the future? What is the minority conscientious, intelligent and important, to do? Curiously enough, the French Grand Orient has furnished the weapons itself for a dissenting minority. In its recognition of the coloured Grand Lodge, for instance, it laid down this axiom, that a lawful charter is a sufficient qualification. I have always said that such a view is erroneous, as proceeding on two false assumptions—first, that a charter can give any more rights than it professes to grant; and, secondly, that a dormant charter, once dormant, cannot be revived except by the action of the original grantor. The grantee cannot revive it except with the approval of the grantor. But the Grand Orient of France has decided differently, and the dissident French Masons can appeal to it as their ground of action. Thus, on this assertion of Masonic law, they can revive any charter of a lodge granted by the old Grand Lodge of France, or the Grand Orient itself, before the Union, and it may be a very serious question whether by this grave innovation the concordat of the old Grand Lodge of France and the Grand Orient is not dissolved. I am simply arguing as a French Freemason now on the "dicta" of the Grand Orient itself—and I leave out of the case "pour le moment," the heavy blow inflicted by the recent decision of the French Grand Orient on French Freemasonry, and the legal position of the French Grand Orient itself. Under the circumstances of the case, in my humble opinion French Freemasons will have a right to revive dormant charters and to reconstitute the Grand Lodge of France on these two grounds, first, that the French Grand Orient is not, owing to its present constitution, a legal body; and, secondly, that it has so departed from the fundamental teaching of Freemasonry as to have lost its position of sole jurisdiction. And here I leave the matter, awaiting the onward course of events which settles matters better than the pen of the ready writer.

MASKELYNE.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL. (Communicated).

It will be seen by a report in our last that some question has been raised with reference to the opening of the New Building by H.R.H. the Princess of Wales. Nothing would delight the Craft more than such an announcement, than such a fact, but so far, the matter does not appear to have been attended to "in due form." H.R.H. the Princess of Wales cannot be asked to attend a public ceremonial in an informal way, and we think it a pity that her name was mentioned until assent had been given for her kindly and gracious attendance. The brethren think the matter ought not to have come before the General Committee at all, as it is a matter, according to our apprehension, solely for the Building Committee. Until the Building Committee hands over to the House Committee the special work entrusted to its charge, it is alone responsible for all matters and all arrangements connected with the new buildings. We therefore recommend the Building Committee alone to hold a special meeting, and by a proper and formal application endeavour to obtain the presence and the patronage of that august and charming lady, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, at the opening of the new wing of the Girls' School. But no time is to be lost, as many are the pressing demands on the time and appearance of our Royal Family, ever anxious to support all that is philanthropic, all that is useful, and all that is excellent. We have every confidence in our gallant Bro. Col. Creation.

PROVINCIAL EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Your article in last week's Freemason on "Provincial Educational Institutions" has afforded me much pleasure, evincing as it does—and as your paper always has done—your great anxiety to secure the best means of rendering Freemasonry a "thing of life," and not a mere form. The question of the Schools is one that has caused a great many of our Lincolnshire Masons to be exercised in their minds as to how the future is to be met, and as to the expediency of initiating a movement for the organisation of such an Institution as you outline.

Considerable opposition may no doubt be anticipated from "vested interests," &c., but the difficulty to be faced is well brought out in your leader, and I have sent letters to several Masonic friends, calling their special attention to it, in the hope that a matter of Craft importance will receive that mature consideration we think the question deserves.

Thanking you for the able exposition of my own views, I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,
A LINCOLNSHIRE W.M.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

The subject of the letter from Bro. Raynham Stewart, inserted in your last number, is unquestionably of such great interest and importance that, if the House Committee should ever appear to be so oblivious of their duties as to neglect to pay due attention to the system of education pursued at the school, any subscriber who may either by motion at the quarterly court, or by any other process—call attention to the matter, will undoubtedly deserve the best thanks of the Craft.

It is not however apparent, from your correspondent's letter, that any grounds exist for supposing that plain needlework, &c., are disregarded in the training of the pupils. On the contrary, the last annual report contains a long list of wearing apparel, and domestic linen made up by the girls in addition to their studies in (what Bro. Stewart calls) accomplishments. Indeed, he himself expresses satisfaction at the explanations which followed the discussion on his proposed motion, and hopes that outsiders will now cease to "animadvert."

No further allusion to the question need have been made if Bro. Stewart had not added to his letter one of the most extraordinary and objectionable paragraphs ever penned in connection with our school; and one, which, if permitted to pass unchallenged now, may be quoted in the future, to the serious detriment of a noble institution. The passage referred to reads.

"We all know how difficult it is to get domestic servants in these days, and I believe it arises in a great measure—not because they are educated morally, religiously, or intellectually—but because they are educated above their position in life.

If this means that about 160 children of Freemasons, whose circumstances have become reduced through death or misfortune, should simply be educated to a point qualifying them for domestic service, at a cost of some £12,000 or £13,000 a year, it may reasonably be doubted whether many present and prospective subscribers to the Institution will consider "the game worth the candle." Nor is it likely—if this view were adopted—that in future elections we should be troubled with an excessive number of candidates.

Bro. Stewart has been so liberal a supporter of our Schools, that it ought to be unnecessary to remind him that the object of our Institution is—not to provide moral, religious or intellectual servant girls, but—to take the place of parents, to instruct, clothe, and maintain the children of our less fortunate brethren whilst young, and, by judicious education in accomplishments as well as in domestic duties, to fit them to occupy such a position in life as they might have been expected to fill had their parents enjoyed the blessings of health and prosperity; and in this, there is good reason for believing, the efforts of the committee have hitherto been rewarded by success.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

HENRY T. THOMPSON.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

There appears to be one or two things in Bro. R. Stewart's letter which if not explained may mislead some of the subscribers, who live at a distance, and have no means of knowing for themselves. He still clings to his statement about the girls learning latin and geometry as the primary things—now, this would be pardonable in any one but him, but for one who has served for the length of time he has on the House Committee, not to know or profess not to know, that latin is one of the things we do not teach in the school, and further, that there is no one in the school that knows sufficient of latin to teach it, I say, not to know these things is unpardonable, and as to geometry, all that is taught is such as would be given in any ordinary school.

In reference to the question of cookery, the girls learn everything that is likely ever to be of any use to them, unless we intend to send them out as professional cooks, which I suppose he really means, or if a girl has no aptitude for making pastry and sweets, then fit her out as housemaid, or perhaps laundress. Surely subscriptions would very soon lessen if we say the education we mean to give our children should they need it, shall be to fit them for domestic servants—and I confess, however he may twist this part of his letter, it is the only construction that can be put upon it. Surely these children have a right to expect that they will secure such an education as shall fit them for the Society of their relatives, and friends of their departed parents, and if his statement has the slightest foundation of truth that "we educate our girls beyond their station, then Freemasons are far below ordinary society in the social scale. As to the misgivings, and asking himself what becomes of the girls after they leave the Institution. Let him ask those who take the trouble to find out, and whose duty it is to register them as far as is possible to trace.

As to his remarks being directed against the House Committee, I am sure by the admirable way they have managed they are perfectly indifferent which way he wished to "direct his remarks."

I am a little curious to know who the "People" are. Evidently they are not Life Governors or even brethren in the Craft, or he would not speak of them by the very distant word, "People"—but should they, whoever they are, wish to send him again as their spokesman, they had better send him with a formal petition in writing and save a repetition of this unseemly fiasco—"Much ado about nothing."

Yours faithfully,

JOHN MASON.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

I shall be obliged if you will enlighten me on the following point of Masonic Law in your next:—

A P.M. having left his lodge for many years as a defaulter, is re-elected, does he bring back with him his rank as a P.M.?
[Yes he is still P.M., but he has again to serve 12 months in the Chair, to regain his position in Grand Lodge.—Ed.]

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

It was with more than ordinary interest that the present writer saw for the first time a complete work, the first sketch of which he had the pleasure of seeing at 5 p.m. on the 28th April, 1875. It is unnecessary to recall this date to brethren, it is as historical as the occasion celebrated. Never in any era had so many illustrious Craftsmen gathered together, and possibly never had such a hall been prepared for their reception as when they proclaimed the future Sovereign of our Empire, the Sovereign of the Antient Order.

The work is worthy of the occasion. With some experience in art matters, knowing of the difficulties successfully combated, difficulties extending over a period of two years in collecting and collating portraits, to be afterwards revised for details, it remains a marvel to the writer how a task of such magnitude, has been carried out "ab ovo usque ad malum," in so short a space of time. We know of works entailing not one tenth of the labour bestowed on this, and for which subscriptions were taken during the Franco-Prussian war which are now only in course of delivery.

The Albert Hall, recalling as it does the Coliseum in the main features of its architecture, or the "Plaza de Toros" of Seville or Madrid, presents in its many converging and diverging lines features that would task the genius of a Canaletto. That primal difficulty has succumbed to the trained eye of the artist, the perspective is as faultless as that of a photograph, nay, more so, for the lens is too frequently at fault, whereas a trained eye seldom if ever errs.

Taking the work "en bloc" as an historical memento there is no picture we have seen whether from Van Helst at the Hague, to the Terburg of our National Gallery, or the "Garden Party at Chiswick" of Desanges, that contains, even taking in the last named, (the two first contain at the utmost some fifty portraits), one fifth of the number limned in this Installation Engraving. In a portrait the crucial test is the likeness; that wanting, whatever art may be displayed in colour, in chiaro-oscuro, in tone, in draping, in accessories, all else is void. It is the mask of the classic player minus the voice. In the present work nine hundred tests are given, in faces taken at all distances, and though we have spied for faults critically—and in such a mass of portraiture considering the difficulty of treating them, faults are excusable—not only have the features been shown but the expression, the man behind the mask is preserved. It is possible we have but noted the features of those known to us, but from these we form a not infallible judgment.

As an engraving the work may well stand on its merits, it combines "eau forte" for the features, line engraving for the architecture, whilst mezzotint is cunningly introduced to afford the necessary colour and relieve the otherwise monotonous arising from the concentrated white of the faces.

It may not be out of place were we to make a few remarks on the rules of the "Printers' Association"—Artist's proofs have the names of artist and engraver in pencil autograph, proofs before letters the same engraved, letter prints give the title, whereas plain proofs have three lines in the body of the letter.

In conclusion considering the energy displayed in undertaking and carrying out to its full and ripe completion, a work of so much historical interest to the Craft throughout the world, it is to be hoped that the few numbers yet remaining in the several grades more especially the artist's proofs and the proofs before letters may be rapidly disposed of. Labour like this bestowed on a work of a more general interest would have reaped a harvest an hundred fold, the special interest of the Installation calls for a special acknowledgment from the Craft to our indefatigable Bro. Edward James Harty.

PINE'S LIST OF LODGES A.D. 1729.

By BRO. WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

In answer to our esteemed R. W. Bro. G. R. Harriott (Prov. G.M. Wigan, &c.) I have pleasure in stating that through the kindness of the lamented Bro. George Bease, Editor of the Masonic Record of Western India, I have been favoured with a letter of introduction to Bro. Tyrell Leith, D. District Grand Master of Bombay, &c., the owner of Pine's List of Lodges A.D. 1729 (not 1719, as Bro. Harriott states in error), and have had the valuable little book sent me for perusal, and for transcription if necessary. I most warmly thank our distinguished brother for the opportunity of thus making known to the Craft one of the most curious (and so far unique) works on Freemasonry.

The first of the kind was issued in 1723, one of which exists in the archives of the Grand Lodge of England, as also another of A.D. 1725. The learned Mason Bro. Albert Pike has a copy likewise of 1725, though not quite the same edition, a facsimile of which this uncrowned king of the "Hauts Grades," presented to me.

Our great want however, is not so much these lists of 1723-5-9, as those of 1731, 1732, and 1733, neither of which have been traced of late years. Their production at the present time would be hailed with great satisfaction, especially by ourselves, and several brethren in the United States, as we hope then to be able to finally settle the question of priority of origin as respects Freemasonry in America.

No. 79, which is left vacant in Pine's List of 1734, is credited in 1735, at Dublin, to a lodge at Philadelphia, and as I believe the Editor of the list of 1735 (Ireland) obtained his information from one of the lists now missing, I am anxious to confirm my opinion of the matter, or to reject it as untenable. To do either, I must await the discovery of these lists. The 1729 list is dedicated to "The Right Hon. James, Lord, King, Baron of Kingston, in the Kingdom of Ireland, Grand Master A.D. 1729, A.L. 5729," and the following is the Roll of Lodges, the days of meeting and the names of "signs" being omitted. I have also omitted from this republication of the list of 1729, the 5th page, which simply contains "A Table shewing the number of lodges which meet on the same day of week, &c." The size of the pamphlet is about 6½ inches by 2½ inches.

CONSECRATION OF ST. JOHN'S MARK LODGE No 214.

The ceremony of consecrating this lodge took place on Thursday, 31st ult., at the Freemasons' Hall, Lion-street, Abergavenny. There were present:—R.W. Bro. L. A. Homfray, P.G.M.M.M.; R.W. Bro. Frederick Binckes, P.G.S.W. and Grand Mark Secretary of England, Bro. Col. C. Lyne, D.P.G.M.M., Bro. W. Watkins, Prov. G.S. of M.M.M. Mon, and a large assemblage of brethren from Swansea, Tredegar, and Newport, the latter named being largely represented.

The ceremony of consecration was most effectively rendered by R.W. Bro. L. A. Homfray, assisted by R.W. Bro. F. Binckes.

Previous to this ceremony, however, a lodge was opened by special dispensation from the Provincial Grand Mark Master, for the purpose of advancing any duly qualified brethren, when seventeen presented themselves as candidates for this degree, the advancement being excellently rendered by Bro. W. Williams, P.M.M.M. Ashlar Lodge, Tredegar.

Bro. J. L. C. Hunter Little was then presented for the benefit of installation as W.M. for the ensuing year, and having been saluted in due form, proceeded with the investiture of his officers as follows:—

Bro. Lawson, I.P.M.; Bro. W. Williams, S.W.; Bro. Harry, J.W.; Bro. Crawshaw Bailey, M.O.; Bro. Blake S.O.; Bro. Phillips, J.O.; Bro. Rev. Lindsay, Chaplain; Bro. William Tucker, Treasurer, Bro. Harris, Reg.; Bro. Jones, Secretary; Bro. Marsh, S.D.; Bro. Julius, J.D.; Bro. White, Insp. W.; Bro. Walford, D.C.; Bro. Hands, O.; Bro. Delafield, I.G.; Bro. Captain Wilson, Steward; Bro. Green, Tyler.

Bro. R. W. L. A. Homfray, P.G.M.M.; Bro. F. Binckes, G.S.; and V.W. Colonel C. Lyne, were then elected as honorary members of the St. John's Lodge, and votes of thanks were unanimously accorded them for their attendance.

Bro. the R.W., L. A. Homfray, P.G.M.M.M., invested amidst much applause, the W.M. of St. John's Lodge, Bro. Little, with the vacant collar of P.G.S.D. At this stage of the proceedings Bro. Little, W.M., said it was the custom in the province to which he originally belonged before closing lodge to pass round the loving cup, and he thought it was a custom which ought not to be dispensed with. He therefore, begged to present the lodge with such a cup, expressing a hope that it might long remain in use at the St. John's Lodge. It was then brought in, well filled, and due honour observed. It may be as well here to observe that the collars and jewels worn by the several officers were their own individual gift to the lodge. There were, four candidates proposed for advancement, when the lodge was closed in due form. The banquet took place at the Greyhound, under the superintendence of Bro. William Tucker, at which the following brethren were present: Bro. J. L. C. Hunter Little, W.M.; L. A. Homfray, P.G.M. M.M.; C. Lyne, D.P.G.M.; A. T. Perkins, P.G.D.C.; S. H. Steel, P.M., 818; S. G. Homfray, P.G.S.W.; E. V. Haldan, P.G.M.O. Ashlar; W. O'Reilly; W. Pickford, G. H. Govin, 818; J. David, 818; V. T. B. Horsford, W.M., 818; W. H. Spring, 182, 464; H. G. Edmonds, 818; W. J. Hand, 818; P. Harris, 818; Bros. Hampton, 818; H. Fletcher, P.G. Tyler; W. Davis, 281; S. Sande, Thomas Delafield, 1505; John Jones, 816; H. G. Lake, 80, 214; T. Harnby, 185, 214; Joseph Green, Tyler; R. McLeod; Steward, 214; E. Phillips, 818; Crawshaw Bailey, P.M. 818; V. A. Julius, 214; George Albert Jones, 818; John

E. Thomas, 818; Wm. Williams, S.W. 214, P.M.; Wm. Tucker, 2149; Arthur Jones, 818; W. H. W. Welsen, 214; Fred Binckes, G.S.; John Chandler, W.M. 19; W. J. C. Lindsay, 214; J. A. H. Hallan, W.M. 237; Ed. J. W. Baker, 314; R. D. M. Lawson, P.M. 99; W. White, J.W. 214; J. D. March, S.D. 214; J. Gosden, 818; E. Price, 818; W. Rowe, 818; J. Berry, Walford, D.C. 214.

The usual loyal toasts having been duly honoured, the W.M. proposed the health of "The Earl of Limerick, M.W.G.M., and the M.W.P.G. Master of England. In doing so, he remarked that there were eight Past Grand Masters still living, and all in good sound health, both mentally and bodily. With respect to the Earl of Limerick, he need not say anything, as all must be willing to testify to the able manner in which he had carried out the duties of the high position which he was about to relinquish.

Bro. Captain Perkins, W.M. of Keystone Lodge, 109, and P.G.D.C.; then proposed the toast of the "R.W. Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale," and the Grand Officers Past and Present, coupling with it the name of our justly-esteemed Bro. F. Binckes, G.S.

Bro. Binckes, in reply, said all who like himself had the pleasure of being so closely allied with the R.W. the Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, were aware—that in the outside world as well as in the Craft, of whatever degree—that he was beloved by all who knew him, and he had much gratification in telling them, that the R.W. Deputy Grand Master had been elected to fill the important position of Grand Mark Master Mason of England, and he was certain all would agree that the election of so popular a man would afford ample assurance that the welfare of the Order would be materially advanced in his hands. On behalf of himself he most cordially thanked them for coupling his name with the toast, and took occasion, as he always intended to do whenever the opportunity offered, of bringing under their notice and enforcing the claims of the Masonic Charities. He then proposed "The R.W.P.G.M.M.M., Bro. L. A. Homfray," who suitably responded.

The Rev. Bro. Lindsay then gave "The Health of the D.P.G.M. Bro. Col. Lyne, and the P.G. Officers," which was briefly acknowledged.

The toast of the evening, "The W.M. of St. John's Mark Lodge, 214, Bro. Little," was proposed by the P.G.M., Bro. L. A. Homfray, and replied to by Bro. Little in a telling speech, shadowing forth that the lodge had wisely chosen in placing him at their head.

The remaining toasts having been duly honoured, that of the "Tyler" brought the proceedings to a close.

A NICE QUESTION.

At the recent Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of England, a question was presented involving a matter of grave concern in itself, as also a question of etiquette between governing bodies of the Craft. It came about in this way. The Grand Lodge of the Three Globes, at Berlin, has an article in its Constitution prohibiting the initiation of Hebrews, and, very naturally, the Chosen People, as well as all fair-minded men, consider that fact as a violation of the general principles of Freemasonry which recognise no distinction of creed, race, colour, or nationality in the qualification of applicants for admission. For some time past the brethren in England professing the faith of Israel have been circulating a petition requesting the abrogation of this distinction between themselves and persons holding other forms of religious belief. These papers were largely signed, and at the meeting in question were presented to the Grand Lodge, with the request that the Grand Master would officially forward them to the Berlin Grand Lodge. On this proposition a lengthy debate ensued, but it finally ended by the Grand Lodge receiving the petitions but refusing to endorse and forward them. We desire to record our approval of this disposition of the question, because while the debate brought out the full sympathy of the English brethren with the end sought to be attained, it really turned upon the point whether one Grand Lodge could be justified in thus directly interfering in the concerns of another, and it demonstrates that the true way to attain the desired result is by the general force of public opinion which each Grand Lodge may properly express for itself, but which it may not otherwise force upon the attention of another holding different views; for, otherwise, there might be a constant fusillade of opinions and remonstrances passing between the different powers, tending not only in a large degree to disturb harmonious relations, but to indefinitely retard the desired consummation. We feel as strongly on this question as any of our Jewish brethren possibly can, and we should hail the removal of the obnoxious regulation with the greatest pleasure, because it would be not only a triumph of principle, but a noteworthy step toward the unification of Masonry, now greatly endangered; but at the same time we see plainly that it is a question the solution of which cannot be forced, but must await the slow, though, in our view, certain effect of time, and, as already said, the iteration and reiteration of correct Masonic opinion. Human nature is much the same in Grand Lodges as it is anywhere outside of them, and tells us that while men may be persuaded they will not be driven while they have strength to resist. When this fact is applied to the matter under consideration it is easy to perceive that the Berlin Grand Lodge would have resented the resolution of the Grand Lodge of England, had it been forwarded, as a direct interference with its own dignity and independence, and that the outcome would have been a much longer postponement of the repeal sought than is likely to be the case without it. A formidable portion of the Berlin constituency has already moved in the right direction, and though, year after year, it has met defeat, it has only been by a few votes, and they will be ultimately gained if we refrain from any interference other than the encouragement of our own acts and the proper expression of our own views. The present century has witnessed the permanent overthrow of vastly greater evils than this, and before it closes this, too, will be among the dust and ashes of a dead past. Let our Hebrew friends compare their present situation throughout the civilised world with that of their ancestors only a century ago, and they will realise that the God of Israel has not forsaken them, but in His own way and in His own time is making darkness light before them and crooked things straight. Time, patience, and perseverance overcome many obstacles, and so, if we can learn to labour and to wait, the truth and the right will at last prevail, and it will be all the more welcome if it comes bringing the cordial acquiescence of those who have opposed its progress.—New York Dispatch.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

We had occasion in a late number of the Hebrew Leader to speak of the insane conduct of a large body of French Freemasons who had boldly declared the doctrine of paganism, and eschewed the name of God from amongst them. Much as there is to admire in the French nation, and glorious as her past history has been, it is absolutely certain that no other civilised people present the extraordinary incongruities constantly developing in her capital.

Paris, the leading city of the world in all that is beautiful and artistic, queen of belles-lettres, and resplendent in architecture, is also the focus of all that is offensive to God and injurious to man. The recent act of a large body of Frenchmen, from whom a right perception of religion might be expected, has been to renounce the name of the Deity, and evoke the "goddess of reason" in His stead.

It would appear impossible that in the nineteenth century any number of men could be found so bereft of common sense, unless the gods have goaded them to madness to ensure their certain destruction.

The Grand Orient of Freemasons in France has lately decreed that all reference to the sacred name of the Deity shall be eliminated from its work and proceedings, and it is not surprising that the Grand Lodge of Ireland, immediately on learning that fact, repudiated all further connection and intercourse with French Freemasonry.

So deplorable and suicidal an act, directed against an Institution whose whole teachings are "Faith in God," may well make us ask the question what these vivacious but fickle people may not next do. A period of great political danger lies, it is true, been recently bridged over with apparent safety, and the fatal current of revolution happily averted; nevertheless, it is too certainly the case that there are Marats, and Robespierres, and Carriers living in this century, and ready to upheave society in France as they did in '94.

Freemasonry has flourished from time immemorial, built upon the sacred name of the Most High, and its universality is of every nation and people under the sun. Its principles are pure, and its teachings are the bonds of human brotherhood with all mankind.

We hope better things of the Grand Orient of France, and its speedy return to true reason, which the action of the seventy-six lodges, who nobly voted against the expulsion of God from their temples, induces us to believe will be the case.—Hebrew Leader.

PRESENTATION TO A LIVERPOOL BROTHER.

The 47th annual ball of the Liverpool Licensed Victuallers Association, in aid of the benevolent fund of the institution, took place on the 29th ult. at the Town Hall, Liverpool, and in every respect maintained the enjoyable character of these festive charitable gatherings, which have now extended over nearly half a century. The benevolent objects of the association, it may be stated, are to admit to the almshouses, or other shelter, old, decayed, and unfortunate members, and the distressed widows, children, or orphans of deceased members, and to afford to such individuals any other relief or assistance which may be deemed proper and necessary, as well as to suitably educate such children and orphans, and afterwards place them in situations to qualify them for earning a respectable livelihood. The institution has faithfully carried out these admirable objects, and the success which again attended the annual ball last evening will give a helping hand to the charity, which has hitherto been so enthusiastically supported by the trade. There were about 700 present. The arrangements in connection with the ball were most satisfactorily carried out by the following Committee:—Bro. W. S. Vines, W.M. 1299, (chairman of the association); Bro. W. Coates, 1356 and 1609 (vice-chairman); Bros. A. Morrison, W.M. 1547; H. Nelson, P.M. 673; H. Pearson, P.M. 249; S. Bushell, 667; and Captain Berry, P.M. 155, the indefatigable Secretary, who deserves great praise for his exertions in making the gathering a complete success. At the Committee and Stewards' supper, served at about eleven o'clock, the chair was taken by Bro. Vines, having his Worship the Mayor on his right. After the loyal toasts, the Chairman proposed the "Mayor and Corporation of Liverpool," to which his Worship responded, and then gave the toast "Success to the Licensed Victuallers' Association," acknowledged by the chairman. Before the proceedings closed, Bro. Vines presented a valuable black marble timepiece to Bro. H. M. Molyneux, P.M. 823, bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Mr. H. M. Molyneux, by the members of the Licensed Victuallers' Association, in acknowledgment of the services kindly rendered as honorary master of ceremonies during a period of 15 years. W. S. Vines, Chairman; Captain Berry, Secretary. 29th January, 1878."

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

Bro. Whitaker, in continuation, said: I was invited to the Thames to be affiliated to the Scotch Constitution in the Sir Walter Scott Lodge, and I was enrolled as one of the brethren on that occasion, and it was then a formal offer was made to me to become the first Provincial Grand Master of the Scotch Constitution for the North Island of New Zealand. Well, that is now concluded with this ceremony to-day; I am duly installed as your first Grand Master, and I think I may refer to this fact in proof of the Catholicity of Freemasonry, for here I am an Englishman, never having been in Scotland in my life, and you have accepted me as your Grand Master. I believe I may refer to Bro. Graham here on my right, the District Grand Master of the English Constitution, as being of Scotch origin. (Bro. Graham here whispered some words to Bro. Whitaker, which were not audible in the body of the hall.) Born in Ireland, but of Scotch origin—well, I suppose, we must accept him as half-Irishman and half-Scotchman, but half an Irishman and half a Scotchman fitted together makes one good English Grand Master. (Cheers.) Here is Brother Graham, sitting, I may say, in all his glory, and I for one do most sincerely wish him a long and happy reign over the lodge of which he has been appointed Grand Master. I now have this to say: I do from the bottom of my heart most sincerely thank you all, brethren, for the great honour you have conferred upon me in placing me in this chair, and I assure you it will be my utmost endeavour to conduct the business of this Grand Lodge in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the brethren. I shall endeavour faithfully to perform my duties with the aid of the officers appointed to assist me, and depend upon it my best endeavours will not be wanting to uphold the dignity and support the influence of Masonry. (Cheers.) You are aware that the Master who sits in this chair is as great an autocrat as the Emperor of Russia. What I say in this lodge is law, and there is but one appeal, viz., to the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Here the Master of this lodge is supreme. I refer to Bro. Lazar as to whether I am stating what is correct—no brother has a right to dispute the decision of the Grand Master, but let me add that while I will act with firmness, I will also act with moderation, and my decisions so far as it is possible to make them, shall be founded on justice and truth. (Cheers.) Brethren, assist me to close this lodge.

At the close of the ceremony the P.G. Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. F. Gould offered up the following very eloquent prayer:

God, our Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, with whom all hearts are open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid, we thank Thee for the fraternal communion which we have this day enjoyed. Pardon all that Thy holy eye has seen amiss in us. Bless our humble labours to the promotion of truth and love, unity and peace. Smile upon our institution, and make it the instrument of great good. Dismiss us with Thy blessing, go with us when we separate, guide us even more by Thy good Providence, and finally reunite us at Thy right hand in that world of life and light where Thou for ever reignest. So mote it be.

The following brethren were the joint committee for both Installations, and have given universal satisfaction by the manner in which they have carried out the programme:—Bros. Brett and Tyler, for the S.C.; and Bros. Lodder, Skinner, and Wade, for the E.C.

The brethren present exceeded 300 in number.

The ball was one of the most perfectly managed and successful ever seen in Auckland. The Stewards of whom the chief was Bro. Adam Brock, must be complimented on the tout ensemble of the arrangements, which were such as could not fail to be conducive to the comfort of everyone. The decorations in the hall were particularly effective and the gay costumes of the ladies presented a more than usually brilliant appearance. On the gentlemen, the bright coloured aprons and regalia relieved the sombre black. The programme was well selected, and the music was capitally interpreted by Mr. Impey's band.

At twelve o'clock the doors of the supper-room were thrown open, and there was a rush to the tables, which grained beneath the weight of substantial fare, tastefully laid out, and all the delicacies of the season. Bro. Whitaker, P.G.M., S.C., occupied the chair, with Bro. Graham, D.G.M., E.C., and Bro. Lazar, P.G.M., of Westland, as Croupiers. After the company had satisfied the cravings of the inner man, the signal was given for silence.

The Chairman, the Hon. F. Whitaker, P.G.M., S.C., then rose, and called upon the brethren to fill their glasses. This having been complied with, he said: Ladies and brethren,—At Masonic banquets there is one toast which takes precedence, because of all other bodies Freemasons boast of their loyalty, and boast of it in a manner in which they are entitled to boast. The first toast on all Masonic occasions is "The Queen and the Craft."

The toast was drunk with demonstrations of loyalty, and with English honours, Bro. W. J. Rees, P.M., who sat on the left of the chairman, giving the time.

The Chairman again called on the brethren to charge their glasses, which having been done, he said: Ladies and brethren, the next toast that I have to propose to you is that of "The Prince of Wales, the Grand Master of the English Constitution, and the Grand Patron of the Scotch and the Irish Constitutions." It is therefore our duty, as byal subjects of the Queen, and as looking forward at some future time to H.R.H. succeeding to the throne, and regarding him now in the exalted position as Grand Master of the English Constitution, and the position he holds with regard to Freemasonry generally, I say it is our duty to propose the toast of H.R. Highness's health, and to drink it with all honours. I therefore give you the toast of

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master of the English Constitution, and the Grand Patron of the Scotch and the Irish Constitutions.

The toast was drunk with those marks of loyalty which peculiarly distinguish Freemasonry, and with three times three.

The Chairman again rose, after a short pause, and called on the brethren to charge their glasses. He then said: Ladies and brethren, the occasion on which we are met to-day is one of the greatest importance. One part of the Proceedings was the installation of Bro. George Samuel Graham as R.W.D.G.M. of the English Constitution. It is our duty, therefore on an occasion of this kind to propose his health. He has been a good Mason for many years, and I have not the slightest doubt that the brethren of his lodge have done well in appointing him to his present high office. I am quite sure you will have the very greatest pleasure in drinking the toast of his health as I have in proposing it. I propose therefore the health of R.W.D.G.M. George Samuel Graham.

The toast was drunk with Macduff honours. When the enthusiasm had subsided.

Bro. G. S. Graham, D.G.M., E.C. rose amidst cheers, and said:—Ladies, brethren, and gentlemen, I have to thank you for the kind and cordial manner in which you have responded to the toast that has been proposed. I will not preface with the customary "unaccustomed as I am to public speaking," &c.—(laughter and cheers)—for I feel that I am at such a dizzy height that I am afraid to move lest I should stumble. The flattering remarks made by Bro. Whitaker with reference to my connection with Masonry, I trust, will be fulfilled in my future solicitude for the welfare of the Lodges over which I have been called to preside. When I look around me to-night, and see assembled here so many ladies, as well as so many non-Masons I cannot but feel that they have conferred an honour upon me, irrespective of my own brethren, in the support which they gave me in the arduous task which I have this day undertaken. There is a matter to which I would like to allude this evening, and my remarks are addressed more especially to my fellow-craftsmen. We have met, it is true, this evening in a very fine hall, but I think it is quite time, considering that on this occasion there must be, I should estimate at least upwards of 500 guests present in this hall, that we had a Masonic hall of our own. At present we have no hall that we can call our own, but I trust that at the next Masonic festivity we may be in a position to boast of a hall that we may truly call our own (cheers), and that it will be available for Masons in general. This certainly has been a red-letter day in the annals of Freemasonry, for we have had ample evidence to-day of the genuine brotherly love that exists in this province. (Cheers.) The English, Scotch and Irish Lodges have been united this day in the greatest harmony, and if they will only work together in the grand objects which I desire to see achieved, they can without difficulty at once proceed to build a Masonic Hall which will be worthy of them. In again thanking you for the kindly manner in which you have drunk my health, I may remark that there is a brother amongst us of whom I should like to say a few words. On this day he has received a dignity which is co-equal with my own, I allude to Bro. Whitaker, R.W.P.G.M., of the Scotch Constitution. I may say that since I was a little child toddling about that his name was as familiar to me as one of the household gods. (Cheers.) Therefore it is to me a pleasant duty to invite you to drink the toast of his health. I call upon you, therefore, to drink "The Health of Bro. the Hon. F. Whitaker, R.W.P.G.M. of the Scottish Constitution."

The toast was drunk with Macduff honours in double quick time, led by Bro. Robinson of Lodge Sir Walter Scott.

The Chairman again rose, and said: Ladies and brethren, it is now a great number of years since I first became a Mason, and during the whole of that time there has never been any occasion on which I have felt more honoured than I have to-day. I have been placed to-day in one of the very highest positions in Freemasonry in which a man can be placed in this colony. I feel gratified that I have been chosen and elected by those amongst whom I have lived so many years, and I am sure you will all agree with me that I have reason to be proud of the position which I now occupy. (Cheers.) I have for many years past done but little for Freemasonry, but now I am ready to promise that for the rest of my life I will render all the assistance that I can for the good of Masonry—(cheers)—and for the advancement of the interests of the Craft in the North Island of New Zealand. (Cheers.) I am quite aware that it is not fun to the ladies to make long speeches this evening. Just now the band struck up in the ball-room outside, and I think that I saw a great many of the ladies were ready to run away from the supper table to resume the dance. I think they prefer dancing to speeches—(laughter and cheers)—and being aware of that, and ready as I always am, to accommodate the ladies as far as possible, I shall, therefore, cut short my speech, in order that the dance may be resumed. Allow me to say that besides the honour my brethren have conferred upon me to-day, I have received an additional honour in having my health proposed to-night in such kind terms, and for that, ladies and gentlemen, I return you my most sincere thanks. (Cheers.)

After a pause, the chairman again called upon the company to charge their glasses. This having been complied with, he said: "The next toast that I have to propose to you is the health of a brother who is absent, and I am sorry he is absent on this occasion, because I am quite sure it would have given him a great deal of pleasure to be present. I have just been informed that he has expressed his regret that he could not be present this evening. You must understand, ladies especially—I am not speaking for the brethren—that there are three Constitutions, the English, the Scotch, and the Irish Constitutions, and each of these at the present time has a Grand Master; and I trust that amongst us there will be rivalry, a rivalry of virtue and friendship, a rivalry that will advance the efficiency and welfare of the lodges, and I think if we can promote that friendly rivalry amongst us it will be of increased advantage and benefit to Masonry. (Cheers.) At all events, if I fail it shall not be my fault, but the fault of the Masters. The toast I have now to propose is that of the Grand Master of the Irish Constitution, Bro. George Patrick Pierce.

The toast was drunk with three times three.

The Chairman: Bro. Pierce being absent, Bro. Doull, Grand Senior Warden of the Irish Constitution, will return thanks.

Bro. Doull then rose, and said—Ladies and brethren, in the absence of the Chief Officer, Bro. George Patrick Pierce, it devolves upon me to acknowledge the very hearty manner in which the toast of his health has been drunk. I regret very much that he is absent to-night, but I am very glad to see that we have received a challenge from our sister Constitutions. With regard to what Bro. Whitaker has said about rivalry, I hope all the rivalry that may exist in future amongst the lodges will be a rivalry directed to the advancement of the interests of the various lodges and the good of the Craft generally. With these few remarks, knowing that the ladies wish to get away to the ball-room, I will conclude by returning you on behalf of Bro. Pierce, my most sincere thanks for the cordial manner in which you have drunk the toast of his health.

The Chairman again called on the brethren to charge their glasses, and said this time he must call upon them to fill up bumpers. This request having been attended to, he said: Ladies, brethren, and gentlemen, the next toast I have to propose—and the ladies will be glad to hear that it is the last,—but although it is the last, it is certainly not the least, because to a certain extent I regard it as the toast of the evening—is that of a distinguished brother whom we have amongst us to-day. He came amongst us to-day to do the honours, and with an amount of knowledge of the mysteries of the Craft far exceeding anything I possess—I will not say exceeding the knowledge of all the brethren present, because I do not know. But he came amongst us to-day, and he has enabled us to conduct the proceedings in a most satisfactory manner. When you look at that brother you will see that he has had many years experience, and though he has attained to an age very much in excess of my own yet he is two years my senior as a Mason. Yet here he is, and I am very glad that we have this opportunity of drinking his health in the manner which I am sure you will do—with the greatest possible honour. I am told that he will have attained to the age of 74 years at one o'clock this (Saturday) morning. (Cheers.) That he should have come all the way from Westland for the purpose of assisting as in the labours of this day, I am quite sure you will agree with me that he deserves our heartiest thanks, and deserves also that we should fill a bumper and drink to his health with all the honours that we can confer upon him. I have now another matter, which is a personal one, to allude to. During the last two or three days, my lady friends have asked me what we were going to do, and what sort of rites we were going to perform (laughter). Being a very different man, being a very different brother, (renewed laughter) I was afraid that I might commit myself to some extent in communicating any information, that was asked of me, but when I see Bro. Lazar present, and remember the vast extent of his information, I think the very best thing I can do is to introduce him to the ladies, and I have no doubt he will then explain the whole matter to them. (Laughter and cheers.) I have had experience of the mode in which he can convey the great store of Masonic lore that he possesses, and I am quite sure that the ladies whom I see around me on the tip-toe of expectation to hear what he will say, and I am equally sure that he will, so far as Masonry will allow, gratify their very laudable inquiries. I do not for one moment mean to say that ladies are inquisitive. (Oh, oh, and laughter.) I do not mean to say that. I can say, however, that I have a great many lady friends in Auckland, and that during the last two or three days when I have seen them crossing over to me I have got out of the way in order to avoid their very urgent demands as to what we were going to do. (Laughter.) I felt that I was not in a position to afford that information, but Bro. Lazar is here and he is a man of experience, and knows the ladies well. (Laughter.) He knows the ladies well, and what will suit them. I have heard that only two or three years ago he and his wife, he being 74 years of age, danced three or four round dances, besides several other dances. (Cheers.) Well, he possesses all the information, and knowing that he is a ladies' man to the backbone, I know he will tell them all they want to know. I therefore propose his health as the R.W.D.G.M. of Westland, and in proposing his health I hope he will not disappoint the expectations that they entertain of him. (Cheers.)

The toast was drunk with full Masonic honours.

Bro. Lazar, R.W.D.G.M., of Westland, on rising to respond, was received with hearty applause. He said: Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Right Worshipful District Grand Master, ladies, and brethren, I was quite unprepared for the high honour you have conferred upon me, and the kindly manner in which the toast of my health has been dwelt upon. I may say that I believe the sentiments which have been expressed emanate from the heart of the Provincial Grand Master, and it is an honour on this occasion, at which I certainly feel some pride, that so many of the fair sex are present. (Cheers.) There is only one thing in the speech of the R.W.P.G. Master that I regret, and that is that he mentioned my age. (Laughter.) Whatever are the ideas the ladies may have formed of me, and the expectation that filled their minds, I cannot but think that I have fallen at least fifty per cent in their estimation since the R.W.M. has stated my age. Providence thrust me into the world on the 1st December, 1808, about one o'clock in the morning, and that is about the time now. I think Divine Providence might have sent into the world a more worthy subject; (cheers; and no, no), but you must take the will for the deed. But I think I may say that I am proud of my age, because I have always enjoyed the most excellent health, and I am not egotistic when I say that I believe I would not mind making a slight bet that I could walk some of the youngest. (Cheers.) However, I am wandering from the subject on which I intended to speak, and that is with reference to a certain event that took place to-day: During the many years I have been in the colony I have installed all the Grand Masters in New Zealand—John H. Harris, Dr. Donald, the late lamented Sir Donald McLean, and last, but not least, Bros. Whittaker and Graham. I am sure I have never seen so large an assembly in the colonies as I saw to-day, not only in New Zealand, but in South Australia, New South Wales, and Victoria. I assure you it was highly gratifying to me to-day when I looked round the hall and saw so many of the Craft assembled here. It shewed the respect and esteem which the Freemasons of Auckland entertain for the Craft, and I have no doubt they will continue to advance its interests with satisfaction to themselves and their brethren throughout the world. (Cheers.) Now with reference to the ladies here. You have only to watch carefully the proceedings of your husbands—I mean those whose husbands are Masons—you have only to watch their conduct in regard to the sacred mysteries of the Craft, and you will become Free and Accepted Masons (Laughter.) And I am sure with regard to those of you who have not husbands as Masons, that they are like the boys who looked at the cherries and could not get them. However, there is one great characteristic of all true Masons and that is that they are

True and sincere, just to the fair,
They trust us on every occasion,
For no mortal can more the ladies adore
Than a Free and Accepted Mason.

I thank you, brothers, for the kind manner in which you have accepted the toast, and I assure you that I will have a place in my memory that no time or circumstance can ever eradicate. (Cheers.)

The signal was then given for a return to the ball-room, and in a few minutes the ladies were despatched, and the merry dance was resumed.

Dancing was kept up with unabated spirit and unflagging zeal until the wee' sma'-hours, when the brethren and the lady invitants wended their way homewards, after an evening's harmless pleasure, the memory of which will long live as a golden landmark in the monotony of everyday existence.

MASONIC BALL AT HALIFAX.

This annual event came off in the beautiful hall of the Freemasons on Thursday night, the 31st ult., under the banner of St. James's Lodge, 448. The corridors and staircases were all carpeted and profusely adorned with beautiful plants; and the richly decorated ballroom on the upper floor, with bright the banners of the Masons numerous plants, the striking costumes and jewels of the brethren, and the brilliant toilets of the ladies, composed a very charming picture. Dancing began shortly after eight o'clock to the strains of Bro. Hemingway's band, and was continued until after five in the morning. Bro. C. T. Kendall, as master of the ceremonies, and Bro. W. Walshaw, as assistant M.C., were most attentive, and the general arrangements could not have been better. An elegant supper was served in the hall on the ground floor by Mr. Hack, who also provided the other refreshments. Bro. T. Whitaker, W.M., presided, and gave the loyal toast, while Mr. Verney Binns sang the solo in the National Anthem following thereupon. The Masons received the toast of "The Visiting Friends," proposed by Bro. Rhodes, I.P.M., with great heartiness, and Mr. Ehud Hanson was called upon to reply, the same young gentleman immensely entertaining the company by three satirical songs which he gave at their special request. The supper divided the programme of 24 dances into two equal parts, separate programmes, which were much admired by the ladies for the exquisite taste and beauty of workmanship displayed thereby, being issued for each; and the ball, which though semi-private, was very numerously attended by a brilliant assemblage, was kept up with vivacity to the end.

The ninetieth Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls' will be held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Wednesday, the 8th of May, under distinguished presidency. The names of brethren as Stewards are solicited, and should be sent without delay to the Secretary, Bro. R. W. Little, 5, Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London.

The first ball given by the Phoenix Lodge, No. 175, was held on Monday last at Freemasons' Tavern. An account of the proceedings has been received and will appear in our next.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—When inclement weather checks to a considerable extent the natural exhalations of the skin, an alternative is required to expel them entirely from the body through some other channel. Holloway's Pills can be confidently recommended as the easiest, surest, and safest means of attaining this desirable end without weakening the most delicate or incommencing the most feeble. When from frequent chills or impure air the blood becomes foul and the secretions vitiated, these Pills present a ready and efficient means of cleansing the former and correcting the latter. By this salutary proceeding disease is arrested at its outset, its pains and inconveniences averted, and the nervous structures saved from the depressing effects entailed upon them by an illness.—ADVT.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of this Institution was held on Saturday last at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Benjamin Head, V.P., in the chair. There were also present Bros. Hyde Pullen, Henry W. Hunt, Raynham W. Stewart, W. Roebuck, S.B. Wilson, S. Rosenthal, W. F. C. Moutrie, D.M. Dewar, S. Rawson, Rev. Dr. Morris (Head Master of the School), R. B. Webster, F. Adlard, H. Massey (Freemason), W. Paas, J.G. Chancellor, G. J. Palmer, W. Mann, and Bro. F. Binckes (Secretary).

Bro. W. Roebuck gave notice of motion for next meeting to increase the salary of Miss Hall, matron, and Mr. Brocklehurst, second master.

Authority was given to the Chairman to sign cheques to the amount of £1,730 odd.

The Secretary read the report of the Audit Committee, which showed receipts for the last year £14,020 18s. 3d., the expenditure £14,067 0s. 3d.

It was referred to the House Committee to enquire of the lessees of the Alexandra Palace on what terms they would allow the use of their swimming bath to the boys of this Institution.

Some petitions were then received and considered, and an outfit asked for by an ex-pupil was deferred, the Head Master reporting that since the boy left the school he had written to another pupil speaking contemptuously of the education received at the school, and not showing himself at all grateful for benefits he had received. Two other outfits were granted.

The Committee then adjourned.

ANCIENT LODGES OF FREEMASONS.

In the Masonic Magazine for December, 1877, is printed a copy of "Cole's List of Lodges, 1763." They are printed in numerical order, showing the number of each Masonic Lodge, its name, place of meeting, time of meeting, and date of foundation. I have selected the local lodges from the list. It would be interesting if any brethren of the Craft could furnish additional particulars with regard to defunct or ancient lodges in this province.

95 (no name), Gloucester, 1st and 3rd Friday, 1738.

125 (no name), Leominster, in ye county of Hereford, (no time of meeting), 1742.

129 (no name), High-street, Bristol, 1st and 3rd Tuesday, 1743.

165 (no name), Wine-street, Bristol, 2nd and 4th Tuesday, 1753.

220, The Three Kings, Small-street, Bristol, 2nd and 4th Tuesday, 1757.

233 (no name), Broad-street, Bristol, 2nd and 4th Monday, 1758.

245, The Temple Lodge, Bristol, 1st and 3rd Monday, 1759.

290 (no name), Hereford, 1st Thursday, 1762.

It would thus appear that the city of Gloucester was the first place in the county to found a Lodge of Freemasons, and that in the last century it was the custom among Masons to meet twice a month, instead of once, as now. Can any readers furnish particulars of the original Gloucester Lodge.—Gloucester Journal.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known remedy for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Extract from "INDIAN ECONOMIST."

"We direct the attention of the medical men to the fact observed some years since by ourselves, and corroborated by our subsequent experience, that Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is in many cases of Low Fever immensely superior to Quinine in curative power. We cannot persuade ourselves that the true value of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is yet properly appraised in India. It may be given with absolute safety to a child three days old. Were medical men but to make a fair and exhaustive trial of it we are persuaded that it would work a revolution in the treatment of two-thirds of the diseases which children are subject. Its curative powers are simply amazing."

"Earl, Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a dispatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manila the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service as CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESSALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon F.R.C.S., England.

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmotic and Sedative. I have tried it in Consumption, Asthma Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief in violent attacks of Spasms within a minute being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From Jno. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship Great Eastern.

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON, and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

Caution.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See "Times," 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

CROSBY'S
BALSAMICCOUGH
ELIXIR.

CROSBY'S BALSAMIC

COUGH ELIXIR.

Opiates, Narcotics, and Squills are too often invoked to give relief to Coughs, Colds, and all Pulmonary diseases. Instead of such fallacious remedies, which yield momentary relief at the expense of enfeebling the digestive organs, and thus increasing that debility which lies at the root of the malady, modern science points to CROSBY'S BALSAMIC COUGH ELIXIR as the true remedy.

Dr. Rooke, Scarborough, author of the "Anti-Lancet," says: "I have repeatedly observed how very rapidly and invariably it subdued cough, pain, and irritation of the chest in cases of Pulmonary Consumption, and I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend it as a most valuable adjunct to an otherwise strengthening treatment in this disease."

This medicine, which is free from opium and squills, not only allays the local irritation, but improves digestion and strengthens the constitution. Hence it is used with the most signal success in Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Coughs, Influenza, Night Sweats of Consumption, Quinsy, and all affections of the throat and chest. Sold in bottles at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, by all respectable Chemists, and wholesale by Jas. M. Crosby, Chemist, Scarborough.

There were also many ladies present, who were entertained at an excellent concert in the Temple.

After dinner the usual list of toasts was proposed.

The Chairman in giving "The Queen," referred to the volume recently published by Her Majesty containing the correspondence of the late Prince Consort, and said that it exhibited the sense which Her Majesty entertained of the loss which she and the country endured by the death of Prince Albert.

The Chairman next gave "The Health of the M.W.G.M., the Prince of Wales," who, he said, exhibited great interest in all matters concerning Freemasonry, and also in everything which had any reference to the happiness and welfare of the English people.

After this toast had been duly honoured the Chairman gave "The Health of the Pro Grand Master," and alluded to the great event of his Royal Highness's installation at the Albert Hall, when the Earl of Carnarvon gave an admirable address. For himself he might say he never heard anything more able or more thoroughly Masonic than the Earl of Carnarvon delivered on that occasion.

The Chairman in very few words proposed "The Deputy Grand Master and the rest of the Grand Officers," and called upon Bro. Hervey, Grand Sec., to reply to the toast.

Bro. John Hervey, in reply, said that the Grand Officers felt very grateful for the manner in which this toast had been proposed and drank, for they all felt great interest in the charities of the Order and were delighted at seeing this Institution so well supported on the present occasion. Nothing pleased the Grand Officers more than to see the Masonic Institutions flourishing, and this pleasure was greatly increased when they knew that they were well regulated and under proper control. When they saw such a large assemblage of Masons present as at this festival they felt that the Institutions were well supported and that there was every prospect of their being maintained.

The Chairman next proposed "Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons." He said he had now to perform the principal duty for which he had been asked to attend, and he had no doubt the brethren would allow him to express the gratification he felt at seeing such a large assemblage of Masons as were then present to support the Institution. On the Monday previous he had had the good fortune, under the guidance of Bro. Terry, the Secretary, Col. Crenson, and Bro. S. Rawson, to visit the asylum at Croydon, where he had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Dr. Strong, who so successfully, attentively, and assiduously looked after the health of the inmates of the Institution. No doubt many of the brethren present had seen that asylum, and consequently he need not inform them of what he there witnessed. He was glad however, to be able to state that he experienced great satisfaction at what he there witnessed, and felt sure, by the admirable manner in which the Institution was conducted, that the greatest care was taken of the comfort and welfare of the inmates. When brethren knew that many of the brethren and widows in the Institution had been in their former days in affluent circumstances they could not but feel pity that they were reduced to be the objects of sympathy. One lady he saw there had some years ago moved among the higher classes of society, and had in her time been the partaker of many of the luxuries of life. She was now dependent upon the generosity of the brethren of whom her dead husband had been one of the composers. It must be a great satisfaction to the brethren that they were able to relieve those of their fellows who had associated with them in lodges. The Institution whose cause he was advocating came to their relief, and he was happy to say that its management was by no means lax. Its rules were very strict. No Mason could become a candidate for its benefits if he was not 60 years of age or if his income was as much as £40 a year. At the next election there would be seventeen more candidates than could be admitted. With reference to the rules of the Institution he thought they were in favour of "women's rights," because whereas Masons must be sixty years of age before they could be put on the list, widows were eligible at fifty five-years of age. (Laughter.) But the widows could not receive the benefits of the institution if they had more than £30 a year. There were twenty-two more candidates among the women than could be admitted at next election, for there were ten vacancies and thirty-two candidates. Under these circumstances he was sure that Masons would feel the necessity of assisting this most admirable Institution, and he was happy to say that the Province to which he belonged had in a measure done its duty, and relieved itself from the reproach to which it had formerly been open of having received greater benefits from the Institution than it had given to it. He hoped that that large gathering of Masons he saw before him was an evidence of a large subscription towards the funds of the Institution, which he commended most heartily to the liberal intentions of the brethren. (Cheers.)

Bro. Samuel Tomkins responded. After what had been said the Treasurer had little to say. Grand Secretary had observed that it was very gratifying to Grand Officers to see the noble charities of the Order well supported; and of late years this had been particularly the case; for each year showed a larger amount subscribed than had been the case before. Without an undue conceit about Freemasonry there was no doubt cause for congratulation on the support given to the Masonic Charities. Of late years there had been a very large influx into the ranks of Masons; and if it progressed in the same proportion in future years there must be an increased demand on the charities of the Order. If the brethren did not lay themselves out for an increase in their charity, and set an example to those who came after them to support the charities, they would be found unequal to their work. Masons had a grave obligation on them to do what they could for the charities, and it was their duty to exert themselves to the utmost to produce success for the charitable Institutions. If they followed up their obligations, the success of the charities was secured, and the success which had been obtained that night filled him with the hope that the other charities would be well supported.

By the special and kind prevision of Bro. James Terry the indefatigable Secretary of the Institution, we are enabled to give a correct London and Provincial list:—

of funds poured into its Treasury. He could answer for one extremity of the country which was perhaps scarcely known to many of the brethren, but which was well-known to him, the poor and not very popular province of Cornwall. That province had not perhaps done much, but it was increasing its support, and he thanked the brethren belonging to that province for doing something towards redeeming its name, and coming to its festival. But he had to propose the Health of the Chairman, although it was not for him, in his grace's presence, to speak at great length. He would however say of him that he was regarded as a genial friend, and a popular neighbour by those amongst whom he lived. He was also looked upon as a true Bro. Mason and an excellent Prov. Grand Master. Last but not least he was a man who whenever he undertook to do anything did it well, as he had that night. The noble Earl concluded by proposing "The Health of the Chairman."

The Chairman in replying, said as a matter of course he was gratified by the way in which the brethren had received his name and also by the kind, the flattering and friendly terms in which Lord Mount Edgumbe had submitted it to the brethren. In passing, he must congratulate his lordship upon the magnificence of the subscriptions from his province, which must be the envy of all the provinces but one, the Province of Herts. (Hear hear.) He (the Chairman) certainly hoped that when he undertook a duty he did it, if not well, at least to the best of his ability. It was very gratifying to him to see before him such a large assemblage, and it was equally gratifying that under his presidency such an enormous subscription had been made to this excellent charity, which they were met to do honour to. He trusted that when they were assembled for matters of peace and charity there was such heartiness among Englishmen that they would not forget their country. He was convinced it was so in this assembly by the ringing cheers which followed Lord Mount Edgumbe's remarks about the sacrifices every Englishman would make for his native land. Not only was it so here, but it was also the case in the colonies, for he could assure the brethren that not only their brother Masons, but their countrymen who were not Masons in the colonies were as heartily, loyally and truly Britons as we ourselves, and only required organization and system to give full support to the country from which they sprang whenever it might be in danger. (Prolonged Cheers.) He trusted with Lord Mount Edgumbe, that lugubrious anticipations might not be realised and that the brethren might never be assembled at a meeting of a less Masonic nature than they were then. He also hoped the future festivals, not only of this charity, but of the other charities, might be as successful as that one. (Cheers.)

Col. Creaton proposed "The Sister Charities." In the Girls' School, twenty-five extra children had recently been admitted, and at the Boys' School, preparations were being made for admitting thirty more boys. These additions would of course entail additional expenditure, but he trusted that the brethren would follow the example which had been shewn that night and support those other two Institutions as liberally. (Hear. hear.)

Bro. F. Binckes replied, and commenced his observations by congratulating the Benevolent Institution on the splendid success it had just had. He knew that the country was suffering from what was commonly called "commercial depression," and we all had our sympathies and anxieties. But in the midst of all the country's depression the Masonic Institution were well supported. It appeared to him an absolute fact, and it was one that carried to his mind a large amount of satisfaction that whatever might be the distress that aggravated the world at large the heart of Masonry was so sound that its Institutions never suffered. He read the reports of other Institutions outside Freemasonry which told him that they all suffered more or less by sacrificing their invested funds to make up their income from year to year. Freemasons' Institutions however never appeared to lack the support which they wanted. After all said and done this was a very good testimony borne by Freemasons themselves to the admirable organisation and management of the Institutions. He congratulated the Benevolent Institution on its success, and trusted that in future years it might have still further success. He now came to a melancholy portion of his duty, to announce that through illness Bro. Little, the Secretary of the Girls' School, was absent, but he hoped that this would not in any way lessen the support to be given to that school.

He hoped rather that it would have a larger amount of support. He was happy to say that for himself God had given him strong health, and he was able to exercise it on behalf of the Boys' School. That he should always exercise, and he hoped the brethren would rally round the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys at the next festival, when the Duke of Connaught would preside.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D., proposed "The Health of the Stewards," to which Bro. Joseph Smith, President of the Board, replied; and after Bro. C. Hutton Gregory, P.G.D., had proposed "The Ladies," the brethren joined the concert party in the temple, and spent the remainder of the evening in listening to a musical entertainment, which, under the direction of Bro. S. Lehmyer, was performed by Madame Liebhardt, Miss Webster, Madame Thaddeus Wells, Miss Blanche Navarre, Miss Helene Armin, Mr Dudley Thomas, Bro. Fredk. Penna, Mr Stanislaus, Mr. Henry Horscraft, and Bro. Wilhelm Ganz.

Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain, will preach a sermon on behalf of the Colonial and Continental Missionary Society, at St. Jude's Church, Mildmay Park, on Sunday next, the 17th inst.

Bro. the Rev. Dr. Abbott, Head Master of the City of London School, has been elected a member of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

ROBERT BURNS LODGE (No. 25).—The meeting of this lodge for the installation of W.M. was held on the 4th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. There were present on the occasion Bros. W. A. Malony, W.M.; G. R. Shervill, S.W.; F. J. Robins, J.W.; Thos. Wingham, P.M.; Treas.; John Dyte, P.M., Sec.; J. Lindner, S.D.; J. S. Hodson, J.D.; M. D. Loewenstark, I.G.; and C. Wynne Assis. Sec. The following were amongst the visitors present:—Bros. Col. Burdett, P.G.M. Middx.; Hyde Clarke, P.G.M. St. Columbia; Fredk. Walters, P.G.D. Middx.; Matthew Cooke, P.M.; John Coutts, P.G.P.; J. R. Gallan, P.M.; J. L. Culpin, H. C. Levander, H. J. Gabb, Henry Venn, Sir John Palmer, J. Austin, George Coleman, Wm. Kirley, W. H. Holroyd, H. Dodson, Sir C. J. Palmer, J. Reinhardt, Chas. Martin, Wallace Wells, A. S. Wield, J. L. Thomas, F. Arnold. The members present were Bros. Wm. Dunn, A. Millar, J. Sanson, J. W. Harvey, Fredk. W. Farmer, Wm. Andrews, F. Biggs, Wm. Brown, J. Btson, H. J. Batson, Thos. Vernon, W. Ponsford, J. Hutchinson, G. A. Denton, S. Morecroft, S. L. Ford, E. W. Collins, J. D. Bellamy, besides several other brethren. The lodge was opened in due form and the minutes of the last lodge were read. The W.M. then opened the lodge in the Second and Third Degrees and Bro. Dunn was raised to the degree of M.M. Afterwards Bro. W. A. Malony W.M. duly presented Bro. G. R. Shervill, S.W., W.M. elect, for installation, and Bro. W. Watson installed him as W.M. for the year ensuing. The proclamations and salutations in each of the degrees having been severally performed, the following officers were appointed by the W.M.: Bros. Robins, S.W.; Lindner, J.W.; Hodson, S.D.; Loewenstark, J.D.; Wynne, I.G.; John Dyte, Secretary; Deacon, Assis. Secretary; Bley, D.C.; Wilson, P.M., W.S. The W.M. then invested Bro. W. A. Malony, P.M., with a P.M.'s jewel, unanimously voted to him at the last meeting of the lodge. Bro. Malony in a short address thanked the brethren for the great honour they had done him in presenting him with such a mark of their esteem and regard, and assured them of his lasting attachment to the lodge, and the interests and welfare of the brethren. Nothing more presenting itself in the shape of business for the brethren to dispose of, the brethren closed lodge, and adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, where a splendid installation banquet was prepared by Bro. Best, and superintended by him and his manager, Bro. E. Dawkins. The toasts were subsequently proposed and honoured. After the toast of "The Queen," and "The M.W.G.M.," had been proposed and drunk, the W.M. proposed "The Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., and Grand Officers," and referred to Col. Burdett, as a Grand Officer who took a lively interest in Freemasonry, and as one under whose active encouragement Freemasonry had made rapid strides that were unexampled, more particularly in his own province. Col. Burdett, he said, had also endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact, and hence he was one of the most popular of Provincial Grand Masters. Another Past Grand Master, Bro. Hyde Clarke, who was present, was one of the most able as well as the most agreeable of men, who had a world-wide reputation as a distinguished and accomplished scholar, whose vast knowledge of men and things was only equalled by his love of Freemasonry. After Col. Burdett had responded, Bro. Hyde Clarke made a few humorous observations about the name of the lodge, which he reminded the brethren was founded before Robert Burns was born. As may be imagined, these remarks created considerable amusement. Bro. W. Watson, P.M., the father of the lodge, responded for the P.M.'s, and stated that this was the fortieth installation meeting of the lodge that he had attended. The toast of "The W.M." was proposed in very complimentary terms by Bro. W. A. Malony, P.M. Bro. Shervill, W.M., in responding, thanked the members of the lodge for having elected him to that high office. It was an office he might well be proud of, for the Robert Burns Lodge was a very famous lodge, and was distinguished alike by its antiquity, its charity, and the harmony and fraternal feelings which prevailed amongst the brethren. In return for the confidence of the brethren which had been bestowed on him he promised to use his best endeavours to promote the prosperity of the lodge and the happiness of all its members. The other toasts were afterwards given and responded to, and the brethren separated. The musical arrangements, which were most ably conducted, were entrusted to Bro. J. S. Hodson, and gave the greatest satisfaction to the members and visitors of the lodge.

PHENIX LODGE (No. 173).—This very prosperous lodge having some weeks ago debated the subject amongst its brethren as to whether an entertainment could not be given to the lady friends of the members of the lodge, it was determined to give a ball, and a committee having been constituted, they arranged that the ball should be held at the Freemasons' Tavern on Monday, Feb. 4th. The ball accordingly took place in the large hall. The W.M. and Committee, Bros. Phillips, Finch, Allen, Blyth, Wiles, Foxley, Culverhouse, Burford, Colwill, Bolding, and Bros. Davie and Güterbock, as joint Hon. Secs., were early in attendance to receive the company, who commenced to arrive soon after 9 o'clock. Bros. Phillips and Bolding acted as M.C.'s. Dancing was commenced at 9.30, and continued until one, when supper was served in the Crown-room, the W.M. in the chair. A most recherché, ample, and elegant supper was served by Bro. Best, and the attention was admirable. The W.M., in proposing "Prosperity to the Phoenix Ball," said that the brethren felt they owed a debt of gratitude to the ladies. It was the ladies who so carefully tended the brethren on their return from the lodge; who greeted them with a cheering smile of encouragement and congratulation when they arrived home; wearied after the laborious working of the lodge, and the slight refreshment of the banquet; it was the ladies who encouraged them to work and excel in Masonry; and why? Because they found that Masonry made them better men, better husbands, better fathers, he was even about to say better sweethearts, and in the desire to acknowledge the ladies' appreciation of Masonry the brethren had invited them to this ball, which, as this was the first attempt on the part of the Phoenix brethren, he could not but say was a great success, there being 136 present, a goodly company for the first try. He hoped the ladies would continue to support Masonry, and render the ball an annual success. The toast of "The Ladies," proposed by the W.M., was responded to by Bro. Davie, who in very felicitous terms thanked the brethren and gentlemen for so heartily drinking their health, and assured the brethren of the ladies' continued support, more especially as long as they invited them to the annual ball of the Phoenix Lodge. Dancing was then re-commenced, and continued until the early morning, every one on leaving expressing how enjoyable an evening had been spent; the catering and arrangement of Bro. Best having given the greatest satisfaction, as also the orchestral arrangements which were provided by Chappell and Co.

LION AND LAMB LODGE (No. 192).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Thursday, the 7th inst. There were present Bros. Edward Jones, W.M.; Henry Legge, S.W.; F. Fellows, J.W.; George Kenning, P.M. and Treasurer; T. Cohn, I.P.M.; George Newman, P.M.; George Abbott, P.M.; E. King, P.M. and Steward; W. T. Rickwood, S.D. and Secretary pro tem. S. T. Lucas, J.D.; E. J. Kellerway, D.C.; W. H. Lee Davies, Org.; R. H. Goddard, Thomas Fisher, W. Figs, J. Cook, George Borer, J. Lorkin, R. E. Bright, Robert Clark, C. G. Sparrow, R. J. Sutherland, R. J. Dart, G. T. Smith, John Kent, Charles Cann, B. Perkins, John Crotty, James Copelin, Thomas Agutter, H. A. Carter and Edwin Hunter. Visitors: Bros. G. C. Young, 820; T. Cracknell, 1524; W. Hallett, W.M. 781; J. N. Thompson, 1695. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the ballot was taken and declared to be unanimously in favour of Mr. J. Guy and Mr. Thomas Parker, who were then regularly initiated into Freemasonry. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. John Crotty answered the usual questions; the lodge was then opened in the Third Degree and the said brother was raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. The lodge was resumed in the First Degree and the lodge regularly proceeded to elect a W.M. for the ensuing year. The choice of the brethren was unanimously in favour of Bro. Henry Legge, S.W. The election of a Treasurer for the ensuing year was next taken, and Bro. George Kenning was declared to be unanimously re-elected. Bro. Kenning having expressed his thanks to the lodge for their continued confidence, the Audit Committee was elected with the addition of Bro. H. A. Carter, T. Fisher, and R. H. Goddard from amongst the members. Notice of motion was given by Bro. George Newman, P.M., seconded by Bro. R. Bright, that a P.M. jewel value ten guineas be presented to Bro. E. Jones, the W.M. in recognition of his services during the past year. The lodge was then closed in due form and adjourned. At the banquet which followed, the usual toasts having been regularly disposed of, the I.P.M., Bro. T. Cohn, gave in felicitous terms "The Health of the W.M.," and congratulated him upon the efficiency of his working. The W.M. having responded proposed "The Health of Bro. Legge, S.W., the W.M. elect," whom he wished, as he had no doubt he would have a prosperous year of office. Bro. Legge having expressed his thanks for the hearty reception the brethren had given to the toast, promised to do his utmost in keeping up the prestige and traditions of an old lodge like the Lion and Lamb, which stood high in Masonry for its liberality to the several Institutions and to the Craft in general. The toasts of the P.M.'s, Treasurer and Secretary pro tem. and the Officers all met with a equally hearty reception, and the Tyler's toast, brought one of the most agreeable meetings of the year to a close.

PERFECT ASHLAR LODGE (No. 1178).—The regular meeting of this well established lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark, on Thursday 7th inst., Bro. F. Garbet, W.M., opened the lodge. He in an able manner initiated Messrs. G. and W. Wainwright, Callingham, Stockwell, and Tomlins, and passed Bro. Allen, to the Second Degree. On the motion made by Bro. W. T. Lover, P.M., and duly seconded, it was unanimously resolved, that ten pounds be taken from the lodge funds and be spent in purchasing a Life Governorship of the Royal Benevolent Institution Male Annuity Fund in name of the W.M., for the time being. The amount to be placed on the list of the W.M., who was representing the lodge at the forthcoming Festival. Some candidates were proposed for initiation at the next lodge meeting. Bro. Willets (1076) was unanimously elected a joining member. After business a good banquet was served under the auspices of Bro. G. H. Spencer, which gave general satisfaction. The regular toasts were given and responded to. After a few hours of an agreeable reunion the brethren separated. There were present Bros. F. H. Ebsworth, P.M., Treasurer; F. Walters, P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M. Secretary, Dr. Dixon, P.M.; G. J. Grace, P.M., D.C. J. H. Harmsworth, P.M., W.S., C. Deakin, P.M.; J. Stock, S.W., T. Simpson, J.W., J. J. Bell, S.D.; T. Quincey, J.D.; G. H. Forder, I.G., besides some 40 members. There were several visitors.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—On the 5th inst., this lodge held its installation meeting at the Club House, Kennington Oval, when there were present Bros. Higgins, W.M.; Reeves, S.W., W.M. elect; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, J.W. (Freemason); Kohler, S.D.; Speedy, J.D.; Webb, I.G.; Page, P.M., P.G.S., Treasurer; Stuart, P.M. 141, Secretary; Everett, I.P.M.; Koch, P.M.; Gardner, P.M.; Drysdale, P.M.; Pope, P.M.; Honeywell,

P.M.; Dobie, Assist. Organist; Robinson, D.C.; Marsden, W.S.; Stokes, A.W.S. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised Bros. Pim and Stevenson, the ceremony being well performed. The report of the Audit Committee having been received and adopted, the ceremony of inducting Bro. Reeves to the chair was performed by Bro. Higgins, assisted by Bros. Drysdale as S.W.; Littell as J.W.; Pope as I.G.; and Everett as D.C.; the whole of the impressive ritual being carried out by the I.P.M. in a manner that left nothing to be desired. The officers invested were Bros. Walls, S.W.; Kohler, J.W.; Speedy, S.D.; Webb, J.D.; Marsden, I.G.; Page, Treasurer; Stuart, Secretary; Honeywell, Organist; Robinson, D.C.; Stokes, W.S.; Stranger, A.W.S. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to the Pavilion, where an excellent banquet, superintended by Bro. Timewell, awaited them. The visitors were Bros. Clark, P.M., P.P.G.S. of Works, Middlesex; Littell, P.M. 860; Pain, P.M. 1339; Keen, P.M. 1415; Poupard, W.M. Ivy; Hancock, J.W. 1687; Weeks, Secretary 1641; Everett, jun., 177; Davies, 177; Downie, 186; Moore, 548; Clemence, 749; Spencer, 1260; Trimmings, 1507; Holloway, 1622. The preliminary toasts having been disposed of, "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by the I.P.M. in very kind and flattering terms, and having been duly honoured, Bro. Reeves replied by stating, that in the proudest moment of his Masonic life, he felt more than he could possibly express in words. On the night of his initiation he had formed so high an opinion of Freemasonry that he inwardly determined to strive for the position which he then had the honour of holding, namely, that of Master. He had been highly impressed with the ceremonial that day, and he hoped to have a useful and happy year of office, and to discharge the duties of the trust reposed in him in a satisfactory manner, aided by the valuable counsels of the Past Masters. In conclusion, he felt gratified at the warmth in which his health had been proposed by the I.P.M. and received by the brethren. "The Visitors" having been duly proposed and acknowledged, the W.M. gave the "Past Masters." In introducing this toast the W.M. said, that on that particular occasion the services of the I.P.M. would necessarily bear a more prominent position than those of the other representatives of that body, because it was his pleasing duty to present Bro. Higgins with a Past Master's jewel, as a souvenir of his year of office, and as a slight acknowledgment of the valuable services he had rendered to the lodge. Their I.P.M. was a good working Mason, and possessed other qualities which he personally highly esteemed. This toast having been duly drunk, the I.P.M. replied by stating that when he took the position of Master last year he entered upon the duties with a certain amount of diffidence, but thanks to the kind assistance of the Past Masters he had experienced no difficulties. He felt it his duty on that occasion to express publicly his obligations to those brethren, and notably to Bros. Everett, Page, and Stuart, the three Past Masters, who had not only lightened his labours, but had made their discharge a positive pleasure. In conclusion, he thanked the members for the very handsome jewel that he that evening had been presented with, and hoped that he should live many years to wear it as a memento of their esteem. The remaining toasts were "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers." During the evening Bros. Honeywell, Walls, and others, instrumentally and vocally entertained the brethren, who separated at a late hour until the first Tuesday in the ensuing month.

GRANITE LODGE (No. 1328).—The installation of the new Master of this lodge was performed last Saturday, at Freemasons' Hall. During the eight years of the lodge's existence a steady and continual success has attended it, and the number of its members is at the present time considerable. As a proof of its success it is only necessary to look at the balance sheet, which on Saturday last was read by Bro. J. Lewis Thomas, Secretary, and approved and passed unanimously. From this it appeared that its receipts for the past year amounted to £460, and its expenditure to £351 2s. 10d., leaving a balance in favour of the lodge of £109 0s. 3d. To this balance had to be added the sum of £107 7s. 6d., members' subscriptions due, payable and paid at the installation meeting. The balance therefore in hand at the present time, exclusive however of the banquet and expenses of the installation meeting of 1878, was £216 7s. 9d. The management of the lodge business therefore must have been of the best, and the result reflects the greatest credit on all the brethren who have hitherto borne a part in it. The brethren's opinion of this management found expression in the gifts made to the late Treasurer, Bro. Hackford, an account of which will be found in the course of this report. Lodge was opened at five o'clock p.m. by the W.M., Bro. Frederick West, Provincial Grand Registrar, Surrey, a brother who has passed a most successful year in the chair of the lodge, and who has done his work to the entire satisfaction of all the brethren. At the opening of the lodge he was supported by all his officers and a large attendance of brethren and several visitors. After the lodge had been opened, and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, Bro. Reginald C. Mount, S.W., and W.M. elect, was presented to Bro. West for installation. Bro. West then proceeded to instal Bro. Mount, and placed him in the chair of King Solomon for the year 1878. After the processions and salutations in the Three Degrees, and the presentation of the working tools, the warrant of the lodge, the Book of Constitutions and the bye-laws, the W.M. invested the following brethren as officers to assist him during his year of office: Bros. R. Payne, S.W.; J. Rhodes, J.W.; Bosworth, Treas.; J. L. Thomas, P.M., Sec.; the Rev. J. Welsh Thomas, Chaplain; Turner, S.D.; Frank Kirk, J.D.; Oswald Gardner, I.G.; Algernon Mount, M.C.; Cecil Saunders, Organist; Thomas Wilson, W.S.; and Bro. Woodstock, Tyler. Bro. West then delivered the addresses to the Master, Wardens, and brethren, and on resuming his seat was greeted with enthusiastic cheers. The W.M. immediately rose, and, addressing Bro. West, said he did not think it was possible he could have a more pleasant duty to perform than that which now fell to his lot. He was authorised by the lodge to present Bro. West with a P.M.'s jewel in open lodge. It was needless to tell Bro. West how worthily the brethren thought he had won that jewel, because he was aware that at the last lodge the brethren voted him something else to be added to it. That something else took the form of a smaller jewel, which also he (the W.M.) had great pleasure in presenting. Although Bro. West had won them both, the latter was an especial mark of worth, as it was given in respect of the excellence of the work Bro. West had done. He trusted that Bro. West would live long to wear both these jewels, and to look back on his year office in the Granite Lodge as being the most successful it had had. (Hear, hear.) Bro. West in acknowledging the present said it was a very proud moment for him to receive at the hands of the W.M. of the Granite Lodge such tokens of esteem. He had done nothing more than every Englishman would do, and what he undertook to do when he went into the chair. However, it was very pleasing for him to find the brethren thought he had fulfilled his duties. He trusted that he should be able to preserve these jewels and wear them amongst the other P.M.'s of the lodge; and whenever he looked at the jewels they would remind him of the kindness he had received during his year of office at the hands of the brethren. (Cheers.) Bro. Hackford, Past Treasurer, was then presented to the W.M., who, addressing him, said he had already performed one very pleasing duty, and before he entered the chair he did not think it would have fallen to his share to have to perform another such pleasurable task. Another jewel was to be presented to Bro. Hackford, but he thought a higher and older member of the lodge would have been called upon to present it. But he was sure that, whoever had to present it, it could not be presented with better feelings than he possessed on the matter. The jewel was a token presented by the members of the lodge, unanimously voted by every member of the lodge for the work of Treasurer while he had held that office, for the kindness and geniality he had always shown, for the advice he had always been ready to give, and for the many excellent qualities he had exhibited. In recognition of the esteem and respect in which he was held by the brethren, they presented Bro. Hackford with this jewel, and trusted he might live long to wear it. (Cheers.) In acknowledging the presentation, Bro. Hackford said the brethren would not expect him to say much. It had fallen to his lot that night to be placed in a very unpleasant position, inasmuch as he could not find words to express his deep sense of the honour he felt had been conferred upon him by the members of the Granite Lodge. To the W.M. for the very kind manner in which he had been pleased to present the jewel he was deeply grateful. He was also grateful to the lodge. For the past seven years he had endeavoured to do his duty as Treasurer of the lodge. For the first two or three years the office had been a sinecure, but during the remainder of the period he certainly had had a great deal of work, and he felt he had guarded the funds truly and well, or he would not have had this jewel presented to him. It had been said by some one that if a man needed praise all he had got to do was to die, and then men would speak well of him. He thought he was wiser than the ancient Greeks, as he had elicited praise without dying. He thanked the lodge not only or especially for the jewel, but for the kindness of the brethren in giving it him simply for doing his duty; and he thanked them not only for the jewel but for enabling him to have a life governorship for his daughter in the Aged Freemasons' Institution. He not only announced to the brethren members of the lodge but also to the visitors, that the vote for the jewel was so large that only one half was required for the jewel, and the other half was then invested in the purchase of the life governorship he had mentioned. He felt this compliment deeply, because when it should please the G.A.O.T.U. to call him to the Grand Lodge above, which would in due time happen, his daughter if spared by Providence might still look upon her position as a governor in the Aged Freemasons' Institution with pleasure and gratitude to the Granite Lodge, and might in some slight degree experience the estimation in which her father was held by the lodge. He must say one word on behalf of his friend Bro. James Lewis Thomas, who had assisted him so ably in his duties during the time he had been Treasurer. Bro. Oliver and his predecessors had been of great assistance to him while they were the Secretaries of the lodge, and he thanked them very much, but he must especially thank Bro. Thomas for making his (Bro. Hackford's) duties very light. He was sorry to resign his position; but he felt bound to do so; he could not help it; for on the nights when the Granite Lodge met he might be north, south, east or west, he did not know where, and he thought he was only doing right under those circumstances to resign. Wishing prosperity to the lodge and that his successor might be found as good as he he had been (and he had not the slightest doubt he would be superior), he thanked the brethren very heartily. Before the lodge was closed Bro. J. Lewis Thomas, Secretary, read the correspondence, among which was a circular from the Boys' School soliciting a Steward for the next festival, which is to be presided over by the Duke of Connaught, G.S.W., and as no brother had yet offered himself for that office, Bro. F. West, I.P.M., said he should be happy to take it upon himself. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren retired to Freemasons' Tavern, where a splendid repast was provided for them in the Crown Room. After dinner the usual list was proceeded with. The toasts of "The Queen and the Craft" and "the M.W.G.M." having been duly honoured, the W.M. gave that of "The Pro G.M., &c." to which Col. Burdett, Pro. G.M. Middlesex responded. In doing so he said he had been so often called upon to reply to this toast that he had considerable difficulty in diversifying what he had to say; still at the same time he felt that the brethren round the table and their W.M. would be most ready at every possible time to support not only the Pro G.M. but the Dep. G.M., in all the work they had to do. They might be sure that the work of those noblemen would not be so easily carried out if it were not for the support they derived from the Masters of different lodges and their officers. For himself he might say he was very much gratified, and no doubt the Pro G.M. and Dep. G.M. were equally gratified at the support they received from their subordinate officers, and from the reports they received from them of the manner in which Masonic duties were performed in the lodges they had the honour to visit. It was the province and duty of the Grand officers to visit various lodges and to see how the duties were there performed, and to report upon what they saw to the Grand Lodge, whether the work was or was not properly carried out. He had had a great deal of pleasure in being present that evening at the Granite Lodge, for he had found there that the work was most satisfactorily performed by the I.P.M., Bro. Fred West, who was unquestionably an experienced Mason. Bro. West had been but a short time a member of the Order, but he had given proofs of his experience for the last twelve months as Master of this lodge. He had shown that he was thoroughly able to perform the duties required of him, and it was additionally gratifying to find that he completed his year of office by installing in the chair his successor in as able and complete a style as he (Col. Burdett) had ever witnessed. From the way in which the newly installed Master had invested his officers and conducted the subsequent business of the lodge there was a full reason for certainty that he also would discharge the duties of the chair as ably as his predecessor. The Wardens who had been appointed had also shown their skill and ability, and this was a proof that the W.M. had made a wise selection. (Hear, hear.) Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D., also acknowledged the toast and said he could almost wish that the W.M. had spared him from answering the toast. After what the brethren had heard from Col. Burdett he was sure that anything he could say must fall flat. At the present moment he was unhappily suffering from that which if he had not had a very strong feeling of goodwill towards the Granite Lodge would have kept him away from one of the most pleasant evenings he had ever passed in his life. He trusted he might be excused, after what had fallen from Col. Burdett (with every word of which he thoroughly agreed, regarding the value of the Grand Officers in seeing the progress of lodges and the satisfaction it gave them to witness the accession to the Masonic ranks, the strength of this lodge, the mode in which it worked, the harmony and unity which pervaded its members, and the principles of Masonry which were enshrined in their practice), from saying much; but while in every way concurring with Col. Burdett's remarks he trusted he might be pardoned if he ventured to utter a word of advice. A time of adversity had its difficulties and dangers; but a time of prosperity must be carefully kept up by sincere and earnest work, by a desire to keep that standard which had been attained already, by a thorough and earnest desire and effort on the part of every one concerned in the lodge, more particularly the officers, to support the dignity of the lodge, to make its working at least not inferior in the future to what it had been in the past, and to maintain unsullied that reputation which had been so well won, and which so eminently befitted the lodge at the present moment. He did not say for one single moment, nor would he intend to imply, that in the Granite Lodge there were elements which would tend to depreciate that which the brethren had already attained; but he did venture to say that that high position they had attained in the Craft, which of late years had made great strides forward, which had risen in public estimation beyond whatever was known in the history of Freemasonry, which, when at a critical period of its existence it lost its head, the Heir to the Throne, he would not say condescended, but came forward to be its chief in England, the lodges of this country must be careful—and the Granite Lodge in particular, which had so distinguished a reputation, would be careful—to maintain and to extend the name of English Freemasonry in all that was good, both in the Masonic principles which were embodied in our Order, and in the working of the lodge and the harmony and unity of its members. (Hear.) Bro. F. West rose to propose "The Health of the W.M." On the present occasion he had particular pleasure in proposing the toast, for the W.M. and himself were initiated together in this lodge along with Past Master Muggeridge, and he was happy to say that on one occasion the three chairs were filled with the first three initiates. The brethren had seen two of them pass the chair, and they had installed to-night the third. They might therefore imagine that it was with considerable feelings of pleasure that he (Bro. West) performed that ceremony; and he must say that when he called upon Bro. Mount to take the obligation he felt that in doing so he was simply asking him to take a vow which he himself (Bro. West) conscientiously believed Bro. Mount was able to carry out, and which he believed in twelve months, when he was occupying a position among the P.M.'s, the brethren would be as convinced as he was now of his fitness for the important post which he had taken that evening. To be Master of a lodge like the Granite Lodge (and he was proud to hear so much said of it by the Grand Officers present, though it was not the first time he had heard such remarks concerning this lodge by Grand Officers) was a circumstance to be proud of; but it must make a Master conscious of having very great duties to perform. He sincerely hoped that as the lodge had been through its time of difficulties, as all new lodges must, it was now on the way to success, even if it had not already attained it. It had attained it in

(who had favoured the lodge with his company at great personal inconvenience), diversifying the formalities with some excellent singing. After the toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," "The Pro G.M.," "The Deputy G.M.," and the rest of the G. Officers, Past and Present," had been honoured, Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., in responding to the toast of "The Grand Officers," said, W. Sir, Officers and Brethren:—It is always a great privilege for anyone to have to respond in a meeting of his brother Masons, for the Present and Past Grand Officers of England, and I venture to esteem it not only a particular privilege but a very great pleasure personally, this evening, that my name has been so kindly associated with that toast in the Aldersgate Lodge. It was my happiness a year ago to officiate at the consecration of this new lodge, and I rejoice to be permitted to be present at the installation of its second W.M., as I am convinced that he is most entirely calculated to act in such a manner as to conduce to the harmony and happiness, to advance the efficiency and prosperity of this young lodge. (Applause.) The brethren present, doubtless have, as I have, a lively remembrance of the promising circumstances under which this lodge was inaugurated, when our esteemed Bro. P.M. Derby Allcroft, took the chair for the first time. I sincerely hope that the good fellowship, cordiality, and brotherly feeling of the members will ever be maintained, and that the Aldersgate Lodge has a goodly career of Masonic work and Masonic beneficence before it. (Applause.) It appears to me, W. Sir, that on an occasion like this, when many old and distinguished members of our Order are assembled together, and many young members are present, that it cannot be inopportune to say a word or two, on the great [and praiseworthy] claims of our ancient and honourable institution on the attachment of its members, and the good will of mankind. Freemasonry is a most peculiar society, for it conciliates firm friendships amid men of the most contracted views, and while it discountsenances all religious and political controversies, it binds together in one brotherhood men of different nations and opinions in a common union of sympathy and interest. Within the doors of the lodge there are none of those unhappy differences and disputes which often so agitate the outer world. Masons are a "band of brothers," they meet as brethren, work as brethren, part as brethren, happy to meet, happy to part, and happy to meet again, (applause.) Among them are none of those rivalries and severances and jealousies, which so militate often with, and mar the peaceful progress and general happiness of the human race. I have been, W. Sir, for many years now a Freemason, having been initiated in 1842, and I have always found, that to belong to the brotherhood was a great blessing, for it taught me the useful lessons of toleration and forbearance in respect of the opinions of others. I have spent, as all have spent, many happy hours within the lodge, afar, in its tranquil retreat, from those petty questions and hurtful contests, those unkindly words and uncharitable acts, which too often make the course of the world without. (Applause.) In Freemasonry I have met men of all shades of belief and modes of thought. In Freemasonry I have associated with true and loyal and honourable men, animated towards each other by that intense feeling of active sympathy and unselfish regard, which ought always to characterize Freemasons. I feel proud of belonging to that great body, which under our Royal Grand Master has so wonderfully sped forward, and is now in such undimmed prosperity, presenting to the world—a goodly appearance of charitable work, an animated front of happy and peaceful union. (Applause.) In other countries I am sorry to say, France and Belgium especially, questions are now agitating Freemasonry which seem to undermine the whole framework of the Order. Standing in the safe and sacred path of the past, and by the truths and traditions which we have received from our forefathers, it is the determination of English Masons never to deviate from the ancient landmarks of the Order, and I believe, I speak the sentiment of all English Freemasons when I say, that nothing will induce us to tamper with the venerable and cosmopolitan teaching of Freemasonry. As God fearing, and God acknowledging men and Masons, we never will allow our good old Masonic Bark to drift from its moorings to the Rock of ages. (Applause.) Let me in conclusion remind the junior members of the lodge, that the future work and prestige of English Freemasonry are in their hands, and that they are bound to take up those duties which the older members of the Craft have performed, and I will say so well, in their time and generation. Remember, I repeat, that the happiness, prosperity, and union of the Order are dependant on the zeal and assiduity with which the successors of us the old Masons display in promulgating the tenets, and upholding the charitable work of the Craft. (Cheers.) Let me thank you once more on behalf of my brethren, the present and past Grand Officers, for the kindness with which you have received the toast connected with their names. (Applause.) The W.M. next proposed "The Installing Master, the Grand Secretary of England." (Cheers.) He said that to this illustrious brother they were all very much indebted, as he was kind enough last year to come and consecrate the lodge, and this year he had come again to perform the ceremony of installation of the second Master. The debt of gratitude which he (the W.M.) owed to Bro. Hervey was such that he would like to find some new words to express that gratitude. Bro. Hervey was an honorary member of perhaps a thousand lodges, certainly of some hundreds, and as he had, he supposed, in the course of time visited them all, he (the W.M.) was quite sure that all the eulogistic terms which could possibly be used by human tongues had been repeated more than once by the brethren, when they tried to express their sincere admiration for his talents and devotion to Freemasonry. He felt convinced that every note on the key-board of praise, every string on the harp of eulogium had been touched already, and now whilst he endeavoured to find for himself a new strain or an untrodden path, he was obliged to have recourse to the old classics and to the old people of Rome and Greece, and say that he wished it was still the custom at banquets to adorn the honoured guests with "convivales coronæ." Still he did not think that such a wreath would be good enough for such a guest as Bro. Hervey. He (the W.M.) would rather, as they said in the ceremony of the evening, remember that, as Masons, they did not belong to the popular or uninstructed world, but to a select body of men. Therefore, let them suppose, for a moment, that they belonged to the patrician and priestly order of the "Salii," who used to wear, in ancient Rome, at their festival held about this time of the year, the "corona utilis" a wreath composed of the choicest leaves of the most beautiful roses sewn together. And then, he would, with all the skill he could possibly impart to his fingers, weave the most delicate wreath. And as King Solomon has compared the object of his admiration and love to the "Rose of Sharon," he would entwine some leaves of that beautiful flower with lilies of the valley and place that fragrant wreath on the venerable head of Bro. Hervey. This might be he hoped, a new and fresh tribute of the unbounded esteem and affection of the brethren for the Grand Secretary of England. He (the W.M.) trusted this would not be taken as flattery, for he only expressed the sentiments of his heart, as he felt the greatest admiration for the talents of Bro. Hervey and his devotion to the Craft. (Great cheering.) Bro. Hervey, in reply to the toast, said that when a man found himself in a difficulty the best thing he could do was to face it and endeavour to get out of it as he best might. That was his case at the present moment. The little service he had rendered that evening, certainly, he could scarcely think, with all deference to the W.M., had justified the high encomiums he had been kind enough to pass on him (Bro. Hervey.) True it was, at all times, his services were at the order of his brother Masons, and he was always glad when he could be of any service. If he had been of any service that evening he was pleased, and he could only say that he felt it an honour, having consecrated the lodge twelve months ago, to be asked by the I.P.M. to perform the installation ceremony. If those duties had been acceptable to the brethren and the W.M., he was amply repaid, and he could only return the brethren his cordial thanks for the kindness with which the W.M. had proposed his health, and say how pleased and glad he was to have had the opportunity of placing the W.M. in the chair, which he was sure he would honour. Bro. J. D. Allcroft next rose to propose "The Health of the W.M." He said that if there was a position in which a man would desire to be placed it was that position in which he was then placed, to speak of their friend of the Craft and brother in the chair, as the Master of the lodge, because he could look back to the time before this lodge was instituted, and to the friendship and esteem that he had formed for some years for their W.M. It was a great happiness in life when Providence cast men into a place where they were surrounded by very nice people whom they could love, and respect. God had been good to him in that respect, by casting his lot in many ways, and certainly in fulfilling that part, and among the pleasures that he had obtained in that way was the becoming acquainted with, and having the friendship of the W.M. The W.M. was one of those men, as he (Bro. Allcroft) read character, and as his experience of life taught him, who most thoroughly fulfilled those old Masonic duties of brotherly love, relief, and truth. In every one of those points he would challenge any man in the city of London to find any fault with Bro. Brette. He would hold him up as a very strong and sound pattern of all those qualities. And now when they came within the lodge and saw the way in which he had passed through the office of S.W., and the way in which that night he had carried out the duties of the chair, he thought as sitting in the Chair of K.S. he was a very worthy successor of all who had ever filled such a chair before him. He thought from the sample they had seen that evening they had every reason to be gratified and proud with the prospect that was before them of the way in which the work of this lodge would be conducted in the year that was to come. He would now ask the brethren to join him in offering their testimony on those points, and to drink with him to their friend, Bro. Brette, good health, every blessing during his year of office, a long continuance of the many favours that he had received, and might he have an increasing rise in his various degrees beyond those he had already obtained. They all knew the steady perseverance of his character and the determination with which he took up everything, and the hearty goodwill he threw into all his pursuits. (Great cheering.) The W.M. in answer, said he did not know how to reply to Bro. Allcroft's kind expressions and the enthusiasm of the brethren. He could only say that in accepting office, he had made up his mind to work, and that if God Almighty gave him strength during the ensuing year he hoped he would have plenty to do and many candidates to initiate. He assured the brethren, that in the absence of any candidates, he would take good care that they should have explanations of some of the tracing boards or even some lectures on the different degrees, as he had made up his mind that during his year of office their Bro. Junior Warden would never call them to refreshment without having had labour to perform. Were he not suffering from a bad cold he would have liked to say a few words about the duties of the chair, as he understood them, but he would wait for another occasion, and content himself with thanking the brethren from the very bottom of his heart for their kind expression of good wishes towards him, and he hoped that this night twelve months when he retired from the chair he would have earned by honest work their esteem and regard. (Cheers.) The W.M. next proposed "The Masonic Charities," and reminded the brethren that about ten days after the lodge was consecrated last year he had the honour of representing it at the festival of the Benevolent Institution with a list of £100. This year the I.P.M. was going to be the Steward to that fund, on Wednesday, (the 13th). This year also Bro. Altman was to be the Steward for the Girls' and Bro. Allcroft for the Boys'. They were anxious that the Aldersgate Lodge should take a conspicuous place among the Stewards of those festivals, and in proposing this toast he would couple with it the name of Bro. Landell, who had always been advocating the cause of the charities. (Applause.) Bro. W. W. Landell, P.G. Steward, said he had been a Mason for fifty-six years, come April, and it had always been his wish to take that part which a Mason ought to take. He hoped he had done so, but he had not done so in large amounts, but frequently; and he thought Bro. Hervey would find his name in some place or other. What he gave, however, was given in good will. That was called a personal remark, but he mentioned it for an encouragement to those who might follow him, to whom the W.M. had addressed his exhortation. He would very heartily recommend them to gratify themselves by going to Grand Lodge and the Lodge of Benevolence, where they would see the bounty dispersed month by month. It was one of the most exciting and satisfactory sights any one could witness. After a man had roved about the city of London fourscore years and found himself in a lodge like this, where his name was mentioned with respect, it was very gratifying, but it was not the individual himself but the Craft which had brought that honour upon him; it was his obedience to that Craft, that love to it which tied him to it, which enabled him to stand before the brethren now in that honoured position. He would say that the smallest mite—the widow's mite—given in hearty Masonic feeling, that was worth all the rest. He had already done his part, but he should not let that principle drop, for he should animate his scion, his grandson, (Bro. John Jackson) to subscribe always. He thought he had done his duty only, and if he could extend his feelings to his grandson he should be pleased. His time on earth was now but short, but if T.G.A.O.T.U. spared him he might teach his grandson to be useful in his generation, to imbibe the principles of the W.M. in the chair, and to tread in his (Bro. Landell) footsteps, who loved the society so much, that though in a humble way, he had tried to assist it. Let him give in sincerity, and exhibit that brotherly love, relief, and truth which he had promised to adhere to. In this spirit he had supported the Institution. Fifty years ago he became a subscriber to the Girls'; to the Boys' afterwards; and he thought it was the least he could do to recommend his grandson to follow him up. He trusted he might be privileged to thank the W.M., and to hope that he had up to the present moment upheld the principles of Masonry, and when he was not able to take office himself his friends and scions might recollect that he (Bro. Landell) had been a good Mason. (Great cheering.) The W.M. proposed "The Health of the I.P.M." Twelve months ago the lodge was proposed, and it was owing to the great munificence and liberality of Bro. Allcroft that it was started. On Wednesday Bro. Allcroft would be a Vice-Patron of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and at the next festival of the Girls' School he would be Vice-Patron of that Charity. Lastly, at the Boys' Festival, in June or July, he would be Vice-Patron of that School also. This was a great honour for the Aldersgate Lodge to see their first W.M. Vice-Patron of the three Masonic Charities, in the same year. The brethren knew what Bro. Allcroft had done outside Masonry, in the City of London, at Christ's Hospital, of which he was the Treasurer, and in the country at large. In whatever position he was he won the greatest esteem, and he (the W.M.) respecting him very highly in the Institutions he had mentioned, (Christ's Hospital), still felt that respect enhanced when he found he was an old Mason. Bro. Allcroft was initiated in 1847, and when it was proposed to start the Aldersgate Lodge the brethren thought they could not do better than to have him for their first W.M. The brethren had that evening presented him with a P.M.'s jewel as a mark of their esteem and respect, and they hoped that he might be long spared to enjoy the affection of all those who were near and dear to him, as well as the esteem and friendly regard of his fellow citizens, but especially the deep regard, great affection and high esteem of all the brethren of the Aldersgate Lodge. (Cheers.) Bro. Allcroft replied. He said the jewel presented to him he should cherish and love, and he hoped, look upon with great delight so long as God should spare him. It was one of those jewels which he should feel the greatest pride in wearing, and he hoped to be spared to come from year to year into the Aldersgate Lodge. It would be to him a remembrance of the brethren's kind forbearance, in the year that had passed. He regretted he had not had a more efficient training before he undertook (unadvisedly and rashly as he thought) the office of Master of this lodge. He had been a Mason thirty years, and that period added on to a man's life made it very difficult for him to pick up the threads of his duty and to store them up in his mind. His mind was full of figures, of little boys and girls, and domestic duties which were paramount with him. There was one pleasure which he should always remember. In the past year the ceremonies of initiation, passing and raising had been beautifully performed by Bro. Hyde Pullen, and he (Bro. Allcroft) thanked him now very much for having done so. The Aldersgate Lodge was now well started, and it would prosper. It had been his ambition that it should succeed and be one of the best of lodges. When he should be relegated to the quiet place of worn out men and put on one side, he hoped to enjoy seeing the work well performed. He wished to say to the young Masons that there were great openings in Masonic life before them, if they would persevere and thoroughly master the subjects which came before them, and give their mind and heart to the principles and duties of Masonry and the cultivation of them, the lodge would from year to year grow. He was quite sure the working of Bro. Brette, would be such as to induce them to strive to come up to his standard. The toasts of "The Visitors," "The Treas. and Sec." and "The Officers," followed, and the Tyler's Toast brought a charming evening to a conclusion.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge, (No. 41).—The annual festival was held at the Masonic Hall on Thursday, February 7th. The lodge was opened at 4.15 by Bro. F. Wilkinson, W.M., supported by Bros. Brown, I.P.M. and P.G.S.W.; Falkner, S.W.; C. Wilkinson, J.W.; Ashley, Treas. and P.M.; Braham, Sec.; J. Turner, P.M., as Dir. of Cers.; Gummer, S.D.; Hunt, J.D.; Radway, I.G.; Robinson and Mercer, Stewards; Bigwood, Tyler. The P.M.'s present were Bros. Major Preston, P.P.G.S.W.; Moutrie, Dr. Hopkins, P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire. There were also many members of No. 41. As visitors, Bros. Genl. Doherty, P.P.G.S.W. and P.M. 53 and 906; E. T. Payne, P.G.D., P.M. 53, and P.G. Treas.; Col. Ford, P.M. 53, and P.P.G.R.; Gauntley, P.M. 632, and P.G. Sup. Wks.; Dill, P.M. 966, and P.G.P.; H. Culliford Hopkins, W.M. 379; Edwards, W.M. 53; Sumsion, P.M. 855; H. Gore, P.M. 379; E. Jones, P.M. 68; F. Neebe, 1254; Freeman, Stewd. 906. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Many letters of apology for absence were read, chiefly on account of illness. A grant of ten guineas was made to the Girls' School, to be placed on the list of the D.P.G.M., who proposes to attend the annual festival as a Steward. The bye-laws were read by the Sec. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, but the W.M. announced that the candidate named in the summons could not make it convenient to attend, therefore the installation would be proceeded with. The chair was taken by Bro. Ashley, as Installing Master. Bro. F. Wilkinson was presented on his reappointment as W.M. by Bro. Moutrie. The usual preliminaries were gone through, including the reading of and assent to the charges, and the obligation of W.M. elect was administered. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, in which Bro. F. Wilkinson was again placed in his chair, as in this case it was unnecessary to open a Board of Installed Masters. Bro. Brown was re-invested as I.P.M., after which the Installing Master called on Bro. Dr. Hopkins to give the Masonic application of his jewel containing the 47th proposition of the 1st Book of Euclid, with which request he complied. The lodge was brought down to the Second and then to the first Degree, the usual salutations and proccamations, &c., being given in each case. The following brethren were appointed and invested as officers for the next year: Falkner, S.W.; Braham, J.W.; Ashley, Treas.; Gummer, Sec.; Wilton, D.C.; Hunt, S.D.; Radway, J.D.; Robinson, I.G.; Mercer and Holmes, Stewards; Bigwood, Tyler. Bro. Ashley concluded the ceremony by delivering the addresses to the W.M., Wardens, and brethren in so eloquent a manner as to elicit loud applause from those present. The W.M. briefly thanked the brethren for the honour conferred upon him by his re-appointment as W.M. Bro. Dr. Hopkins proposed a cordial vote of thanks to the Installing Master for his services, remarking that, accustomed as he had been for 30 years to witness installations, he had never seen one performed more efficiently even as to the correct rendering of it, but in the present instance it had moreover been characterised by unusual eloquence, gracefulness, fervour and deep feeling, and from his own personal experience he could testify to the care and attention requisite for so perfect a ceremony. As one of the oldest P.M.'s present (though not of this lodge) he could not refrain from the earnest expression of his gratification, which he was sure would meet with a hearty response on the part of the brethren. This was seconded by the W.M. and carried by acclamation. Bro. Ashley briefly acknowledged the compliment and the earnestness with which it had been offered. Votes of thanks were also passed to the officers of the past year and to the visitors. The lodge was closed at 6 o'clock, and the brethren adjourned to the Castle Hotel for the annual banquet.

NORWICH.—Union Lodge (No. 52).—The annual installation and banquet of this lodge (W.M., Bro. Tyssen-Amhurst) took place on Tuesday, 14th inst., at the Norfolk Hotel, the ceremony being effectively performed by that worthy veteran of Freemasonry, Major Penrice, D.P.G.M. of Norfolk. Colonel Boileau was the gallant brother on whom this honour fell, and he afterwards appointed his officers as follows:—Chas. Cubitt, S.W.; Sir Francis Boileau, J.W.; A. H. Santy, S.D.; Spencer Stevens, J.D.; R. H. Walpole, I.G.; G. C. Stephens, Secretary and Treasurer; Waldo Cholmeley, Chaplain. Mr. H. S. Gilman, of Gowhatty, Assam, India, was an initiate. The banquet which followed was of a recherché character; there was a large gathering of the lodge and visiting brethren, among the latter being Lord Suffield, R.W. Prov. G.M. of Norfolk, who, in response to his health, made the gratifying announcement that Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had intimated to him his willingness to lay the foundation stone of the projected Masonic Hall, should the time fixed be convenient. The ground is being cleared, and we may expect to see the work commenced shortly. The usual routine of toasts followed, and the proceedings were of a most pleasant character.

KING'S LYNN.—Philanthropic Lodge (No. 107).—This lodge is par excellence the pick of the province so far as membership is concerned, while its working is admirable. The Duke's Head has the finest lodge room in Norfolk, "which nobody can deny," and Jolly Host Marshall, the Royal Posting Master, leaves not a stone unturned in ministering to the comfort and requirements of the brethren, at the head of whom stands the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of all England; indeed we believe "Unclaimed Money: A Handy Book for Heirs and Next of Kin." By EDWARD PRESTON. Allen, 11, Ave Maria Lane.

Everybody, it is said, likes "Money," and nobody certainly objects to find himself entitled to a nice little sum, lying snugly in the "Unclaimed Dividends." We think, then, that Mr. Preston deserves the thanks of the community for the publication of his interesting little work. The only objection to it is that it is practically incomplete and imperfect. What we want is not a general statement, but a careful list of all unclaimed dividends, whether in Consols or South Sea Stock. We never could conceive why there should be any "reticence" on the part of our officials in the matter. It is so manifestly "pro bono publico" that all such facts should be made known, that we cannot conceive, except upon the most antiquated principles of the "Circumlocution Office," why such information should any longer be denied to the public. We are well aware of the old stereotyped objection of Mr. Chief Clerk Grogan, that such "mistaken publicity will lead to a great deal of correspondence, cause many law-suits, encourage many impostors, and in fact, give a great deal of trouble to the office." Even supposing that it does so, we have to think of the public, not of the office, and it is so manifestly for the general good, that we wonder in these reforming days any hesitation remains at the subject. We desiderate a proper official publication, to be had at a cheap rate, of all unclaimed sums in Dividends, South Sea Stock Prize money, and the Chancery Suitors' Fund, as there can be no doubt, that much money which is now locked up would be claimed by the representatives of those, who are in utter ignorance of the existence of such sums of money at all. This would be for the good of trade and all concerned. Mr. Preston gives us for instance a tantalising selection of unclaimed South Sea dividends. Why does he not publish the whole original list?

The work is both amusing and interesting in the highest degree.

"Catalogue of Books in the Library of the Supreme Council, 33, Golden-square."

We have received and studied with gratification this interesting Catalogue. It is the most complete of any public Masonic or quasi Masonic body in this country. Unfortunately Grand Lodge has no library much in our humble opinion to the discredit of English Masons and English Masonry, but at present we fear there is little prospect of rousing our English Craft from their mistaken and culpable apathy. The Supreme Council, wise in their generation, have now got together a very important collection of books, and we congratulate them sincerely and admiringly on the fact, as a fact. We have run through the Catalogue, and are struck by its fulness under some heads if we are equally affected by its weakness under others. But nothing can be done in a hurry, and least of all can a Masonic Library be easily collected. As was to be expected while it abounds in Hermetic and high grade publications, it is deficient in early Craft books. It also seems to want many German and modern works, but when we have said this, we have said all. It is a most interesting and valuable collection, and those who have got it together, and those who have arranged it, claim the greatest encomiums from all Masonic readers and students. We wish, as we said above, that we could see our way to hope, that our Grand Lodge will follow so good an example. It ought to have the finest Masonic Library in the world, but alas! it has practically none, and we do not see at present any prospect of such a good work being carried out. If ever it comes about, it will have, we feel, to be done by private Masonic munificence, by those who take a deep and real interest in Masonic archaeology, MSS. and old books.

"Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, November, 1877."

We have looked over these printed minutes, and feel bound to notice them. They deal mainly with that mournful state of things which has existed until recently in the Grand Secretary's office, in Edinburgh. Bro Bickerton, of Glasgow, on the principle most good and true, "Fiat Justitia ruat Cælum," has impugned the careless supervision of the "Finance Committee." We think that he has done his duty in calling attention to the subject, but having done so, he had better "leave well alone," and let "bygones be bygones." If the past is not pleasant to contemplate under any aspect, let us trust and believe, as we well may, that under the energetic administration of Bro. D. Murray Lyon, the Scottish Grand Lodge has an assured present and a prosperous future before it.

"East Anglian Hand Book."

This useful and interesting work has again appeared, and we wish its zealous Editor and Publisher all success.

"The Historic of Leadenhall" preserved by Dowling and Son.

How our forefathers would have stared at this remarkable specimen of the "puff politic," and ingenious trade advertisements? It is both very skillfully devised, and ably drawn up. If, as we doubt not, the produce of Messrs. Dowling's entrepôt be as good as this little book is well got up, we feel sure that Messrs. Dowling's customers will have no cause to complain, and we feel bound to offer them our "heartiest wishes," as we fully realize the importance and value of what they so liberally and temptingly offer to careful providers and hungry citizens.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

A convocation of this Provincial Grand Chapter was held by the Prov. Grand Superintendent, Comp. W. W. Beach, M.P., at the Masonic Hall, Ryde, on the 1st inst., the Prov. G. Supt. occupying the chair of First Principal; Comp. Hickman, that of H.; and Comp. Booth, that of J.

The following companions, amongst others, attended: Comp. E. Booth, 394, P.P.G.S.; Joseph W. Dyson, 130, P.G. 2nd A.S.; J. H. Biggs, 130, P.G. Janitor; H. J. Guy, 342, P.P.G.S.B.; J. T. Craven, 342, P.G. Std. Br.; William Payne, 342, P.P.G.S.B.; R. J. Turney, 342, P.G. Std. Br.; G. S. Lancaster, 487, P.P.G. 2nd A.S.; H. T. Cecil, 487, P.P.G.D.C.; Robt. Osborne, 487, P.P.G.O.; Joseph Exell, 417, P.G. Janitor; T. Batchelor, 487, P.G. S.N.; M. E. Frost, 487, P.G. Treas.; J. B. Thomas, 394, P.G.P.S.; J. E. Le Feuvre, 394, P.G.S.E.; J. Harrison, 804, P.P.G.A.S.; G. F. Lancaster, 903, P.P.G.B.B.; J. W. Palmer, 175; George Pack, 175, W. Menzies, 175; J. Hall Smith, 145; J. Parkes, 175; F. Newman, 175; M. Morgan, 175; J. Langden, 175; R. L. Loveland, A. Platt Wilkes, 175; H. Cawte, 175, P.P.G. Std. Br.; H. J. Guy, 342; George P. Arnold, 342; J. C. Stroud, 359; W. Bowyer, 359; G. N. Godwin, 257; J. Winterbottom, 257; L. P. Palsgrave, 487; W. Outridge, 487; Arthur W. Brown, 487; R. W. Dowman, 903; H. Sleeman, 903; S. Mason, 1141; C. C. Petley, 175; C. C. Petley, 175, C. B. Whitcombe, 903; J. Willmott, 487.

The minutes of the last Prov. Grand Chapter, held at Southampton, having been read and confirmed, the Prov. Grand Treasurer produced his accounts, showing a balance in hand of £45, and these having been adopted, Comp. Booth, P.P.G.J., proposed, and Comp. Batchelor, P.G. S.N., seconded the re-election, of Comp. M. E. Frost as P.G. Treas., which was, as a matter of course, carried unanimously. Comp. Frost being extremely popular among his brethren and companions. His re-election having been suitably acknowledged, the Prov. Grand Superintendent appointed and invested the following companions as his officers for the ensuing year:

W. Hickman, 394	Prov. G.H.
H. Carrott, 175	Prov. G.J.
J. E. LeFeuvre, 394	Prov. G. Scribe E.
R. L. Loveland, 257	Prov. G. Scribe N.
G. F. Lancaster, 903	Prov. G.P. Soj.
H. Sleeman, 903	Prov. G. 1st Asst.
J. T. Craven, 342	Prov. G. 2nd Asst.
M. E. Frost, 257	Prov. G. Treas.
Dr. A. G. P. Wilks, 175	Prov. G. Reg.
W. Bowyer, 353	Prov. G. Swd. Br.
J. W. Willmott, 342	Prov. Std. Br.
C. B. Whitcombe, 903	Prov. G. D. of C.
R. Osborne, 487	Prov. G. Org.

At the conclusion of the proceedings the companions sat down to an excellent dinner at the Pier Hotel, and all separated, well pleased with their reception by the East Medina Chapter, it being the first occasion since the Isle of Wight was united to Hampshire that the Prov. Grand Chapter have met in the island.

It may be mentioned that during the past year two new chapters have been constituted in the province, one attached to the Gosport Lodge, No. 903, and the other to the Oakley, No. 694, at Basingstoke.

COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT TO A LIVERPOOL FREEMASON.

On Monday evening, the 4th inst., a grand complimentary concert was given by the Liverpool brethren to Bro. Joseph Busfield, of the Harmonic Lodge, No. 216, at Hope Hall, Liverpool.

This concert was given in recognition of the professional services which that brother has graciously rendered at numerous Masonic gatherings in the district. The entertainment was under the special patronage of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. of England and P.G.M. West Lancashire, and amongst those present was a large number of Masonic brethren. A choice and carefully selected programme was very successfully rendered, the various artists being warmly received by a highly appreciative audience. The vocalists were Mrs. Skeaf, Miss Jackson, Miss Armstrong, Bro. Busfield, Bro. Armstrong, Bro. T. J. Hughes, and the members of the Apollo Glee Club. Mr. Weston solo violoncello, and Bro. Joseph Skeaf, P.G.O., pianist, also assisted. The arrangements were carried out by a committee comprising some of the principal Masonic brethren in Liverpool.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will, by command of the Queen, hold a levee at St. James's Palace, on behalf of her Majesty, on Monday, March 11th, at two o'clock.

In the February number of that excellently conducted serial, the Masonic Magazine, is given the first part of an interesting Hermetic work, with several quaint wood cuts. The remarks of the editor upon the present aspect of Masonic affairs deserve to be read in every English lodge.—Sunday Times.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Old Sores, Wounds and Ulcers.—The readiness with which Holloway's unguent removes all obstructions in the circulation of the vessels and lymphatics, explains their irresistible influence in healing old sores, bad wounds and indolent ulcers. To insure the desired effect the skin surrounding the diseased part should be fomented, dried, and immediately well rubbed with the Ointment. This will give purity to the foul blood and strength to the weakened nerves, the only conditions necessary for the cure of all those ulcerations which render life almost intolerable. No sooner is this Ointment's protective powers exerted than the destructive process ceases and the constructive business begins—new healthy growth appears to fill up the lately painful excavated pit.—ADVT.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

The Commissary General of the French Ministry on Commerce has issued a notice relative to the Exhibition, asking members of commissions, including the presidents, vice-presidents, and secretaries of foreign commissions for the service of the Exhibition, to deposit their photographs (two copies in carte-de-visite size), with names written legibly on the back. The cards of entrance will then be transmitted.

A singular phenomenon has just been witnessed at the village La Clappe, about three miles from Draguignan (Var). A plot of ground planted with vines and olive trees slowly sank in and disappeared, leaving a gulf of a funnel-shaped form about 120 feet in diameter at the surface and forty feet at the bottom. At the depth of 100 feet may be seen water, in which the earth has been swallowed up.—Post.

The sword and decorations belonging to King Victor Emmanuel were presented with great ceremony on Saturday to the municipality of Turin by Prince Amadeus.

M. Gustave Doré is engaged on a colossal group of sculpture for the Paris Exhibition, representing Death suffocating Genius under palm-trees.

M. Offenbach has two new works on hand just now. He is finishing an opera-bouffe, the Blue Bird, for the Paris Gaité; and is also writing a Spanish piece, to be brought out during the Exhibition.

At a recent lecture at Vienna, before a large audience, Dr. E. Lewy, says Nature, proved that the human skin is completely impenetrable for the chemical contact of mineral waters. This annuls all common views regarding the bathing cures effected by the various mineral springs.

A new Lifeboat, designed and built by Captain Hans Busk on the same model as those he has given to other stations, has been presented by the designer to the Seamen's Orphan Home at Brixham. The boat is specially notable for lightness, weighing little over a ton, while the craft of the National Lifeboat Institute average four tons, and yet can carry quite as many persons as the latter. She carries twelve oars, double-banked, and is very handy under canvas, even when filled with water, being provided with capacious gun-metal air cases, which give her marvellous buoyancy, while she can be launched with great facility.

At Dresden, a new "Royal Theatre," built on the same place where the old one stood (which was destroyed by fire in 1869), has been opened in presence of the King and Queen. Semper, the architect, is said also to be known in England. The new theatre is described as one of the finest in Europe, surpassing (says a telegram to the Daily News) by the most artistic application of the noblest forms of renaissance the opera-houses at Paris and Berlin.

Fans of Natural Flowers are now used by Transatlantic brides, while the attendant bridesmaids carry flower-balls, and the guests wear bonnets composed of real blossoms.

Post cards in India have been introduced by an economically-minded Colonel, who petitioned the Government to issue these cards, and on being refused took upon himself to print a special form, duly inscribed with the Royal arms, and leaving space for address and half-anna stamp. The Post in India is obliged to carry letters of any form or kind under a certain weight for half-anna, and although the postal authorities have remonstrated and requested the withdrawal of the cards, the Colonel continues triumphant. He now intends to print regular post-cards, and to supply the general public with packets similar to these sold in England.

It is related in the Times despatches from Paris that an English maidservant, twenty-one years of age, named Harriot Harrington, has been admitted into the Infirmary of the Prefecture of Police, who is reported to have drunk during the month of January ninety-five litres of wine and forty litres of brandy, and to have uttered for some days no sounds but those of barking like a dog—according to Dr. Durand, an effect of over drinking.

Hippophagy in London will shortly have a fair trial, as two Frenchmen intend to open shops for the sale of horseflesh as food under the auspices of the Paris Society for Promoting Hippophagy. The Society has asked the Lord Mayor for permission to carry on the business, stating that although the English population might perhaps be repugnant to this kind of food, there are plenty of Frenchmen in London to support the scheme, and the Lord Mayor has replied that his permission is unnecessary, but that he wishes the experiment the success it deserves. Londoners, however, are more dainty in the matter of eating than Parisians, and it is hardly likely that the experiment will succeed here so quickly as in Paris, where, since the first boucherie was opened in 1866 the number of horses, asses, and mules consumed has risen from 2,192 in 1867 to 10,619 in 1877, while there are now sixty-one boucheries in Paris alone, and many in the other principal towns of France.

THE "STATIST."—A new weekly journal under this title is to appear in March, and will present, we are informed, some novel features. It will contain a set of tables analysing and comparing the principal facts as to the state of trade and the money market in a new and comprehensive manner. Several of the leading statisticians and economists are among the contributors, including some of the contributors to the Economist for many years before Mr. Bagehot's death. Besides thorough discussions on all matters of trade and national finance, the journal, it is understood, will also contain a series of papers on the different rates and conditions of profit in the various descriptions of joint-stock enterprise, particularly railways, banks, insurance companies, telegraphs, and tramways; and there will be a correspondent's page, in which the editors will reply to inquiries on business matters which may be addressed to them.

TO OUR READERS.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1878.

THE FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The first great festival of our metropolitan charities has taken place, and with the following noteworthy result:—Bro. Terry announced as the result of the efforts of the Stewards, that £11,000 had been received for this excellent charity. We congratulate the Stewards, the Committee, and Bro. Terry on this auspicious commencement of the charitable campaign on behalf of our Benevolent and Educational Institutions in 1878, under the distinguished Presidency of Bro. the Duke of Manchester.

The analysis of the returns requires a little more time than we can give to it this week, especially considering our printing exigencies, but we shall hope to return to the subject, always interesting to Freemasons, next week.

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

We had intended saying a few words about this most interesting and completed "magnum opus," most creditable to Bro. Hartly—but owing to pressure on our columns defer our remarks until next week. A copy of this remarkable work of art is now on view at 198, Fleet-street.

THE SCOTTISH RITE.

Bro. Hubert announces in the Chaine d'Union for January that the Congress of the "Rite Ecossais" is to be held this year in London. This is a fact of which we were previously ignorant, and which comes upon us with some surprise, nay, and we will add, regret. Of the expediency just now of such a meeting in London we have, we confess, the gravest doubts. In the present state of serious uncertainty as regards much of continental Freemasonry, and the exact position of the Scottish Rite in the great controversy going on, and which seems to our insular and perhaps foggy minds very hazy indeed, we cannot hold out any hopes that such a gathering in London will be looked on approvingly by any large number of English Masons. We doubt very much whether the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Rite in England, judging from the wisdom and caution which have characterised their proceedings, will be very desirous to encourage an assembly which may prove to be a serious embarrassment to themselves. For these questions must at once present themselves to every reflecting Masonic mind, "Cui bono?" What does it all mean? What are they "up to?" Whither are they going? Whatever interest such proceedings may have for members of the Scottish Rite, they can have none for Craft Masons, who do not recognize the right of that body to the claim of a Masonic jurisdiction of any sort in their territorial limits, that is to say, without the "zone" presided over by a lawful Craft Grand Lodge. Whatever rights the Scottish Rite has over those grades which are peculiar to it, and which sever it distinctly from Craft Masonry, and which no one seeks to dispute or deny, it cannot have any jurisdiction over symbolic lodges. But, unfortunately, in some parts at any rate, symbolic lodges are worked under the Scottish Rite, and therefore though we admit the practice, in Europe at any rate is the reverse, at least, nearly so, all Craft Masons must regard with some natural apprehension any attempt to establish a quasi-rival jurisdiction, an "imperium in imperio," and can only concede to the Scottish Rite its undoubted position as a so-called High Grade, though no higher in fact, and far less ancient, than symbolic Masonry. We hope, therefore, that the announcement is incorrect, and that the Congress will meet elsewhere. We are all in peace happily in England. We have no insane commotions, sterile debates, or childish logomachies; and while the supreme and sovereign authority of the Grand Lodge is conceded, a most wise and kindly toleration is entertained to all the "High Grades," their independent position is recognized, their indigenous rights unquestioned. In fact, all the evil and all the controversies that have arisen from time to time have emanated from the attempt to combine two antagonistic jurisdictions, Craft and Chivalric Masonry. We hope, then, that either Brussels or Paris will be the "locale" of the meeting. The former place would, by its Exhibition, be an attraction to the members of the Scottish Rite, and as the Congress is not qua a Congress likely to result in much positive good, Paris is undoubtedly the place where it can do the least possible harm.

THE DEATH OF THE POPE.

Since last we addressed our readers the death of the Venerable Pontiff Pio Nono has been announced. With his rule as Chief Bishop of the Roman Catholic Church we have nothing whatever to do, but as the late benevolent Pontiff was both by implication and directly concerned with Freemasonry, we think it well and seasonable to devote a few lines to his memory. It has been said that he was a Freemason, but that assertion rests on no valid authority. So far, all the allegations advanced, and all the evidence adduced, are historically unreliable, and may safely without hesitation be relegated to the "Limbus" of things mythic. The explanation of these repeated assertions is now probably to be found in this, that in the early years of his life, at a time when he was a liberal among Italian liberals, and associated with Mazzini and others, he was received into one of the numerous forms of secret Italian associations which then abounded whether as Carbonari or under some other euphonious appellation, like the "Decisi." But that Pio Nono was a Freemason, we do not believe, having carefully examined into all available evidence on the subject, and finding none that will satisfy the imperative demands of historical accuracy and straightforward matter-of-fact. But Pio Nono is known to Freemasons as having revived in the form of an allocation in our humble opinion as the most unwise advice of the Roman Curia, the slumbering Papal denunciations against, and condemnation of Freemasonry everywhere. If such anathemata, whose wild threats and empty menaces failed one hundred and fifty years, how much more must they do so to-day, when all such claims of infallible authority are little likely either to receive assent or to command adherence. But we do not think that we are to blame the good old Pope too severely for this fresh proof that the present Roman Catholic authorities have in no way degenerated from the pious perversity of their predecessors in office. Pio Nono himself was a kindly, pleasant, cheerful worthy man, who, at another epoch, might have done more than he did do, but who has through Ultramontane excitement left a most doubtful legacy to the Roman Catholic Church of a ceaseless contest with the government, the ideas, the civilization of the epoch, and that on the worst and lowest of all grounds, the material possessions, the personal privileges, the asserted right of the spiritual (?) power as opposed to the temporal! We trust that the Roman Catholic Church will learn wisdom by experience, and that a "tertium quid" of accommodation as between an infallible spiritual authority and a legal earthly government. Let us hope, too, that the New Pope will leave us Freemasons alone, who never seek to quarrel with any religious body or temporal power in the world. We have thought it but proper to pen these few lines in respect of the deceased and well-intentioned Pontiff, and to say, in all Masonic sincerity, "Peace to his Manes!"

THE AMENITIES OF MASONIC CORRESPONDENCE.

We have perused some recent correspondence in the Standard—a monthly magazine, published at Bombay in September—with the deepest feelings of pain, and we will add humiliation. For surely such letters, (be the blame on which side it may), exhibit Freemasonry in a most ridiculous and unseemly light to the whole outer world. What will "profanes" think of us "Sons of Light" who rush into print on any alleged or practical wrong, and pour forth the angry diatribe and the bitter sarcasm and the vehement retort, without the slightest consideration for the feelings of a brother, the habit of gentlemen, or the welfare of the brotherhood at large? We have often said, and we repeat it today, that Freemasons in print often prove that not only they are mortal—most mortal, with a vengeance—but make everyone also come to the conclusion that they can be if they like it the most uncharitable, the most censorious, and the most implacable of mankind. We sincerely hope that mutual friends in India will intervene to prevent the repetition of such a scandal in the pages of professedly Masonic journals, and which can only result in greatly lowering the prestige and popularity of Freemasonry in Hindostan. But we think it well, having said this, to lay down certain laws in respect of Masonic publications, which appear to us to be both needed and most seasonable. It is quite clear, in the first place, that any brother has a right to start and conduct a Masonic journal, be there one or "many Richards already in the field," and that no publisher has a Masonic or moral right to object to the appearance of such an "interesting little stranger." Masonry is free, and the Masonic press is free, and we are among those who consider, that under some proper restrictions and with some necessary limitations, (as must always be in the assertion of first principles), the extension and increase of Masonic journalism, are good things "per se." The Freemason, for instance, has no fear of competing interests, or open opposition. It would hail all properly conducted Masonic journals as fair rivals in an honest race of industry and experiment, and we therefore cannot conceive why any other Masonic Editor or Publisher should feel aggrieved by the appearance of another creditable Masonic journal or magazine. But unfortunately, as the great Bard has it, "here's the rab." In order to start a new Masonic paper or magazine with "eclat," it is considered advisable too often to condescend to sensationalism, and to inaugurate a new venture, by a personal attack on an existing and perfectly legitimate Masonic enterprise. There may be room for two or three, one or more than one, and no one objects to this new "petit sujet," but that is not enough. In order to establish a footing it is needful to "abuse the plaintiff's attorney," and to cast stones at the existing publication, which has been long well conducted, and commands a considerable amount of Masonic support and consideration. And no doubt it is very difficult for one who has laboured hard for years when he finds his property affected and his character aspersed, not to lose his temper, and to retort. But he had far better not do so. Such attacks are generally very petty and very worthless indeed, and often are, yes, even very dirty. For instance—a new publication has a right to say that it is set on foot, to endeavour to gratify the wishes of many friends, and to subserve the interests of the Craft, but it has no right to come before the Order with both a "suppressio veri," and a "suggestio falsi." It has no authority, morally or Masonically, to put forward deliberately mendacious assertions, and publicly to impugn the motives of a brother, who has sought to conduct a previously existing journal with probity and ability. Thus competition has always an indisputable right of existence, but personality and the vulgar twaddle of low malignity ought to be denounced and repudiated by all true Freemasons. We are always permitted to puff ourselves, but we have no pretence to depreciate the good wares of our neighbours, either to undersell them in the market, or so "place" our own. As an illustration we would say this further. If the new applicant for fame states that it proposes to improve all Masonic journalism, and ignores its predecessor's efforts; if it asserts that for itself it is immaculate, and that the actual possessor of the position is animated by the lowest of trade considerations; if it declares that it henceforth will devote itself to branches of neglected study, which very branches have long formed the staple of the intelligent pages of its older rival—then it commits every offence conceivable against "good form," Masonic fair play, truth, and decency, and deserves to be left in that obscurity which is its natural position. It seems a great pity that such a state of things should exist in Masonic journalism, but so it does, and we have seen several instances of it, and always deprecate it, and always deplore it, alike for the honour of Masonic journalism, and the good of the Masonic body. The Freemason has never claimed any special position for itself, or objected to any extension of the Masonic press. On the contrary, it welcomes all friendly journals which conform to the laws and spirit of Freemasonry, and seek to uphold its cause and assert its principles. But it cannot, and will not, tolerate personality, open or secret, general or particular. It can hold and does hold no intercourse with, just as it lends no recognition to, such journals, which apparently are guided and governed only by personality, which spare no taunt, and hesitate from no insinuation, and which can only serve to render Masonic journalism a bye-word and a discredit to the outer world. Conscious in its own good motives, strong in its own strength, the Freemason pursues its prosperous career, hoping for better days for Masonic journalism, deprecating all unseemly and unmasonic words, ever remembering that it seeks honestly to represent, as before England and the world, that good old Order, whose unchanging teaching is ever best set forth in general toleration and brotherly good will.

ROSLIN CASTLE.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your Masonic Notes and Queries in your valuable paper of the 2nd inst., a P.M. of No. 1, S.C., asks for my authority for stating in my letter to you on Roslin Castle, that the dignity of Grand Master Mason of Scotland was conferred on William St. Clair by James II., in 1455. I simply quoted Bro. Skerr's own words as given by him on reading the paper on the above subject—as reported in the Scotsman paper of December 11th last, (I think.) If P.M. will peruse the Freemason of 2nd inst., page 68, in the notice taken of Freemasonry in New Zealand, he would then see my statement repeated from another quarter of the universe.

Will Bro. Skerr be able to solve the subject?

With fraternal regards, I remain, yours truly,

GEO. W. CHIRNSIDE.

COLE'S LIST OF LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

Referring to an extract from the Gloucester Journal, in your last issue, I have selected the following three lodges from "Cole's List," in my province (Cumberland and Westmorland):—

120 (no name), at Whitehaven, in Cumberland, second Monday March, 19, 1740.

261 (no name), at Whitehaven, in Cumberland, second Monday May 4, 1761.

289 (no name), at Workington, in Cumberland, first Monday Sept., 22, 1762.

No. 120 is now extinct, but No. 261, which bears the title of Sun, Square, and Compasses, is one of the most flourishing lodges in the north of England, although many years since it was on the rocks of oblivion, and only preserved from total wreck by the strenuous self-denying, and pecuniary efforts of two or three Past Masters, not one of whom, I believe, is alive to tell the tale. Sun, Square, and Compasses Lodge celebrated its centenary in 1861, but I am not aware they have a medal. The present number is though 119, 143 appears on the firing glasses and gas globes. With regard to No. 289, in "Cole's List" that lodge is defunct; but another (now strong in) numbers was constituted in 1863, Sun and Sector, No. 926. It is interesting to note that the furniture, archives, jewels, and bible of Lodge 289, are now used by Lodge 962, in fact, if I remember rightly (I was not initiated till two years later), it was stated in the local prints at the time, that the whole of the furniture, &c., were accidentally discovered locked in a box at the Green Dragon Hotel, in Workington, shortly before the new charter was applied for. We have another centenarian lodge in this province, No. 129, Union, Kendal, instituted in 1764, the year after the publication of "Cole's List," referred to. A few days ago, casually looking over that magnificent work of Bro. D. Murray Lyon, the Grand Secretary of Scotland, on "The History of the Lodge of Edinburgh, (Mary's Chapel)," I find it noted that the third oldest lodge in Cumberland and Westmorland (Union, No. 310, Carlisle), originally had its charter, dated 1784, from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the only instance, as Bro. Lyon observes of Scotch Grand Lodge coming over the borders. Thirteen years later, however, Union Lodge applied to the Grand Lodge of England for a charter, under which they have worked since 1797. Another remark, and I have done. My mother lodge, (Skiddaw, No. 1002), was instituted in 1864, and about that time, I heard it mentioned that a lodge had existed fifty or sixty years previously in Cockermouth, the name of which could not be remembered, although it was stated very authoritatively that the locale was the Ship Inn. Referring to a newspaper clipping recording the consecration of Skiddaw, I notice that the charter of the old lodge at Cockermouth, is stated to have been transferred to Batley, in Yorkshire; Lodge No. 264, in that town, dates its charter from 1788. Does any old brother in Batley know whether there is any truth in such a statement. Has our energetic and erudite Brother W. J. HUGHAN, in his possession a later list of lodges than 1763, that is to say, approaching the last decade of the eighteenth century. I had one myself years since, formerly belonging to my grandfather, a P.M. of Lodge St. John, No. 92, Banff, S.C.; but whether it was English or Scotch I cannot remember, being only a school boy at the time. However, it is lost, more likely destroyed. I have in my possession my grandfather's apron, now well on to a century old, but in excellent preservation, and a decided curiosity in its way. My object in mentioning these matters in connection with the lodges in Cumberland and Westmorland, but more especially the reputed old lodge at Cockermouth, is that it is my intention shortly to publish a little brochure on the history of Craft and Royal Arch Masonry in the two counties.

Yours fraternally,

W. F. LAMONBY, P.M. 1002.
P.G. Reg. Cumberland and Westmorland.

PROVINCIAL SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As your columns have been open to one of my provincial conferees, to permit of his making known his desire to see more general and immediate result from our charitable donations, I have no doubt you will grant me space to endorse his views. The brother in question has been stirring us up, as he states in his second letter. Some of us don't like it, but while we refrain from giving our absolute adhesion to the project of a Provincial Educational Fund at present, we do not venture to offer very effective opposition. We seem to have a tacit understanding that something of the sort is wanted, but who will undertake to put the affair in motion in face of that official inertia of the powers above, that quietly wears out the "go" in any movement not emanating from the aforesaid powers, by the simple method of putting it out of their consideration—"cutting" it, in fact. The brother in question has ventured to perform the operation commonly known as "taking the bull by the horns," and the rest of us watch with some curiosity the result of his endeavours. If successful in leading the animal into pleasant and profitable pastures, we will go and share his honour. If the intractability of the animal prove too powerful, and the cause is consequently relinquished, we can but afford the usual consolation—"I told you so." But seriously, sir, I am one of those who are of opinion that it is quite possible to effect a great benefit by educating our unsuccessful orphan dependents in the provinces, without diminishing the resources of our grand London Institutions, whose benefits are only too well-known to myself. For if it be said that any provincial movement will injure the schools, by taking away some of the subscriptions, may it not be retorted that by enforcing such costly and cumbersome elections as have frequently been necessary to secure admission, they are doing an injury to those who have a right to their benefits by the sheer waste of money (in purchasing or securing votes) which would educate a child during the whole period it would need education. The schools are now, or shortly will be, enlarged, and it will be known definitely how many children they will be able to accommodate. Why not let that number be adopted as the maximum, so that the normal expenses may be ascertained and the various provinces may know what is annually required for their support? I am sure the amount would never fall short, and the local Institutions would receive the surplus contributions of the brethren. Let purchasing of votes be abolished, and some means be adopted, say ballot, by which admission may be secured, without the present turmoil, for any vacancies that arise. If, as you suggest, there could be schools, each to be maintained by one, two, or three provinces, from which children could be drafted by ballot to the central schools, and at which the unsuccessful candidates could be retained until future election, or an opportunity for placing them out in the world, I believe there would be more real benefit accrue and less disappointment, not to say ill-feeling. The various "vested interests" will not see things in this light; but the time will shortly come when the continued want of success will disgust the brethren, who now waste their energies and means, and isolated movements to remedy the evil will be inactive till the schools will find their own resources falling off, from no reason but their own inaptitude to note the signs of the times. Let the matter be fairly and impartially considered by the school authorities and some of our leading metropolitan and provincial Craftsmen, and an arrangement may be come to which will effect mutual benefit to schools and provinces, without causing any one to fear they are treading on anybody else's toes.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

P. M. LINES.

Obituary.

BRO. CHARLES BENNETT, 33 and P.M. 25.

It is with feelings of sincere regret that we announce the sudden death on Saturday evening last of Bro. Charles Bennett, P.M. 25, who for many years has held the appointment of official short handwriter to Grand Lodge. Bro. Bennett leaves a widow and a large family of sons and daughters to mourn his loss, which however will be as keenly felt by a numerous circle of friends and acquaintances, (to whom he was known as a warm-hearted and most amiable man) as at the domestic hearth. The best testimony Bro. Bennett's true character is the fact that he never made an enemy.

Bro. GEORGE NELSON.

We have to record the death of Bro. George Nelson, of Limba Magna, Near Lincoln, aged 36. The circumstances connected with his death were somewhat sudden, being well and in his usual health on the previous Tuesday, attending the market at Hull, and died on Saturday, the 10th inst. For many years he has been a member of the R. N. L. Militia, and up to his death filled the post of captain. He was P.P.G.D.C. for Lincoln, and was a warm supporter of the the Ancholme Lodge, Brigg, and his memory will long be associated with the brethren.

LIVERPOOL MASONIC HALL.

The annual meeting of the Liverpool Masonic Hall Committee was held on the 25th ult., at the Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was a very large attendance of brethren. The statement of accounts submitted by the Hon. Treas., Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., was of the most complete and satisfactory kind, and the compliments he received from the brethren present were well merited, as his balance-sheet was a model of clearness and fullness. Bro. Robt. Wylie, P.P.G.D., was elected Chairman of the Committee; Bros. W. J. Lunt, P.M. 823, Vice-Chairman; J. R. Goepel, P.M. 823, P.P.G.D.C., Hon. Treas. (re-elected); and J. T. Callow, P.M. 673 and 1505, was re-elected Hon. Sec.

FREEMASONRY IN AUSTRALIA.

LODGE OF JUDAH, 338, S.C., MELBOURNE, VICTORIA.

The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Lonsdale-street, on the evening of Tuesday, 4th December, 1877. The lodge having been opened in ancient form and with solemn prayer at 7 p.m., A. H. Bennett, Esq., having been previously proposed, was balloted for and declared duly elected, and initiated into Freemasonry in a very eloquent and impressive manner by Bro. P.M. John Little, retiring R.W.M. This being the evening for the annual installation of office bearers, Bro. P.M. Goldstein in a very able and efficient manner installed the following brethren, viz.: Bros. James Moore, R.W.M.; John Little, D.M.; J. T. Arnold, S.M.; Cederberg, S.W.; Spink, J.W.; Cahill, P.M., Treasurer; Millar, Secretary; Rev. Rintel, P.M., Chaplain; Burton, S.D.; Coverlid, J.D.; Browne, I.G.; Davidson, S.S.; Wright, J.S.; Levy, Tyler. Thereafter, Bro. Goldstein, P.M., in a few well chosen remarks, presented to Bro. Henry Spink, J.W., a Past Secretary's gold jewel, with suitable inscription, in recognition of valuable services, and as a mark of esteem from the lodge, also Bro. Little, P.M., presented to Bro. W. Perraton, Organist, a gold locket, as a token of esteem from the choir of the lodge. There was a large attendance of P.G. Officers, W. Masters, Past Masters, and visiting brethren, from the various lodges in the province. And as showing the interest taken in the welfare of this lodge by the past office bearers, it may be stated that seven of its Past Masters were present during the evening. After the lodge was closed in peace and harmony, the brethren to the number of over an hundred, adjourned to a substantial banquet prepared by Bro. Paul, when a most enjoyable evening was spent. Bro. Rapiport, P.M., one of the founders of the lodge, in a very able speech, gave some interesting reminiscences of the early days of what is now one of the most prosperous lodges in the province. Visiting Bro. Rev. J. Bagley, Portland, kindly officiated as Chaplain.

PUBLIC NIGHT OF THE PRUDENT BRETHREN CHAPTER, No. 145.

The annual, public night devoted by this admirably worked chapter, to a rehearsal of various selections from the lectures &c., of the Royal Arch Degree occurred on Tuesday last at Freemasons' Hall, and the whole of the programme provided for the enjoyment of the Companions was faithfully carried out. The companions present on the occasion were Comps. Edward Moody, Z.; E. H. Thiellay, H.; John C. Cox, J.; George S. States, S.E.; Henry Venn, S.N.; D. Haslett, P.S.; O. M. Belfrage, 2nd A.S.; Herbert Dicketts, John Boyd, John M. Stedwell, Thos. Bull, Ed. W. Braine, John Chinnery, James Moon, T. de Léliva, C. A. Woods, W. Moul, W. F. Masters, J. Waugh, R. Douglas, Jermyn Boyd, Henry Hall, C. J. Pringle, Thos. Wm. Chard, Lenty, C. J. W. Davis, Geo. Purkess, John J. Bird, T. W. Reed, P.Z. 180; A. Treadwell, N. 177; G. Bozey, P.Z. 414; Thomas Cubitt, P.Z. 177; A. Bassington, 753; J. Wright, Z., 946; C. Hopwood, 19; H. Murray, P.D.G. Supt., China; J. A. Matthews, Holy Zion, Wm. Kirby, P.Z. 25; John Constable, Z. 141; W. L. Verry, 40; George B. Chapman, 975; B. H. Webb, 174; Fred Brown, 174; Robert Lyons Campbell, 45; Henry Lovegrove, 72; A. C. Bedwell, J. 946; Thomas Cull, 1st A. 1365; John Smith, 105, S.C.; J. A. Smith, 1, S.C.; G. R. Shervill, Z. 534; James Stevens, P.Z., 720; John Seax, Z. 186; E. C. Mather, Mount Zion; Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, P.Z. 784, H. C. Levander, P.Z. 76; W. J. Ferguson, N. 1056; Henry Ashwell, 1305; Geo. J. Rome, Z. 1185; E. H. Stammwitz, 538; John Green, S.W. 975; H. Thompson, 619; J. J. W. Ockenden, 1423; George Dyer, 186; W. Smallpeice, Z. 21; C. P. Cobham, 453, and S.E. 1329; B. H. Swallow, P.Z. 77; Thos. W. Wentworth, 185; Fred. P. Morrell, Z. 357, P.G.S.B.; W. S. Goodall, 784; S. Rawson, P.D.G. Sup., China; Edw. B. Grabham, 19; Geo. A. B. Fletcher, St. James's Union, and H. Massey, (Freemason). The three chairs were occupied by Comp. Edward Moody, Z.; Comp. Thomas Bull as H.; and Comp. J. C. Cox, J.; Comp. Haslett, was P.S.; Comp. Jermyn Boyd, as 1st Assistant, and Comp. C. A. Woods, as 2nd Assistant. After the formal opening of the Chapter the following work was performed:—Comp. John Boyd, P.Z. 145, called the attention of the companions to the connection of Royal Arch Masonry with the Craft. The First Clause of the First Section was worked by Comp. H. Venn, No. 145. The Second Clause of the First Section, by Comp. J. C. Cox, J. 145. The Third Clause of the First Section (Ancient), by Comp. D. Haslett, P.Z. 145. Comp. J. C. Cox delivered the historical lecture. Comp. J. Jermyn Boyd, No. 145, gave the history of Moses' Rod. Comp. Thos. Bull, P.Z. 145, delivered the symbolical lecture. Comp. C. A. Woods, No. 145, gave an illustration of the four principal banners and ensigns. Comp. Edward Moody, Z. 145, explained the traditional ceremonies, sacred signs and mystical part of this degree, and Comp. John Boyd, P.Z., illustrated the symbolism of the Royal Arch jewel and Platonic bodies. It should be observed that all the above work was executed by members of the Prudent Brethren Chapter, and the manner of execution, which was given unhesitatingly by all the companions engaged in it, deserves the highest praise, and reflects the greatest credit on the companions and on their persevering instructor, Comp. John Boyd. The companions were enthusiastically cheered as they respectively resumed their seats. Before the chapter was closed a vote of thanks was proposed by Comp. S. Rawson, and seconded by Comp. John Constable, and this having been carried unanimously, was communicated to the M.E.Z. by Comp. H. Murray, and acknowledged by Comp. Moody, who said that the companions of the chapter were as much obliged to the visitors for their presence as the visitors were to the chapter. A further and special vote of thanks by the visitors to Comp. John Boyd was proposed by Comp. James Stevens, and seconded by Comp. G. R. Shervill, and carried unanimously. Comp. John Boyd replied, and the chapter was then closed. The companions afterwards adjourned to a cold supper at Freemasons' Tavern. After supper some toasts were delivered very briefly and without firing, as the large hall of the tavern in which the supper was given was not tiled. The M.E.Z., therefore said he would give "The Health of the Queen," and the company were to couple with it, mentally, the heads of the Royal Arch Masonry without mentioning their names. The next toast was that of the Visitors, and the M.E.Z. apologised for the apparent slowness of the toasting but said that when the meeting was arranged the large hall was engaged in order to meet the possible requirements of a large concourse of companions. As that hall was not tiled of course the firing could not be given. Comps. H. Murray, Past Dist. Sup. China, replied and thanked the companions of the chapter for the cordial manner in which they had received the visitors. Perhaps they would allow him at the same time to mention that he mentally returned thanks for the manner in which the companions associated with the former toast the rules of the order. That night had been one of the most agreeable nights in Royal Arch Masonry that any of the visitors had experienced, and as Comp. Rawson had said in the Chapter they had had a great treat. The thanks of all Royal Arch Masons were due to the Prudent Brethren Chapter for having organised the proceedings which must greatly tend to promote the dissemination of a knowledge of the degree and the mystical ritual which had been so ably descanted upon. There were some points dilated upon that came with the true force of eloquence and the charm of novelty on companions like himself who had sojourned long abroad, and were deprived when there of the advantages which many round the table had enjoyed at the constant Royal Arch Meetings in England, especially at those which had the benefit of possessing such talented interpreter of the ritual, as those who had worked that evening. Comp. Moody next proposed "Comp. John Boyd," who he said he fancied he could see mentally frowning (laughter). The companions looked to Comp. Boyd as the head of this Chapter: it was he who started it, had worked hard, and was still working hard to carry it on with the same vigour as that with which it was started. To him all the companions owed their best thanks. Comp. John Boyd in reply said he wished the companions would understand that he returned thanks mentally, but as they would not he was obliged to speak. He hoped that on some future occasion at similar meetings they would find they had many rising members who felt great interest in Royal Arch Masonry. He was quite sure there was plenty of talent besides that which had been shown that evening. Many others would like to come forward and give the lectures, illustrations, and explanations which had been given that night. But there was a great deal more to be learned than that, and he trusted that on some other public night, when other Chapters perhaps had followed the example of the Chapter of Prudent Brethren a better acquaintance with Royal Arch Masonry would be found to exist among the companions of the Order. There was a good field open to those who felt disposed to examine it. There was one very beautiful and interesting lecture on the origin of Royal Arch Masonry, not exactly as was now understood and taken as a rule, but going further back. He need scarcely say it was traditional; many of the things in Royal Arch Masonry were traditional. But what he alluded to took us back to the Nine Arches of Enoch. On the next occasion of their meeting on a public night he should be very pleased to give that part. He hoped what had been done would prove an incentive to others to try. They had plenty of opportunities now to attend chapters of instruction and gain the knowledge that was requisite. Companions must not think that the ceremonies of the Royal Arch were all that was to be learned. As far as regarded himself he was very much pleased to have been able to afford any instruction, and to give assistance in any way to promote the knowledge of the degree, and he was also very much pleased that companions by energy and hard work had been got to learn what they had so well explained in the chapter. (Hear, hear.) Comp. Dicketts proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z.," which having been replied to, Comp. J. Stevens proposed "The Working Companions," and to this toast Comps. Thomas Bull and J. Jermyn Boyd responded, and the proceedings were shortly afterwards brought to a close.

A Handsomely Framed Artiste signed proof of the "Grand Historical Engraving," of the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, as M.W.G.M. is now on view at the office of the Freemason, 198, Fleet-street, London.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.—The 1000th performance of Mr. H. J. Bryon's comedy, "Our Boys," takes place on Tuesday next, on which occasion the entire gross receipts will be handed over to the Lord Mayor for distribution amongst charitable institutions.

THE FISHMONGERS' COMPANY.—During last month the officers of the Fishmongers' Company seized at Billingsgate Market and on boats lying off that place over six tons of fish as unfit for human food. The fish numbered 8435, and included 900 herrings, 125 lobsters, 120 plaice, 3500 smelts, 90 thornbacks, and 3700 whiting; and, in addition, 1 barrel of oysters, 1 bag of escallops, 33 bushels of periwinkles and 74 of sprats, 196 gallons of shrimps, and 1 cwt. of eels.

THE MASONS' STRIKE.—A correspondent writes to a daily contemporary that the strike of the London masons is virtually terminated, and that although some show of holding out may yet be made, the men have practically come to recognise the hopelessness of the struggle. The conflict is supposed to have cost the operatives £30,000.

H.R.H. subscribes to no other lodge in the kingdom, and has more than once honoured the Philanthropic with a visit. For many years it was under a cloud, but like all things in Lynn, since Sir L. Jarvis brought the docks into the town and Royalty took up its quarters in the neighbourhood, everything is changed for the better, and prosperity reigns in the old western capital. The installation of a worthy Brother (George W. Page, London, and Prov. Bank Manager), last Monday afternoon, was well performed by P.M. C. T. Ives, P.P.G.A.D.C., assisted by P.M. G. S. Woodwork, P.P.G.J.D., and a strong board of other P.M.'s, visiting brethren, &c. After the ceremony the W.M. invested his officers thus:—Bro. W. Seppins, S.W.; Sir W. H. B. Ffolkes, Bart., J.W.; Rev. J. Bullivant Slight, Chaplain; R. Cruso, Treasurer; J. Green, Secretary; R. Binnington, S.D.; John S. B. Glasier, J. D.; G. H. Ladyman, I.G.; Rev. E. J. Alvis, Organist; C. Mille, and J. D. Thew, Stewards; Wm. Wolsey, Tyler. Banquet (of which 45 brethren partook) was served in Host Marshall's best style. Grace having been said by the Chaplain, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given in proper style from the chair. Then followed "The R.W. Prov. G.M. of Norfolk and the Prov. G. Officers"—for whom Bro. Sir W. H. B. Ffolkes and Bro. Morris, P.G.S.D., responded—the latter also acting as toastmaster throughout the evening. The W.M. next made a happy response for his health, and the Installing Master—a most useful aid to the Craft in Lynn—did ditto for his. Again Bro. Morris rose to reply for "The Immediate and other P.M.'s," and for "The Visitors" (poetically proposed by Bro. Thew) Bros. Carrick, W.M., and Phillips, of Wisbech Lodge; Bell, Mayor of Saffron Walden; and J. H. Ladyman and P. Soman, from Norwich, said each a few words in response. The S.W. and J.W. replied for "The Lodge Officers" and Bros. Allen and Green for "The Initiates." "The Masonic Charities" found a warm advocate in Bro. E. J. Alvis, and a handsome collection resulted. By the way, this worthy brother contributed some delightful harmony—vocal and instrumental—during the evening, while the Philanthropic is happy in the possession of a capital glee party. The Tyler's toast concluded a most pleasant evening.

WELLINGBORO.—Wentworth Lodge (No. 737).—The installation of the W.M. took place on Monday week, the ceremony being performed by Bro. Butler Wilkins the D.P.G.M. Norths and Hunts, in his usual impressive manner. Bro. J. H. Hall was the W.M., and immediately appointed the following officers:—Bros. W. T. Hewens, S. W.; Jno. Slinn, J.W.; Thos. Cook, P.M., Treas.; L.C. Knight, Sec.; E. Emsted, S.D.; W. Renshaw, J.D.; C. Mathews, I.G.; Jno. Wallis, Stwd.; W. Mathews, Tyler. Amongst the visiting brethren were Bros. C. E. Watler, W.M. 87; J. T. Green, and J. U. Stanton, P.M.; V. F. Gadsby, Jno. Baillie, A. Troup, 360; H. Hitchman, P.M.; E. Hall, W. Hanger, S. S. Harding, B. Jenner, 455; W. Oldham, P.M. 466; &c. The brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment, when an excellent banquet was served in Host Wallis's usual style. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, which were received in a most hearty manner, the brethren spent the remainder of the evening in harmony and thorough good fellowship. Bro. J.T. Green, P.M. 360, officiated as D.C. in his usual happy manner, and added considerably to the pleasure of the gathering. The W.M. may look forward to his year of office being both a pleasurable one to himself and a prosperous one to the lodge.

NORWICH.—Cabbell Lodge (No. 807).—The brethren of this lodge met at the Rampant Horse Hotel for the purpose of installing Bro. A. J. Berry as W. M. for the ensuing year. There was a full lodge and a goodly sprinkling of visitors, including Bro. J. C. Chittock (Sincerity), Bros. Dunsford and Youngman (P.M. Perseverance), Bro. J.A. Gooch (W.M. Perseverance), Bro. Mackley (W.M. Walpole), Bro. Riches (W.M. Sincerity), &c. The ceremony of installation was most ably performed by Bro. A. E. Atkinson, assisted by Bro. Campling, P.M. The W.M. then appointed his officers as under:—Edward Pankhurst, S.W.; S. N. Berry, J.W.; G. Green, S.D.; L. Butters, J.D.; E. Crofts, I.G.; R. A. Madge, Organist; J. Boatwright and J. Hunt, Stewards; J.W. Lacey, Treasurer; and Geo. Baxter, Secretary. This brother on being appointed was thanked by the W.M. for the untiring manner in which he had always furthered the interests of Masonry, and the brethren enthusiastically endorsed all the W.M. had said. The banquet was well served by Host Coleman, while his wines were choice as usual. When these latter were left on the table with dessert, the W.M. gave The Queen and the Craft, Bro. H. J. Minns taking the National Anthem solos in fine style. This gentlemen's singing during the evening was loudly applauded. The healths of the M.W. Grand Master, the Pro G. Master, and the D.G. Master of England (the Prince of Wales, Earl of Carnarvon, and Lord Skelmersdale) followed in quick succession. Then came the G.M. and D. G.M. of Norfolk (Lord Suffield and Major Penrice) with the officers of the Province. Bro. Dunsford, P.G.P., replied for the past, and Bro. T. J. Mackley, A.G.D.C., for present officers. The latter brother took occasion to mention the warm interest the Grand Master and his Deputy took in the Masonic Hall, which scheme was in a forward condition. For "The Visitor" Bro. P.G. Offord (Perseverance) offered a few appropriate remarks bearing testimony to the harmonious working of Lodge Cabbell (applause). Bro. Regimental Sergt-Major Donald (5th Lancers) was called on to respond to a toast novel in a Masonic lodge—"The Army, Navy, and Volunteers"—and he did it in gallant style. The I.P.M. spoke of the pleasurable year of office he had just passed through, and gave the W.M.'s health. Cheers having subsided, the W.M. rose and declared that was the proudest moment of his life—a truism stale but true. He should endeavour to carry out the duties of his position with credit to the lodge and honour to himself. Bro. T. Campling responded for the "Installing Master." The S.W. (in the vice-chair) proposed "The Press," for which Bro. Somon (Freemason), replied. The Secretary (Bro. Baxter), a very worthy officer, was cheered to the echo. "The Lodge Officers," "Past Masters," and "The Ladies" having been toasted, the clock pointed to high 12; and home was the word.

CREWKERNE.—Parrett and Axe Lodge (No. 814).—The installation of Bro. George Summers, of Yeovil, as W.M. of this lodge for the year ensuing took place on Tuesday, at the George Hotel. The ceremony was conducted by the Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Somerset, Bro. R. C. Elise, and the board of Installed Masters numbered twelve. At the close Bro. Summers invested the following: Bros. Dr. Westcott, I.P.M.; Tompsett, S.W.; Dr. Hughes, J.W.; Harris, P.M., Treasurer; Ireland, P.M., Secretary; Coombs, S.D.; Hussey, J.D.; Nosworthy, P.G.O., Organist; Bennett, I.G.; J. Budge, P.M., D.C.; Rugg, P.M., and Foxlow, Stewards. A cordial vote of thanks was tendered to the Installing Master for his attendance, and to the I.P.M., and there was a good attendance of brethren at the subsequent banquet.

HAMPTON WICK.—Wolsey Lodge (No. 1656). The members of this rapidly increasing Provincial Lodge met at the White Hart Hotel on the 4th inst., for the despatch of business. Among those present were Bros. W. Hammond, P.M. 201, 1326, 1512; P.P.G.D. of Midx. W.M.; Baldwin, P.M. 1423; P.G.P. Midx. acting S.W.; Bond, P.M. 889, J.W.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. Midx. acting S.D., (Freemason); Hurst, P.M. 1512, J.D.; Forge, acting I.G.; The Rev. T.J.C. de Crespigny, P.M. 708, P.P.G.C. Midx. Chaplain; J. Hammond, P.M. 201, and Hon. I.P.M.; T. W. Ockenden, S.D. 1512, Sec.; Marvin, D.C.; Scott, W.S. The visitors were Bros. Stokes, Irish Constitution, Eyres, Nova Scotia, Murphy, 1512. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed the W.M. assisted by the I.P.M., raised Bros. Aylen and Darling, passed Bros. Humphries and Burchill, and initiated Messrs. Chandler, Abbott, Jobbins, Turner and W. S. White, the ceremonies of the three degrees being carried out by Bro. Hammond with his accustomed ability. The election of W.M. resulted in favour of the J.W., who had written a letter stating that in consequence of very severe indisposition he would be prevented from attending that evening. Bro. Nuthall was re-elected Treas. The by-laws having been read, a Past Master's jewel was voted to Bro. Hammond. It was also resolved that a letter of sympathy should be written by the Sec. and forwarded to the W.M. elect, expressing a hope for his speedy convalescence. The lodge after sitting nearly five hours was then adjourned until the first Monday in March next, and the brethren partook of a collation, and at its conclusion the W.M. stated that as they had scarcely a half-hour at their disposal he should propose the toasts but briefly. "The Provincial Grand Officers" was acknowledged by Bro. the Rev. C. de Crespigny, in a short but able speech, and he immediately after proposed "The Health of the W.M.," whom he considered was one of the best working Masons and most genial Masters he had ever met. This toast having been briefly acknowledged "The Initiates," "The Visitors" and "The Officers" brought the proceedings to a close.

LEEK.—St. Edward Lodge (No. 966).—The festival of St. John and installation of Bro. Thomas Wardle, the W.M. elect of the St. Edward Lodge, took place on Thursday, 30th ult. There was a good attendance of brethren, and the ceremony of installation was efficiently performed by Bro. W. Needham, the retiring W.M., who was assisted by Bros. Ball, P.M.; Bedmore, P.G.O.; and J. Ingamells, P.M. 460. The following officers were appointed and duly invested with their respective jewels:—Bros. E. Gailey, S.W.; F. L. Milner, J.W.; the Rev. C. C. Ward, Chaplain, J. Flower, Treasurer; J. Ball, Secretary; Wm. Allen, D.C.; J. M. Wright, S.D.; W. Lowe, J.D.; G. L. Magnier, I.G.; W. Broster, Steward; P. Hodgson, Tyler. After the lodge had been closed the brethren adjourned to the Swan Hotel, where an excellent banquet was provided, about thirty brethren being present. The W.M. presided. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured, amongst the speakers being Bros. J. S. Crapper, P.M. 418, P.P.G.A.D.; Bedmore, P.G.O.; H. Cartledge, 418; Hallows, P.M., and others. Bro. Needham was highly complimented on the admirable manner in which he had conducted the affairs of the lodge during the past year. Bro. Gibson, P.M., proposed "The Masonic Charities," to which toast Bro. the Rev. C. C. Ward and Bro. Needham responded. It was stated that last year a benevolent fund was instituted in connection with the lodge, the object of which is to render instantaneous relief to any distressed past or present member of the lodge who may require assistance before application can be made to the provincial or other charitable associations connected with the Order. The first year the sum of £10 18s. was contributed to this fund and placed in the bank. The sum of £10 10s. was contributed by the brethren present at the banquet, and it was expected that the fund would be considerably augmented this year by absent members of the lodge. Bro. Bedmore and others supplied some excellent music, and the evening was spent very harmoniously and pleasantly.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The first monthly meeting of this lodge, after the installation, was held on Tuesday evening, the 5th inst. There were present Bros. J. Black, W.M.; Capt. F. R. Sewell, S.W.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org. as J.W., in the absence of Bro. Bird through severe illness; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas.; T. C. Robinson, Sec.; C. Gibson, S.D.; H. Peacock, I.G.; Dr. Dodgson, P.M.; W. Shilton, P.M.; J. Bolton, G. Brash, J. Evening, J. Fearon, T. Armstrong, J. Towers, and R. Harrison, Bro. R. Robinson kindly officiated as Tyler, Bro. Poth being confined to his bed. After the lodge had been opened in form and the minutes of the preceding meeting read and confirmed, Bros. Armstrong, Fearon, Harrison, and Towers gave proof of their proficiency in the First Degree, and were all subsequently passed to the degree of F.C. by the W.M., who performed the ceremony in the most workmanlike style, also explaining the tracing board. This being Bro. Black's first official act in the chair, he cannot be too highly complimented on the ability and energy thus early displayed; and a word of praise must likewise be meted out to the S.W., and the other new officers, more especially Bro. Capt. Sewell. The F.C.'s lodge having been closed, the W.M. invested Bro. R. Robinson, P.M., as Treasurer for the year, which office he has been elected to four times consecutively. Two candidates having been proposed for initiation, Bro. Dr. Dodgson proposed, and Bro. Captain Sewell seconded, Bro. L. L. B. Dykes, J.P., of Dovenby Hall, Apollo Lodge, Oxford, as an affiliating member of Skiddaw Lodge. Bro. Dykes's late lamented father, we may mention, was Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland. He succeeded the late Right Hon. Sir James Graham, Bart., M.P., and the next Prov. Grand Master was Bro. the Earl of Bective, M.P., who for ten years and upwards has ruled over the province so felicitously and successfully. After the last proclamation, the lodge was closed in form.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge (No. 1085).—The annual installation meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, February 5th, at the Masonic Hall. Present: Bros. W. Heathcote, W.M.; S. Pipes, I.P.M.; M. H. Bobart, P.P.S.G.W., Treasurer; W. B. Hextall, Secretary; S. Steele, J.D.; J. E. Russell, M. of C.; W. L. Dodd as O.; W. Butterfield as I.G.; J. O. Manton, S.; W. Stone, Tyler; W. Naylor, P.G. Secretary and P.P.G.S.W.; T. Iliffe, P.P.S.G.W.; Leech, Stokes, Griggs, Shepherd, Parkins, Lane, Mainprize, Gore, Walters, Popplewell, Coulthurst, Ratcliffe, and Pragnell. Visitors: Bros. T. Cox, P.P.S.G.W.; J. Smith, P.P.J.G.W.; G. T. Wright, P.P.J.G.W.; A. G. Taylor, W.M. Tyrian Lodge; J. Brown, W.M. Arboretum Lodge; T. Roe, jun., P.M. 802; J. Small, P.M. 787; W. Cox, P.M. Hartington Lodge, Barrow-in-Furness; E. R. Ward, S.W. 253; T. Merry, W.M. elect, 731; and T. Cay, 802. The lodge was opened at 6 p.m., and after the usual preliminary business Bro. M. H. Bobart took the chair, and Bro. Geo. Pipes was presented to him by two P.M.'s for the benefit of installation. The ceremony was very ably performed, the customary addresses being delivered in a most impressive and efficient manner in the several degrees. The newly appointed Master invested Bros. J. Heathcote, S.W.; W. B. Hextall, J.W.; M. H. Bobart, Treasurer; J. O. Manton, Secretary; S. Steele, S.D.; J. E. Russell, J.D.; T. H. Hepworth, M. of C.; G. T. Edwards, O.; W. Butterfield, I.G.; J. Pateman, S.S.; and W. Stone, Tyler. He then rose to perform the pleasing duty of presenting a handsome P.M.'s jewel to his predecessor, Bro. W. Heathcote, subscribed for by members of the lodge. The accounts were presented by the auditors, and Grand Lodge certificates handed to and signed by Bros. W. Stokes, and C. Leech. A circular from the P.G. Secretary, on behalf of the Institution for Aged Freemasons was then read, and a sum of five guineas voted towards the funds of the charity, to be placed on the list of the R.W.G.M. of the province, the Marquis of Hartington, who undertook to act as a Steward at the annual festival. Two gentlemen were proposed as candidates for initiation into the mysteries of science, and, after "hearty good wishes" from the visiting brethren to the W.M., the lodge was closed in ancient and solemn form. The brethren proceeded from their labours to sumptuous banquet, a pleasing souvenir of the evening being the "Freemason Masonic Apron," Menu cards.

WREXHAM.—Square and Compass Lodge (No. 1336).—The festival of St. John was celebrated on Tuesday, the 5th inst., by the officers and brethren of this lodge. There was a large gathering of members of the fraternity present. The proceedings were opened according to the rites and ceremonies of the institution, and after some business had been disposed of, the leading event of the meeting was commenced, viz., the installation of Bro. E. Smith as W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was ably carried out by Bro. J. Lewis. Not a few brethren belonging to lodges in other parts of the country attended to celebrate the anniversary, and all joined in solemn invocation for a blessing to rest on the newly-installed Master. Bro. J. F. Edisbury undertook and carried out in a most able manner the musical portion of the proceedings. After the brethren had saluted the W.M. in the usual manner, he proceeded to invest the following officers with their respective badges—Bros. T. Eytton-Jones, S.W.; J. C. Owen, J.W.; J. F. Edisbury, Treasurer and Organist; John Williams, Secretary; Howel Davies, S.D.; J. W. M. Smith, J.D.; Rev. A. L. Taylor, Chaplain; R. J. Williams, W. Garratt Jones, William Pierce, and J. A. Chadwick, Stewards; C. K. Benson, I.G.; and Thos. Lee, Tyler. The lodge being closed, the members of the fraternity repaired to the Wynnstay Arms Hotel, where a high-class banquet had been spread by Bro. J. B. Murless. Among the visitors were: Bros. J. Salmon, P.P.G.J.W., W.M., 1674; W. Matthews, P.G.A.D.C. Cheshire, P.M. 721; F. L. Wheeler, 721; N. Retemeyer, 21; R. C. Edwards, W.M. 721; H. P. Swindells, S.W. 721; E. Jones, J.W. 721; Thomas Goodier, P.M. 292; R. F. Brooker, 117; Algernon Potts, W.M. 1477; James Knox, J.W. 425; F. A. Dickson, W.M. 425; W. Aston, S.W. 1432; J. B. Murless, J.W. 1432; R. O. Anwyl, J.W. 1369; W. James, 1477; J. C. Robinson, P.M. 425; Walter Evans, 463. After the repast was finished the following toast list was gone through:—"Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen and the Craft," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of England," "The M.W. Pro G.M., the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge," "The R.W.P.G.M., Sir W. W. Wynn, M.P.," "The R.W.D.P.G.M., and the Past and Present Officers of Grand Lodge," "The Worshipful Master," "The Installing Master," "The Visiting Brethren," "The Retiring Master and Past Masters of the Lodge," "The Officers of the Lodge," "The Masonic Charities," and the Tyler's toast.

WATERLOO.—Skelmersdale Lodge (No. 1380).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this thriving suburban lodge, of which Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master of England, and R.W.P.G.M. of West Lancashire, was the first W.M. in 1872, when it was consecrated, was held on Monday, the 4th inst., at the Queen's Hotel, Waterloo, Bro. the Rev. T. W. Richardson, W.M., was in his place in the E. at the opening, and the names, as per Tyler's book, embraced those of Bros. G. Broadbridge, P.M., P.P.G.D.C., D.C.; E. Ford, jun., S.W.; R. Brown, P.M. 241, Treas.; R. H. Exton, Sec.; F. W. Barnes, S.D.; and J. Almond, Org. The members present were Bros. H. A. Tobias, H. Davis, F. Smitton, J. Cobham, P.M. 241; R. Gittins, R. W. Hickson, S. Warner, W. Watt, and R. Lamb. The visitors included Bros. G. Peet, W.M. 241; J. W. Baker, P.M. 241; W. Harrison, I.P.M. 897; W. Pughe, W.M. 1620; T. H. Sheen, J.W. 241; P. W. Juncker, 786; T. Smitton, 1570; H. Bulley, P.G.S.B. Eng.; G. Turner, P.G. Treas.; and J. Wells, P.G. Purs. The lodge was opened according to ancient form, and the minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. Bro. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., afterwards proceeded, in an effective manner, to install Bro. E. Ford, jun., as the W.M. of the lodge for the ensuing year; and the usual charges were given efficiently by Bro. R. Brown, P.M. 241. The following were the officers invested: Bros. Rev. T. W. Richardson, I.P.M.; J. Cobham, S.W.; R. H. Exton, J.W.; F. W. Barnes, Sec.; R. Brown, Treas. (re-elected); John Brown, S.D.; R. W. Hickson, J.D.; F. Gittins, I.G.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. It was unanimously resolved to vote five guineas from the funds of the lodge, to be supplemented by private subscriptions, for the purchase of a testimonial to Bro. the Rev. T. W. Robertson, I.P.M., in recognition of the zeal and courtesy he had displayed during his year's occupancy of the chair. The brethren after business sat down to a splendid banquet, and during the evening Bro. R. Brown (Treasurer) presented the lodge with a most artistic portrait, in oil, of Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, the work of art being executed by Bros. Brown, Barnes, and Bell, whose fame as photographic artists is known throughout the United Kingdom.

HAMPTON.—Era Lodge. (No. 1423).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday last at "The Island Hotel," when there were present Bro. Thiellay, P.P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, W.M.; Sabine, P.M. P.P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, S.W.; W.M. elect, Devereux J.W.; Wolfe, J.D.; Johnson, I.G.; Dubois, P.M. 142, P.P.G.S.D. of Middlesex, Treasurer; F. Walters, P.M., P.P.G.J.D. of Middlesex, Secretary; Moss, P.M., P.P.G.R. of Middlesex, Baldwin, P.M., P.G.P. of Middlesex; W. Hammond, P.M. 1512, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex; Miller, P.M., P.P.G.O. of Middlesex, Organist, and others. The visitors were Bros. H. Potter, P.M. (Robert Burns); T. C. Walls, (Freemason), S.W. 1381, P.G.O. Middlesex; Ockenden, S.D. 1512; Aston, S.D. 1656; Scholes, 192; Belinfante, 435; Graham, 894; Weekes. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed and the report of the Audit Committee read and adopted, the ceremony of installing Bro. Sabine into the chair of K.S. was at once proceeded with. The officer elected by the lodge to perform this onerous duty was Bro. Baldwin, who appointed Bros. Dubois as S.W. Miller as J.W., Hammond as J.G. and Thiellay as D.C. to assist him in the ceremony. We before have had occasion in detail to compliment Bro. Baldwin upon the great efficiency he displays in the working of this important and beautiful ceremonial and therefore it is only necessary to state that his latest effort was in every way successful. Amongst the officers invested for the ensuing year were Bros. Devereux, S.W.; Wolfe, J.W.; Johnson, J.D.; Wright, I.G.; Dubois, Treas.; Walters, Secretary; Falconer, D.C.; J. H. Pearson, W.S.; Dr. Riley, A. S. Gilbert, P.G.T. of Middlesex, Tyler. A vote of thanks having been passed to the Installing Master the W.M. in a neat address presented the I.P.M. with a very handsome jewel which had been voted unanimously by the lodge. The lodge then voted ten pounds to head the list of Bro. Dubois, as Steward to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and the W.M. gave notice that a like sum should be voted to the list of Bro. Falconer as Steward for the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. The lodge was then closed and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, which was well catered for by Bro. Tagg, the creature comforts being greatly enhanced by the elegant manner in which they were served. The Royal and Craft toasts having been done full justice to, the W.M. proposed "The Health of the R.W.P.G.M. of Middlesex," who, in consequence of other engagements was unable to be present. In the course of his remarks, which were frequently interrupted by the applause of the brethren, the W.M., said it appeared to be the greatest delight of their P.G.M. to mix frequently and that without restraint with the members of his numerous lodges. The appointment of Col. Burdett to preside over the destinies of the province marked an era in the history of English Freemasonry, because it had been attended in so short a time with such great success. His popularity in lodge, at the banquet and in the various official positions he held was very great, and he possessed all the genial and other characteristics of an "old English gentleman." In conclusion, the W.M. said that during the time that the gallant Colonel had held sway in Middlesex, no serious disagreement had taken place in any of his lodges, and that the various P.G. appointments which he had from time to time conferred, had given universal satisfaction. "The D.P.G.M. of Middlesex, and the rest of the P.G.O.'s Past and Present," was proposed by the W.M.'s permission, by Bro. Moss who in the course of a very able speech, said that on that auspicious occasion it was only kind and reasonable that they who were in the enjoyment of good health should wish that the same blessing might speedily be restored to one who had been sorely stricken down by the hand of affliction, namely, Bro. Little. The thought that his name had been kindly remembered by the members of the Era Lodge would cheer their D.P.G.M. in his sick chamber. In conclusion the speaker warmly said that he considered Bro. Little to be one of the brightest and most intelligent ornaments and exponents of modern Freemasonry. The above toasts were heartily drunk, and the latter was acknowledged by Bro. Hammond. Telegrams were then sent to the P.G.M. and his Deputy, and shortly afterwards the following replies were received:—"From the P.G.M. of Middlesex to the Era Lodge. A thousand thanks for your extreme consideration, and I heartily return the compliment in a flowing bumper of champagne to the health of the W.M." "From Bro. R. W. Little:—Best thanks to the Master and brethren for kind wishes. I am happy to say that I am progressing favourably. Bro. Levander is now with me." "The Masonic Charities" was coupled with the name of Bro. Dubois, and was duly acknowledged by him in a speech which appealed strongly to the sympathies of his hearers upon behalf of the objects of those excellent institutions. "The Visitors" toast was responded to by Bros. Potter and Scholes. "The Health of the W.M." was warmly proposed by the I.P.M. and having been received with excellent "fire," Bro. Sabine made a very brief and modest reply to the effect that he had endeavoured throughout his Masonic career to conscientiously discharge his duties and to advance in every possible way the charitable principles of the Order. He had tried to do his best for the "Era" from the day of its foundation to the present time, and he hoped to retire from the chair in the possession of their fullest amount of esteem and confidence, and in conclusion he cordially thanked them for having done him the honour of electing him to preside over them. In consequence of many of the brethren desiring to return to town the remainder of the toasts were but formally given, and for the same reason but briefly responded to. They were "The Past Masters," "The Treas. and Sec." and "The Officers." During the proceedings vocal and other selections were given by Bros. Enman, Walls, Graham, Scholes and others.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—The last meeting of the above lodge before the installation of its W.M. elect, Bro. A. J. Manning, took place on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at Bro. West's house, the Three Crowns, the W.M. presiding, supported by the following officers: Bros. Manning, S.W.; W. T. Turner, J.W.; J. Henderson, Sec.; J. Plume, S.D.; Dr. W. Vance, J.D.; E. J. Lloyd, I.G. The Past Masters present were Bros. E. West, P.M. 1076 and P.P.G.O. for Herts; B. B. Brayshaw, P.M. 1046, 1437, 1462, and P.G.S.B. for Essex; W. Graham, P.M. 700; who on being received as an honorary member of the lodge was as well present. The visitors included Bros. W. Page, P.M. 1076; T. D. Morley, 13; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The lodge having been opened in due form and the minutes of the last meeting passed, Mr. Morgan was, after approval, initiated into Freemasonry. The next business before the lodge was the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, and after an unanimous ballot, Bro. A. J. Manning was, amid applause, pronounced elected to that distinguished position, for which he gracefully returned thanks. Bro. F. Geller was then re-elected as Treasurer, and after a letter had been read by the W.M. in which the late respected Tyler, Bro. Stedman, begged to withdraw from that office, Bro. W. Page, an old and esteemed Past Master of the Capper Lodge, was unanimously elected for the ensuing twelve months. A Past Master's jewel was then voted to the W.M., and the lodge was closed. The brethren then partook of one of Bro. West's neat and prettily served supper, and upon re-assembling round the social board, the W.M., with the assistance of the officers and brethren, did full justice to the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. West then proposed the toast of "The W.M.," who responded. In response to that of the Past Masters of, and belonging to the Henley Lodge, Bro. Graham in the course of an eloquent reply, after Bros. West and Henderson had spoken, said he hardly knew how to express himself for the eulogiums that had been passed upon him both by the W.M. and the Past Masters who had preceded him. He had known the lodge since its foundation, and he was happy to say that it was an offspring from the lodge in which he had received, not only the benefits of initiation, but in which he had had the honour of being installed among its proud array of W. Masters, the "Nelson." (Cheers.) Therefore he felt it a great honour to respond to the toast of the Past Masters of the Henley Lodge, and if at any time his humble services should or could be of any benefit to any member of it, he should not only feel it a pleasure but a duty to place them at their request. (Applause.) After a long experience of Freemasonry, he assured them that if they only endeavoured to carry out its beautiful teaching—be truthful, honest, upright, and above all charitable in their dealings with one another—acting up to their principles, and uniting brotherly love with every action of their life, they would, while not only be doing their duty to their fellow-creatures generally, but in its best attributes, following the tenets so admirably laid down for their guidance in the pure and perfect Freemasonry so well taught them in their sublime ritual. (Loud cheers.) He strongly advised every young Mason present to join the lodge of instruction attached to the house, and concluded a brilliant address by assuring them that his services were at all times, should they require them, at their call, and resumed his seat amid much applause. Several other toasts followed, and the Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings.

BRIGHTON.—St. Cecilia Lodge (No. 1636).—The annual installation and banquet of this lodge took place on the 31st ult. at the Pavilion. The ceremony of installation took place in the afternoon, when Bro. James Eberall was unanimously elected and installed as Worshipful Master of the lodge, the ceremony being impressively rendered by Bro. John H. Scott, Deputy Prov. Grand Master. The brethren afterwards adjourned to the banqueting-room, where the annual banquet took place, under the presidency of the newly-elected W.M., the vice chair being occupied by Bros. Sandeman and Foat. The usual Masonic and other toasts were given, interspersed by some excellent pianoforte solos by Bro. Kuhe, and songs by several of the brethren.

WALTHAMSTOW.—Beaconsfield Lodge (No. 1662).—A general meeting of this lodge was held at The Chequers, March-street, on Saturday, the 2nd February. Present: Bros. W. T. Christian, W.M.; W. Groome, S.W.; W. G. Hallows as J.W.; J. Pinder, P.M.; F. Hallows, Secretary; T. Franklin, S.D.; J. H. Cambridge, J.D.; M. Hunt, as I.G.; T. Upward, Organist; A. Delvall, W.S.; Gilchrist, Tyler. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The candidates for passing not having arrived, the W.M., assisted by the brethren, worked the first section of the lecture. Bros. Harris and Putney were afterwards examined and entrusted. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and the two candidates were regularly introduced and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The lodge was resumed to the First Degree, and the election of W.M. for the ensuing year was proceeded with. The choice of the brethren being unanimous in favour of Bro. W. Groome, S.W. Bro. W. S. Christian was elected Treasurer, and Bro. Gilchrist, Tyler. A Past Master's jewel was unanimously voted from the lodge funds to the outgoing W.M. for his able and efficient services to the lodge during his term of office; a Past Master's jewel was also voted to Bro. J. Pinder for his services as P.M. of the lodge. The Audit Committee was then appointed, and the lodge was closed in due form and adjourned until Saturday, the 5th October. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent supper, after which the usual Masonic toasts were given by the W.M. Amongst the visitors present were the following brethren, viz.: Bros. W. Mackey, P.M. 861; E. Swain, W.M. 1602; J. Glynn, 33; J. G. Baxter, jun., 206; R. Shephard, 861; F. Middle, 645; R. Dallas, 860; G. Edwards, 907; W. Snellgrove, 907; A. Turner, 1228, and others. The following members of the lodge were also present, viz.: Bros. Burnard, Rubery, Stockwell, Moffatt, Shingle, and others.

INSTRUCTION

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Capper Lodge (No. 1076).—The annual banquet of the above excellent lodge of instruction took place on Thursday, the 31st of January, and thanks to the prestige attached to the superb catering of Bro. E. West, at whose house, the Three Crowns, the lodge is held, was most satisfactory in its results, that worthy brother, who is a Past Master of some three or four lodges and as well a Past Provincial Officer of Herts, being both in his capacity of host and teacher of Masonry, deservedly popular. After partaking of the good things so liberally provided by Bro. West, Bro. J. White, W.M. of the mother lodge, No. 1076, filled the chair. Bro. F. Brien, in the vice chair. Among the principal visitors and members present were Bros. J. Dorton, I.P.M. 1076; S. Watkins, P.M. 1076; E. West, P.M. 1076; H. Sisley, P.M. 1076; J. Gaskell, P.M. 1076; T. Day, P.M. 1076; P. McCarthy, J.W. 1076; J. Jobb, J.D. 1076; Jas. Mitchell, Hon. Sec. 1076; A. J. Manning, S.W. 1472; E. J. Lloyd, I.G. 1472; Dr. W. Vance, J.D. 1472; B. Goodale, 1327; W. Brown, Treas. and P.S.W. 1076; C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason); and others. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given by the W.M. with exceeding taste and aplomb, never exceeding the prescribed limits by a single word, but in suave, and truly Masonic spirit, he dwelt upon the usual worn themes, and in a most felicitous manner gave expression to those sentiments most welcome to Masonic hearts on such occasions, and carried with him, as he deserved, the hearty good wishes of every one present. The toast of "The Capper Lodge of Instruction and its Preceptor," was given with the usual honours, and was well received. Bros. Vance and Brown, as Treas. and Sec., receiving an ovation to which they modestly responded. To that of "The Officers of the Capper Lodge, No. 1076," Bros. White, Brien, McCarthy, and Jobb eloquently responded, and to Bro. Gaskell's call for the suffrages of the company for their meed of praise of the W.M.'s presiding, Bro. White, the response was most enthusiastic. After the W.M. had responded, in his own quiet but effective manner, he in felicitous terms proposed the toast of "The Masonic Press," and regretted that at his lodge, the Capper, they never had the honour of a report in that excellent paper, the Freemason of which he was a constant subscriber, and while he felt envy at seeing the Woolwich Lodges so well represented, he felt that their lodge at Tidal Basin had been neglected; he trusted Bro. Jolly would pay them a visit, and record their doings in that valuable and truly Masonic paper. (Cheers.) After an enthusiastic call, Bro. Jolly responded and expressed the gratification it would afford him to enrol the Capper Lodge among the many he had the privilege and the honour of reporting. (Applause.) After the worthy host had been highly complimented for his excellent menu, the company separated, pleased and satisfied with their most enjoyable evening.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—The meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, the 8th inst., at the Mitre Hotel, Gouldbourne-road, Notting-hill. Present: Bros. Adkins, W.M.; Spiegel, J.W.; Woodmason, J.D.; Smout, sen., J.W.; Tellerboro, J.D.; H. Dehane, I.G.; Savage, P.M. Perceptor; Penn, W.M.; Murli, P.M.; W. Bartle, J. Bartle, Newland, Hutton, Collett, Wood, Chalford, Smout, jun. Sec., and Eskell. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Hutton being the candidate, also the ceremony of passing. Bro. Eskell, P.M., was elected a member of this lodge of instruction, and promised to be present as often as he could, and give all the assistance in his power. Bro. Smout sen., was elected W.M. for the next meeting.

LEICESTER.—Union Lodge.—The annual festival of this lodge, which meets under the joint sanction of the Town Lodges took place at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Friday, the 8th inst., when there was a large attendance. The Seven Sections of the First Lecture were worked as under:—

First Section by ... Bro. Thos. Colman, J.D., 297.
Second do. " T. A. Wykes, W.M., 523.
Third do. " L. P. Chamberlain, I.G., 279.
Fourth do. " J. Read, S.D., 1391.
Fifth do. " T. Worthington, P.M., 50.
Sixth do. " John T. Thorp, P.M., 523.
Seventh do. " Edgar Taylor, 523.

The questions by Bro. George Toller, jun., P.M., 523, 1560, G.S.B. The whole of the lectures were given with the most praiseworthy correctness, and at the close of the proceedings a hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to those concerned.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this Institution was held on Thursday at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Col. Cresson, V.P., in the chair. There were also present Bros. S. Rawson, Raynham W. Stewart, Capt. John Wordsworth, F. Adlard, Griffiths Smith, Thos. Cubitt, Joseph Smith, J. G. Stevens, W. Hilton, Charles Lacey, L. Steam, H. Massey, W. T. Nettleship, and James Terry Secretary. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes the Secretary reported that the result of the festival of the previous evening, was £11,126 13s. 6d. with 9 lists to come in.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart proposed a vote of thanks to his Grace the Duke of Manchester, K.P., Prov. G.M. Norths and Notts, who presided on the occasion.

Capt. Wordsworth seconded the motion which was put and carried unanimously.

Bro. James Brett, P.G.P., moved a vote of thanks to the President, Treasurer, and members of the Board of Stewards for the great exertion evinced by them on the occasion of the festival.

Capt. Wordsworth seconded the motion.

Bro. Joseph Smith acknowledged the compliment, but said that the great exertion came from the Secretary. He then gave notice of motion for next meeting that in consequence of the great success of the two last festivals a gratuity of £50 be presented to the Secretary.

Bro. Terry then said that Bro. Wills the horticulturist lent the beautiful flowers and shrubs which adorned the great hall where the concert was held.

Bro. Joseph Smith moved a vote of thanks to Bro. Wills, and said that the great hall was never so beautifully decorated before.

Capt. Wordsworth seconded the motion which was put and carried nem. con.

Bro. Terry afterwards read the warden's report which stated that Bro. Cutbush having offered to send in a number of Standard rose tree to the asylum and the offer having been accepted, the trees were sent in on the 9th February.

A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Cutbush for the present.

Bro. Raynham Stewart said that in consequence of the great success of the festival he should ask the brethren to invest £3000 which was placed to meet any deficiency there might be at the festivals. As however the festival was a great success he should move that five additional widows be elected next May. There were at present but eleven vacancies for widows, and 42 candidates. There were 31 men and fifteen vacancies. There were 130 widows now in the fund and 145 men.

Fifteen vacancies were declared for the male fund, and eleven on the female fund.

Bro. Stewart moved the five additional vacancies, and the motion having been seconded by Bro. Joseph Smith, was carried, and the vacancies for the women for the next election were ordered to be sixteen.

On the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, seconded by Captain Wordsworth, the £3000 above mentioned was ordered to be invested.

The balloting papers for next election were thereafter settled. A letter having been received from Bro. Hurst, of Yorkshire, suggesting that money should be invested to provide for the future,

Bro. Stewart contended that the course the brethren were now pursuing was the right one.

The Chairman said that if at any time the funds should not be sufficient to meet the demands made upon them the number of annuitants would have to be reduced. He hoped, however, that no necessity for such a step would ever happen. The brethren had really done that day the very thing that Bro. Hurst had suggested.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

The annual and amalgamated ball of the brethren of the Royal York Lodge, 315, and the St. Cecilia Lodge, 1636, took place at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, on Tuesday, the 12th inst. At the banquet, which was presided over by Bro. S. T. Frost, W.M. 315, upwards of 100 were present, including many ladies. Later on they were joined by a large party of ladies and gentlemen in the ball room, who kept up dancing with much spirit to the strains of Bro. Derrin's excellent band. Bro. Hawkes, S.W. 313, acted as hon. sec., and to his exertions a great part of the success of the evening is due.

Masonic and General Tidings.

We have much pleasure in stating that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales have graciously consented to inaugurate the new buildings of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and that the Most Worshipful Grand Master will appoint a day in March for the ceremony.

LORD CARNARVON.—In reply to a vote of thanks passed by the Committee of the Anti-Slavery Society, Lord Carnarvon refers with satisfaction to the fact that under his administration of the Colonies slavery was abolished on the Gold Coast.

The Queen has conferred the vacant Green Ribands of the Order of the Thistle upon the Duke of Hamilton and Brandon, Premier Peer of Scotland, and upon the Marquis of Lothian.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—The total amount received at the Festival of the Institution on Wednesday last was £11,126 13s. 6d., with nine lists to come in.

BRO. ARCHIBALD FORBES AT MANCHESTER.—On Monday, Bro. Archibald Forbes delivered a lecture to a large audience in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, on his personal experience as War Correspondent of the Daily News. The lecturer's graphic description of the passage of the Danube, the fighting in the Shipka Pass, and the two first assaults on Plevna, were listened to with intense interest, and the various touches of humorous and personal adventures were also peculiarly acceptable to the audience, who frequently expressed their admiration of Bro. Forbes's gallantry, and their appreciation of the public services which he has rendered.

Early on Wednesday morning, a fire occurred at Bro. the Earl of Zetland's town residence, No. 19, Arlington-street, Piccadilly. The brigade steamers were instantly in attendance, and by their means the flames were confined to the basement. Captain Shaw, in his official report, states that the fire originated by the overheating of a stove adjoining, and the following is the extent of the damage:—Back room on first floor and contents nearly burned out, roof over damaged by fire and cutting away, library on ground floor and contents severely damaged by fire and heat, and the rest of the building and contents slightly by heat and smoke.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has been pleased to appoint the Rev. F. A. Hervey, M.A., as Domestic Chaplain, vice the late Bro. the Rev. Wm. Lake Onslow, P.G.C.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Holmesdale, M.P., R.W.P.G.M. Kent, has kindly consented to preside at the seventh annual meeting of the United Kingdom Railway Officers' and Servant's Association, which will be held at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, on Wednesday week, the 27th inst.

The Belgrave Lodge of Instruction will be removed to the Harp Tavern, Jermyn-street, Regent-street, on Friday, 22nd February, on which occasion the Fifteen Sections will be worked. Bro. T. H. Pulsford, P.M. 1158, &c., in the chair; Bros. E. Farwig, S.W. 180, S.W.; G. Willson, Organist 1321, J.W. The lodge will be opened at 7 o'clock precisely.

BIRKBECK LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTION.—Southampton Buildings, Chancery Lane.—This Institution, which was established in 1823, and is the parent of the large number of Evening Class organisations, is no longer able to accommodate the large number of students seeking its educational advantages. Lord Northbrook, proposes that a movement should be set on foot to obtain suitable premises, and the Lord Mayor has promised to preside at a Meeting, to be held at the Mansion House, on Wednesday next, at three o'clock, for the purpose of inaugurating a fund to provide the Institution with a building suitable to its large and important operations.

The Annual Display and Assault of Arms of the City Gymnastic Club, will take place at St. James's Hall on Saturday next. A detachment of Her Majesty's Scots Guards will be in attendance. Full particulars as to time, prices &c., may be obtained of the Manager Bro. Albert Austin.

The Queen has been Graciously pleased to appoint his Grace the Duke of Abercorn, K.G. (M.W.G.M. of Ireland), to be the bearer of the Order of the Garter to his Majesty the King of Italy. General Lord William Paulet, G.C.B.; Admiral the Hon. Sir Henry Keppel, G.C.B.; Lord Frederick Spencer Hamilton, Attaché in her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, the Earl of Mount Edgumbe, Viscount Newport, M.P., will be attached to his Grace's mission. Mr. V. Buckley of the Foreign Office has been appointed Secretary.

Bro. H. P. Matthews announces his annual Evening Concert to take place at the Town Hall, Shore-ditch, on Monday evening the 18th inst. Bro. Matthews is a comic vocalist of great ability; his songs being always good and free from vulgarity.

THE PRINCESS MARY VILLAGE HOMES.—The Prince of Wales has consented to preside at a dinner to be held on the 20th March next, in aid of the funds of the Princess Mary Village Homes for little Girls, situated at Addlestone in Surrey. Upwards of 150 little girls are now in these homes, for whose maintenance funds are urgently needed.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—ADVT.

LODGE OF UNITED STRENGTH (No. 228).—The world in general was supposed to be watching with momentous interest the struggle of conquering and conquered any time this month, but "fact is stranger than fiction;" no thought of the "joy or sorrow" arising from war's victories or defeats entered within the peaceful walls of the Lodge of United Strength on the 13th inst., at the Guildhall Tavern, when the lodge, like Jack of early rhymes, found a "new Master." "Installation night" is in general to a lodge what Lord Mayor's Day is to the citizens of London, in the interest awakened in all who have part or parcel with the lodge, and in the case of No. 228 the interest was wider, for brethren came from far and wide to witness the elevation of so good a working Mason as Bro. Robert H. Halford, about forty visitors being present. The lodge was opened by Bro. James Hill, the Wardens being Bros. Snare, S.W. (who had asked the brethren to delay his election to the chair); the W.M. elect, Bro. R. H. Halford, being in the J.W. chair. The Past Masters of the lodge present were Bros. Crump (twenty-seven years Secretary, and now father of the lodge), Bottrill, J. Terry, P.G.D.C. Herts; Colston, Davies, Asst. Secretary; Hillhouse, J. While (Freemason), and R. Griggs. The lodge room was exceedingly well laid out, and when furnished with its living furniture, the brethren and visitors presented a sight which only Freemasons can imagine. The visitors included many wearers of the provincial purple, as may be seen from our list, for among those present were Bros. G. S. Lancaster, P.G.W. of Hants; E. Bowyer, P.G.D. Herts; Hart, P.G.D. Kent; McCubbin, P.G.D. Berks and Bucks; A. Hodge, P.G.D. Kent; Newton, P.M. 1607; Underwood, P.M. 860; Mark Rest, W.M. 948; W. Randall, W.M. 1470, Chiltern; J. A. Beart, J.W. 1470; G. F. Cook, P.M. 1471; T. Goode, W.M. 1288; Grimwood, P.M. 1224; Waters, P.M. Carrick-on-Shannon Lodge; Garbett, W.M. 1178; W. Burrows, J.D. 1336; B. L. Wilson, 1566; F. J. Moore, 1196; T. Thomson, 7, Scotland; Rankin, 475; Johnstone, 670; Tongue, Polish National; Mills, 23, Globe; Casely, 625; Howell, P.M. 1470; Charles Cornelly, P.M. 2, Dublin; Parker, J.W. 360; Atkins, 360; Cook, 177; Stock, S.W. 1178; Greenaway, 1567; Smith, 1588; Crockett, 1328; Littlewood, P.M. 780; and Lawrence. The W.M., Bro. James Hill, opened the lodge in the three degrees, and Bro. Smith, who had passed the first and second, was duly raised. The minutes having been unanimously confirmed in a lodge resumed to the First Degree, the officers were released from duty. Bros. Hillhouse and While were placed in the Wardens' chairs, and Bro. Hill, assisted by Past Master Griggs, proceeded to install his successor. Bro. Halford accepted the office and its duties in customary form in the Fellow Craft Lodge, and gave the usual pledges. The Board of Installed Masters was then formed, and the new Master was inducted into the chair according to ancient rites, and when there was greeted with rites "ancient and modern." When the brethren generally were re-admitted the new W.M. was proclaimed, and the processions were enlivened by the organ accompaniment by one of the visiting brethren. The addresses were delivered by Bro. Robert Griggs, with perfect elocution, and the visitors had thus a good opportunity of judging of the attention given by the workers of the lodge to Masonic ceremonies. The new Master then appointed his officers, and invested those elected by the lodge, the Treasurer and Tyler. All the brethren were rejoiced to see Bro. Snare again appointed to the S.W. chair. Bro. Pearcey amid plaudits received the jewel of office, and was invested with the dignity of J.W. Bro. Hickman, a young Mason, made a flight to the position of S.D.; Bro. Patmore had for the first time the wand of J.D. placed in his hands, and having with grace and ability discharged all the duties of office from Steward, received the emblematic jewel of this honourable position; Bro. Killick, the W.M. of the Kingsland Lodge, established in the far north of London, near the famous fishery of Ball's Pond, by the junior members of the lodge, received his initial step in his mother lodge by being placed as I.G. Bro. Holmes was made D.C., and Bro. Alford his assistant, Bro. J. Terry, P.M., again kindly occupied the responsible duties of W.S., and Bro. Currey, received the position of Assistant W.S. The Treasurer

Bro. Winsland, was unfortunately absent. Bro. Crump was received with loud rejoicing when re-invested with the office of Secretary, as was Bro. P.M. Davies, the Assistant Secretary. In all these selections of officers, the new W.M., acting under the guidance and with the assistance of the Past Masters, proceeded upon the old lines of the Constitution of the Craft, "merit before seniority." In the olden time in the lodge—back we mean, in the very olden time—so tradition has it, the appointment of officers used to be on the principle, ignored by the Constitution, of seniority. A change somehow occurred, and the principle of merit was supposed to govern, but for a long time the system prevailing was only a half-way house between the old and the true system, for if an officer was unpunctual and inattentive to his duties he was generally, notwithstanding his lack of interest in the duties, promoted year by year, the guiding principle being found in the abnegation of personal responsibility—"Let the lodge decide;" and so it used to be thrown upon the lodge to reject perhaps a very worthy brother, and so offend him, or to elect one who, whatever else he might be, could only discharge the duties of his office with continual promptings, and whose government formed a year of trial and shame. "Nous avons changé toute cela." The example was set by a W.M. of insisting, as far as he was able then, upon having a competent discharge of duties by those accepting office, and now the lodge, by an extension of the principle, can look forward to a succession of Masters not only willing but able to discharge with credit the responsible duties of W. Master, and to sustain in after years the dignity of P.M. Before the lodge closed, Bro. Moseley, on behalf of a brother visitor of another lodge, presented No. 228 with a case for the ivory gavel presented by Bros. Heinrich and Moseley. The first work of the new W.M. was the initiation of Mr. R. N. Stockwell and Mr. Henry Reeves, the latter gentleman holding a responsible position in one of our London governing boards. The duty was discharged by the W.M. and officers in a perfect manner in all respects. The lodge closed, the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, and the usual speeches were made of congratulation to the Master. The I.P.M., Bro. Hill, made his earnest endeavours to discharge the duties of his office recognised by being presented with the P.M. jewel of the lodge and a P.M. collar and silver pendant by the brethren, and Bro. Terry, in responding for the Masonic Charities, spoke of the duty thrown upon the Craft of supporting them, and thanked the lodge for the good it had done to his own institution. He expressed his great regret that a Past Grand Chaplain should have taken occasion to attack the work being thus done, and defended the institutions. The initiates and visitors also responded.

LEWIS LODGE (No. 1185).—This lodge held an emergency meeting on Saturday, the 16th inst., at the King's Arms Hotel, Wood Green, for the purpose of raising Bro. Coombe, when the following gentlemen, having been duly balloted for, were initiated:—Messrs Black, Harris, and Pearson. Both ceremonies were admirably worked by Bro. William Sayer, W.M., who on this his first night of office proved himself to be a thorough working Mason. After the closing of the lodge the brethren sat down to a capital dinner. The working at this country lodge, which can boast of its Chaplain and Organist, is quite up to many of the larger and more pretentious town lodges.

METROPOLITAN LODGE (No. 1507).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Wednesday, the 20th inst. The lodge was opened at half-past four o'clock by the W.M., Bro. R. T. Kingham, assisted by Bros. J. J. Michael, P.M.; T. A. Adams, G.P.P., as acting I.P.M.; W. M. Stiles, Sec. and J.D.; J. Douglass, S.W.; C. J. Scales, J.W.; W. Side, S.D.; Colls, I.G.; H. Stiles, D.C.; G. Clarke, W.S.; H. Lovegrove, Steward. There were present Bros. Raney, Gilbert, jun., Edmonds, Brummell, Saintsbury, Hatch, Hewison, H. Clark, J. Steele, Cruikshanks, Holden, Lea, Beattie, Channing, Killingback, Grant, Kearns, Tombs, and a number of brethren, including visitors Bros. Dwarber, P.M. 55, 1589; Meyer, 1621; Fisk, 212; Baker, P.M. 753; Pickard, J.W. 753; Poulton, 192, 1604; Urick, P.M. 144; and Hancock. The minutes having been read and confirmed, Bros. Holden, Lea, Channing, Steele, Ward, Kearns, Grant, and Cruikshanks, were raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason. Bros. F. W. Dimsdale, H. A. Dimsdale, and W. E. Smith were passed to the Second Degree. Messrs. E. R. Freebody, A. Gemmell, C. Turner, and C. W. Blake were elected after ballot, and the first three were duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. It was unanimously resolved that an application should be made for a chapter to be attached to the lodge, Bros. J. Willing, P.M., Treasurer; T. Williams, I.P.M.; and Fergusson, P.M. 177, three Principals designate. After the transaction of some routine business, the lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet, provided by Bro. F. H. Clemow in his usual excellent style. Fifty-five members of the lodge were present and eleven visitors. The usual toasts were given, and the proceedings were enlivened by the vocal efforts of Bros. Cruikshanks, Michael, Hewison, and Hatch.

ST. DUNSTAN'S LODGE (No. 1589).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 15th inst., when there were present Bros. Wellsman, W.M.; Dalwood, S.W., W.M. elect; Dodson, J.W.; Turner, S.D.; Woodbridge, J.D.; Manners, I.G.; Low, D.C.; Bull, W.S.; Dwarber, I.P.M., and the following honorary members: Bros. J. Smith' P.G.P.; Albert, P.G.P.; Maxwell, P.G.S.; Terry, P.G.D.C. of Herts, Sec. Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; Capt. R. Williams, P.P.G. Organist of Middlesex. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Cowlard, P.G.S.; Baxter, P.G.S.; Probert, G.S.; Batty, W.M. 171; Singleton, W.M. 858; Brodie, W.M. 1254; Jardine, P.M. 140; Robbins, P.M. 276; Lee, I.P.M. 975; Green, S.W. 108; T. C. Walls, 141, P.G.O. of Middlesex (Freemason); Yaxley, J.W. 434;

Dickins, J.D., (Dalhouse); Jardine, 56; Fowler, 96; Moore, 198; Preston, 1669; De Keyser, Sadler, and Whaley, 1676. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised Bros. Robinson and A. N. Clemow, to the degree of M.M. most ably. The ceremony of inducting Bro. Dalwood in the chair of K.S. was then commenced by Bro. Wellsman, who appointed Bros. Smith as S.W.; Albert, as J.W.; Lee, as I.G.; and Dwarber, as D.C. to assist him in the work, and Bro. Williams officiated as Organist. The whole of the beautiful ceremony was carried out by the I.P.M. in a manner that left nothing to be desired. The officers invested were Bros. Dodson, S.W.; Turner, J.W.; Praed, Treasurer (by deputy), A. Tisley, Secretary (by deputy); Woodbridge, S.D.; Manners, J.D.; Low, I.G.; Bull, D.C.; Clemow, W.S. The lodge having been duly closed the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, which was well catered for by Bro. Clemow, and assistants. The preliminary Royal and Craft toasts were duly honoured. Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., responded on behalf of "The Officers of Grand Lodge" in his usually happy manner. In proposing "The Health of the W.M.," the I.P.M. took occasion to mention that Bro. Dalwood, as P.M. of a very old lodge, would bring a matured experience to bear upon his responsibilities in the chair of the St. Dunstan's Lodge. He would also find that the rough edges of the work had been taken off by the Masters that had preceded him. The brethren who knew him and were aware of his capabilities would agree with him (the I.P.M.) that he (the W.M.) would guide their ship thoroughly well to the end of his twelvemonth's voyage. In conclusion the speaker said that Bro. Dalwood was the very man they wanted, and one that would not only look after their interests and comforts, but would see that the discipline of the lodge was well carried out. The W.M. in reply briefly said that he hoped during his year of office to give every satisfaction. He had—as they were well aware—filled the position before, and therefore they might rely that the responsibilities of the position would not suffer at his hands. He was proud to preside over such a lodge, because it was founded as a parish lodge, and it was moreover gratifying to him to see amongst their members so many occupying present and past official rank in the good old precinct of St. Dunstan. "The Visitors" followed, and was acknowledged at length and in very flattering terms by Bros. Batty, 171; Brodie, 1254; and Jardine, 56. The next toast was the "The I.P.M." which was given by the W.M. in very felicitous terms. He said that Bro. Wellsman was a most worthy brother. He had carried out the duties of the chair from first to last most ably. He (the W.M.) had been connected with him as a vestryman for many years, and he could unhesitatingly say that no man was more highly esteemed in the parish than their I.P.M. In conclusion, the W.M. presented Bro. Wellsman with the very handsome and distinctive jewel of the lodge, and at the same time expressed a hope that he would live many years to wear it. This toast having been most warmly received, the I.P.M. made an excellent reply. Some brethren, he said, were under the impression that after having passed the chair they had nothing more to do than to rest and be thankful, but he was of a different opinion, as he considered that a P.M. should be always at his post, and should invariably endeavour to study to improve the interests of his lodge. He said that it having occurred to several of the inhabitants to found a parish lodge, they had laid their heads together, and the results proved that they had not erred in establishing one. He, personally, was proud of the position he occupied as a founder and second Master of the good Masonic ship "The St. Dunstan," and long might it enjoy fair weather. The remaining toasts, in consequence of the advanced hour, were but briefly given. They were "The Past Masters;" "The Hon. Members;" "The Treasurer and Secretary;" and "The Officers." In the course of the latter toast the W.M. mentioned feelingly the illness that had suddenly overtaken their worthy and excellent Secretary, Bro. Tisley. During the evening Bros. Dodson, Wellsman, Clemow, and Walls vocally entertained the brethren, and Bro. Taunton, professionally known as Mr. Walter Pelham, created great amusement in his imitations of public readers and street itinerants. The next and last meeting of the season will be held on the third Friday in the ensuing month.

PRESCOT.—Lodge of Loyalty (No. 86).—The postponed installation meeting of this very ancient lodge took place at the Crown Hotel, Prescott, near Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 13th inst. There was a large gathering of the fraternity on this occasion, amongst the visitors being Bros. H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec.; H. W. Collins, P.P.G.J.W.; J. R. Goepel, P.M. 155, 823, P.P.G.D.C.; and W. Newsome, W.M. elect 1384. Amongst the brethren of the lodge present were Bros. W. Tyrer, I.P.M. and P.G. Supt. of Wks.; John Twist, P.M.; H. Scott, P.M.; J. T. Hall, P.M., and others. The lodge was duly opened by Bro. W. Tyrer, I.P.M., who proceeded to instal Bro. John Twist, P.M., as W.M. for the ensuing year, in a most efficient manner. The newly installed Master invested his officers as follows: Bros. Frederick Smith, S.W.; E. J. Brown, J.W.; W. Tyrer, Treas.; Henry Fogg, Sec.; Alexander Fraser, S.D.; James Mawdsley, J.D.; John Bamford, I.G.; John Yapp, Org.; Thomas Cowherd, Tyler. The brethren subsequently dined together, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Royal Gloucester Lodge (No. 130).—Bro. Robert Sharpe, the I.P.M. of this lodge, was at its last meeting presented by the lodge with a Past Master's jewel, in recognition of his services during the past year. The presentation was made in open lodge by the W.M., Bro. C. J. Phillips, following a raising and two initiations, and in the presence of a full attendance of brethren, including nearly a dozen visitors from the Shirley Lodge, with which Bro. Sharpe has been associated as Treasurer since its foundation. The W.M.

having in a few appropriate sentences placed the jewel, which is handsomely chased and bore a suitable inscription, on the breast of Bro. Sharpe, he gracefully acknowledged the compliment. Upwards of thirty brethren subsequently supped together, and a most fraternal meeting was spent, the toast of the visitors being acknowledged by representatives of the Shirley Lodge, Bros. Aslett, P.M. (Southampton); P.M. John Adams (Peace and Harmony); and Bro. Burchett (Economy, Winchester).

MANCHESTER.—Caledonian Lodge (No. 204).—The usual monthly meeting of this ancient and well known lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, on Wednesday, the 14th inst., and was made the occasion of recognising the merits and services of an old and much esteemed member. The W.M. (Bro. Robert Eldershaw) took the chair shortly after six o'clock; the other chairs being occupied by Bros. John Roberts, S.W., and G. T. Mullock, J.W. There were also present P.M.'s Clay, Timperley, Battye, Humphreys, Hains, Hind; Bros. H. T. Robberds, P.M. 993, and T. Shorrocks, W.M. 350, and a goodly muster of members and friends. Amongst the latter were Bros. Yates, P.M. 993; Allison, P.M. 993; Sharp, W.M. 993; Pritchard, P.M. 581; Hardy, P.M. 1045; Slack, Peak, and Wright, 993; and Baldwin, 1357. After the usual preliminaries, Bro. William Percival was passed to the Second Degree by the W.M., and Bro. Samuel Lawton was raised to the Third Degree by Bro. A. Humphreys, I. P.M.; both ceremonies being performed in a creditable manner. The most interesting event of the evening then took place, which was the presentation of a silver claret jug to Bro. John C. Hind, P.M., Treasurer, in recognition of past services. The idea of this testimonial originated with the P.M., who, fearing from Bro. Hind's retiring and modest disposition that he might thwart their desires if he heard of it, decided to keep the matter from him until the moment of presentation; and so faithfully was the secret kept that he was quite taken by surprise, although several of his most intimate friends had been invited to be present. The presentation was made by the Rev. Bro. Philip Hains, P.M., Chaplain, on behalf of the members, in an eloquent and impressive speech, in which he said:—"Masonry has its duties, its privileges, and its pleasures. Amongst its pleasures, I know none more pleasing than the presentations which we make from time to time to those amongst our brethren who, by their zeal and industry, recognised ability, and gentle demeanour, have distinguished themselves amongst us, and have won the esteem of all Masons. The brethren of this lodge, upon this occasion, have made two selections; one, in my opinion, a happy and suitable one, the other, if I will not say unhappy and unsuitable, yet characterised with less wisdom than the former. They have selected you, sir, to be the recipient of this valuable gift, and they have selected me to present it to you. I must say that, in the latter case, the brethren might have made a more fortunate and happy selection, and might have delegated the duty to a more worthy and distinguished brother—not that I yield to any of the brethren in my feeling of fraternal regard to Bro. Hind, nor to any with regard to those sentiments of sincere respect which I entertain for him. But there are other Masons whose acquaintance with him has extended over very many more years, and whose friendship for him has been for longer standing; but as the mouthpiece and spokesman of the brethren present, I ask of your acceptance of this gift, as an earnest and pledge that they look upon you as a credit and honour to the lodge. They regard the assistance which you have always given as one of their main supports, and the manner in which you have conducted yourself in all the offices which you have filled, as an example to younger Masons both within and without the lodge. Whatsoever offices you may have filled—whether it be that of a simple member, a Master of the lodge, a Past Master, or during the time you have filled the distinguished post of Treasurer—they consider that you have acted with credit to yourself, and that you have reflected honour on the body of which you are a member. During the many years that you have been a Mason, you must have witnessed many changes in the Caledonian Lodge. Many brethren have passed away from amongst us—I will not say because they were not all of us—but some have gone to foreign lands, some have gone away to form other lodges of which now they are the illustrious members; and some have gone to that undiscovered country, "that bourne from whence no traveller returns" to tell us what is doing on the other side. But amongst all the brethren, I will venture to affirm that you have not created one single enemy, but that you have made troops of friends. But what has been the secret of this success? Our Grand Master, Solomon, in a Masonic precept, gives us the solution to the mystery, "He that would win friends must show himself friendly"—he must love who would be beloved. It is with such feelings as these, sir, that we, a band of brothers, brethren of the mystic tie, ask your acceptance of this claret jug as a gift of friendship. Receive it as a token of our sincere and warm-hearted regard, the regard of your companions of many pleasant hours. May you be long spared to help your friends from it, and when you look upon it in years to come, may strong memory write upon your heart bright visions of those happy scenes when we all met together as brethren, and when Providence permitted you to make so many friends." Bro. J. C. Hind was evidently taken by surprise, and much moved by this expression of his brethren's good good will; but he accepted the gift in suitable terms, and referred to the past history of the lodge and his connection with it. He mentioned that she had been the mother of many lodges, which had taken somewhat of her past strength away, but she was looking up again, and he sincerely hoped she would continue to increase and prosper. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren afterwards, to the number of 40, repaired to the refreshment-room, where an enjoyable evening was spent, the W.M. vacating the chair at 11 p.m.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No.

281).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 13th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Atheneum, St. Leonard Gate, under the presidency of Bro. J. Jowitt. There was a good attendance. The lodge having been opened in the First and Second Degrees with the usual formalities, Bro. Shepherd answered the necessary questions in respect to the F.C. Degree, and was entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Shepherd re-admitted and raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason, the working being carefully and efficiently performed by the W.M., who also presented the working tools. The lodge was then resumed in the First Degree, and the sum of ten guineas voted for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, on the motion of Bro. E. Simpson, P.M., P.G.S., seconded by Bro. R. Taylor, I.P.M., the former of whom stated that the Steward, Bro. Dr. Moore, had received about £80 from the lodges and members of the Craft in Lancaster for that charitable institution, a statement which was greeted with applause. The usual proclamations were then made, which elicited "hearty good wishes" from the visiting brethren, and the lodge closed with the usual formalities.

PRESTON.—Concord Lodge (No. 343).—The installation ceremony of this lodge took place in the Assembly Room of the Bull Hotel. Bro. A. Beattie was duly installed by Bro. Nevett, P.M. Unanimity, 113, as Worshipful Master for the ensuing twelve months. The following brethren were also invested as officers of the lodge, viz: Bros. Elton, I.P.M.; Hall, S.W.; Roe, J.W.; Robinson, P.M., P.G.A.D.C., Treasurer; Fazackerley, Secretary; Cowell, S.D.; Thompson, J.D.; Brown, I.G.; Hayes, Organist; Moss, P.M., Tyler. After the ceremony a banquet was held in celebration of the festival of St. John the Evangelist, to which a large number of brethren and invited guests sat down. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts were proposed and aptly responded to. The harmony of the evening was much enjoyed, and ably contributed to by Bros. Holland, Cowell, Goulborne, Hayes, and others.

DERBY.—Arboretum Lodge (No. 731).—The usual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Gower-street, on Wednesday, the 13th inst., when there was a large muster of the brethren, the following being present: Bros. Brown, W.M.; G. T. Wright, P.M., P.P. J.G.W.; R. Bennett, I.P.M.; J. Taylor, P.M.; H. Burn, P.M.; T. L. Gee, P.M.; Worsnop, P.M.; J. C. Merry, P.M.; and Bros. T. Merry, S.W.; W. Cooper, J.W.; W. H. Burton, Treas.; Whittaker, Sec.; A. Frazer, S.D.; G. Cay, J.D.; Vincent, D.C.; Bower, I.G.; Bland and King, Stewards; and Day, Tyler; also Bros. Drewitt, Webster, Copestick, Hobson, Knight, Fone, Holloway, Carter, Wigg, Robinson, Johnson, Barnett, Wilton, A. Smith, Humber, F. L. Smith, Coulthurst. Visitors: Bros. Wood, 1399; Harvey, 100; Pipes, W.M. 1085; Bliss, 1410; and Biggs, W.M. 802. After the lodge had been opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of the last lodge read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, and Bro. T. Merry, S.W., was elected; Bro. Burton was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Holden, Tyler. The ballot was then taken for Mr. R. S. Crossby as a candidate for Freemasonry, and he was elected. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Johnson, having answered the usual questions, retired. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Johnson was raised to the Sublime Degree by the W.M. The lodge was resumed in the Second and First Degree, and in answer to an application from the Secretary of the Girls' School, Bro. King was appointed to represent the lodge as Steward at the forthcoming festival. The W.M. then presented a handsome gold watch and chain to Bro. Burton, Treasurer, asking him to accept it as a token of respect and esteem entertained for him by the members of the lodge, and he hoped that he would be spared many years to wear it. Bro. Burton briefly returned thanks, it being understood that the subject would be again referred to afterwards. The lodge was closed in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall, where a comfortable supper awaited them, and to which they did justice. The usual Masonic toasts having been disposed of, the W.M. gave the toast of "Bro. Burton's Health," and in referring to what had taken place in lodge, said that Bro. Burton had been associated with the members of the Arboretum Lodge for many years, and during that period he had filled various offices, notably, that of Treasurer for the long time of ten years, and had always laboured diligently and unselfishly in promoting the prosperity of the lodge, ever willing to make himself useful—indeed, he had become almost indispensable, and his cheerful disposition was well known to all the brethren, who universally respected him as a friend, a brother, and a Mason in the truest sense of the word. In making him the present of a watch and chain that evening they did not for a moment—wish it to be understood to be a monetary consideration, such services as Bro. Burton's could not be met in that way; but he did wish it to be understood thoroughly as being truly what the inscription implied it to be, a pledge of the great brotherly affection and respect they had for their brother, and he hoped that he would be spared very many years to wear this watch, and when he looked on its honest face (for he believed it had a very honest face—he had worn it for some days, and it had proved very honest) he would consider it as emblematical of the honesty of purpose that had prompted the gift, which he was quite sure would be esteemed as such by their brother, as also by his wife and family, who would thus be told of the respect in which their husband and father was held by his brother Masons. He would wish, in conclusion, that when Nature's dark shadow fell upon their brother, as it must fall upon all of us, he would be taken to that other lodge above, and they might all meet him there again in that bliss abode where the World's Great Architect rules and reigns for ever. Several other toasts having been disposed of, the W.M. again rose to make another presentation to their Tyler, Bro. Day.—He said that some three years ago, it was well known that they were in some difficulty through the resignation of their Tyler, and Bro. Day, who had not long before become a joining member, at once volunteered to take the post as a temporary arrangement, but circumstances had prevented their appointing any one else, and Bro. Day had since continued to occupy that thankless office of Outer Guard, and when the brethren came to think what that meant, that their brother had sat outside all these years, taking no part in the lodge ceremonies, waiting often for a long time with scarcely a sign of what was going on, wondering what kept them so long; they would agree with him that the duty was rather monotonous and not one that would be selected from choice by most men. It could, therefore, scarcely be an ordinary wish to make himself useful that had prompted Bro. Day to take this post, but it must have been a true spirit of Masonry to do anything that he could, or that the brethren wished him to do, for the love of the cause. They had often thought that they were taxing Bro. Day's good nature too much, but if they did he never showed it; he had gone on uncomplainingly, and apparently quite satisfied if his services were giving satisfaction. Therefore, he would say that Bro. Day's unselfish conduct merited some acknowledgment from them, and he had great pleasure in presenting him with a marble timepiece, which he hoped he would accept as a simple tribute of respect from them for the way he had helped them in their difficulties, and he hoped that he would consider it as such, and that it would be valued more for the feeling it represented than its intrinsic value; indeed, he was quite sure that the inscription plate would be considered as by far the most valuable portion of the gift. He hoped that Bro. Day would long be spared to meet with them and enjoy the good feeling evinced by the brethren of the Arboretum Lodge. Bros. Merry and Bennett, the two P.M.'s, fully concurred in the remarks of the W.M. Bro. Day, in returning thanks, said that the W.M. had attached far more value to the small services it had been his happiness to render the lodge than they merited; he had no previous knowledge of what was to take place, and therefore was quite taken aback by the flattering way the W.M. had spoken of him. He had been pleased to be of service to them, and he should value their present very highly, as being what it had been stated to be, an expression of goodwill and friendship from the brethren of his lodge. He thanked them very much for their appreciation of his service. The proceedings were then brought to a close, all present having acknowledged that a very profitable and enjoyable evening had been spent.

CREWKERNE.—Parrot and Axe Lodge (No. 814).—The annual installation and banquet of this lodge took place at the lodge-room, George Hotel, on Tuesday, the 12th inst. Bro. G. Summers was installed as the W.M., the ceremony being most impressively rendered by the W.D.P.G.M. of Somerset. The W.M. appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. Tompsett, S.W.; Dr. Hughes, J.W.; M. C. J. Harris, P.P.J.G.W., Treasurer; Josh. Ireland, P.P.G.R., Secretary; Coombes, S.D.; Hussey, J.D.; Nosworthy, P.P.G.O., Organist; Budge, P.P.J.G.D., M.C.; Bennett, I.G.; Lacey, Tyler; Batten, P.G.D.C., officiated as Director of Ceremonies. The banquet was afterwards held in the lodge-room, under the presidency of the W.M., supported by the W.D.P.G.M., and several officers of Provincial Grand Lodge, brethren from Torquay, Yeovil, and other lodges in the province. The banquet was served by Bro. Baker in his ever generous style. The usual Masonic and other toasts were given, interspersed by some excellent songs sung by the brethren, and accompanied on the pianoforte by Bro. Milborn, and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

KNUTSFORD.—De Tabley Lodge (No. 941).—The annual festival of St. John the Evangelist of this flourishing lodge was held in their splendid lodge room, at the Royal George Hotel, on Monday, the 18th inst., for the installation of the Worshipful Master elect, and the appointment of the officers for the ensuing year. Besides the brethren of the De Tabley, the Stamford, the Cope, the Lodge of Sincerity, the Prince of Wales's Lodge, and the Urmston New Lodge were represented by distinguished brethren. Bro. W. Nicholls, P.M., having been unanimously elected, was duly installed and invested with the collar and jewel of his office. Bro. Goodacre, P.M., &c., was the Installing Master, and most ably and impressively performed that duty. The Worshipful Master then appointed the following officers:—Bros. J. Hodgkinson, I.P.M.; W. Leigh, S.W.; D. Kinsey, J.W.; Rev. C. W. Spencer Stanhope, P.P.G.C., Chaplain; J. Siddley, P.M., P.J.G.D., Treasurer and Secretary; W. Taber, S.D.; C. Sherwin, J.D.; J. Partington, I.G.; J. Twiss, P.M., Org.; W. Alcock, Tyler; and W. Fair, P.M.; J. Whitlow, P.M.; J. B. Cutter, P.M.; and J. Hodgkinson, P.M., Stewards. The business of the lodge being ended, the brethren sat down to a most excellent banquet, provided by the worthy hostess (Mrs. Caldecott), which reflected the highest credit upon her capability for catering upon such occasions. The Worshipful Master presided, and in truly loyal and Masonic spirit gave the usual toasts. There were some excellent speeches given upon the beauties of Masonry and its charities by Bros. Goodacre, Fair, Whitlow, and others, enlivened by a selection of harmony, vocal and instrumental, by Bros. Young, Whitlow, Burgess, and Alcock. A most enjoyable evening was spent, and the brethren separated in that fraternal bond of brotherhood known only to the Craft. It is worthy of note, and will afford encouragement to the newly initiated brethren and those desirous of making their mark in Freemasonry, to note the progress Bro. Nicholls has made in the Craft since his initiation. Bro. Nicholls was initiated on the 17th February, 1865, in the De Tabley Lodge by the Worshipful Master, Bro. G. C. Legh, M.P., and R.W.P. G.S. Warden of England, Bro. Right Hon. Lord de Tabley, R.W.P.S.G.W., and Prov. Grand Master of Cheshire, being present, proposed "The Health of the newly-initiated Brother," expressing a hope that what he had seen and heard in the beautiful ceremony of his initiation he would duly appreciate, and become a worthy and distinguished brother amongst them. Bro. Nicholls first took office as I.G. in February, 1868; in 1869 was appointed J.D.; in 1870, S.D.; in 1871, J.W.; in 1872, S.W.; and in 1873 was unanimously elected and duly installed as the Worshipful Master of the De Tabley Lodge by Bro. J. A. Birch, P.M., P.P.G.S.B. The Installing Master, after a successful year of office, was succeeded by Bro. Reynolds, Bro. Nicholls being invested with collar and jewel of his office as I.P.M.; but before Bro. Reynolds' year of office had expired it pleased the Grand Architect of the Universe to remove our much-esteemed and lamented brother to that Grand Lodge above, when Bro. Nicholls was again called to the chair; in 1875 was again appointed I.P.M.; in 1876 Bro. the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., P.G.S.W., being unanimously elected and installed the Worshipful Master, appointed Bro. Nicholls, S.W., and Deputy W.M. during his unavoidable absence on Parliamentary duties, &c. On the occasion of the Right Worshipful Grand Master holding his Provincial Grand Lodge at Knutsford, in 1876, Bro. Nicholls was appointed one of the P.G.S., and took an active part in all its arrangements, and in 1877 was for the third time invested with the collar and jewel of his office as I.P.M., and in the same year was exalted to the degree of Royal Arch in the Chapter attached to the De Tabley Lodge, and on the 14th January, 1878, was nominated and unanimously elected the Worshipful Master of the De Tabley Lodge for the second time; and on this occasion was duly installed in the Chair of King Solomon by Bro. W. Goodacre, P.M. and W.M., Lodge 1730, Urmston, who most ably and impressively performed the duty of Installing Master. During the whole time Bro. Nicholls has been in office he has been a punctual and regular attendant at the lodge, and taking a deep interest in its working and prosperity; and we heartily wish Bro. Nicholls a happy and prosperous year of office.

SOUTHEND.—Priory Lodge (No. 1000).—The first monthly meeting of this lodge since the installation took place on Thursday, the 14th inst., at the Middleton Hotel. There were present Bros. N. Chaplin, W.M.; W. P. Belliss, S.W.; J. C. Johnstone, P.M. 20 (I.C.), J.W.; Rev. H. J. Hatch, P.M. 160, P.P.G. Chap., as Chaplain; J. A. Wardell, P.M. 160 and 1000, P.P.G.D., Sec.; G. F. Jones, S.D.; G. Berry, J.D.; T. Barrett, I.G.; G. F. Grayson, D.C.; Martin, as Tyler; W. S. Cox, P.M., P.P.G.S.B.; H. Rowley, P.M., P.P.G.D.; A. Lucking, P.M. 160, P.M. and M.E.Z. 1000, Prov. G.D.C.; H. Luker, W. D. Merritt, W. Waterhouse, J. English, H. Beecher. Visitors—Bros. Major Lambert; Parr, 1536; Foster, 1679. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Alfred Martin as a serving brother (a dispensation having been obtained), which, being in his favour, the W.M. in an able manner initiated him into Freemasonry, and then passed Bros. C. Palmer, L. Boss, and W. Poplewell to the Second Degree. The lodge was then closed and adjourned.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on the 5th inst. Bro. A. Sheriff, the W.M., occupied the chair of K.S., and was supported by his several officers, there being also a fair attendance of members. The lodge was opened in the First Degree with solemn prayer, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. The lodge was then raised to the Second Degree, and Bros. Palmer and Welch, having given proficiency as F.C.'s, were entrusted and retired. The lodge was then raised to the Third Degree, when they were separately re-admitted, and raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons, Bro. Palmer being raised by the W.M., and Bro. Welch by Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B. of E., the working in both cases being impressively performed. The working tools were presented by the W.M. The lodge having resumed in the First Degree, a congratulatory vote was unanimously accorded to the brother who occupied the I.P.M. chair on his appointment as Prov. G.S.W. of Lancashire. The compliment having been duly acknowledged, a very cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B. of E., for his services as Secretary to the lodge (which office he has recently resigned); and the wish was expressed that the lodge would not lose his services in the future. Bro. Moore, in acknowledging the compliment, said it was his intention to keep up his connection with the lodge as heretofore, and that he should at all times be most happy to render every assistance in his power to promote the interests of the lodge in particular, and of Freemasonry in general. The usual proclamations were then made, and the lodge closed in peace, love, and harmony.

MANCHESTER.—Lodge of St. David (No. 1147).—(Festival of St. John).—The Installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 14th inst., and was of a very imposing character, being graced by the presence of Bro. W. Bulkeley Hughes, D.G.P.M. of North Wales and Shropshire, and member of Parliament for Carnarvonshire; and the following Provincial Officers:—Bros. J. A. Birch, P.P.G.J.W.; J. L. Hine, P.P.S.G.W.; J. Barker, P.P.G. Treasurer; T. A. Elliott, P.P.G.R.; E. B. Harding, P.P.S.G.D. Amongst the visitors we noticed the following:—Bros. Joseph Snape, 1055; William Aldred, 1387; R. W. Braithwaite, 1486; H. Elliott, 1087; T. Partington, 147; W. Nicholl, 317; and a Parsee brother from Calcutta, named Roostumjee Dhanjethoy Mehta, 392. The lodge having been duly opened, Mr Morris was initiated into the mysteries of the Apprentice Degree of Freemasonry. The great event of the afternoon then followed, viz., the installation of Bro. Thomas Elliott into King Solomon's chair and the Mastership of St. David's Lodge for the ensuing twelve months. The Installing Master was Bro. Thomas R. Peel. Bro. Ellis Jones delivered the charge in a very effective manner to the Master of the lodge and the brethren. The new W.M. nominated the following officers:—Bros. I. Davies, S.W.; John Taylor, J.W.; R. Barlow, Treasurer; William Hadden, Secretary; J. O. Evans, S.D.; F. Griffin, J.D.; J. B. Steel, I.G.; T. R. Peel, P.M., D. of C.; A. Ehrenbach, Organist; J. T. Chappell, G. H. Hewardine, and M. Fairweather, Stewards; and J. Sly, Tyler. Bro. Gibson invested the S.W., J.W., and Treasurer; Bro. Edward Williams, the S.D. and J.D.; Bro. John Unsworth the Stewards, Organist, I.G., and Tyler; and Bro. Ellis Jones the D. of C. The lodge was closed in solemn form after which the brethren and visitors adjourned to the "Queen's Hotel," Piccadilly, to dine together. A most sumptuous banquet followed. Bro. Thomas Elliott, W.M., occupied the chair in a most efficient manner, and proposed in suitable terms the toasts of "The Queen," and "The Prince of Wales, the M.W.G.M. of England." Bro. Davies, S.W., proposed "The Earl of Carnarvon, M.W.P.G.M., and Bro. Taylor, J.W., proposed "Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers." "The Healths of Bros. Colonel Le Gendre N. Starkie, R.W.P.G.M. of E. L., and George Mellor, V.W.D.P.G.M. of E. were proposed and drunk in a very enthusiastic manner. The next toast on the list was "The Provincial Grand Officers of E. L., and other Provinces Past and Present." It was ably proposed by the W.M., and responded to in a most eloquent manner by Bro. J. A. Birch, P.P.G.J.W., and we are sorry to say that want of space prevents us giving a report of his remarks. Bro. E. Williams, I.P.M., next proposed the toast of the evening, viz., "The Worshipful Master of the Lodge of St. David, Bro. Thomas Elliott." Bro. Williams said it was a law of nature that some must command and others obey, and that in electing Bro. Elliott to the government of that lodge for the ensuing twelve months they felt sure, judging from his past conduct, that Bro. Elliott was fully competent to fulfil the duties that would devolve upon him. No doubt he would meet with difficulties and obstacles, for that was the lot of all, but he felt sure that Bro. Elliott was possessed with patience and perseverance, and that he would overcome them. He was satisfied that the members of the lodge would render him loyal service, and do all in their power to make his position comfortable. The toast was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm. Bro. Elliott, in responding, thanked them for the cordial manner in which they had drunk his health, and also for having placed him in the proud position of W.M. of the Lodge of St. David. He stated that when he was present, several years ago, at the installation of a W.M., he was so much influenced with the beauty of the service that he conceived the object of gaining the chair. He had patiently worked up to it, and he was very grateful that night at having achieved the object of his ambition. He was not one to promise too great things, for what he promised he liked to perform; but one thing he would promise them, and that was that he would do his best, not only for St. David's Lodge, but also for the welfare of Masonry in general. He should not be too anxious to encourage an accession of members irrespective of character, but would see that any initiated in his year of office should be thoroughly worthy to partake of their great privileges. He should do what lay in his power to get the members of that lodge to practise the glorious principles of brotherly love, relief, and truth. Bro. J. Williams, P.M., proposed "The Sister Lodges of Wales." Bro. Hughes (M.P. for Carnarvonshire), thanked the company for the honour they had done him in coupling his name with that toast, and stated that it had been a great pleasure to him to be present on that occasion. He had visited a great many lodges, but he had never seen the ceremony of installation rendered so impressively as it had been that afternoon by Bro. Peel. He was glad to inform them that the sister lodges of Wales were in a flourishing condition, and if any of the brethren would pay them a visit he was sure they would receive a hearty welcome. Bro. Gibson proposed "The Visiting Brethren," which was responded to by Bro. Roostumjee D. Mehta. Bro. Joseph Snape and several others also responded to this toast. The brethren then separated after a most enjoyable evening had been spent.

BUXTON.—Phoenix Lodge of St. Ann (No. 1235).—On Thursday, the 14th inst., the brethren of the above lodge celebrated their anniversary at the Court House, when there was a large muster of the brethren of the lodge, and of visiting brethren. There were present Bros. E. J. Sykes, W.M., P.G. Standard-Bearer; R. R. Duke, P.M., P.P.J.G.D.; Josiah Taylor, P.M., Treas., P.P.G. Standard-Bearer; E. C. Milligan, P.M., P.P.J.G.D.; Thos. Bragg, P.M., P.P.G.S.W. Warwick; F. K. Dickson, P.M.; J. H. Lawson, S.W.; Phillip Le Gros, J.W.; Wm. Goodwin Sec., W. Boughen, S.D.; C. Adams, D.C.; Geo. Marsden, Org., P.P.G. Org.; Joseph Whalley, I.G.; C. Gurnell and G. Goodwin, Stewards; J. H. Taylor, Jos. Gladwin, Chas. Wilkinson, H. Wint, John Oram, J. Merten, George Smedley, Robert Hulme, William Lees, William Needham, Robt. H. Lomas, James C. Hyde, J. Heathcott, J. C. Bates, and William Shawe. Visitors: Bros. Rev. A. A. Bagshawe, P.M. 1688, P.P.G.S.W.; Wm. Milligan, P.M., W.M. 884, P.P.G.D.C.; Wm. Thos. Flather, Zetland, 603; Chas. H. Hoyland, Phoenix, 904; G. W. Hodgkinson, Phoenix, 904; Chas. J. Bennett, 654; C. C. W. Ferguson, W.M. 654; S. W. Ready, P.M. 654; J. T. Wright, P.M. 654; Peter Bramwell, P.M. 654; Rev. Francis Duke, Canongate and Leith, 5; Alan Sandilands, 1688; B. W. Bentley, Moira. The lodge was opened in due form at 1.30 p.m., and the usual business of the lodge transacted. The ballot for Mr. Oram was then proceeded with and found to be unanimously in his favour. The W.M. elect, Bro. J. H. Lawson, was then presented by Bros. E. J. Sykes, W.M., and E. C. Milligan, P.M. Having assented and solemnly promised to conform to the ancient charges in the usual form he was duly installed in the chair of K.S. The installation ceremony was performed by Bro. Wm. Milligan, 31st P.M. P.P.G.D.C., in his usual able and impressive manner and with an earnest elocution that did him credit. After the interesting ceremony the W.M. appointed and invested the following officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. P. Le Gros, S.W.; W. Boughen, J.W.; J. Taylor, P.M.; Fred. W. Lees, Sec.; W. D. Sutton, S.D.; C. Wilkinson, J.D.; Geo. Marsden, Org. and D.C.; W. Goodwin, I.G.; G. Smedley and R. Hulme, Stewards. The newly-installed W.M. then initiated Mr. Abel Oram into the mysteries of ancient Freemasonry in a manner that elicited the commendations of all the brethren; three other proposals were received for initiation, and the lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 4 o'clock p.m. The brethren then adjourned to "The Old Hall Hotel," where an elegant and sumptuous banquet had been prepared, which was served in a manner every way worthy of that ancient hostelry, and equally enjoyed by all the brethren. The usual toasts were given and responded to in a most hearty manner. A handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to the I.P.M., Bro. Sykes, as a souvenir of his year of office, and a novel and pleasing presentation was made—viz., a beautiful jewel to each of the Past Stewards, Bros. G. Goodwin and C. Guinell, on their retiring from office, which they have held for three years, to the comfort and pleasure of the brethren. The subject of the charities was placed before the brethren by Bro. Rev. F. Duke, supported by P.M.'s R. R. Duke and E. C. Milligan, and a handsome addition made to the funds of the Benevolent Institution, the special charity of the evening.

TWICKENHAM.—Francis Burdett Lodge (No. 1503).—This lodge held its last meeting at the Albany Hotel, on the 13th inst. Amongst the brethren present were Bros. S. H. Knaggs, W.M.; H. Court, S.W.; W. Taylor, J.W.; W. Wigginton, P.P.G.S. of W. Middx., &c., &c., P.M. and Sec.; W. H. Saunders, I.P.M., P.G.S. of Middlesex; Vaughan, S.D.; Ashley, J.D.; the Rev. D'Orsey, Chap.; Walls, P.G.O. of Middx., D.C. (Freemason); Briggs, S.; Richnoll, W.S.; Court, jun., Asst. Org.; C. Horsley, P.M., P.P.G.R. of Middx., &c.; Harrison, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. Davis, P.M. 256; Powell, 165; Nuthall, J.D. (Dobie.) The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised Bro. T. Newton to the degree of M.M., so ably that at the conclusion of the ceremony the lodge, to mark their appreciation of his ability, and in consideration of its being his "maiden essay," passed a vote of thanks to him, and which vote was ordered to be recorded on the minutes. Two propositions for initiation having been taken, and there being no other business before the lodge, it was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to a collation, which was well served, and at its conclusion the W.M. gave the customary toasts. In proposing "The Health of the R.W.P.G.M. of Middx.," the W.M. touched upon the great services rendered to all degrees of Freemasonry by Bro. Col. Burdett, whom he (the W.M.) considered was "one of the best men, one of the best Masons, and one of the best specimens of an old English gentleman" that ever swayed over the Masonic destinies of a province. The toast of "The D.P.G.M. of Middlesex, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present," was acknowledged by Bros. Horsley, Wigginton, Walls, and Saunders. The latter brother then proposed "The W.M." He said that the brethren of the Francis Burdett were to be congratulated upon possessing a Master who, although only three years a Mason, performed the duties of the chair in a manner that left nothing to be desired. The W.M. having replied, gave "The Visitors," which pledge was responded to by Bros. Davis, Nuthall, and Powell. The remaining toasts were "The Past Masters," "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers." The rest of the evening having been spent most agreeably, the brethren adjourned until the second Wednesday in April.

TONBRIDGE.—Tonbridge Lodge (No. 1678).—The regular meeting of this young and prosperous lodge was held on Tuesday, Feb. 12th, at the Public Hall. There were present Bros. George Langridge, P.M. 874, W.M.; F. Spencer, P.M. 1063, S.W.; W. B. Bacon, J.W.; G. A. Augier, Sec.; Potter, S.D.; Allison, Tyler; and Bros. Bishop, Charlton, Irwin, Monckton, Peake, Stenning, Westbrook, and others. Visitors: Bros. J. J. Pattison and C. Graham, 1540 and 874. The W.M. opened the lodge; and the minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Mr. Chas. Jones was initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, the charge being given by the W.M. in an impressive manner. Several propositions were brought forward, and the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren subsequently dined at the Rose and Crown, and during the evening the loyal and Masonic toasts were given and cordially responded to. The Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to an end, the brethren having spent a very pleasant evening.

INSTRUCTION.
EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—A meeting of this lodge of instruction was held on Friday, the 15th inst., at the Mitre Hotel, Gorborne-road, Notting Hill, Bros. Smout, sen., W.M.; Spiegel, S.W.; Tattenboro, J.W.; Woodman, J.D.; Bolton, I.G.; Bros. Murlis, P.M.; Penn, W.M.; Luhtwitz, Adkins, Hutton, Whitaker, Estell Oldrey, Chalford, and others. The lodge was opened in the First Degree and the ceremony of initiation rehearsed. Bro. Oldrey being the candidate. Bro. Penn then took the chair, and the ceremony of raising was rehearsed, Bro. Adkins being the candidate. Bro. Spiegel was elected W.M. for Friday, 1st March, on account of the ball of the Mother Lodge, the instruction lodge was adjourned till that day, and Bro. Spiegel promised if the brethren will attend in good numbers he will give the Lecture on the First Tracing Board.

FINSBURY PARK MASTER MASONS' LODGE (No. 1288).—This lodge of instruction was held at the Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway, on Friday, the 15th Feb., 1878. Present: Bros. P.M. L. R. Rogers, Preceptor; Jefferys, W.M.; Dunn, jun., S.W.; Press, J.W.; Frampton, S.D.; Thompson, J.D.; Cox, I.G.; and other brethren. Lodge opened in First Degree, and minutes of last lodge meeting read and confirmed. Bro. Edmunds, candidate for passing, examined, entrusted, and retired. Lodge opened in Second Degree, and ceremony of passing rehearsed. Bro. J. Walker, I.P.M. No. 27, was then presented as W.M. elect. A Board of Installed Masters having been formed Bro. Jefferys installed Bro. P.M. Walker into the chair of K.S., and after closing the lodge in the different degrees, Bro. Jefferys gave the addresses. Bro. Dunn, jun., was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and appointed officers in rotation. It was then proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Jefferys for the very able manner in which he had rehearsed the ceremony of installation. Lodge was then closed.

Royal Arch.

JERUSALEM CHAPTER (No. 119).—The last meeting of this very old and flourishing chapter was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, on the 12th inst. Amongst those present were Comps. R. T. Elsom First Principal designate of the Dobic Chapter, M.E.Z.; P. Wagner, H.; Robinson, J.; Mander, S.N.; Davage, P.Z., S.E.; Harfeld, P.Z., Treasurer; T. C. Walls, (Freemason); Moss, 1st Assist.; Lewenstark, P.Z.; Whitley, Ellborn, Davis, Platt. The minutes of the previous convocation having been read and confirmed, the M.E.Z. with the assistance of his officers exalted Bro. Sebastian, Serra, (Leich. 957), to the Sublime Degree of the R.A. At the conclusion of the ceremony the election of officers for the ensuing year took place and resulted unanimously in favour of Comps. Wagner, M.E.Z.; Robinson, H.; Mander, J.; Walls, S.N.; Davage, S.E.; Harfeld, Treas.; and Comp. Moss was elected P.S. A proposition for exaltation at the next convocation having been taken and a jewel unanimously voted to the outgoing First Principal, the chapter was then duly closed and the companions adjourned to the banquet. As the toasts were not proposed until a very late hour, they were necessarily given but briefly. They were "The Queen and Royal Arch Masonry;" "H.R.H. the G.Z. of the Order;" "The G.H. and G.J. and the rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present;" "The M.E.Z.;" "The Second and Third Principals;" "The Exalte;" "The Treasurer and S.E.;" and "The Officers." During the proceedings there were several vocal selections. The next convocation will be held on the second Tuesday in April next, when Comp. Wagner will be duly installed into the chair of First Principal.

The chapter closed at 4.45 p.m., when the companions adjourned to the Old Hall Hotel to dinner. The usual Masonic toasts were given, and although the attendance of companions was confined to a limited number, a more enjoyable evening could not have been possibly spent.

Mark Masonry.

ERA LODGE (No. 176).—The election meeting of this prosperous lodge was held on Friday, 8th February, at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. Bro. Rev. P. M. Holden, W.M., presided. The minutes of the previous lodge meeting were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballots, taken separately, were unanimous in favour of all the candidates for advancement. Bro. William Butler, 1526 being in attendance was in an impressive manner regularly advanced to the ancient and honourable degree of a Mark Master Mason. The entire ceremony was given, including the legend of the degree. Several brethren were proposed for advancement. The bye-laws were read. The ballots were unanimous in favour of Bro. Thomas Horton, S.W. being W.M., for the re-election of Bro. Henry Arthur Dubois, and also in favour of Bro. W. Y. Laing, P.M., being re-elected Tyler. On motion made it was unanimously resolved "That the usual five-guinea Past Master's Jewel be given to the W.M., Bro. Rev. P. M. Holden, for his distinguished services during his year of office," to be purchased from the lodge funds. Business ended, the lodge was closed and adjourned to Friday, July 12th, to meet at 6.0 p.m. The usual good banquet followed. There were present besides those named, Bros. W. Hammond, I.M., J.W.; F. The Board of Masters received the paper for next Grand Lodge, with notices of motion.

The lodge first confirmed grants to the amount of £335 made at last meeting. The brethren then proceeded with the new cases, of which there were only twelve on the list, a smaller number than has been known for a long time. The petitioners were relieved with a total sum of £335, which was made up as follows: one £100 (£100); one £50 (£50); four £30 (£120); two £20 (£40); two £10 (£20); and one £5 (£5). One case stood over.

The lodge was then closed.

Standing over—Lodges 643, 1044, Lodge of Instruction Eleanor.

Several men lately swam the Mississippi River above New Orleans on a wager. A reporter on the race says:—"None of them seemed to put forth much effort till it was found that an alligator had struck out from shore as a competitor, and then—well, every man did his best to keep the alligator from carrying off the stakes."—Keystone (U.S.A.)

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

A meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of New Zealand, S.C., was held on the 12th December, 1877, at the Masonic Hall, Moray-place. Bro. Hisley, R.W.P.G.M. presided. The Treasurer, Bro. Moodie, read the statement of accounts, which showed a credit balance of £71 3s. 8d. On the motion of Bro. Finlayson, seconded by Bro. J. M. Brown, the financial statement was adopted. The R.W.P.G.M. then installed Bro. Court as P.G.S.W., vice Bro. J. M. Brown, resigned; and Bro. George Watson as P.G. Sec., vice Bro. G. S. Smith, retired.

The installation of the R.W.M. and officers of the Otago Kilwinning Lodge, No. 417, S.C., took place at the Masonic Hall, Moray-place, on December 12th. There was a very large attendance of brethren and visiting members. The sister lodges represented were the St. Andrew's and Celtic, S.C., Otago, Dunedin, Port Chalmers, Marine, St. George's, and Greymouth, E.C. The usual formalities having been gone through, the R.W.P.G.M., Bro. J. Hislop, and the officers of the Grand Lodge, were announced and received in due form. A Board of Installed Masters was afterwards formed, and the R.W. Bro. W. Caldwell formally installed Bro. E. Goldstein as R.W.M. for the ensuing year. The following brethren were afterwards invested with the distinguishing badges of their offices: Bro. R. Forrest, S.W.; W. Nees, J.W.; L. Court, Treas.; R. E. Graham, Sec.; J. Nisbet, S.D.; J. Eckhoff, J.D.; Cader, I.G.; C. Bode, W. H. Smith, and F. Krull, Srdws.; Chisholm, Org.; G. Smith, Tyler; L. Schalenberg and W. H. Smith, Auditors. After the usual ceremonies the lodge was duly closed at 10 p.m., and the brethren adjourned to celebrate the installation by the usual banquet at Bro. Krull's.

Bro. William Caldwell, Grand Steward of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, conducted the ceremonies incident to the erection and consecration of the Lodge Taieri, S.C., at Outram, on Monday evening. After the consecration the officers were duly installed: Bros. D. A. M. Nichol, R.W.M.; P. Dow, S.W.; W. H. Cox, J.W.; T. Broadway, Treas.; J. D. Grant, Sec.; W. Snow, S.D.; J. Gilmour, I.G.; J. S. Walker, Tyler; David Grant, D.M.; J. T. Douglas, S.M. Between fifty and sixty of the brethren afterwards adjourned to a banquet which had been provided by Bro. Broadway, and after the usual Masonic toasts had been duly honoured, thirty of the visiting brethren from Dunedin returned to town by special train.—Otago Daily Times, December 19th, 1877.

Colonel Baker, V.C., who was taken prisoner by the Russians, and was supposed to have died, is still alive at Sofia.

DEATH OF A MISER.—An eccentric individual named John Rhodes, of Pomona-terrace, Hounslow, was buried in Hounslow Cemetery on Monday. Although possessing immense wealth, he dressed like a tramp, and was exceedingly parsimonious, often denying himself the necessities of life. He has left the Greater portion of his fortune, amounting to 100,000l. to various metropolitan charities. Mr. Rhodes, who was a chemist in early life, was nearly 80 years of age.—Medical Examiner.

Tramway Receipts.—London, £62 increase; Liverpool, £206 decrease; Glasgow, £79 decrease; Dublin, £110 decrease; North Metropolitan, £46 decrease; Hull, for the week, £228; Provincial, £3 increase; Belfast, £14 decrease.

The Prince of Wales has sold his celebrated schooner yacht "Hildegard," which has won several prizes in the Royal Yacht Squadron matches at Cowes during the last two seasons, to his brother, Prince Leopold, who intends to use her for summer cruising.

The Liverpool Post says:—Mr. Ralph Brocklebank has offered to bear the entire cost, estimated at about £3500, of a sanatorium in connection with the Seamen's Orphanage, Newsham Park.

The nineteenth annual general meeting of the London General Omnibus Company, was held on Tuesday, at the offices, No. 6, Finsbury-square, Mr. Thomas Lulham in the chair. The report of the directors showed that the number of passengers carried during the half-year ending December 31st, 1877, was 26,611,281, as against 26,150,145 in the corresponding half of 1876.

Mayfair hears on high clerical authority that Prince Leopold is determined to take holy orders, and that the Queen, after every effort to dissuade him, has at last reluctantly given her consent. Now that Bishoprics can no longer be held "in commendam," and all minor appointments are severely criticised, it will be difficult to find a suitable berth for the royal devotee. On the whole, the Deanery of Windsor seems open to the fewest objections.

National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart and Paralysis, Soho-square.—The number of patients under treatment for the week ending Feb. 16th, was 1160.

ROYAL VISIT TO THE HUNGARIAN WINE VAULTS.—An enthusiastic reception was given on Monday to His Imperial Highness the Crown Prince of Austria, on his visiting the extensive wine vaults of Mr. Max Greger, in St. Thomas's-street, Borough. The Crown Prince arrived with his suite about twelve o'clock, and was heartily received by Mr. Max Greger, whose premises were festively decorated with the flags of Austro-Hungary and England. An address of welcome was spoken in Hungarian by Mr. Max Greger, to which the Crown Prince replied. The Crown Prince then tasted some Hungarian wines, which he much approved of, and after having graciously accepted a memorial from Mr. Max Greger, giving the full history of his development of the Hungarian wine trade with England, his Imperial Highness left for Cottesbrooke, to visit the Empress of Austria.

BOYS' SCHOOL COMMITTEE DINNER CLUB.

We have much pleasure in publishing the following:—
4, Bishopsgate-street Within, London, E.C.
February 14th, 1878.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Some of the old members of this club have thought that the time has now arrived when the good services rendered by our mutual friend, Bro. Binckes, should be acknowledged, he having fulfilled the duties of Honorary Secretary and Treasurer of this club for seventeen years past; and with this view Bros. J. G. Chancellor, Wm. Paas, Wm. Roebuck, and R. W. Stewart are the Committee formed to carry out this object, and to present to Bro. Binckes a testimonial, as a slight recognition for the valuable services rendered.

The subscription is limited to ten shillings each, thus giving every member an opportunity to contribute; and the Committee ask you to reply by return of post, so that the presentation may take place at our next meeting, if possible.

You can remit to me in postage stamps, or by P.O. Order, the amount you wish to subscribe.

Yours faithfully and fraternally, Wm. ROEBUCK.

FESTIVAL OF THE LEICESTER LODGES OF INSTRUCTION.

On Friday week the annual festival of the Leicester Union Lodge of Instruction in Freemasonry was held in Masonic Hall, Halford-street, under the joint sanction of St. John's Lodge (No. 279), the John of Gaunt Lodge (No. 532), and the Commercial Lodge (No. 1391). The meeting was of a most enjoyable character, and was specially interesting to the younger members of the Craft, owing to the fact that arrangements had been made for the working of the whole of the Seven Sections of the First Lecture, and perhaps rarely if ever have they been more correctly or effectively worked at one time than upon this occasion. All were worked too, nearly equally well. There was a numerous gathering, the attendance of brethren who were not members of the lodge having been specially invited, and even those yet in the preliminary stages of the Craft were admitted. Amongst those present were Bros. W. Kelly, P.P.G.M.; George Toller, jun., P.M., 523 and 1560, G.S.B. of England; T. A. Wykes, W.M., 523, P.G. Treas.; S. Cleaver, 279, P.G.D.C.; the Rev. C. H. Wood, Chaplain, 1560 (Albert Edward); T. Worthington, P.M., 50; J. Vaughan, W.M., 86 (Prescot, Lancashire); G. W. Statham, W.M., 279; C. E. Stretton, I.P.M.; J. M. M'Alister, P.M.; Thos. Colman, J.D., 279; L. P. Chamberlain, I.G., 279; J. Roadknight, S., 279; R. Taylor, S.W., 523; Edgar Taylor, 523; J. T. Thorp, P.M., 523; J. Read, S.D., 1491, &c. Bro. Geo. Toller, jun., occupied the chair. Bro. Thos. Colman acted as S.W., and Bro. Richard Taylor as J.W. The whole of the questions in all the sections were admirably put by Bro. Toller, and were worked by the following brethren:—1st, by T. Colman, 279; 2nd, T. A. Wykes, 523; 3rd, L. P. Chamberlain, 279; 4th, J. Read, 1391; 5th, T. Worthington, 50; 6th, John T. Thorp, 523; and 7th, Edgar Taylor, 523. At the conclusion of the interesting ceremony, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Toller, on the motion of Bro. the Rev. C. H. Wood, seconded by Bro. M'Alister for the admirable manner in which he had presided and put the questions. On the motion of Bro. Toller, seconded by Bro. G. W. Statham, the thanks of the lodge were also voted to the seven other brethren who had so well acquitted themselves in the working of the various sections. In proposing the vote Bro. Toller remarked, nowhere out of London, and perhaps nowhere in the metropolis, could the sections have been better worked; and Bro. Statham expressed a hope that the festival, with a similar working of the sections, might be held annually, for he did not think they had been worked more than three times in Leicester during the last eight years. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent supper, and the usual loyal and complimentary toasts were interspersed with some capital songs by several of the brethren, accompanied on the piano by Bro. T. A. Wykes.

A WEDDING PRESENT.—There were great festivities in connection with the marriage of Bro. Clement E. Stretton, son of his worship the Mayor of Leicester, at Desford, on Thursday. Both the Mayor and his son are P.M.'s of the St. John's Lodge of Freemasons (No. 279), the latter having, in fact, only just completed his year of office and been presented with a P.M.'s jewel, as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by the brethren of the lodge. It was further felt by the members that the marriage of Bro. Stretton afforded them another and special opportunity of testifying their respect for him. It was therefore resolved to present him with a wedding present, and a subscription for the purpose was at once started. Bro. J. M. M'Alister kindly undertaking the post of secretary. A good sum was readily raised, and a very large, handsome, solid silver cake basket was agreed upon as the form of present. The bottom of the inside of the basket bore the following inscription—"Presented to Bro. Clement E. Stretton, I.P.M., P.P.G. Superintendant of Works, with the fraternal congratulations of St. John's Lodge, No. 279, on his marriage day, February 14th, 1878." The testimonial was also accompanied by the following address:—"To Brother Clement Edwin Stretton, I.P.M., Past Provincial Grand Superintendent of Works. We, the undersigned brethren of St. John's Lodge of Freemasons, No. 272, tender to you our fraternal congratulations on your marriage, and hearty good wishes for your future happiness, we beg your acceptance of this silver cake basket in token of our esteem and regard. Brothers G. W. Statham, W.M., Wm. Kelly, P.M., P.P.G.M., George Toller, jun., G.S.B., S. S. Partridge, P.G.S., Robert Waite, P.M., J. W. Smith, P.M., S. Cleaver, S.W., Orlando Law, Sec., J. Jessop, S.D., Thos. Colman, J.D., E. Newton, jun., D.C., L. P. Chamberlain, I.G., Israel Hart, M. A. Cook, Steward; J. Roadknight, Steward; J. G. F. Richardson, S. A. Marris, F. W. Bottrell, H. Tarrat, W. R. Tomlin, C. Stevens, W. L. Coulson, J. Malcolm M'Alister, P.M., Hon. Sec., Leicester, 14th February, 1878."

Reviews.

"Cleopatra's Needle, &c.," by Bro. ERASMUS WILSON, F.R.S.: Brain & Co., 26, Paternoster-row.

We have read this work of our well-known and worthy brother with deep interest and pleasure. It is a great happiness for us to find ourselves once more in the "Goshen" of Egyptology, to wander on serenely and admiringly in that wonderful land of the Pyramid and the Hieroglyphic, the Sphinx and the Obelisk. We thank Bro. Wilson for again turning over for us the leaves of a book ever fresh, new, and captivating. In fact, we get young again to find ourselves upon the banks of the "King of Rivers," musing over the mighty past of a wondrous land, surveying its phibable present, anticipating its possible future, and all the while satiating our minds and memories with the labours of old world civilization with the glorious æstheticism of faded greatness. Bro. Dr. Wilson gives us a most interesting account of the Obelisk, henceforth Britannic in our appreciation of it, and our remembrance of his munificent patriotism—and of Obelisks in general. It seems to us, that the Obelisk, though a development of Egyptian art and a memorial of Royal existence in the land of the Pharaohs and Ptolemies, is only, after all, the reproduction of earlier symbolism, and the original, may be, of later emblemology. It is in all probability the successor of the "Pillar" of the Bible; it is the precursor of the Runic stone.

In fact, it may be a question whether we do not find in these things traces of an earlier civilization, which like a wave of the sea, passing on from some favoured spot swept over Egypt, Greece, and Rome.

Egypt has filled the great centre portion of the world's picture of civilization, but it may perhaps be doubted, whether we have as yet paid sufficient attention to the possible existence of a Babylonian civilization, which in its turn has come from Hindostan. We admit, that we are here in the clime of nebula and hypothesis, but still much has occurred of late to weaken the theory of automatic Egyptian civilisation. It is a very wide question and deserves much study. If Bro. Rowbottom's theory be correct, that the Pyramids are pre-Tower of Babel, what a door is opened to the reveries, if you like, of the student, and the researches of the archaeologist? In the mean time, we have to thank our learned Bro. Erasmus Wilson for a most readable and remarkable work, and which we beg to commend to the notice of all our readers. Many of our Masonic brethren are students both in art and archaeology, and we commend this work to their immediate notice and careful perusal.

"Debrett's House of Commons," and "Debrett's Peerage and Baronetage."

These most useful works are before us again, and deserve our highest encomiums as well as our special notice. We can only call the attention of all our readers to them as most valuable books of reference for all, and deserving a place alike in our libraries and offices, both for occasional study and continual reference. They merit all that the reviewer can say or suggest.

"Scottish Masonic Calendar for 1878."

This is a neat and useful compilation, well printed and well arranged, and we trust will be most useful to the Craft in Scotland and out of Scotland. It deserves to be patronized and read by all.

[Several other reviews stand over unavoidably, owing to pressure of matter, which will appear in our next and subsequent impressions.—ED.]

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatment is easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the overworked air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves or depressing the spirits, such are the ready means of saving suffering when any one is afflicted with cold, coughs, bronchitis, and other complaints, by which so many persons are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.—ADVT.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.—In view of the possible adoption of the proposal lately announced by Bro. Dixon, to place the Obelisk on the summit of one of the buttresses of the Thames Embankment opposite Somerset House, a wooden model has been erected on the intended site. Seen from the eastern end of the Embankment the Needle will have a very fine appearance, but from Westminster the view is decidedly spoilt by the railway bridge from Charing Cross. We are glad to learn that the immense blocks of stonework at present standing on either side of the model will be removed, should it be finally decided to make this the monolith's permanent resting-place.

H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.—Messrs. Marion and Co., of Soho Square, have issued a very attractive photograph of this very attractive lady the Princess, who is, dressed in appropriate, yachting costume, is represented on board H.M.S. "Osborne," at Portsmouth, with a favourite dog at her side, another on a seat raised above her head. This photograph is printed by the carbon process, it is therefore, not liable to fade, and it possesses all the delicacy of an engraving.

The Daily News warns the public against a new fraud—greenfinches disguised and sold as curiosities from South America. On the bird's head is placed a flat wig neatly made of white ptarmigan feathers; under which are the hackle feathers of a woodcock so arranged that when the bird bobs his head down to feed or drink the feathers represent the rising crest of a cockatoo. In the middle of the back, curling upwards and outwards, are the black tail feathers of a wild drake. The tail is supplemented with the hackles from the neck of an ordinary fowl; and the breast, cheeks, and neck are painted with chrome or ultramarine. These "faked" birds are so artfully made up that they might occasionally deceive even connoisseurs in ornithology.

PICTURES AND LUNATIC ASYLUMS.—Any of our readers who have any stray prints, &c., to spare cannot do better than send them to an asylum for the insane. In a letter of acknowledgment which we have received for a parcel sent to the Asylum, Larbert, the writer remarks:—"I assure you there can be no greater charity than that which has for its object the lightening of the lot of the insane, for there is no bitterer pain than that which many of them are doomed to bear. The 'madman gay' is a comparatively rare object in asylums; dullness, depression, and brooding misery are by far the most prevalent conditions; therefore everything that can please the eye, bring a cheerful thought to the mind, or raise even for a moment the dark cloud of melancholy, is thrice welcome in an asylum. The pictures you have sent—bright, cheerful, and stirring as they are—could not be surpassed as admirable means of exciting interest and riveting too wandering attention." The Graphic.

Mr. Palliser announces at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, the discovery of two minor planets—one of the tenth magnitude, on Friday, the 7th, in R.A., 10 hours 20 min., N. P. D., 77 deg. 15 min.; daily motion 6 min. north. The other of the twelfth magnitude, on February 8, in R.A., 9 hours 23 min., N. P. D., 77 deg. 37 min.; daily motion 16 min. north.

AN ENGLISH PICTURE FOR CHINA.—Mr. Walter Goodman has just completed a copy of Sassoferrato's "Madonna in Prayer" in the National Gallery, for his Excellency Liu Hsi-Nung, the Chinese Minister at the Court of Berlin. This is the first work of art of any kind ever ordered by a Chinese of an English artist. It is strange that such a subject should have been selected above all others, as Liu Hsi-Nung is exceedingly orthodox after the fashion of Chinese orthodoxy.—Athenæum.

THE LATE POPE.—Mr. H. M' Dowell, of 29, St. Lawrence Road, North Kensington, has executed what appears to be, judging from photographs and other portraits, a faithful miniature bust of Pope Pius IX. It has been carefully modelled from personal recollection, the artist having had an audience with His Holiness at the Vatican a short time since.

SHORTSIGHTEDNESS IN GERMANY.—The alarming rapidity with which shortsightedness is increasing among German students formed the subject of a recent debate in the Prussian Parliament. From extended observations made in the gymnasias, it appears that the number of the shortsighted increases from 23 per cent. in the first year to 75 per cent. in the ninth or last year. The too-frequent custom in Germany of forcing lads to study during the evenings with insufficient light, in ill-ventilated rooms, is undoubtedly a main cause of this widespread evil.—Nature.

The Statist is the name of a new weekly journal which is to appear in March. It will contain a set of tables analysing and comparing the principal facts as to the state of trade and the money market in a new and comprehensive manner.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—The usual Exhibitions, six in number, of from £50 to £20 in value, will be offered for competition in Easter week. Candidates must be between 12 and 14 years of age. A new boarding-house in the immediate vicinity of the school will be opened under the charge of the Rev. R. F. Dale after the Whitsuntide holidays. The numbers of the school are now larger than at any time during the last 40 years.

HARROW SCHOOL.—There will be an examination on Tuesday, April 16, for five or six scholarships, two or three of not less than £60, and the rest of not less than £30 a year each, open to all boys (not members of the school) who were under 14 years of age on the 1st ult. Further particulars can be obtained from the Head Master.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1878.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES AND THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

We published in our last an announcement which came to us officially from the Secretary's office with reference to the opening of the new buildings of the Girls' School by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, an announcement which will afford unqualified gratification to the subscribers to the School as well as to all English Freemasons. For all Masons, as patriotic Englishmen, as well as loyal members of our excellent fraternity, will be delighted to think that such a ceremonial will be graced by the presence of those august personages, giving not only éclat and prestige to the school, but the deepest and most heartfelt gratification to all who are permitted to be present. It will, in fact, be an "Alba Dies," a never-to-be-forgotten "Landmark" in the annals of that admirable Institution. By the terms of the official announcement a day in March is to be selected by his Royal Highness the Grand Master for the ceremony. Unless imperative and urgent requirements as regards the time at the disposal of our royal guests demanded that the ceremony should be fixed for March, we cannot (we honestly confess) deem it the most seasonable or the most comfortable time for the gathering. All the subscribers of the Institution will wish to pay to the Prince of Wales, and that charming and exalted lady, his Royal Consort, all that respect, all that honour which are their just due from us all, and will desire, moreover, that everything should minister alike to their personal convenience, and the gratification of an admiring and applauding assembly. We fear, from what we hear, that the matter has been arranged somewhat in a hurry, probably from inexperience and without the fullest consideration of what the position of Royalty demands, on the one hand, or the exigencies of the Institution call for on the other. If the gathering be in March the number must necessarily be very limited indeed, and we are informed that it will be impossible, owing to the contracted space and short time for preparation, to invite life governors, or the annual subscribers, or the Stewards for the year. We venture to think that any such resolution of the Building Committee is a grave mistake, and may cause serious damage to some of the best interests of the Institution. Had the gathering been a little later—say July—all the Life Governors and Annual Subscribers, as well as Patrons, Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, and Grand Officers might have been entertained, together with their wives, and the Stewards of the Festival could have aided the Building Committee as Stewards for the day. We might have such a "convocation" of Masons, and such a greeting for our Royal guests as, perhaps, will never occur again. It must be remembered that many exalted ladies are the wives of our brethren, and such an opportunity of enlisting some of the highest ladies in the land, together with countless fair sisters, to surround the Royal couple with admiration and respect is not often given to us, and ought not to be thrown away on any consideration, for it is not a question of this or that committee, but it is the question of the welfare of the Girls' School. We have said all this very deferentially, because we are anxious for the future of our noble Institution. It has been spending considerable sums lately, it requires increased expenditure, unless largely supported, it will have to have recourse to its funded property to supplement the receipts of the festival. Therefore, we think it well to sound a humble note of warning. As regards the presence of our Royal Grand Master and his admirable Consort, whenever they appear they will receive the heartiest welcome which our proverbially loyal Order is so glad, and so delighted to offer on all occasions to the members of that Royal Family given by a good Providence to preside over the destinies of a great people. We trust that the assembly will be a complete success, but we should not be honest journalists or loyal Freemasons, we should lose our own self respect, if we did not deprecate haste or incompleteness, and above all, shortsightedness on the part of the Building Committee in a matter of so much interest to the Craft, and of so much present and future importance to the Girls' School.

THE LAST FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

One fact will strike all who look down the figures which, thanks to Bro. Terry's special courtesy and thoughtful attention, we were enabled to print last week for the information of our readers. It is this, that the Provincial Returns exceed the Metropolitan Returns by about £300. A correspondent calls attention to the fact that a large proportion of London Lodges have done nothing this year, and we trust that so regrettable a position may be improved at the next festival. The London Lodges seem to have sent up £5907; the Provinces, £6217 in round numbers. In London the highest on the list are No. 554, Bro. J. S. Taylor, £260; No. 1383, Bro. Col. Clerke, £202; No. 1475, Bro. H. Vickery, £192; No. 83, Bro. C. A. Murton, £188; No. 1471, Bro. D. Holdness, £165; No. 781, Bro. William Hallett, £158 10s.; No. 1686, Bro. John M'Clench, £140; No. 1441, Bro. J. Cantle £133; Chapter 975, Comp. John Newton, £120; No. 73, G. J. Grace, £116; No. No. 174, C. J. Percival, £109; No. 228, J. Hill, £100. Among the Provinces, Hertfordshire leads the van with £633; and is closely followed by West Yorkshire, with £603; Cornwall sends up the goodly amount of £570; Lancashire, (Western Division), appears with £330; the Chairman's own province remits £300; Kent, £270; Middlesex, £183; Cheshire, £172; Wiltshire, £164; Berks. and Bucks. £157; Staffordshire, £155; Derbyshire, £155; Dorsetshire, £150; Bristol, £134; Gloucester, £118; Devonshire, £110. Of the amounts under £100, Suffolk is the highest with £92, which is followed by Somersetshire, £85, and Sussex with £84, and here we pause. The result is a very noble one, and is a fact of which Bro. Terry may well be proud. There is at first sight a falling off as between this year and the last, but it can easily be accounted for; it is, in fact, the difference of about sixty Stewards. When last year it was announced that H.R.H. Prince Leopold was to be the Chairman, it was to be his first public Masonic appearance in London, and feeling for him that deep interest which, in common with the nation, all loyal Masons always entertain for the Royal Family, the Craft rallied round him with a zeal and heartiness truly commendable under all circumstances; and though he was not able, unfortunately, to appear, the effect was the same. Bro. Terry's list headed all the charities last year, and we are inclined to think that when we see the total of 1878 he will not be very far from the first position again.

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

By this time, this remarkable work of art is in the hands of many brethren, has been inspected by more, and we feel sure that the only verdict passed upon it is, that of admiration and praise. Indeed, we think it impossible that it should be otherwise. We hardly know of any similar production which so challenges, if we may so say, the approval of the artist and the amateur, the expert and the non-expert. The grouping is very wonderful, the finish most striking, and the "tout ensemble" most effective. Bro. Harty deserves the sympathy and commendation of all for having persevered so manfully, through difficulties many, and drawbacks great. Bro. Harty as is well known, has a good deal of the "old soldier" in him, and he has been identified with that great profession which difficulties cannot daunt, danger cannot alarm, and opposition does not hold back. "Onwards, Forwards," has been his motto, and he has at last achieved, in our opinion, a signal success, though we fear and fancy at no little cost to himself. Under these circumstances we would press upon our readers the advisability of endeavouring to obtain copies of an engraving which is likely soon to be very scarce. As a work of art unique in itself, as a memorial of a never to be forgotten ceremony, as a wonderful contribution to contemporaneous Masonic engraving of the highest excellency, it ought to decorate every lodge in Great Britain, which has a lodge room, whether the result be achieved by payment from the lodge fund or by the subscriptions of several loyal brethren. We have said this honestly and sincerely because we think that Bro. Harty's efforts deserve acknowledgment from the Craft at large, and because we are truly glad to congratulate him to-day on the completion of a work of wondrous skill and power, which as a specimen of the cunning hand of the engraver, must long endure to the credit of Freemasonry and the benefit of art.

A MENACE.

The Monde Maconnique is a well-known Masonic paper, edited and published by Bro. Caubet at Paris. It is a zealous supporter, as was to be expected, through Bro. Caubet, of the recent revolutionary change in the Grand Orient of France, which has set a stone rolling which it will take much time and care to stop, though alike destructive in its course and disastrous in its effects on Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. We have from time to time been struck by a tone of reckless menace and open bravado, which it assumed, according to our opinion, to cover the weakness of the position and the dangerous nature of the revolution effected. But we confess that we were not prepared for the violence and indecency which characterize the last deliverance entitled "Les Vœux," beginning at page 409, and ending at page 420, and signed "Caubet." There we are told, that it is proposed to alter Article 41 of the Constitution by practically giving to the Grand Orient of France power to grant a warrant to a new lodge in a jurisdiction, where the governing body is not in friendly relationship with the Grand Orient. Henceforth the article is to run as follows: "Le Grand Orient de France ne constitue pas d'Ateliers dans les pays étrangers où il existe une puissance maçonnique régulière et en relations fraternelles avec lui." "The Grand Orient of France does not constitute lodges in foreign countries where a Masonic authority exists and in fraternal relationship with it." So that if the foreign Masons be not in brotherly relations with it, it has the power to constitute such lodges. And at page 412 Bro. Caubet justifies this great and serious change in consequence of the present position of affairs of France:—"Un jour viendra où les principes de liberté de conscience que nous proclamons aujourd'hui seront généralement reconnus et acceptés par tous. Jusq'au-là, en vertu même de notre principe, nous respecterons l'opinion de ceux qui sont en opposition avec nous; mais nous exigerons de leur part qu'ils respectent également les nôtres. Si, égarés par un esprit d'intolérance, indigne de notre association, ils essayent de nous mettre en dehors de la Maçonnerie, nous affirmerons notre droit, et nous réparerons l'outrage qu'ils nous auront fait, en plantant la bannière du Grand Orient de France sur leur propre territoire. Ce sera là, incontestablement et uniquement, un acte de légitime défense, que personne ne saurait nous reprocher, à moins de prétendre que nous devons nous incliner devant les folles menaces et les excommunications encore plus folles de nos adversaires. Ce qu'aucun de nous ne saurait admettre. Sur ce point, tous les Maçons Français sont d'accord. Aussi sommes-nous assurés que le vœu qui nous occupe sera recommandé à l'adoption du prochain Couvent par toutes les Loges de l'Obédience." "A day will come when the principles of liberty of conscience which we proclaim to-day will be generally acknowledged and accepted by all. Until then, in virtue of our own principles, we shall respect the opinions of those who are in opposition to us, but we shall demand on their part that they equally respect ours. If, misled by a spirit of intolerance, unworthy of our Association, they seek to put us outside of Freemasonry, we shall affirm our right, and repair the outrage which they will have done us by planting the banner of the Grand Orient on France on their proper territory. That will be incontestably and solely an act of legitimate defence, for which no one can reproach us, unless they mean to contend that we ought to bow ourselves down before the foolish menaces and the still more foolish excommunications of our adversaries. This not one of us could admit. On this point all French Masons are agreed. Therefore we feel assured that the view which is before us will be recommended for the adoption of the next Couvent by all the lodges of the obedience." This is a Masonic Revolutionary "Propaganda" with a vengeance, and we would advise Bro. Caubet to give us a Masonic "Ca Ira" to make the absurdity complete, and to represent in besitting colours the childish and discreditable position assumed by the "exaltés" and "irreconcilables" of the French Freemasons. Seriously, we regard the present aspect of affairs with much anxiety. Remembering the unjustifiable proceedings of the Grand Orient in the United States, most illegal and un-Masonic, and seeing now that we are menaced with the same in Great Britain, we are not disinclined to the idea of a conference of all Anglo-Saxon Grand Lodges, in order to form a Masonic league of mutual defence and counsel. It will represent something like 1,200,000 Freemasons, and perhaps may go for something in Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. We are inclined to think very badly of the prospects of the future for Masonic peace and union, as in the same number of the Monde Maconnique Bro. Caubet thinks well ostentatiously to publish the address of a body, in London, of French Freemason, calling itself "La Grande Loge des Philadelphes et de la Concorde Reunis," which he knows as well as we do is a spurious body, meeting in defiance of all Masonic authority, utterly illegal by the laws of England, and which can under the Secret Societies Act be proceeded against by the Government of the country. Probably its great insignificance shields it from the kindly attentions of the police. In France such a body would be shut up in twenty-four hours.

THE "MONDE MACONNIQUE" AND THE "FREEMASON."

We think that we shall best be consulting our journalistic dignity, and the true temper and teaching of Freemasonry, if we decline to continue any further controversy with our contemporary on moot points, and above all on matters of fact. Not very long ago, our contemporary made some remarks to which we objected and called attention, but as now he declares he never made them at all, though the French cannot be misunderstood by the veriest Tyro in existence, we naturally recede from a discussion in which nothing is gained, but rather everything is lost by us. We are not in the habit of making either incorrect remarks or unfounded statements; we therefore take off our hats, and make our bow to the "Monde Maconnique."

THE CONSECRATION OF THE BAYARD CHAPTER.

We are pleased to note the interesting report of this gathering elsewhere, which deserves the consideration of all, not only on account of the distinguished companions present, but for the principle involved in the granting of the charter by Grand Chapter. It is, in our opinion, quite time that the restriction as to three years' existence of a lodge should be removed. All lodges should have chapters attached to them if possible, and we congratulate the members of the Bayard Chapter, not only on their most successful inauguration of their new chapter, but on their having "fought a good fight," and won a valuable victory for the best interests of Royal Arch Masonry.

BRO. THEVENOT'S LETTER.

We publish Bro. Thévenot's letter according to his special and urgent request, in our correspondence, with a translation of it. We shall call attention to it in our next.

THE PRESENT STATE OF AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

We direct our readers to a "Memorandum" on this subject, of grave interest to English Freemasons just now, which appears elsewhere.

Original Correspondence.

GRAND ORIENT DE FRANCE.

Paris ce 16 Février, 1878.

A Monsieur George Kenning, Propriétaire Directeur du Journal The Freemason, de Londres.

Monsieur et Très cher frère,

Recevez tous mes remerciements pour les quatre numéros du Freemason qui manquaient à ma collection et que vous avez bien voulu m'adresser, à titre gracieux.

Permettez moi, en même temps, de vous présenter quelques observations sur deux articles que contient le No. 466, du 9 Février courant, de votre estimable journal.

Dans le premier de ces articles intitulé le F. Hubert et la franc-maçonnerie française, vous dites que ce frère "en refusant cette année le Vénéralat de la Loge qu'il présidait si bien depuis plusieurs années a protesté ouvertement contre la récente révolution effectuée par le Grand Orient; que ce fait est le plus important et un très énergique commentaire des téméraires déclarations de l'estimé F. Thévenot, qui ont été insérées dans The Freemason du 26 Janvier dernier; que le F. Marchal, de la Loge St. Jean de Jerusalem, de Nancy, a aussi décliné le Vénéralat de cette loge, etc., etc."

J'ai le regret, mais j'ai en même temps le devoir de vous dire, Monsieur et Très cher frère, qu'il y a dans ces allégations et dans ces appréciations presque autant d'erreurs que de mots.

Premièrement, et avant tout, j'affirme de nouveau, sans crainte d'être démenti, qu'à la date de ce jour aucune loge ne s'est séparée du Grand Orient de France, par suite de la modification apportée par l'assemblée générale de 1877 à l'art. 1er de notre constitution.

J'affirme, en outre, que le F. Marchal, de Nancy, dont personne plus que nous n'apprécie les qualités maçonniques mieux éclairé sur la portée et sur les conséquences de la modification en question, a accepté et conservé le Vénéralat de la loge St. Jean de Jerusalem, c'est un fait sur lequel il est facile de vous renseigner et dont vous trouverez, du reste, la confirmation dans le prochain Calendrier du Grand Orient.

Quant au F. Hubert, dont vous présentez la non acceptation du Vénéralat de la Loge comme une protestation ouverte contre ce que vous appelez la récente révolution effectuée par le Grand Orient de France, il ne me serait pas difficile, en ma qualité de membre de cette loge, de vous démontrer tout ce qu'il y a d'erruer dans votre interprétation des motifs qui ont déterminé la résolution de ce frère: c'est un soin que je préfère laisser au F. Hubert lui-même; mais ce que je puis affirmer, sans crainte d'être taxé de témérité, c'est que cet honorable frère n'a pas cessé de rester attaché au Grand Orient de France au quel il a prêté serment; et je ne doute pas, connaissant ses excellentes qualités et tout son dévouement à l'Ordre maçonnique, qu'il ne soit le premier à regretter les conséquences que vous tirez de sa résolution.

Ainsi tombent les allégations contenues dans les articles du Freemason; et il me sera bien permis, Monsieur et très cher frère, de vous faire observer combien les appréciations de nos correspondents sur l'état actuel de la franc-maçonnerie française sont hasardeuses, et combien il y a loin d'une expression de regrets que nous comprenons à une rupture et même à une protestation!

Dans un des articles signalés et intitulé La position actuelle du Grand Orient du France, on trouve une peinture si fantaisiste de l'état actuel de la Maçonnerie Française que je me garderai bien d'y répondre: chaque lecteur sérieux, chaque Maçon érudit saura parfaitement d'émêler la vérité au milieu de tant d'erreurs et faire justice d'aussi fausses appréciations. Mais le F. Maskeline, signataire de cet article, y pose cette question plus fantaisiste encore à laquelle je ne puis m'empêcher de répondre. Il dit: "Je me demande maintenant comment il faut considérer un Franc-maçon Français, placé en ce moment sous la dictature du Grand Orient de France, après la sanglante injure infligée par le dit Grand Orient à la Maçonnerie Française."

Le F. Maskeline paraît ne pas se douter, on le voit, de ce que c'est que le Grand Orient de France. Il semble croire que c'est une personne ou, tout au moins, une commission, un conseil, une administration quelconque pesant tyranniquement sur les ateliers et les Maçons de l'obédience. J'apprends donc fraternellement à ce F., par la voie de votre estimable journal, que le Grand Orient de France se compose de tous les Vénérables des Loges, lesquels se réunissent tous les ans en assemblée générale pour faire les affaires de l'Ordre et pour nommer le conseil qui gère ces affaires en l'absence de l'assemblée générale ou couvent.

C'est cette assemblée et non une personnalité, par plus qu'un Pouvoir particulier quelconque, qui a voté la réforme incomprise qu'il fait l'objet des critiques du F. Maskeline. En se conformant à cette décision, le Maçon Français que le F. Maskeline entoure de ses plus vives sollicitudes ne fait qu'obéir à la Maçonnerie Française elle-même dans l'expression de la très grande majorité de ses représentants; c'est à dire à la suprême loi de temps modernes; et dire que le Grand Orient de France a infligé une sanglante injure à la Maçonnerie Française, c'est employer une for-mule qui n'a aucun sens, car c'est dire : Le Grand Orient de France a infligé une sanglante injure au Grand Orient de France.

Je voudrais être indiscret et abuser les colonnes de votre journal, Monsieur et très cher frère, si je prolongeais cette lettre, qui m'est dictée par mon profond amour de la vérité de la justice et de la paix. Je n'ajouterais donc qu'un mot : En 1877, la Maçonnerie Française est redevenue—dans le texte de ses lois, dans ses principes et dans ses pratiques—ce qu'elle était avant 1849, alors que les diverses Païssances maçonniques du Monde entretenaient avec elle les relations les plus fraternelles. Des esprits passionnés ont voulu voir, dans ce retour, un acte anti maçonnique au lieu d'y voir simplement un acte de tolérance et d'apaisement. Plaig-nous ces esprits sans nous détourner de notre devoir ; car Maçons Anglais et Maçons Français ont mieux à faire, au 19^e siècle, qu'à se nuire, qu'à se proscrire mutuellement et qu'à se haïr.

Comptant sur votre impartialité pour insérer cette lettre dans le prochain numéro de votre estimable journal, je vous prie d'agréer, Monsieur et très cher frère, la nouvelle assurance de mes sentiments les plus distingués.

Le Chef du Secrétariat du Grand Orient de France.

THEVENOT.

[TRANSLATION].

Paris, Feb. 16, 1878.

To Bro. Kenning, &c.

Sir and very dear Brother,—

Receive all my thanks for the four numbers of the Freemason which you have been so kind as to send to me and which were wanting to my collection.

Permit me at the same time to offer to you some observations on two articles which No. 466, (9th Feb.), of your estimable journal contains.

In the first of these articles, entitled "Bro. Hubert and French Freemasonry," you say that this brother by "refusing the unanimous election to the chair of the lodge he has served so well for years openly protested against the revolution recently effected by the French Grand Orient. This announcement serves as a very striking commentary on the somewhat rash declaration of our esteemed Bro. Thevenot which appeared in our columns the previous week. Bro. Marechal, of the Lodge St. Jean de Jerusalem, Nancy, has also resigned the chair of the lodge, &c." I regret, but I have at the same time the duty to say to you, Sir and very dear brother, that there are in these allegations and appreciations almost as many mistakes as words.

First and above all, I affirm again, without fear of any denial, that up to the date of this day no lodge has separated itself from the Grand Orient of France in consequence of the modification introduced by the General Assembly of 1877 in Art 1, of our Constitution.

I affirm, on the contrary, that Bro. Marechal, of Nancy, than whom nobody more appreciates the Masonic qualities than I do, better informed as to the bearing of the consequences of the modification in question, has accepted the Mastership of his lodge. That is a fact with respect to which it is so easy for you to inform yourself, and of which you will find the confirmation in the new "Calendrier" of the Grand Orient. As regards Bro. Hubert, whose non-acceptation of the Mastership you represent as an open protest against that which you call the recent revolution effected by the Grand Orient of France, it would not be difficult, in my quality of member of that lodge, to point out to you all that is erroneous in your interpretation of the motives which have determined the resolution of that brother—that is a duty which I prefer to leave to Bro. Hubert himself; but this I can affirm, without fear of being taxed with temerity, that that hon. brother has not ceased to remain attached to the Grand Orient of France, to which he has avowed obedience, and I do not doubt, knowing his excellent qualities and all his devotion to the Masonic Order, that he will be the first to regret the consequences that you have drawn from his resolution.

Thus far as to the allegations contained in the articles of the Freemason, and it will be permitted me, Sir and very dear brother, to observe to you how rash are the appreciations of your correspondents as regards the actual state of French Freemasonry, and how there is far from an expression of regret which we understand for a rupture, or even a protest.

In one of the articles entitled "Actual Position of the Grand Orient of France," we find a colouring so fantastic of the actual state of French Freemasonry that I shall refuse to reply to it.

Every serious reader, every learned Mason, will know how to find the truth in the midst of so much error, and to do justice to such false appreciation. The Bro. Maskelyne, who argues this question, puts forward this question, more fantastic still, which I cannot refrain myself from answering. "I ask myself, how can we henceforth consider a French Freemason placed at this moment under the dictation of the Grand Orient of France after the dreadful injury inflicted by the said Grand Orient on French Freemasonry?"

Bro. Maskelyne appears not to doubt, it seems, what is the Grand Orient of France. He appears to believe it is a person, or more or less a commission or council, an administration of some kind, weighing down heavily on the lodges and Masons of the Obédience. I then fraternally inform this brother, by means of your estimable journal, that the Grand Orient of France is composed of all the Masters of lodges, who unite themselves every year in general assembly to transact the business of the Order, and to elect the council which directs these affairs in the absence of the General Assembly or Convent. It is this assembly, and not a personality, much less a private power of any kind, which has voted the reform misunderstood, which is the object of the criticism of Bro. Maskelyne. In conforming himself to this decision, the French Mason, whom Bro. Maskelyne surrounds with his lively solicitude, only obeys French Freemasonry itself in the expression by the very great majority of its representatives, that is to say the supreme law of modern times, and to say that the Grand Orient of France has inflicted a dreadful blow on French Freemasonry is to employ a formula which has no sense. The Grand Orient of France has inflicted a dreadful blow on the Grand Orient of France!

I should think myself indiscret, and that I was abusing the columns of your journal, sir and very dear brother, if I prolonged this letter, which my love of truth, of justice, and of peace has dictated. I will only then add one word.

In 1877 French Freemasonry has come back to the text of its laws, both as to its principles and its practices, just as before 1849, when the different Masonic powers of the world kept up with us the most fraternal relations. Some impassioned speakers wish to see in this return an anti-Masonic act, instead of simply regarding it as an act of toleration and pacification. Let us regret this spirit without turning ourselves from our duty, for English Masons and French Masons have something better to do in this nineteenth century than to ignore each other, persecute each other, hate each other. Relying upon your impartiality for inserting this letter in the next number of your estimable journal, I beg you, Sir and dear brother, to receive the fresh assurance of my most distinguished sentiments.

THEVENOT.

[We publish these letters with pleasure, though we must very fraternally observe to our good Bro. Thevenot that our space is limited in the Freemason.—Ed.]

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Our bye-laws state that a brother visiting our lodge who has been excluded from a sister lodge, we must respect that decision by refusing admission. But supposing he has been excluded by a R.A. Chapter attached to his lodge for some offence committed in his chapter, confirmed by his blue lodge, and then sent to our blue lodge. Are we also to respect the decision, only some of the members being R.A. Masons. The charge originated in the chapter, and was brought down to the blue lodge.—Yours fraternally,

AN OLD P.G.P.

[Yes, certainly.—Ed.]

LONDON LODGES AND THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In looking over the very able account you give of the Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, I find only one third of the number of London lodges represented. Can you tell me why this is? Why should two-thirds of our London lodges be exempt from contributing to this most important Institution. Are they deferred, or have they no eyes or ears for their brethren who are looking to them for assistance?

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

VICE-PRESIDENT.

UNCLAIMED MONEY.

Dear Sir,—

In your review of last week you suggest that I should re-publish the whole original list of unclaimed dividends. Permit me to say, that although such a re-publication would doubtless prove very valuable to many families, yet I venture to think a revised list by the Bank of England authorities would prove far more valuable, as, since the last list was published (forty years ago) many of the sums then unclaimed have long since been claimed by the representatives of deceased stockholders.

I may add, that last year a revised list of "Dormant Funds in Chancery" was published, pursuant to the Chancery Funds Act, 1872. Why should not a like course be taken by the Bank of England authorities? Too much publicity cannot be given to such lists.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

EDWARD PRESTON.

A CENTURY OF MASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In looking through the minute books of our lodge I find a number of items which, it has occurred to me, might prove of very great interest to many Masons, as illustrating the manners and customs of our forefathers, if you would kindly afford space for them. This I hope you may be the more readily disposed to do by reason of the fact that to mark the celebration of our centenary in 1872, the late Bro. Stebbing, D.P.G.M. of Hants and the Isle of Wight, spent much time and research in compiling a history of the lodge. At the celebration he read, and there appeared in the local papers, a report of what was evidently intended to form the basis of this history, and three months later, as appears by a letter in our possession, he obtained the consent of the then M.W. Grand Master, the Marquis of Ripon, who, with his Grand Officers, attended the celebration, to dedicate the history to him. An unexpected illness took him from us before the accomplishment of his purpose, and but a few sheets of the apparently intended introduction have been found with the lodge's books and papers. Of the information contained in these sheets and the newspaper report I hope to avail myself in presenting what I trust will prove an interesting story of the rise and progress of Masonry in this ancient town, so far as is to be gathered from the materials in our possession. As it will probably best suit your convenience, as it certainly will my own, to receive these interesting reminiscences in the form of chapters, I propose to send you the story in sections, leaving you to give them insertion in the Freemason as space and opportunity offer.

Fraternally yours,
C. J. PHILLIPS,
W.M. Royal Gloucester Lodge, 130.
Southampton, Feb. 1878

A CENTURY OF MASONRY.—I.

I can hardly suppose that the history of the Royal Gloucester Lodge, No. 130, differs very materially from that of the still older neighbouring lodges at West Cowes, No. 35, and Winchester, No. 76; or the almost equally aged Institutions at Ringwood, No. 132; Newport, No. 151; Ryde, No. 175; Bournemouth, No. 195; and Phoenix, Portsmouth, No. 257; all in this province. But as its minute books extend back to February, 1772, and give vivid details of the manners and customs of the Masons in those days, I have ventured to think some of these details may be considered worthy of relation in the Freemason for the benefit of young Masons, if they shall not happen to prove novel to the student of Masonry. To make clearer what follows, it may to some be necessary to explain that until 1717 there existed two great Masonic bodies, one, known as the Ancient or York Masons, and afterwards the Athol Masons, claiming to be the Grand Lodge of all England, and the other the Modern or London Masons, afterwards called the Sussex Masons, adopting the title of Grand Lodge of England. The last named body was in 1717 so far reconstituted as to admit as members of the Masonic body persons not practically associated with architecture. It was then for the first time that gentlemen, professional men, and persons of various occupations, were admitted into Masonry, provided they were of good repute in the outer world, were free of birth, and of the full age of twenty-one years, twenty-five years having at one time been the limit. Under the York or Athol and Ancient Masons, what is now the Royal Gloucester Lodge came into existence, without, however, any distinctive name, but simply recognised as "No. 174." Following some meetings held under dispensation, it was formally constituted on the 22nd of April 1772, under a warrant from John, Duke of Athol, as is thus extracted from the minute book of the Grand Lodge of Ancient Freemasons, from 1769 to 1773, and shown by the warrant still in the possession of the lodge:

Grand Lodge opened at 1 o'clock, at the Vine Tavern, Southampton, in the County of Hampshire, on the 22nd day of April, 1772-5772.

Grand Secretary Dickey in the Chair.

By an authority (for three hours only), from the Right Worshipful Lan. Dermott, Esq., D.G. Master, constituted.

Closed at 3 o'clock, and adjourned to the next General Grand Lodge.

Warrants "for three hours only" were customary in those days, when brethren were deputed to hold Grand Lodges, the time being thus limited to prevent any misuse of their power and authority. The lodge thus formed and constituted was always an "ancient lodge" and for many years was faithful to the Athol Grand Lodge, but subsequently it became a modern lodge, and for many years kept two sets of books and corresponded with each Grand Lodge as a true and faithful ancient or modern lodge, as best suited the occasion. It is to be remembered that so severely did the ancient and modern Masons keep apart that, although the differences in their ceremonies were very trifling they were not allowed to visit each other's lodges unless re-made according to the form of the lodge they desired to join. Thus we read at a meeting recorded in the first Book of "Transactions," or minutes as we should now call it, "In order to strengthen the lodge rose Bro. Thos. Widdell to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason; also entered, passed, and raised Bro. Joseph Truelove, he being a modern Mason before, and appointed him the Tyler of the lodge."

By a memorandum of Bro. Slade's, a learned Mason, Past Master of the lodge, and for several years Prov. Grand Secretary, there appears to have been some kind of meeting of those interested in the formation of the lodge on the 12th of January, 1772, but the first entry recorded in the Transactions reads as follows:—"Feb. 4th. Called a lodge, it being our first time, by virtue of a dispensation from the Right Worshipful Grand Lodge in London, on Feb. 4th, 1772, Bros. Joseph Adams, Master; Wm. St. Barbe, S.W.; Edwin Jones, J.W."

This Joseph Adams, it seems, was a schoolmaster, and Edwin Jones, a sailmaker, and the Thomas Widdell, whose name was afterwards entered in the warrant as Junior Warden, was not a Mason at this time, for two days after the first meeting, viz., on February 6th, "a lodge of emergency was called to make Bro. Thos. Widdell; entered and passed him into the First and Second Degrees of Masonry." The names of the Wardens and the Tyler are given as on this occasion pro. tem., the "Worshipful Master being in the chair," and it is added, "had a lecture in the Prentice and Craft; proposed that Bro. Joseph Truelove (the brother above referred to) should be made over again in this lodge . . . he was balloted for, and the lodge agreed to make him on the lodge night on condition of his being Tyler"—which, as we have seen, was done. In like manner, the minutes of the first meeting (February 14th) records that "In consideration of Bro. W. St. Barbe, (S.W. pro tem.) going to sea, and in order to keep up the lodge, entered, past, and raised Bro. John Blackman and Bro. J. Cox to the third stage of Masonry; had a lecture in Prentice and Craft; and closed the lodge at ten in good harmony"—a formula recording the closing which prevailed for many years. The lodge appeared at once to take root, for before the warrant arrived meetings were held fortnightly, and at that of February 15th, there were proposed, balloted for, entered, and passed two brethren into the First and Second Degrees. It is of interest to note that among the papers of the late Bro. Slade, the lodge was called—evidently from some authority he had seen—the Holy Trinity, No. 174, and Bro. Stebbing remarks on this “nor can the designation be discarded from certain considerations that may present themselves, as many of the prayers and invocations in use at the time were specially of a Christian character.”

KENNING'S CYCLOPEDIA.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,

Will you kindly let us know in your next issue the date on which we can expect the Cyclopædia?

We had hoped to have it in our hands a month ago, and looking forward to a great treat in the perusal, are naturally disappointed.

Fraternalty yours,

AN IRISH SUBSCRIBER.

[Not only our Irish correspondent but a very large number of our readers will no doubt be much pleased to learn that the book is at last ready. No time will be lost in despatching copies to the original subscribers.—ED.]

HOW THE WHOLE OF THE CANDIDATES FOR THE CHARITIES MAY BE PROVIDED FOR.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,

Here, my brethren, is a problem, the solution of which is as plain as A B C, and only wants moral honesty and fortitude on the part of the members to see the wrong and condemn it, to recognise the right and pursue it to the end.

“To consider the charities first and support them.” This is Masonry; here rests the solution of the problem.

A case has recently come under my notice where £230 has been spent on the publican and £4 on the charities. I ask, is not this a sad state of things? 57 times as much to support a traffic that is ruining the trade and commerce of the country (upon which the fabulous sum of “a million sterling per day” is spent in the United Kingdom); and yet we recognise Masonry as based upon the purest principles of piety and virtue.

I ask, is it not time that the brethren, actuated by honourable and religious motives, should seek to reform this terrible abuse, by which so many hundreds of thousands of the funds of the lodges are prostituted to purposes as opposed to the sublime principles of Masonry as darkness to light?

Brothers you are in wealthy circumstances to-day, to-morrow you may lose your appointment, however lucrative, through indiscretion or enemies, your bank may break, your business fail, your life may be prematurely taken, and your widow, fatherless children, or orphans may be left on a cold world. Are not these natural questions and serious ones?

A case apropos is before the charities now.

The brother whose health is his capital, and who moves in a humble sphere, will plainly see that he stands on the edge of the precipice close to penury, and it behoves him to be provident.

I would say to him—seek to know the amount last year spent on refreshments and on the charities—you know not what day may make your wife a widow. Will the publican whose interests you may have been upholding in preference to the charities feed your fatherless children?

Of course my letter will be looked upon with disfavour by one class, but I feel assured the honest brother who looks to the interests of the charities will appreciate my motive, and I feel I am discharging a conscientious duty to God, the Craft, the charities, and by this protest, which I do with as much affection as earnestness.

Well, says a good brother, what would Bro. Darley have us do?

Let the brethren decide to meet every legitimate case, which may be done with the greatest ease, and by that means they will establish a precedent to meet their own cases should misfortune overtake them or theirs.

I feel perfectly satisfied that the Secretaries of the charities will be only too pleased to put their heads together and ascertain the amount necessary. The Grand Lodge Register will show lodges and the number in each, and it will be an easy matter for them to divide the amount needed, sending a return to every lodge.

It then rests with the lodges to vote the amount required for the charities from the surplus lodge funds.

I need not say a word more, seeing the case is so simple; it is not one of taxing the pocket of any one, but of limiting the refreshments to the requirements of the charities.

I have been looking over the list of subscribers and donors, and in the name of God and Providence I shall not appeal in vain to the brethren not to throw away the funds of their lodges on bacchanalianism, their own personal ruin, and in reckless indifference to the interests of their families, whilst the most munificent sums are flowing so spontaneously from Her Most Gracious Majesty, His Royal Highness the Grand Master, and a numerous retinue of illustrious and benevolent personages and brethren.

Surely, whilst God is thus helping us we ought to help ourselves.

The Grand Officers, the Provincial Grand Officers, the clergy, and all who wish to reform the abuses and uphold the prestige and high character of Masonry, will not fail, I am sure to use their influence to discountenance a ruinous vice, to lay the axe at the root of improvidence and promote the exercise of that heaven-born charity which blesses him that gives as well as him that receives, and has the approbation of heaven and earth.

Brethren, the adoption of the course I commend to you will help to relieve your anxiety about us in your last hours, and your reflection shall be sweet of having left the world better than you found it.

For the honour of the Most High, for the good of those excellent institutions, and the interest of those most near and dear to you, be united, be guarded against the enemies of your homes and the Craft, persevere in that which you know to be right, and may God reward you.

Yours fraternally,

W. DARLEY.

OUR NON-ACCEPTANCE OF THE MASTER'S CHAIR.

BY BRO. HUBERT.

Chaine d'Union for February, Page 33.

There are duties sometimes painful to fulfil, but which we are bound nevertheless to perform. Such is the case with regard to myself, and in which the unanimous re-election to the office of W.M. in the Lodge Temple des Amis de l'Honneur Français has placed me.

As such I had to sign the following declaration “To vow to obey the Masonic Constitution, and the Laws and General Regulations of the Order,” this without restriction or reserve.

As, the declaration signed, the office accepted, I had to watch over its observance without restriction and reserve.

But I was one who did not wish to accept “Vœu IX,” fearing that this was a restriction of the fertile principles large in morality and toleration, taught and practised in all time by all Masonic bodies, and without which there is no Masonry.

I am quite aware that the best assurances are given on this subject, I am quite aware, and I like to believe that it is true, that such will remain true, that the modification introduced into Article 1 of the Masonic Constitutions of the Grand Orient of France does not change anything of the ancient condition of affairs, that the adoption of “Vœu IX,” has not had for the object to drive God out of the lodges, and will never remove from the head of documents and official letters emanating from the Grand Orient of France—“A la Gl. du Gr. Arch. de l'Univers.”

But so formal an affirmation does not result from the new Article 1 of our Constitution—for one can easily derive from the words which form the said Article an altogether different sense to that I have just explained. It might suffice that the event might produce a president who is not Bro. St. Jean, who, if it was possible that he could be eternal at that post would re-assure and tranquillize all consciences. But there is no necessity for a new “vœu,” coming from the initiative of a Mason to complete the change which has taken place for some years in France, in the conception of the Masonic Theory.

One cannot deny, in fact, that the breach is open, and that there only needs one step to fall entirely into “negation,” and should we not have been there already, had it not been for the amendment proposed by Bro. St. Jean, and happily supported by the W.M. of the Lodge of Reconnaissance, Bro. Cauzard—and thanks also to the intervention above, all voted by the Convention of 1872? It is necessary to see and accept the facts, such as they are. Therefore, this situation leaves something to desire.

It would be, perhaps, imprudent to engage oneself without having guarantees. It is not that I doubt the sentiments of those who form our “Conseil de l'ordre.” I know them all; I esteem them all; and many are my best friends among those charged with the interpretation and direction at this very hour in our Masonry of the Grand Orient.

They are there to-day? Who can assure me of to-morrow??? There would then remain nothing but Article 1 of the Constitution of which as I have said we can explain the text, without any violence to it, differently from the way in which the present administration explains it. A commission has been named to place our rituals in accord with the letter and the spirit of the modified Constitution. I hope that the Masons honoured with that labour of revision, will honour themselves by bringing into the new text of our rituals that which can re-assure all consciences and hinder the Grand Orient from falling into the “ruck” of a sect.

Such are the considerations which have induced me not to accept the Master's chair, and to take up a position of waiting. When the hour to definitely pronounce has arrived, when I have seen what our new rituals teach and maintain, nothing will hinder me in the position I ought to take up, in order to remain absolutely in the respect of my own liberty of conscience, and of the idea what I form of Freemasonry.

HUBERT.

MEMORANDUM AS REGARDS THE PRESENT POSITION OF THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

1. In order to ascertain what is the exact bearing of the recent change in the Constitutions of the French Grand Orient, it is necessary to advert to the precedent and concomitant facts which have been attendant upon it.

2. So far back as 1865, Bro. Massol, the founder of the “Morale Indépendante,” and a politician of extreme views, proposed in the French Grand Orient the almost identical resolution which has recently been carried. This resolution was then rejected by 170 to 40. This a point to be noted. The “Morale Indépendante,” as he propounded it, consists merely in ignoring the need and utility of all religion qua a “Religio” to man, in disavowing alike Revelation and a Personal God. It throws us back on an “individual perception of morality” on nihilism in life, on total annihilation in death. With such views as these he commenced a crusade, and which dates even from before 1865, against the existing French Masonic formularies, which militated entirely with such peculiar teaching. But as he was a man of shrewdness, he found it necessary, to use his own words, to take “one step at a time,” and “not to attempt to do all at once.” He accordingly agitated, and succeeded in his agitation, for the final removal of the Bible from the lodges, which he declared had “nothing to do with Freemasonry,” though the opposition to the Bible dates actually from an earlier period.

3. But such was the position of French Freemasonry until September, 1877, refusing to have the Bible in the lodge, though, at the same time, it avowed “Belief in God and the immortality of the soul” in the constitutions.

4. In September, 1877, the removal of these words from the Constitutions was carried in the French Grand Orient by 138 votes to 76, and a vague phrase was substituted, such expression of Universal Masonic Belief, in these words:—“Elle a pour principes la liberté absolue de conscience et la solidarité humaine. Elle n'exclut personne pour ses croyances.”

It must strike every one that such a change is both very grave and very great in every respect, and has been effected, to use the words of the Monde Maçonnique, because the Grand Orient is coupable de vouloir ouvrir la portes de la Maçonnerie, aux savants et philosophes qui ne reconnaissent pas l'existence de Dieu.”

5. This impetus to the movement for change, (suspended for some years) seems to have been given by the initiation of Professor Littré, when the ritual had to be modified, and much of it left out, to meet his scruples in respect of admitting the acknowledgment of T.G.A.O.T.U. This act was protested against at the time by many French Masons.

6. Thus it will be noted how the successive steps taken by the Grand Orient of France are apparently portions of a programme, all culminating in one great result. The Bible has been removed, acknowledgment of T.G.A.O.T.U. has been suppressed, and a commission is sitting to modify the ritual, and bring it in accordance with this recent and regrettable change. What such modification must portend is only too patent. The “Vœu” for the removal of the ascription “A la gloire du Grand Architecte de l'Univers,” has been “pour le moment” withdrawn, though there is little doubt, but that Bro. Massol's proposals will eventually be carried out, as he said, “by patience and in time,” and that though that formula is not yet gone, it is destined in turn to disappear from French Freemasonry.

The able antagonist of Freemasonry, the Bishop of Orleans in his “Etude de la Francmaçonnerie,” points out that French Freemasonry, according to his view “Deiste,” cannot stop there, and must become “Atheiste” and by a singular perversity, the French Grand Orient, apparently bent on accomplishing his unfriendly prophecy, has by the course it has thought proper to pursue, played into the hands of the Ultramontane party in France, which has always sought unjustly to identify Freemasonry with revolution and irreligion, socialism and godlessness.

7. If such has been one object of the change avowedly so, namely, the admission of those who do not believe in God, and if such has been the method by which it has been brought about, it is needful now to consider, how such an alteration is defended. Bro. Desmons, (who is said to be a Protestant minister at Paris,) as the reporter of the commission, advocates the change, on the ground of “absolute toleration.”

This argument stripped of all periphrasis appears to be this:—“Freemasonry is an humanitarian association, and separate from and above all religious institutions. Therefore, in the interests of pure and absolute toleration, we can no more admit the claim of Theism, than we can of Christianity, Judaism, Mohammedanism to dominate Freemasonry. We can have no dogmatic teaching of any kind. Freemasonry accepts all creeds, and as an acknowledgment of T.G.A.O.T.U. becomes, so to say, a test and a stumbling block to the ‘libre penseur,’ the ‘positiviste,’ the ‘Morale Indépendante,’ it infringes the law of absolute toleration, and we cannot admit any longer in our Constitutions an acknowledgment of belief in God. Freemasonry has no moral right to exclude even the ‘atheos,’ the philosopher, the ‘savan’ living without God in the world.” It is impossible to read Bro. Desmon's report, able as it is, without being deeply struck by the scholastic subtlety and special pleading which characterise it, from first to last, and without also asking ourselves this question, “Does the writer positively believe in the hyper-tolerant views he propounds, which, if carried to a legitimate conclusion, must end in entire anarchy of religious credence, a positive negation of all belief among men?”

8. It is but fair to observe here, that it is not the mere protrusion of “Belief in God” from the Constitutions which the English Grand Lodge can object to, but it is the apparently and deliberate negation of T.G.A.O.T.U., which is henceforth to characterize French Freemasonry. We have, as it is well known, no acknowledgment of T.G.A.O.T.U. formally in the actual Book of Constitutions, but bound up with that wise code of laws are our “Ancient Charges,” which may be said not improperly to represent the “Lex Inscripta,” the common law of Freemasonry. Had the Grand Orient simply removed a profession of faith from a code of legislation, there would not have been any valid cause for complaint, but it has not done so, but it has simply suppressed the declaration altogether, and proposed to modify its ritual in accordance with such suppression.

9. Two points therefore necessarily come in here for consideration, (1) What is henceforth the authoritative teaching of French Freemasonry? and (2) how does that contrast with its earlier declarations? What the expression “la solidarité humaine” really means, it is somewhat difficult to say. The “International Society,” in some of its manifestoes, talks of “la solidarité des nations,” and the phrase “la solidarité humaine” appears to have, so to say, a cant meaning for French Freemasons. The meaning of the French word "solidarité" by itself does not help us, and we can only arrive at it by implication. It seems to mean "The Humanitarian Entirety," or an "all-embracing humanity," as a distinct force, even a "Cultus" in the affairs of this world. The President of the Council of the Grand Orient, Bro. St. Jean, speaks quite recently: Talking of the Grand Orient, and French Freemasonry, he says: "travaillant en vue de perfectionnement et moral intellectuel des hommes et de leur bien être, elle demande à ceux qui veulent être admis dans son sein, des sentimens d'honnêteté et de l'amour du bien qui lui permettent de coopérer utilement à son œuvre de progrès et de civilisation."

Thus the phrase would imply apparently that French Freemasonry seeks the perfection of entire humanity qua humanity. But, as we said before, some doubt must exist as to the exact meaning of these words.

10. We may now here note how ill this accords with earlier French teaching. In the "Histoire &c. de la très Vénérable Confraternité," published by Varrentrapp, at Frankfurt in 1732, we have a translation of the English Constitution Book of 1723, and under the head "Touchant Dieu et Religion," a Mason, exactly as with us, is declared "il ne sera jamais un Athée stupide ou un libertin sans religion." This declaration is repeated in the "Histoire des Franc-maçons," published at Paris in 1745, and plenty of evidence might be adduced to prove that French Freemasonry, until quite recently, has always professedly been Theistic. It is true that the "formula" recently expunged is not of ancient date, but the general teaching of French Freemasonry has incontestably been in accord with our English teaching, despite the struggle which has, more or less, been going on for years, and has culminated in the last vote of erasure of the French Grand Orient.

The just complaint against the French Grand Orient then seems to be this, that taking Belief in God, &c., out of the Constitutions, any acknowledgment of T.G.A.O.T.U. (a foundation truth of Freemasonry), is henceforth prohibited in French Freemasonry, and that, both abstractedly and avowedly, liberty of conscience and human solidarity are substituted for any profession of belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. If the ritual is now modified to meet this altered declaration, French Freemasonry departs both in profession and practice, "from the cosmopolitan teaching of Freemasonry."

It may be observed here, that Bro. Hubert, the able editor of the Chaîne d'Union, has declined an unanimous election to the "Vénérat," or Master's chair of the lodge, in consequence of his dissatisfaction with past and present, and his fears for the future; that Bro. Marchal, of Nancy, has resigned the chair, and that his lodge only continues in obedience to the Grand Orient on the condition that the ritual is not altered; and that there are a large number of French Freemasons who deeply deplore the vote of the Grand Orient.

In Belgium the same unwise course has been followed, so that in France and Belgium all believers in God are, as it is known, discouraged and alarmed, and even as Bro. Behr stated in the Grand Orient itself, "blackballed." Profession of actual unbelief in God, on the contrary, is often applauded, and is a not uncommon thing in French and Belgian lodges.

It seems that by a "Vœu" to be shortly discussed, the Grand Orient proposes to claim to give warrants in all Masonic jurisdictions where the ruling body has not fraternal relations with it, not "en relations fraternelles." Nothing more is needed to point out the dangerous and revolutionary proceedings in every sense of the Grand Orient of France.

Such seems to be the actual position of affairs, from our English point of view, without exaggeration or misconception, as a matter of fact, and though to those who have followed the struggles of French Freemasonry it is neither surprising nor unexpected, it must create the greatest anxiety in the minds of all who, under the Grand Lodge of England, seek for and desiderate the peaceful, orderly, loyal, religious progress of Universal Freemasonry.

CONSECRATION OF THE BAYARD CHAPTER, No. 1615.

This new chapter was consecrated on Saturday last, at the Hall, 33, Golden Square, by the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Grand H., and Grand Superintendent of the Western Division of Lancashire. The companions present on the occasion were Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, Frank Richardson, Captain Richard P. Leeson, Captain Henry Andrews, Sir Thomas Dyer, Bart., W. Bezley Thorne, M.D.; Capt. T. Morris, P.Z. 784; G. H. D'Avigden, Captain Compton, Francis E. Compton, Col. Burdett, G. Supt. Midx.; Gen. Brownrigg, G. Supt. Surrey; J. M. P. Montagu, G. Supt. Dorset; Gen. H. Clerk, P.Z. 13; Col. A. W. Adair, 1383; Capt. N. G. Philips, G.S.N.; John Hervey, G.S.E.; John B. Monckton, P.G.P.S.; Hugh D. Sandeman, P.G. Supt. Bengal; S. Rawson, P.G. Supt. China; Col. Shadwell Clerke, P.Z. 19; Hyde Pullen, P.Z. 175, P.G.G.C.; Peter de L. Long, G.P.S.; J. Lewis Thomas, P.Z. &c.; R. J. Bristow, Capt. Francis Pavey, J. Muzio, Chevalier Habicht, Col. Randolph, Capt. A. N. Sherson, T. B. Purchase, Rev. Ambrose Hall, Henry Thorn, Col. L. H. Hamilton, A. F. Godson, Major Barlow, Rev. C. W. Arnold, Captain Wemyss, Walter B. Lethbridge, John Messing, A. J. McIntyre, Q.C.; Sir Michael Costa, C. E. Willing, and H. Massey (Freemason), P.Z. 619.

The lodge to which the chapter is attached, the Bayard Lodge, No. 1615, has not yet been established two years, and the rule of Grand Chapter is that no charter for a chapter shall be granted to a lodge unless it has been established three years at least, the principle on which they proceed being that there shall be sufficient Masters or Past Masters of the lodge to keep up a constant supply of Principals for the chapter. Of course until the third Master is installed there cannot be a brother eligible for the third chair, unless indeed the lodge starts with several P.M.'s. Grand Chapter has, therefore, with very few exceptions, constantly refused to grant a charter to a lodge less than three years old. The exception whenever it has been made has been under very special circumstances, and such circumstances were unanimously allowed to exist in the case of the Bayard Lodge, and at the Quarterly Convocation of Grand Chapter last November, after full discussion, a charter was granted for the Bayard Chapter, subject to the confirmation of the minutes which took place on the 6th inst. No time was lost in getting the chapter consecrated, and the ceremony, as we have said, was performed last Saturday. The Bayard Lodge derives its name from the Chevalier Bayard, whose picture in Hampton Court Palace must be familiar to many of our readers. The Bayard Lodge adopts the arms of the Chevalier, and his motto, Sans peur et sans reproche; and the name, arms, and motto are also taken by the Bayard Chapter. The ceremony of consecration was exceedingly impressive, all the arrangements having been previously made with the greatest care. Grand Chapter was formed, Lord Skelmersdale presiding as Z.; Colonel Burdett, as H.; General Brownrigg, as J.; Comp. John Hervey as S.E.; Captain N. G. Philips, S.N.; Comp. Peter de L. Long, P.S.; Sir Michael Costa, 1st A.; and Comp. Hyde Pullen, and A.; Col. Shadwell Clerke was D.C. The principal portions of the ceremony were admirably performed by Lord Skelmersdale, General Brownrigg, and Col. Shadwell Clerke; and when the ceremony was completed Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, P.Z. 784, was placed in the chair of M.E.Z., and Comp. Frank Richardson, P.Z. 8, in the chair of H. Comp. John Hervey then installed Comp. Captain Richard P. Leeson as J. As soon as this ceremony was over the M.E.Z. said the first duty which devolved upon him was to propose for the acceptance of the companions the hearty thanks of the chapter to Lord Skelmersdale. He was aware that Lord Skelmersdale had come at great inconvenience to himself very kindly to consecrate the Bayard Chapter, and do the companions the honour to place the Principals in the chairs. He therefore proposed a vote of thanks first to Lord Skelmersdale, Grand H. of England, for so kindly presiding over the Grand Chapter that day. To save time he would also ask the companions to accord another vote of thanks to M.E. Comps. Col. Burdett, to Lieut. General Brownrigg, to the Excellent Scribes E. and N., and to the other Grand Officers who had also so kindly assisted in the consecration and installation, more especially he would name Comp. Hervey, G.S.E., who had undertaken at a short notice the installation of J. Comp. F. Richardson, H., seconded the motion, which was then put and carried by acclamation. The passing of the vote having been communicated by the M.E.Z. to Lord Skelmersdale, his Lordship said in his own name, and in the names of those who had been associated with him in the vote, he thanked the companions most heartily for the vote which had been passed, and he was sure he was only echoing their sentiments when he said that he was very much pleased to have consecrated the chapter, and hoped that it would last and go on prospering continually.

The M.E.Z. said he could not that evening appoint all the officers, as some would have to be balloted for; but he begged to propose that Comp. J. C. Ridgway be P.S.; Capt. Gilbert, 1st A.S.; and Capt. Andrews as 2nd A.S. The proposed S.E. was not yet a companion but he would ask Comp. F. Compton to take that office pro tem. Comp. Bristow be proposed as S.N.; and the Chevalier Habicht as Treasurer, and Comp. Austin as Janitor. The next duty was the election of honorary members, and he proposed the names of Lord Skelmersdale, Col. Burdett, General Brownrigg, John Hervey, Capt. Philips, J. M. P. Montagu, H. D. Sandeman, Major-Gen. Clerk, Capt. Dadson, Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke, and Peter de L. Long, to be honorary members of the chapter, in commemoration of the assistance they had given that day, and also for signing the petition for a charter.

Comp. Frank Richardson also seconded this motion, which was likewise put and carried unanimously. A long list of joining members (15) was then proposed, and a numerous body of brethren (17) for exaltation. A committee was appointed to frame the bye-laws, and the alms bag was thereupon passed round the chapter by the Rev. Ambrose Hall, and realised £2 7s.

The M.E.Z. said there was yet one other duty they had to perform. There was one to whom personally—and he was sure all the other companions as well—he felt under such deep obligation, viz., Col. Shadwell Clerke, who had performed that evening the duties of D.C., and without whose assistance the ceremony could not have gone off so well. Comp. Frank Richardson seconded the motion, which being carried, another vote of thanks was passed to Comp. C. E. Willing for the very great service and assistance he had rendered by performing on the organ. A vote of thanks was also passed to the companion visitors, to whom the M.E.Z. wished a hearty welcome, hoping that he would often see them at the meetings of the chapter.

Letters were read from Ex. Comp. Lord de Tabley, G.J., who regretted that his absence from England prevented his attendance at the consecration, and from Comp. Col. Hutton Gregory, regretting that absence from London would prevent his attendance.

Chapter was then closed, and the companions adjourned to the Grosvenor Gallery, New Bond-street, where an elegant banquet was served by the manager, F. C. Michels. After banquet the customary toasts were proposed. "The Queen and Royal Arch Masonry," and "The Prince of Wales, the Grand Z.," having been proposed and honoured, the M.E.Z. proposed "Lord Carnarvon, Pro G.Z., Lord Skelmersdale, Grand H., and Lord de Tabley, Grand J."

In doing so he said he should especially couple with this toast the name of Lord Skelmersdale, who had so kindly come among the companions that evening to consecrate the Bayard Chapter, and had honoured them with his presence at the banquet table. When they remembered the great Masonic claims there were upon his lordship's time as Provincial Grand Master and Superintendent of West Lancashire, the most numerous province in England, where there were eighty lodges, and in addition to this office holding that of Deputy Grand Master of England, Grand H. of the Royal Arch, besides occupying several other positions in different degrees and Orders which he could not name then, his time was pretty fully taken up. The companions would therefore the more appreciate his kindness and goodness in attending the Bayard Chapter; and they esteemed it a very great honour. For this honour he (the M.E.Z.) returned Lord Skelmersdale his hearty personal thanks; and he esteemed it the greatest honour he could have that he had been invested as Z. of the Bayard Chapter by him. It was not only his kindness in coming among the companions at all times he could that draw the companions towards his lordship, but his kind manner, his true Masonic feeling, must always arouse in their hearts sentiments of esteem. (Hear, hear.)

Lord Skelmersdale, who on rising to reply was received with enthusiastic cheers, said it was most flattering to him to hear his health—for he must really put himself first just for the present—so kindly proposed by the M.E.Z. and so well received by all the companions. He only regretted that Lord Carnarvon had not been present to fulfil the duties of consecrating and installing at the Bayard Chapter. If he had been present no one would have been more gratified than he to see the great success that had attended the Bayard Lodge, which had resulted in the establishment of the Bayard Chapter. Lord de Tabley was abroad at present or he would have been there. The companions did not see much of his lordship in London, but there did not exist a more earnest Mason than he was in Cheshire. For his (Lord Skelmersdale's) own part it gave him infinite pleasure to be present at the consecration of the Bayard Chapter. It was not often that he was able to attend meetings of private lodges or private chapters, but he did so whenever he possibly could. If he might call them so, his public duties took up a certain amount of his time; but whenever it was in his power to meet a private lodge or chapter, or to be of any use to them, he was too happy to be called upon. Masonry had made such enormous strides during the past few years that it was no sinecure for a public man to hold high office in the Order. A man was wanted not one day only, but every day, and to do Masonry thoroughly you ought to do it five times a day, and if there were any shortcomings found either in Lord Carnarvon or any of the other Grand Officers it was not from want of goodwill to the Craft but from want of time. His lordship concluded by saying that he only hoped that the Bayard Chapter might have a long lease, a very successful career, and might redound to the honour of Masonry.

The M.E.Z. said the next toast he had to give was that of "The Present and Past Grand Officers of the Holy Royal Arch." That evening they were favoured with the presence of several of those companions. The Grand Superintendents of Middlesex, Surrey, and Dorsetshire were present, and the Past Superintendents of China and Bengal, and also with that of several of the working Grand Officers for the year; added to whom were some of the Past Grand Officers, as well as the Grand Scribe E., the Scribe N., the Principal Sojourner, and Comp. Monckton, and also Grand Registrar. These companions were a host in themselves—the Order would not be able to go on without the able exertions of Grand Registrar, to whom the Bayard Chapter was particularly indebted, for he strongly supported its cause in Grand Chapter. The companions would not consider it necessary that he should take up their time by entering into the merits of all the companions, and he should therefore simply propose "The Health of the Present and Past G. Officers," and with the former he should couple the name of Colonel Burdett, and with the latter that of Comp. J. B. Monckton.

Col. Burdett, replying for the Present Grand Officers, said there were several of these companions present who had for a long time been exercising the authority which had been delegated to them by the Grand Z.; and he trusted that they had exercised that authority to their utmost, at least he was confident they had to the best of their ability, and he hoped to the satisfaction of the companions. They trusted to do so for a long time to come, and if they were supported in the same kind way by the Order generally as they had been hitherto, their duties would be performed with happiness and pleasure, and with a great deal of benefit to their respective provinces. The Grand Officers exerted themselves to the best for the purpose of producing good to the whole body of Royal Arch Masons; and if they followed the excellent example of Lord Skelmersdale (and it was reasonable to suppose they would follow his lead), they would be approved by the provinces in general.

Comp. J. B. Monckton, replying for the Past Grand Officers, said: In the happy and prosperous present you will like to hear as little as possible on the gloomy and melancholy past. (Laughter.) Therefore, I thank you sincerely and sit down.

Lord Skelmersdale proposed "The Three Principals." He congratulated those companions who belonged to the new chapter on having selected three Principals so thoroughly worthy of the places they respectively occupied. He also congratulated the Craft and Royal Arch Masonry that men of the position of the three Principals were to be found to take the part they did in this particular degree, working it out, and teaching others to work it out. He could only repeat what he said before, and wish the utmost prosperity to this new chapter, and in doing so he was sure the companions would all heartily join with him in drinking the toast he now proposed.

Col. Somerville Burney in replying, said, after again thanking Lord Skelmersdale for the high honour he had conferred on the chapter by attending, that he hoped that the companions would prove themselves worthy of that high honour by so working the Bayard Royal Arch Chapter that it might not reflect any discredit on the Order, or on those who attended that day and assisted in consecrating it.

Comp. Frank Richardson said that he had given up all hopes of advancement in Freemasonry; but when such a chapter was proposed as one to be attached to so eminent a lodge as the Bayard Lodge, he could not refuse to join it. He should be glad to see the chapter as prosperous in the future as the lodge had been in the past, and he should throw himself on the mercy of the companions to overlook any shortcomings of his during his year of office.

Capt. Lerson said that as the subject of promotion had been mentioned, if he were asked if he wanted promotion, the less he said upon the subject the better.

Col. Burney next proposed "The Visitors." There were, he said, two grand landmarks in Freemasonry, charity and hospitality, and he hoped the Bayard Chapter would exercise them. The members and visitors had done the first in the chapter, and he now asked the companions of the chapter to prove the second by drinking very good health and prosperity to those companions who had favoured the chapter with their presence. In starting a new chapter it was always done under great difficulties, because those who signed the petition were seldom those who became members of the chapter; but when he looked round the table and saw the visitors who were then present, when he saw the companions holding high and distinguished positions in the Order, when he saw one (Capt. Philips) for whom they had so high a regard as the godfather of the lodge and therefore of the chapter, he must say he felt very much gratified. He wished all the visitors good health, everything they could desire, and such promotion in Masonry as they all deserved. He would join this toast with the name of one whom they were all very much pleased to see, the Grand Registrar. He would transgress from the ordinary routine and say a few words with regard to the formation of this chapter. The lodge having been a success, and there being a great number of candidates for the Royal Arch, it was considered desirable to apply for a charter. They were not aware at the time that it was contrary to the regulations to grant a charter for a chapter to be attached to a lodge which had not been three years in existence, for it was not laid down in the Regulations of the Arch, but was merely a custom. He only entered into this to explain why the companions tried to get a charter before they were entitled to it. On their application they received the greatest kindness from the Committee but were told by the Committee that they were not able to recommend the petition. He was sure the greater number of the members of the committee were desirous of doing so had it been in their power. The matter came before Grand Chapter, and he well remembered the kind manner in which the Grand Registrar of the Order spoke in favour of the charter being granted, and the compliments that were passed on the Bayard Lodge by those who spoke on that occasion. It was for these reasons he thought the companions could not do less now than join Grand Registrar's name with the toast of "The Visitors." But in doing this it must not be thought by the other visitors that they were being forgotten. The chapter was glad to see them all, and the oftener it saw them the better it would be pleased.

Comp. McIntyre responded. He said: M.E., on the part of the companions who are your guests on this occasion I beg to return my sincerest thanks for the very great kindness you have shown in inviting us, and in giving us this most bounteous and hospitable reception. You have been pleased to speak of myself as having had something to do with the granting of the charter of the Bayard Chapter. I must beg to decline having anything said on my behalf as to the charter being granted. In the Grand Chapter I have to do my duty as Grand Registrar, and to state my views of the laws of the Order to which we all belong, and I always take care that in stating those views there shall be nothing said against a lodge or a chapter that is striving to come into existence; but the great principle of our Order is to accept and not to reject, and upon the occasion when the question came before Grand Chapter I was there in my place, as I ought always to be—but as I am afraid I not always am, because it does happen sometimes that I am prevented. The question that came before Grand Chapter was this—ay or no?—Could this charter be granted according to the rules and regulations of our Order? It seemed to me to be clear and without doubt that we had the power to grant the charter. It seemed more than clear that by the wonderful power that the Bayard Lodge had shown, and by the great sense that we had that new members were coming into the Order, we ought to grant it, and that it was within our power to do it. There is not a doubt in my mind that we had the power, and I stated so in the Grand Chapter; and if I had not been there I am quite sure that there were those members of Grand Chapter there that were well versed in the usages, and would have taken care that this charter should be granted. Bear this in mind. The question was, could a lodge that had been in existence scarcely two years have a charter granted to it? A recommendation once came up from the Committee—it was merely a recommendation, that was all, because it was in the discretion of Grand Chapter of England—that they should not grant a charter unless a lodge had been in existence three years. What did it mean? Why, that if a lodge were strong enough to have a charter granted to it in less than three years, by all means grant it, that the whole

Order of Freemasonry should be carried out, and that the degree should be conferred upon all Master Masons who were qualified to receive it. That appeared to me to be the principle on which we ought to act. I ventured on that occasion to recommend it to Grand Chapter. Grand Chapter was pleased to accede to that recommendation, and that, and that only, have I done. And what is it? A man in the performance of his public duty states his own opinion. The M.E. said he thanked me for that. I am afraid it would be a very bad precedent to set for public men. Public men ought always to do their duty. They ought never to expect people would say "We thank you for doing it." The best thanks they have is the knowledge that they do what is right. That is what I have tried to carry in view during the many years I have held a responsible position in the Order; but I do thank the M.E. of this chapter for his calling the subject to the attention of the chapter. I thank him in my name, and in that of the visitors, and I assure him we wish God speed to the chapter, that it may become as successful as the lodge, and that it may become the most important of all chapters.

"The Health of the Officers" was then given, for which Chevalier Habicht replied, and the Janitor's toast concluded the evening.

ST. HELEN'S, BISHOPSGATE.

On Monday last an interesting ceremony was held in the ancient church of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, the Lord Mayor attending in state, at the request of the vicar and churchwardens, to unveil a new stained glass window in commemoration of the many civic and other worthies buried in the church. With the Lord Mayor were the Lady Mayoress and the Misses Owden, the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, Bishop Claughton, Archdeacon of London; the Master of the Haberdashers' Company, Alderman Sir Charles Whetham, the Rector of Bishopsgate, and many of the Common Council and leading inhabitants of the ward. St. Helen's is said to be the most ancient church in the city, and its associations are replete with interest. The original church of St. Helen in London was dedicated to the Empress Helena, and is said to have been erected to her memory by her son Constantine. In 1010 the remains of Edmund, king and martyr, were deposited in the church for three years. In 1212, in immediate connection with the church, a Priory of Black Nuns of the Benedictine Order was founded, and it flourished there until its suppression at the Reformation. The north aisle of St. Helen's Church was the nuns' choir, and was divided by a screen from the part appropriated to the parish. After the suppression King Henry VIII. gave the site of the Priory and its church to the parish. St. Helen's is a Gothic structure of the lighter kind, consisting of a plain body with large windows. The steeple was not built until 1669, and is wrought with rustic at the corners, with a turret and dome. The nun's hall was, after the dissolution, purchased by the Leathersellers' Company. To the south of the nave of the church are a transept and two chapels—one dedicated to the Holy Ghost and the other to the Virgin. The earliest portions of the church now remaining are of the 13th century. Within the Lady Chapel, upon a bracket, there is a small sitting statue, evidently a Roman sybil, although it is said in Dr. Cox's "Annals of St. Helen's" to represent the patron saint of the church. It is of rare alabaster and is of great value. The church contains specimens of almost every variety of the pointed style, from the thirteenth century downwards. The edifice was thoroughly restored in 1865. Among the worthies buried in St. Helen's are Sir Thomas Gresham; Sir John Crosby, Alderman of London and sometime Mayor of Calais; Sir Julius Caesar, Chancellor of the Exchequer and Master of the Rolls in the reign of King James I.; Sir Andrew Judd, Lord Mayor, 1551; Francis Bancroft, founder of Bancroft's Hospital; Albericus Gentilis, the jurist, and many more. The ceremony having been commenced with prayer, Bro. the Rev. Dr. Cox, the vicar of St. Helen's and chaplain to the Lord Mayor, welcomed his Lordship and the other civic authorities to the church for the purpose of inaugurating another memorial of those who had taken, in former times, so conspicuous a place in England's history. He gave an interesting résumé of the leading incidents in the history of the worthies portrayed in the window, all of whom were connected with St. Helen's—viz., Sir John Crosby, Sir Andrew Judd, Martin Bond, a former merchant prince; Sir William Pickering, an eminent ambassador; Sir Thomas Gresham, Sir John Spencer, Sir Julius Caesar, Albericus Gentilis, Robert Hooke, the discoverer of the chronometer and air-pump, and Francis Bancroft. To meet the cost of the window, which was executed by Mr. A. Gibbs, the Grocers', Skinners', Haberdashers', Drapers', and Mercers' Companies, the Marquis of Northampton, and Miss Cottrell Dormer had generously contributed, but there was still a deficiency of about £250. The Lord Mayor unveiled the window, and in a brief speech expressed the pleasure it gave him, especially as alderman of the ward of Bishopsgate, to take part in further beautifying a church of which all citizens were so justly proud. He congratulated his chaplain, Dr. Cox, on the success of his labours, and promised his aid in removing the debt in connection with the work. Bishop Claughton proposed a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, which was carried, and the ceremony was closed with the Benediction. We wish our worthy brother all success in his efforts.

COLE'S LIST OF LODGES, 1763.

I have carefully perused the notes by Bro. Lamony, P.M. 1002, &c., as to Cole's List of Lodges, 1763, in Cumberland and Westmorland, and fraternally place the following at his disposal, premising that without more material than he appears to have at present he will not be able to fully and accurately write even a "little brochure on the history of the Craft and Royal Arch Masonry" in those two counties. It is, in fact, impossible to adequately deal with any such matters, without the authorised list of lodges of the two Grand Lodges up to the Union of Dec., 1813. But I will deal with Bro. Lamony's letter, and hope the information will prove useful to him.

1. "No. 120, Whitehaven," of 1740, is (as he says), extinct.

2. "No. 261, Whitehaven," he tells us, "celebrated its centenary in 1861." I beg to doubt this, though of course Bro. Lamony ought to know better than the writer. At all events, if the present No. 119, Whitehaven, celebrated a centenary in 1861, they did so in error, for their lodge belonged to the "Athol" Grand Lodge or "Ancients," and its warrant is dated May 18th, 1768. It was No. 157 under the "Ancients," according to my list of the "Union" lodges, No. 190 at the "Union," No. 138 from A.D. 1832, and No. 119 from A.D. 1863. No. 261, referred to by Bro. Lamony as being still in existence of date 1761, was struck off in 1786 for not conforming to the laws of the regular Grand Lodge; No. 143 on the "Firing glasses" must refer to some other lodge I should say.

3. No. 129, "Union," Kendal, is an old centenary lodge, having applied for a warrant to wear a "Centenary jewel" before the new regulations were made. It dates from 1764, as Bro. Lamony mentions, according to Cole of 1763.

4. Bro. D. Murray Lyon's reference to the lodge at Carlisle is well worth preservation in any history of Freemasonry in Cumberland.

5. There was a lodge warranted at Workington in 1775, No. 384, which became 315 A.D. 1792, and 398 at the "Union," soon after which it was struck off the roll. Its name was the "Sun and Sector" Lodge.

6. There seems also to have been another at Workington, No. 289, which was 232, A.D. 1770, but is absent from a list I have of 1779, as also from one of Cole's of 1777; just kindly sent me by Bro. Officer, P.M. No. 1, P.S.G.D. of Scotland.

7. The lodge Bro. Lamony desires to know about is still in existence. Chartered as the Lodge of Honour and Perseverance, at the "Ship," Cockermouth, in 1788 (was No. 436 from A.D. 1792), and was soon afterwards removed to the "Black Bull," Batley, Yorkshire, and was numbered 500 at the "Union." It was again changed in 1832 to 330, and from 1863 it has been registered as No. 264.

Bro. W. Clarke, P.M. 285, P. Prov. G.D.C., has again forwarded me the result of his valuable researches as to old lodges, which I shall shortly announce, and draw my attention to "Masonic Miscellanies" of 1797, which mentions six lodges in the counties named. I have a similar list.

MASSONIC BALL AT LIVERPOOL.

The third annual ball in connection with the Lodge of Israel, No. 1502, which meets at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, took place on Wednesday evening, the 13th inst., at the Adelphi Hotel. The well-known enthusiasm of the brethren connected with this section of the Masonic fraternity in West Lancashire was again conspicuously displayed, resulting in a festive gathering which was as enjoyable as it was successful. As on previous occasions, the proceeds of the ball will be devoted to the fund of benevolence, established as a part of the charitable working of the lodge, which has now no less a sum than £150 at its disposal. The arrangements for the third annual assembly were admirably carried out by the committee, which comprised Bros. A. Jones, W.M.; M. Hart, I.P.M.; A. J. Henochsberg, P.M.; R. Robinson, P.M.; S. Schonstadt, S.W.; S. Wareing, S.D.; S. J. Henochsberg, J.D.; H. F. Wright, S.S.; and J. Sabar, J.S. There were about 160 ladies and brethren present, the latter wearing the clothing, jewels, and insignia of the various Masonic Orders to which they belonged; and a large number of distinguished visiting brethren from other lodges also gave their countenance to the praiseworthy effort. The duties of Masters of Ceremonies were efficiently performed by Bros. A. Hart, W.M. 724, and S. J. Henochsberg, 1502. Supper and refreshments were of the most recherche character, the purveying being superintended by Bro. Ludlow, No. 216, manager of the Adelphi Hotel.

A report of the meeting of the Eleanor Lodge of Instruction held at the Angel Hotel, Edmonton, on Wednesday, will appear in our next.

BRO. CAPTAIN BOYTON AT LISBON.—Captain Boyton arrived on Sunday, 17th inst., at four o'clock. He was enthusiastically greeted. A large number of boats, with music and flags and many thousand people, lined the river's bank. He has been everywhere well received through Portugal.

Bro. Pullen, P.M. 144, has been presented with a handsome silver loving cup by the members of the Manchester Lodge of Instruction, in token of their appreciation of his valuable services as Secretary for many years. The presentation took place at the anniversary Banquet of the above named lodge, which was held on Friday week, the 15th inst.

Masonic and General Tidings.

CONFIDENCE LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 193.—The Fifteen Sections will be worked in this favourite Lodge of Instruction at the Railway Tavern, London-street, Fenchurch-street, City, on Wednesday next, the 27th, at 6 p.m. precisely. Bros. J. E. Ives, 781, W.M.; T. J. Barnes, P.M. 933, and 554, S.W.; J. Andrews, J.D. 1227, J.W.; E. Gottheil, (Preceptor), I.P.M. The Sections will be worked as follows: 1st Lecture: Bros. Biddle, Hallam, Scheirboom, Ellis, C. H. Webb, Andrews, and W. Hogg. 2nd Lecture: Bros. W. J. Rawley, W. Mucto, Ould, T. J. Barnes, and J. Shepherd. 3rd Lecture: Bros. M. Clegg, J. Taylor, and Myers.

Bro. John Pearson, one of the Liverpool Town Councillors, was last Saturday unanimously elected an Alderman of the Seaport Borough. Bro. Pearson has occupied the proud positions of Mayor of Liverpool and High Sheriff of the county, and is held in great esteem by all sections of political parties.

We are informed that it is the intention of the brethren of the lodges in Canterbury, namely, United Industrious, No. 31, Saint Augustine, No. 972, and Royal Military, No. 1449, to invite the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent to hold their Annual Festival for 1878, in that fine old city during the ensuing summer. Twenty-one years have elapsed since P.G.L. assembled there, and several circumstances combine in making this a most fitting occasion for the visit to be repeated. The three lodges, amongst whom a most fraternal feeling exists, will send a joint invite, and it is intended that a right royal reception shall be accorded to the Craft. There is no place in Kent in which such conveniences exist, and which has such accommodation for large gatherings. Moreover, Canterbury is so easy of access from all parts of the county that in the event of the invitation being accepted the muster of brethren will be much larger than has ever taken place before in the Province of Kent.

The Worshipful Company of Leathersellers have given a donation of £10 10s. in aid of the funds of the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum.

The Queen accompanied by Princess Beatrice, left Osborne at eleven a.m. on Tuesday, and arrived at Windsor Castle at a quarter-past two p.m. Her Majesty crossed over to Gosport in her yacht the Alberta, Captain Thomson. The suite in attendance consisted of the Countess of Caledon, the Hon. Evelyn Paget, Mdlic. Norcle, Lieutenant-General H. Ponsonby, Colonel Hon. H. Byng, Colonel G. Maude, C.B., Mr. Sahl, and Dr. Marshall. The same afternoon her Majesty's ship Hector left her moorings in Cowes Roads, the ship being dressed with masthead flags, and moved to Osborne Bay, where she fired a salute in honour of the marriage day of her Majesty's eldest granddaughter, Princess Charlotte of Prussia, and the Hereditary Prince of Saxe-Meiningen. In the evening the ship was illuminated, and a display of fireworks took place.

Bro. Kuhe commenced his annual musical festival on Tuesday evening at the Dome. Royal Pavilion Brighton by the performance of "Lalla Rookh" and the "May Queen." The vocalists were Mesdames Sherrington, A. Sinclair, and Alliteen, and Messieurs Edward Lloyd and George Fox. Bro. Kuhe conducted the choruses were rendered by the Festival Choir. There was a very crowded room.

The Lords of the Admiralty have awarded a grant of £10 to the Charity Organisation Society, in recognition of the services rendered by the society in making inquiries into cases referred to them during the past year by the Admiralty.

At a meeting of the Birmingham Town Council the Free Libraries committee were empowered to spend £11,000, in addition to the £11,000 recently granted.

The Duke of Abercorn, K.G., had an audience of the Queen on Wednesday, and kissed hands on his appointment as Special Envoy to invest the King of Italy with the Order of the Garter.

LIVERPOOL AND THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—The Liverpool Town Council recently agreed to allow pictures by Sir John Gilbert and Mr. A. D. Fripp, belonging to them, to be sent to the Paris Exhibition, and at the meeting of the Council on Saturday a letter was read from the Prince of Wales, the President of the English Commission, asking for the loan of "Serf Emancipation," by Mr. E. Armitage, who has expressed his desire that it should appear in the Exhibition. The request of his Royal Highness was unanimously acceded to.

The Prince of Wales has sold his schooner yacht Hildgarde, which has won several prizes in the Royal Yacht Squadron matches at Cowes during the last two seasons, to his brother Prince Leopold, who intends to use her for summer cruising.

Bro. H. Gill, of Lodge No. 1086, Liverpool, whose "Fairy Bells" performances are of the most unique and charming character, recently had the honour of being specially invited to play at Lathom House, the Lancashire residence of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M. of England, and R.W.P.G.M. of West Lancashire, who was then entertaining a large and fashionable company. Bro. Gill's enchanting "Fairy Bells" effects gave a much delight to the distinguished circle as they have invariably done in our lodges and elsewhere.

Constitution of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charge, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—AdvT.

Lord Coleridge took his seat on the bench at Guildhall on Wednesday, the first time since the death of Lady Coleridge, and partly heard a case of disputed liability in connection with the payment of a solicitor's bill of costs.

A Grand Masonic Concert will be given in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, on Tuesday evening, April the 9th inst., under the patronage of Bro. Lieut. Col. Le Gendre N. Starkie, R.W., Prov. G. Master of East Lancashire, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers. We hope to furnish our readers with further information in due course.

Bro. the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon presided at the biennial dinner of the National Hospital for Consumption, at Willis's Rooms on Wednesday.

The thousandth representation of Our Boys was given on Tuesday night at the Vaudeville Theatre. The Lord Mayor was present. It was decided that the receipts, which exceeded £300, should be divided between the Royal Theatrical Fund, the Metropolitan Free Hospital, the Great Northern Hospital, and the Charing-Cross Hospital.

BIBLICAL REVISION.—The New Testament Company of Revisers assembled on Tuesday in the ante-room of the Jerusalem Chamber for their seventy-seventh session. The Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol presided. The other members present were the Bishop of Salisbury, the Dean of Lichfield, the Dean of Rochester, the Master of the Temple, Archdeacon Palmer, Archdeacon Lee, Professor Milligan, Professor Newth, Dr. Angus, Dr. Hort, Dr. Scrivener, and Mr. Humphrey. The company proceeded to their second revision of the Second Epistle to Timothy.

OLD BRANDY WITH A NEW BRAND.—It is, perhaps, impossible to overrate the danger of adulterated brandy, for the benefit sought to be derived from it, perhaps even life itself depends upon its purity, and it is used, and often efficacious in its effects, when medicine is of no avail, yet there is nothing which is more often, and we might almost say, more cruelly adulterated than this spirit. As a remedial agent, it is invaluable when good and pure, and to meet the large demand now made for such a spirit Messrs. Smith and Hayles, of Great Tower-street, have introduced to the public under a new brand a splendid old brandy, which they especially import in the wood from the best known firm at Cognac, and label the "No Star." This is guaranteed to be perfectly pure grape spirit, uncoloured and unsweetened, and the very highest testimony is paid to its worth by the reports of well known analytical chemists. To guard against spurious imitations being foisted off upon the public, every bottle of this brandy is branded the "No Star," and is now sold in all parts at a less price than any brandy in the market approaching it in value. This is due to the large sales effected, and to the doing away with the expenses of bottling on the other side, as, under their own superintendence, the proprietors, all the "No Star" brandy is bottled in this country.

The Emperor William directed that, in honour of the presence of the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, all persons invited over whom he has authority should appear in gala dress at the British Embassy ball the same as if attending a ball at Court.

The annual general meeting of the Newspaper Press Fund will be held at 55, Strand, this (Saturday) afternoon, at one o'clock. The Marquis of Salisbury will preside at the annual dinner, at Willis's Rooms, on Saturday, the 19th of May next.

THE BANK RATE.—The directors of the Bank of England met on Thursday, as usual, but made no alteration in the rate of discount.

The statement that Bro. the Earl of Bective had purchased the remainder of the lease of No. 20, Dover-street, is, we are informed, without foundation.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, and attended by the lords and ladies of the Court, is expected to visit the metropolis about the middle of next week. Her Majesty will probably reside at Buckingham Palace two or three days and return at the close of the week to Windsor Castle.

The annual select ball of the New Concord Lodge, No. 813, will take place at the Freemason's Tavern, Great Queen-street, London, on Monday week, the 4th prox., Bro. Adam's celebrated quadrille band will attend, the dancing to commence at 9 o'clock. Tickets and further information may be obtained of the Hon. Sec., Bro. W. H. Main, P.M. 171, Kingsland-road.

The Queen gave her granddaughter, the Princess Charlotte of Prussia, a pair of pearl and diamond earrings, and a dressed trimmed with Honiton lace, besides other presents, among which were stuffs of Scotch and Irish manufacture, and pocket-handkerchiefs embroidered in Ireland.

THE LATE SIR CORDY BURROWS.—A statue of the late Sir John Cordy Burrows, who was three times Mayor of Brighton, was publicly unveiled in that town on Thursday morning, by Mr. Alderman Mayall, the present Mayor. It is the work of Mr. E. B. Stephens, A.R.A.

Bro. His Grace the Duke of Abercorn and the other members of the mission appointed by the Queen to confer the Garter on the King of Italy, left the Charing-cross Station of the South-Eastern Railway, on Thursday morning, by special train at 10.15 for Paris, en route to Italy.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—AdvT.

LODGE OF ANTIQUITY (No. 2).—The monthly meeting of this ancient and distinguished lodge took place at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, the 27th ult. There was a numerous attendance of brethren and visitors. The election of Bro. H.R.H. Prince Leopold was unanimously confirmed as W.M., who would have been present, but had left for the Continent. A letter from his equerry, the Hon. A. Yorke, was read. Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., and P.S. Warden of the lodge, was appointed by H.R.H. as the Deputy Master for the year, and was installed by the Immediate P.M., Bro. Philbrick, in a most strikingly effective manner, so much so as to impress all present, and obtain the emphatic approval of the Grand Secretary. A Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. Philbrick by the newly-installed D.W.M., in appropriate terms, and amid the hearty applause of the lodge. The brethren adjourned to the "festive board" at the conclusion of the business, and enjoyed one of those pleasant and fraternal gatherings of reasonable if abundant hospitality, for which the Lodge of Antiquity has always been famed, under the ever admirable catering of Bro. Colonel Creaton, the permanent adviser of the lodge in matters æsthetical and convivial, and greatly to the praise of Bro. Best. The brethren present passed a most pleasant evening, which was more than once alluded to in some of the admirable speeches which were made. The lodge numbers amongst its officers some most excellent Masons, as Bro. Tomkins, the worthy and kindly Treasurer of the lodge and Grand Treasurer; Bro. E. J. Barron, the indefatigable Secretary; Bro. Hope, M.D., Senior Warden; Bro. Parker Deacon, Junior Warden; Rev. Bro. Duckworth, Chaplain; Bro. Hilary Skinner, Bro. Greatham, Bro. Twynam, Bro. Col. Creaton, and its immediate P.M., Bro. Philbrick. Among the P.M.'s may be mentioned Bro. Col. Stuart, Bro. Wharton Hood, M.D.; Bro. John Sampson Pierce, Bro. W. F. Rac, Bro. Fordati, Bro. G. Scharf, Bro. C. A. Swinburne, Bro. R. A. Holmes, and Bro. Dr. Erasmus Wilson. Among the visitors present were Bro. Hervey, G.S. of England; Bro. Head, P.G.D.; Bro. Percy Leith, Bro. Rev. Dr. Brette, Bro. T. Fenn, P.G.D.; Hopwood, 263; Bro. George Kenning, Bro. Goodden, and many more. The brethren separated at an early hour, greatly gratified with the gathering, and deeply impressed, alike with the "labour and refreshment" of this most ancient and eminent lodge.

BURGOYNE LODGE (No. 902).—The installation meeting of this highly popular lodge—and if popularity can be gauged by extensive and ready acceptance of its hospitalities, the adjective is strictly applicable—was held at Anderton's Hotel on Monday evening last. Following the very commendable custom never departed from of late years in this lodge, the outgoing Master, Bro. H. C. Jefferys, W.M., personally installed his successor, and performed the interesting ceremony in a manner almost faultless. Bro. S. J. Byng, the ci-devant S.W., whose election to the chair at the former meeting had been unanimous, having been thus regularly inducted into the chair of K.S., amid the applause of the select but comparatively numerous Board of I.M.'s who had assembled to do him honour, proceeded on the re-admission of the brethren to appoint and invest his officers as follows: Bros. Pocock, S.W.; Taylor, J.W.; Rogers, Sec.; Wale, S.D.; Gbb, J.D.; Turner, I.G.; Bundy, M.C.; Wilkins, S.; and Grant, Tyler. Bro. S. Poynter, P.M., who had been for the twelfth or thirteenth time unanimously elected Treasurer of the lodge at the former meeting, was likewise invested with the collar and jewel of that office. Judging from the applause which greeted each of these brethren as he approached the pedestal, these appointments would appear to be highly popular in the lodge, and to reflect great credit on the discrimination of the new W.M., whose credit for good working is very wide-spread, and who would appear to be also highly esteemed in the lodge of which he is an elective and not an initiated member being the second joining member who has attained the honour of the chair in the Burgoyne. The other was P.M. Field, and it speaks volumes for the fair appreciation of merit among these brethren, as likewise for the popularity of the individual himself, that this joining member achieved the exceptional honour of being elected W.M. twice consecutively. The lodge having been closed, the brethren proceeded to banquet, which was numerously attended, no less than twenty-four visitors being present. Of such a number, all of considerable distinction in the Craft, it is impossible to particularize more than a few of the most eminent, among whom we noticed the W. Bros. Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.J.D.; Augs. J. Fabian, P.M., Portsmouth, 487; P.P.S.G.W. Hants; Thomas E. Taylor, P.M. Temple, 101; John Walker, I.P.M. Egyptian, 27; W. F. Wuest, P.M., and J. Pizer, P.M. Prince Frederick William, 753; Fredk. Dunn, P.M.; and Joseph Pigot, P.M. New Concord Lodge, 813; and several other bright and shining lights in the Craft. The new W.M. presided with the most polished urbanity, and gave the various toasts, which were heartily honoured, with considerable oratorical ability. The toast of the Grand Officers was responded to by the W. Bro. Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.J.D., who expatiated upon the importance of brethren taking a warm interest in the general politics of the Craft by following the proceedings of Grand Lodge and of the various boards, and alluded to one or two questions of interest now under discussion by, or soon likely to be brought under the notice of, the legislative assembly of the Order. The toast of "The Visitors" was numerously, and in warm terms of appreciation responded to. In replying to the toast of "The Treasurer," given by the W.M. in very affectionate and flattering terms, Bro. S. Poynter, P.M. and Treasurer, said he ventured to follow, and if possible, to emphasise the remarks of their illustrious visitor, Bro. Hogg, and to draw the attention of the brethren to the advisability—he might say, the duty—of each member of the lodge sometimes to extend his attention upward from their merely local concerns to the graver matters that should engage the interest of the Craft at large. Their own immediate business should of course be attended to, but the great and burning questions of the entire Order should be examined also by every individual brother. "This should ye do, and not leave the other undone." Parochial politics were indispensably engrossing, but he (the speaker) ventured to think that imperial legislation was not less important. The Treasurer's remarks appeared, by the applause which greeted him as he resumed his seat, to meet with the approbation of the lodge. "The Health of the Officers" was drunk with much cordiality, and the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings of a very enjoyable evening, the pleasures of which had been much enhanced by some admirable vocalisation, more especially contributed by Bros. Rogers, Gabb, and Bundy, and Bro. Chappell, a visitor, to a timely conclusion.

WANDSWORTH LODGE (No. 1044).—A meeting of this lodge, which is now the largest in the district, was held at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth, on the 20th ult. Bro. H. R. Jones, the W.M., presided. Amongst those present were Bros. W. A. Morgan, S.W.; A. N. Newens, J.W.; W. J. Huntley, J.D.; J. J. Holland, I.G.; Wilson, Treas.; J. Frost, Sec.; J. G. Carter, P.M.; J. G. Kewney, P.M.; E. H. Boddy, P.M.; F. Reed, S. C. Landon, R. H. Walker, H. J. Newens, G. W. Smith, J. W. Haines, G. Clark, H. Price, G. Fortescue, and others. The ballot was taken, and proved unanimous for Mr. J. W. Marshall, of Balham. Bro. H. J. Newens was passed to the Second Degree. Mr. Percy V. Denham, proposed by Bro. A. A. Denham, and seconded by Bro. J. J. Holland, was then ably initiated by the W.M. Bro. W. Price was raised to the degree of W.M. The motion by Bro. P. Cooke, P.M., to alter bye-law No. 2, was withdrawn, (Bro. Cooke being unavoidably absent. After some formal business was transacted, the members adjourned for refreshment.

PECKHAM LODGE (No. 1475).—The installation meeting of this young and prosperous lodge was held on Thursday, the 21st ult., at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell. The W.M., Bro. George Duck, opened the lodge at 4.30, and having disposed of the usual business, at once proceeded to instal Bro. Thomas Stephens, the S.W., who had been unanimously elected, into the chair of K.S., in the presence of an unusually large Board of Installed Masters. The W.M. having been duly proclaimed and saluted, appointed and invested the officers for the year: Bros. J. W. Jackson, S.W.; H. Vickery, J.W.; W. G. Warren, P.M., Treas.; W. E. Gompertz, P.M., Secretary; E. A. Whuby, S.D.; D. Channon, J.D.; G. Harrison, Tyler; D. Rose, P.M., D.C.; A. Stribling, O.; A. H. Watkins, P.M., W.S. The newly-installed Master at once gave proof of his qualification for the high position to which he had been called by initiating three gentlemen into the light of Freemasonry, in a manner which called forth expressions of the highest approval from all present. It is but fair to say that the credit of the very perfect working of of this lodge is due to Bro. Rose, the Preceptor of the instruction lodge, who had spared neither time or pains in perfecting the several officers for their respective duties, specially the I.P.M., Bro. Duck, who rendered the installation ceremony in a most perfect and faultless manner. Our brethren in the South-Eastern district may be glad to know that the Peckham Lodge of Instruction meets on Wednesday evenings at the Maismore Arms Tavern, Peckham Park-road. The business of the lodge having been disposed of, the brethren adjourned to the large hall to a well served banquet, which perhaps no one knows better how to appreciate than do Masons. The usual loyal Masonic and complimentary toasts were given in well-chosen words, and duly responded to; the W.M. then presented a handsome ten-guinea P.M. jewel to the I.P.M., Bro. George Duck, as a mark of the brethren's appreciation of the able manner in which he had discharged the duties of the chair. Bro. Duck expressed his grateful acknowledgement of the efficient and harmonious way the officers and brethren had worked with him during his year of office. The W.M. in proposing "The Health of the Visitors," (over thirty of whom were present), said it was a great pleasure to see so many, as it shewed the estimation in which the Peckham Lodge was held for its hospitality and cordial reception of visitors, but notwithstanding that they were famed for good banquets, yet he was happy to say, besides cultivating all the enjoyments derived from social intercourse and festivities, they had not neglected the higher duties of Masonry, and that in the four years the lodge had been established, they had sent up three Stewards, and at the last festival of the Benevolent Institution the list from the Peckham Lodge was the third highest of all the London lodges. Bro. John E. Grotcott, P.M. 869, P.G.S.W. of Hertfordshire, and Bro. James Garner, W.M. of the Rose Lodge, responded, both expressing the great pleasure they had experienced in witnessing the admirable manner the whole of the business of the lodge had been conducted, and to hear the rising prosperous condition the lodge had attained. Other complimentary toasts followed, interspersed with some capital music and singing contributed by some of the members whose vocal and instrumental talents at all times largely contributed to the enjoyment of the brethren. Bro. Past Master Dalby, in the course of his remarks in response to the toast of the Past Masters, made an earnest appeal to the brethren and visitors present for their support to secure the election of one of the children of Bro. Tracey, (who had died since the last regular meeting), who is a candidate for the Boy's School. Amongst the visitors were Bros. S. W. Wagstaff, P.M. and Z. of 1216; J. T. Neilson, P.M. 28; G. T. Bickerton, S.W. 1329; H. Keeble, W.M. 1559; W. Thue, J.W. 1622; J. Garner, W.M. 1622; F. Binland, P.M. 3; A. Alworth, P.M. 1261; W. H. Lee P.M. 975; J. Pearne, P.M. 1056; H. W. Gompertz, S.W. 1364; R. Kemin, P.M. 1507; W. H. Barber, Sec. 1201; W. Cowley, 1554; W. Choat, 1201; H. Smith, 205; A. Gaink, 1056; J. E. Lloyd, 28; E. Tholander, 8; S. E. Blidberg, 2; E. Taylor, 227; J. Rush, 1201; C. B. Cheese, J.D. 869; W. Hamlyn, 1622; R. Voisey, S.D. 1641; S. H. Goldsmidt, 1329; Robert Bruce, P.M. 869, P.G.S.D. Herts; J. E. Smith, 185; H. Appleby, 174; J. Mabey, 869; and J. Oliver, P.M. 1539.

TEMPLE BAR LODGE (No. 1728).—This flourishing new lodge that was only consecrated about two months ago, held its regular meeting on Thursday evening, the 21st ult., at the "London," Fleet-street, with a long agenda of business to be disposed of, consisting of four passings, four initiations, and the admission of two joining members. At the formation of this lodge it was distinctly understood that, to avoid an evil which often arises in large assemblies, it should be limited to 50 members, and if it should go on at the rate at which it has at present proceeded, the required number will be soon obtained, and as the W. Master expressed himself in the course of the evening, "the perfect arch will be completed. Bro. John Dixon, W.M., was in his place at the appointed time, and all his officers with one exception (Bro. Staley), who was on his way from Germany and arrived during the evening, were present at the opening of the lodge. The officers are Bro. C. Butcher, S.W.; T. W. C. Bush, J.W.; G. Adamson (a veteran of the Order), Treasurer; Nelson Reed, W.M. 1671, Secretary; A. B. Staley, S.D.; K. Harris, J.D.; D. McNiven, I.G.; B. Buckworth, D.C.; J. Kimpton, W.S. The following visitors were present; Bros. E. G. Webster, 72; Boyton, 72; T. Morgan, 1572; H. Thompson, 1426 and P.M. of 177 and 1158 (Freemason); Morden, 1671; Coombes, 1185; and Barton, 15. The lodge having been opened and the minutes read, Bros. Becknell, Rayner, Kimpton, and Rexworthy were questioned as to the progress they had made in the early stage of the Order, and their answers being deemed satisfactory, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and they were each most impressively admitted to that advanced degree, the whole of the ceremony being rendered in a very perfect manner. Favourable ballots having taken place, the lodge was lowered to the First Degree, when Mr. Patrick Lehany, Mr. William James Charles, Mr. Charles Arthur Mackrell, and Mr. Edwin Nathaniel Carter were separately introduced and initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry, the ceremony in each case being gone through in a most careful and painstaking manner, and each of the initiates evidently felt deeply impressed with the important step he had taken. Before the closing of the lodge a most interesting episode occurred in its proceedings. It has already been announced that the Temple Bar Lodge was established in something of a memorial character, having its first meeting on the very day the old arch was finally removed, and this occurrence was most ably desecrated upon by Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, who performed the duty of Chaplain on that occasion. To give something like perpetuity to this event, the W. Master had communicated with the City authorities, and the result was an announcement from him that the City Lands Committee had kindly sent to the lodge two pieces of stone forming part of the old Bar, to be used for the rough and perfect ashlar, and additional pieces to be presented to every one of the founders of the lodge. To each of the ashlar are affixed silver plates, suitably engraved, recording the gift and the place from which the stone was taken. The brethren accepted the gifts with great satisfaction, and they promised to carefully preserve them. There being no further business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned after their labour for refreshment. The cloth having been cleared and the usual preliminary toasts given, the W. Master said he had a most important toast and one most pleasing to every W. Master, as it was that of "The Initiates." He had that evening the pleasure to lay four foundation stones, and four last month, and he hoped soon to complete the perfect arch, and see the Temple Bar Lodge prosperous, and make it one of the most important in the City of London. When the last stone of Child's Bank was swept away and no trace of Temple Bar was to be seen, when the place was pointed out to those who might come after them in after ages as the spot where the Bar stood, many no doubt would say how much they wished that they had lived in the time when they might have seen Temple Bar. As Bro. Simpson had said, when the old Temple Bar was removed another structure had taken its place which he trusted would be placed on a sound foundation and be a honour to the builders. He concluded by giving the health of Bros. Lebany, Charles, Mackrell, and Carter, and he hoped that they would for ever feel proud of being the second batch of initiates admitted to the Temple Bar Lodge. Bro. Charles, in responding, said on behalf of his fellow initiates and himself, he begged to thank the W. Master for the very flattering terms in which their health had been proposed, and the brethren for the very cordial manner in which they had received it. He assured them that he felt much impressed with the ceremony he had gone through that night, and he trusted to become a worthy brother of their noble and honourable Craft. He believed that it was a happy thought to start that lodge on the decease of Temple Bar, and he hoped that, phoenix-like, another edifice would rise out its ashes. The other initiates, on being called upon, said each a few words in acknowledgment of the toast. Bro. Reed, the Secretary, rose and said that, as the brethren would see, the W. Master had placed the implement of power in his hands, they would know for what purpose he should use it. He was sure that every member and every visitor must be delighted with the kind and able manner in which the W. Master had fulfilled his duties that evening, and he (Bro. Reed), must say that it had given him great pleasure to witness it. He had been to a great number of lodges, more than the years he had been a Mason, and he must say that the W. Master had acquitted himself in a most creditable manner, and had reflected honour on the Temple Bar Lodge. He wished him God Speed, for he was sure that he had the harmony and prosperity of the lodge at heart, and being the first Master they looked upon him as their father, and he trusted that not only his children but his grandchildren would follow in his footsteps. He therefore asked the brethren to join him in drinking the health of Bro. John Dixon, their first Worshipful Master, a request that was enthusiastically responded to. The W. Master said: Brethren and Bro. Secretary,—I beg to return you my most sincere thanks for the kind manner in which you have spoken of me, and you, brethren, for the hearty and cordial manner in which you have responded to the toast. I am but a young Mason, but as I go along I hope to become more experienced, and I shall be influenced to do so by the very hearty response with which you have received the toast of my health to-night. When I founded this lodge I hoped to make it one of the first in the City of London, but I must say that it has far exceeded my expectations. The fee at present for admission is small, but in a short time it will not be ten guineas, but fifty guineas, and any one will be proud to say that he belonged to it. In conclusion, he thanked the brethren for the honour conferred upon him. The W. Master said the next toast was that of "The Visitors," a toast which was a very pleasant one for him to give, and he trusted that the Temple Bar Lodge would never be without visitors. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Barton, P.M. of the Kent Lodge, No. 15. Bro. Barton, P.M. No. 15, on behalf of the visitors, expressed the gratification they had derived, not only in having witnessed the excellent working of the lodge, but at the splendid hospitality with which they had been entertained. The W. Master next gave "The Press," which he said was the ruling power of Great Britain, and alluded to the multifarious subjects which were from time to time conveyed to them. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Henry Thompson, (Freemason.) Bro. Thompson, in reply, said he was altogether unprepared for his name being singled out to the brethren in a special toast, as he expected to have quietly slid down under that of "The Visitors," but as it was the W. Master's pleasure so far to honour him, as a good Mason he was bound to obey his call. Having alluded to the Temple Bar Lodge, and its future destiny, he reverted to the matter more intimately connected with the toast. The press, he said, was a mighty engine of power, and to its honour that power was rarely exercised but in the advocacy of their liberties, and the welfare and happiness of all mankind. It was also the great channel through which ills were made known, and wants were relieved, and he remarked that but for the harrowing details which were made known by the press of the horrible condition of the poor natives of India the magnificent sum of about half-a-million sterling would never have been raised in this country for their relief. Some other toasts were given, many songs were sung by the brethren, and a truly harmonious meeting was enjoyed by every member of the Temple Bar Lodge.

SOUTHAMPTON.—Southampton Lodge (No. 394).—The Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, Bro. R. J. W. Walker, was last week installed by the W. Bro. W. Hickman, P.M., and Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Hants and the Isle of Wight, who, following the installation, received the cordial thanks and recognition of a good attendance of brethren, the Board of Installed Masters numbering twenty. Following the ceremony, the W. Master invested the following as the officers for the year:—Bros. G. M. Passenger, jun., I.P.M.; W. Bone, S.W.; A. L. McCalmont, (Mayor of Southampton), J.W.; W. Furber, P.M., Treasurer; E. T. Howell, P.M., Sec.; Rev. S. Scott, Chap.; F. H. Candy, S.D.; Newton Jones, J.D.; C. Cox, P.M., I.G.; H. P. Aslatt, D.C.; and Biggs, Tyler. The subsequent banquet was served by Bro. Dartnall, of the High-street, and proved a very agreeable gathering.

FILEY.—Royal Lodge (No. 643).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at Foord's Hotel, Filey, on the 11th ult., for the purpose of installing Bro. J. Johnson Field, 643 and 57. The ceremony was most ably performed by Bro. John Pearson Bell, D.P.G.M. N. and E. Yorks, assisted by Bros. George Hardy, P.M. 250, P.S.P.G.D., and W. H. Porritt, P.M. 734; a Board of 28 Installed Masters being present. There had not been so large and influential a meeting of the brethren since its institution in 1855. At the conclusion of the ceremony the W.M. proceeded to invest his officers for the year as follows: Bros. J. Johnson Field, W.M.; W. Budd, I.P.M.; J. Winfindale, S.W.; J. Varley, J.W.; Rev. R. M. Taylor, P.M., Chaplain; W. G. Long, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., Treas.; W. Fisher, P.M., Sec.; W. Watts, S.D.; V. Fowler, J.D.; C. W. Scrivener, P.M., D.C.; F. M. Herring, P.M., Org.; R. Dobson, P.M., and R. B. Simpson, P.M., Stewards; J. Welborn, I.G.; W. Jefferson, Tyler. At the conclusion of the ceremony, and before closing the lodge, the W.M. returned thanks for his appointment in very eulogistic terms, and the Installing Master gave a most beautiful and luminous address to the brethren, which was most highly and deservedly applauded. The brethren then adjourned to the Spa Saloon, where a most splendid banquet was provided by Bro. Welborn, the worthy host of Foord's Hotel. Between fifty and sixty sat down to the repast, the W.M. occupying the chair. After the cloth was drawn the usual loyal toasts were given, and the W.M. proposed "The Health of the Installing Master," which was most enthusiastically received and responded to in a lengthy speech replete with Masonic feeling and instruction. The Installing Master then gave "The Health of Bro. Field," the newly-installed Master, pointing out to him in the most lucid manner the duties appertaining to his office, and wishing him every success during his occupation of King Solomon's chair. The W.M. returned thanks in a masterly and feeling speech, which was greatly appreciated by all the brethren. Several other toasts were given and ably responded to, and the proceedings were much enlivened by songs from Bros. Winfindale, Watts, Foster, and others, most ably accompanied on the pianoforte by Bro. G. W. Stony, the accomplished Organist of Humber Lodge, 57. The whole of the proceedings were of the most satisfactory nature, and were finally brought to a close amidst peace and harmony. Special trains from both Hull and Scarborough were provided for the accommodation of the brethren from those places, as also for the intervening lodges.

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No. 700).—The winter banquet of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 20th ult., at Bro. Plaisted's fine Hall on Anglesea Hill, Plumstead, and was as usual honoured by a numerous assemblage of both the brethren of the lodge and visitors of the neighbouring lodges. The lodge meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, William-street, and was opened by the W.M., Bro. S. Waters, supported by the following officers:—T. Butt, I.P.M., Past Masters G. Crawford, W. Graham, Bowles, C. Norman, C. Hobson, Treas.; T. Ward, J. Henderson, Sec.; A. W. Woodley, S.W.; J. Warren, J.W.; J. Wilkins, S.D.; E. B. Hobson, J.D.; C. Cooke, Org.; W. McCoy, I.G.; G. Beaver, D.C.; and B. Norman, Tyler. Among the visitors were Bros. C. Coupland, P.M. 913, and P.P.G.J.W. Kent; G. Spinks, W.M. 1536; W. Weston, P.M. 1536; G. Davies, P.M. 13; E. C. Edwards, P.M. 1185; T. D. Hayes, S.W. 913; H. Shaw, J.W. 1536; E. Farwig, S.W. 180; W. Rees, 913; H. J. Ansell, 1305; W. Osborne, 1536; R. J. Colyer, 220; W. Tucker, 913; A. Saunders, 1536; J. Thorne, 1536; W. Hollyman, 1536; E. A. Turbeck, 1448; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason). The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. West, and upon approval, that gentleman was initiated into the Craft, the impressive ceremony being worked by the W.M. and his officers without a single hitch. That being the whole of the business before the lodge, it was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to the above rendezvous, where a superb banquet awaited them; a large staff of waiters, headed by Bro. Moulder and superintended by Bro. Plaisted himself, securing a most efficient service. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were heartily responded to, a verse each of the "National Anthem," and "God bless the Prince of Wales" following the two first. Bro. Butt, in proposing that of "The W.M.," said the duty he had to perform was a most important one. They all knew that meeting was looked upon as the meridian of the year through which their W. Masters had to pass in the principal chair of their lodge, and when he looked back to the half that had already gone, he felt sure they might congratulate the W.M. upon the excellent manner in which he had conducted the business of the lodge during that time. (Cheers.) He, from the past, and they, might rest assured that for the next half their interests were safe in the hands of their excellent Master. He could not help wishing however, that he (the W.M.) might have more work to do during the remainder of his time, they did not want everyone to become members who offered themselves, but those who would be a credit and honour to it. He then concluded by saying that when the W.M. vacated the chair to his successor, he would leave it with the respect and good wishes of all. (Cheers.) The W.M., in reply, tendered his most grateful thanks for the enthusiastic manner in which his health had been received by them. He was glad to know that his endeavours to do his duty had given them satisfaction. He quite endorsed the remarks of P.M. Butt, when he hoped there might be more for him to do in the next half of his year of office, but whatever might come, he should always endeavour to do his duty in such a manner as to at least sustain the high prestige that had been gained for it by the preceding Masters of the Nelson Lodge. (Cheers.) In proposing the next toast, that of "The Visitors," the W.M. spoke of the pleasure it gave them at all times to see the lodge well attended by visitors. They had among them that evening many brethren from their neighbouring lodges, and among them a P.P.G. Officer for Kent, who had held a distinguished position in that province. He had received a letter of regret from Bro. Reed, the W.M. of the "Union Waterloo Lodge," at not being able to attend. To those who were present he asked the brethren of the Nelson Lodge to give a warm reception, and coupled the toast with the names of Bros. Coupland, Spinks, and Hayes. Bro. Coupland expressed the great pleasure it gave him to be the guest of the Nelson Lodge, and more especially on this occasion, when they came to enjoy themselves in the province to which he had the honour to belong. He congratulated the lodge upon the attendance of so many of their Past Masters, who were an honour to the lodge. He regretted that in many lodges as soon as that position had been attained they fell off. He then introduced the cause of the charities, saying charity was the predominant wish of every Mason's heart; it was brought before them every day that their noble Craft was increasing in numbers, and as well he felt sorry to say in the number of those who were seeking aid from its charities, both the Boys' School, the Girls' School, and the old men and women's institutions, and he especially wished to bring before them the claims of those charities. He had become a Steward for the Girls' School Festival, and felt it his duty to bring it before them, and with the more pleasure because he remembered upon one occasion that the Nelson Lodge subscribed liberally when he stood for the Boys' School. He then again expressed how much he had enjoyed himself, and resumed his seat amid applause. Bro. Spinks, W.M. of the United Military Lodge, trusted that all the lodges in the neighbourhood would become as the sister services the Army and Navy, were, firmly united, and Bro. Hayes who responded for the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, regretted the absence of Bro. Butters, the W.M. of that lodge. For himself he thanked them both for their good labour and kind hospitality. He felt gratified at the fraternal feeling that evidently existed between them. Bro. Butt had spoken about the W.M. being now at the meridian of his office, but it struck him that the Nelson Lodge was always at its meridian, both for excellence of working and good feeling. (Cheers.) It had had a good effect upon the working of the Pattison Lodge, and he believed that it had done so in every lodge in the district, and was a pattern for Freemasonry among them all. (Applause.) The toast of "The Past Masters" followed, and after Bro. Butt had expressed his delight at the manner in which the business of the lodge was conducted, and the obedience of the brethren, P.M. Crawford said it had been remarked that the W.M. had not had so much to do this year as many of his predecessors, but of course that was no fault of his. If the brethren would only put their shoulders to the wheel, and while it was no business of theirs to persuade any-one to join the lodge against their own inclination, yet for the honour of the W.M. and the interest of the lodge, it would be well if the brethren could, consistently with their duty, introduce some new members: it would be better than letting the W.M. pass the rest of the year without work. (Hear hear.) P.M. Graham strongly advised the young members if they wished for office to join the lodges of instruction in the district, and P.M. Goddard followed in the same strain. "The Initiate" was then toasted, and then "The Officers," and after the Tyler had done his duty in that respect, "God Save the Queen" concluded a most enjoyable evening.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Royal Sussex Hotel on the 20th ult., when there were present Bros. B. S. Wilmot, W.M.; W. Delves, P.M.; W. B. Bacon, S.W.; A. D. Williams, J.W.; J. F. Bates, Sec.; Hotchkin, S.D.; Spencer, J.D.; Dunkley, I.G.; G. Deadman, Org.; G. Strange, Tyler; J. Burton, E. Elliott, Albert Arnold, Graham, T. Waterman, J. J. Marshall, J. G. Whitehead, M. Williams, Standford, J. K. Pain, and P.M. Elers. The lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bros. A. Arnold and M. Williams being candidates for passing, having answered the usual questions in a satisfactory manner, they were entrusted and withdrew. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and they were duly passed. Bro. E. Elliott being a candidate for raising, was entrusted and retired. The lodge having been opened in the Third Degree, he was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., the work being done in a careful manner. The lodge was resumed to the First Degree. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year was unanimous in favour of Bro. W. B. Bacon, and Elers, P.M., re-elected Treasurer. The elected Auditors in addition to those provided in the bye-laws are Bros. Waterman and Graham. The usual gratuities were given to the Tyler and waiter, also £5 voted out of the lodge funds to a distressed brother. P.M. Elers proposed, and Bro. Graham seconded, "That a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes for the indefatigable services rendered by Bro. Bates as Secretary," which was carried unanimously. Several other propositions having been brought forward, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment.

LANCASTER.—Duke of Lancaster Lodge (No. 1353).—The regular meeting of this lodge took place on the 20th February, when the following members attended: Bros. F. G. Dale, W.M.; R. Wolfenden, S.W.; J. E. Elershaw, J.W.; J. Bell, P.M., Hon. Treas.; J. Acton, P.M., Hon. Sec.; W. Parker, S.D.; H. Hartley, J.D.; R. Cleminson, I.G.; J. E. Oglethorpe, Org.; J. D. Bell, S.S.; C. J. W. Stork, J.S.; James Conton, I.P.M.; J. Barrow, P.M.; W. Heald, P.M.; W. Stewardson, I.P.M. 940; John Simpson, R. Woods, P. Dutton, W. Huntingdon, H. Stizaker, Thos. Dodgson, P.M. 995, 1339, P.P.G. Purst. Cumberland and Westmorland; W. King, E. Huntingdon. F. Amisted, L. S. Lacey, J. Proctor, W. Huthersall, Wm. Bell, G. Bezzard, J. Wilson, J. Hartley, K. A. Stansfield, S.D. 1561; J. Bannister, P.S.D.; W. Scott, W. Drinkall, J. M. Bell, P.S.S.; A.

Beckett, W. Howson, Allison, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. E. Simpson, P.M. 281, S. Hall, 1070, Kirkam; B. Gregson, 281; J. Robinson, 291, Fidelity, Blackburn; R. Stanton, 281. The lodge was opened in due form by the W.M. the minutes of the former meeting, together with the emergency meeting, were read and confirmed. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. King, Huntingdon, and Dutton presented themselves, were questioned, proved efficient, and were individually entrusted and retired, when the lodge was raised to the Third Degree by the W.M., Bro. King was admitted and raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The W.M. resumed the chair, when Bro. Dutton was also raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. Bro. Dodgson again took the chair and presented the working tools, he also imparted the historical lecture of this degree in a most efficient manner. The lodge was now resumed to the First Degree, when Bro. Howson was admitted, questioned, entrusted, and retired. The lodge was advanced to the Second Degree, when Bro. Howson was admitted, and passed as F.C. The lecture on the tracing board of this degree was also rendered by Bro. Dodgson in a most polished manner. The working tools were presented by the S.W. The W.M. again resumed the chair, and lowered the lodge to the First Degree, he also proposed a vote of thanks to Bro. Dodgson for his kindness, and the great trouble it must have been to him to come from his home in Ulverston at his invitation to attend and assist in the working of the lodge; that he spoke for the whole lodge in saying they were all pleased as well as gratified to listen to Bro. Dodgson in the polished as well as the sincere manner he rendered the degrees, and concluded by personally thanking him for his kindness. Bro. Wolfenden S.W., seconded, Bro. Conlon, I.P.M., and Bro. Heald, P.M., supported it, the latter remarking that the lodge was under a deep debt of gratitude to the W.M., for inviting Bro. Dodgson. The usual proclamations were then given, and hearty good wishes offered to the W.M., from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was closed according to ancient custom.

WIDNES.—Lodge of Equity (No. 1384).—The annual celebration of the festival of St. John in connection with this lodge took place on Thursday, the 21st ult., at Alford Chambers, Widnes, near Liverpool, where there was a good attendance of members and visitors. Hitherto the usual meetings of this lodge have been held at the Commercial Hotel, Widnes, and as this was the first important occasion on which the brethren assembled in their new Masonic headquarters, the interest in the meeting was all the greater. Moving with the spirit which now fortunately characterises the members of lodges, which wisely endeavour to have the business conducted in specially appropriated buildings, the Equity has taken a step in the right direction, and there is little doubt that good will result. Bro. J. W. Wareing, W.M., presided at the opening of the lodge; and, besides a large muster of officers and members, there were present the following visitors: Bros. S. Tickle, W.M. 220; G. Parnell, W.M. 786; L. H. Kenerick, P.M. 573 and P.G.S. of W., Worcester; E. C. Cooper, P.G.S., P.M. 484; W. R. Wass, W.M. 758; Wheatheather, P.P.G.A.D.C.; J. Wood, 220; and G. Barton, 897. After some preliminary business, Bro. William Newsome was installed as W.M. in a most effective manner by Bro. J. W. Wareing, his predecessor in the chair. The following were invested officers of the lodge for the ensuing year:—Bros. J. W. Wareing, I.P.M.; H. S. Oppenheim, P.M., D.C.; W. J. Thomson, S.W.; J. White, J.W.; J. W. Carlile, Treasurer; A. Tebbutt, Secretary; F. A. Neill, S.D.; A. G. Kyle, J.D.; W. Holt, I.G.; W. Copland and J. W. M'Tear, Stewards; J. Foster, Organist; and Bro. Taylor, Tyler. Hearty good wishes were given to the W.M. (Bro. Newsome) from the brethren of about a dozen lodges, and letters of apology for non-attendance were read from Bro. the Rev. Dr. Hyde, Bro. the Rev. G. Holloway, Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.J.D., Bro. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., Bro. C. G. Moratta, Bro. J. E. Rayner, Bro. J. C. Lunt, Brother J. Smith (Wigan), Bro. Robinson (1035), &c. The brethren subsequently dined at the Central Hotel, where an excellent banquet was served by Bro. Fowler. During the evening's proceedings a valuable P.M.'s jewel was presented to Brother J. W. Wareing, I.P.M., in recognition of his eminent services to the lodge. A pleasant evening was spent, the musical portion of the after-dinner proceedings being greatly enhanced by the splendid singing of Bro. G. Barton, 897 (St. Helen's), one of the most popular local artists.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Israel (No. 1502).—The usual monthly meeting of this excellent lodge was held on Monday evening, the 18th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was a very large attendance. Bro. A. Jones, W.M., presided, supported by Bros. M. Hart, I.P.M., Secretary; A. J. Henochsberg, P.M.; R. Robinson, P.M., D.C.; S. Schonstadt, S.W.; Rev. H. D. Marks, J.W.; I. De Frece, Treasurer; S. J. Wareing, S.D.; S. J. Henochsberg, J.D.; M. T. Tueski, I.G.; J. Sabar, S. Amongst the members present were Bros. H. A. Tobias, S. Jacobs, S. J. Jordan, A. Hart, E. J. Hart, B. Woolf, H. Sagar, H. Henochsberg, L. Simmons, J. S. McCabe, M. Baum, S. Levy, W. Levy, J. R. Grant, E. Myers, A. Isaacs, A. Levy, A. M. Lyons, J. Franks, H. L. Stern, D. Gabrielson, J. L. Levy, A. Rabow, E. J. Fraser, and B. Levy. The visitors included Bros. J. Bowes, P.P.G.J.W.; T. Tunstall, P.M. 148; M. N. Blair, 815; T. Moore, R.N., 241; Dr. Bailey, J.W. 786; J. Hayes, P.M. 249; J. Hardie, P.M. 1045; J. A. Armstrong, W.M. 1250; and J. Jacobs, 724. The lodge having been duly opened, Bro. Jones, W.M., afterwards proceeded to pass Bro. S. Levy to the degree of F.C., in a very efficient style. At the conclusion of the business, the brethren dined in the large room of the hall, and during the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, several excellent songs being given by Bros. Isaacs, M. Hart, and other brethren.

HAMPTON.—Hemming Lodge (No. 1512).—The last meeting of this lodge was convened at the Lion Hotel, Hampton, on the 21st ult., when there were present Bros. J. Hammond, W.M.; Fox, S.W.; Jessett, J.W.; E. Hopwood, P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, &c., Treasurer; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, &c., Secretary; Hurst, I.P.M.; Ockenden, S.D.; Walls, P.G.O. Middlesex, &c., J.D. (Freemason); Kent, I.G.; Moody, A.W.S. The visitors were Bros. Court, jun., Assist. Org. 1502; Stokes, No. 2, Ireland. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. most ably initiated Messrs. Robert Bray and David Passworth, and passed Bro. W. C. Davey. The R.W. P.G.M. of Middlesex was unanimously elected an honorary member, and Bro. W. Kay, of No. 1326, was also unanimously elected as a joining member. Notice of motion having been given that the sum of ten guineas should be placed on the list of the I.P.M., as representing the lodge at the ensuing festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren partook of a collation, which was well served by the caterer, Bro. Murphy. The customary preliminary toasts having been disposed of, the W.M. gave "The R.W.P.G.M., the D.P.G.M., and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present." He said that the Masons of Middlesex were to be congratulated upon possessing so able and genial a chief as Bro. Colonel Burdett was universally acknowledged to be. It had afforded him very great pleasure that evening to propose that their R.W. brother should be elected an honorary member of their lodge, and he hoped that the members of the Hemming would have an early opportunity of welcoming him amongst them. This toast having been received, and Bro. Hopwood having responded on behalf of the Prov. Grand Officers with great warmth, the I.P.M. proposed in very hearty terms "The Health of the W.M." He said that he felt he could not speak too highly of Bro. John Hammond. He (the W.M.) not only did the work of the lodge efficiently, but he behaved at the festive board in a manner that charmed all their hearts. The W.M. in his reply expressed a hope that he had redeemed the promise he had made to the members when elected, namely, to do his duty to the Hemming, by endeavouring to further the interests of its members both individually and collectively. "The Initiates" followed, and having been duly acknowledged, the W.M. gave the toast of "The Visitors," coupled with the name of Bro. Stokes, who immediately responded by expressing his thanks to the members, not only of 1512, for their hospitality; but to the brethren of other lodges whom he had been brought into contact with since he left his home in the distant mountains of Wales, kindness which proved beyond doubt that Freemasonry was one of the most excellent institutions in the universe as it enabled those members of the fraternity hitherto, perhaps, strangers to each other, to meet on the most easy and genial terms. "The Charities" came next, and gave Bro. Hurst an opportunity of expatiating upon the great merits of those excellent institutions, and to express a hope that the particular charity which he intended to represent would be well supported by his brethren of the Hemming Lodge. "The Past Masters" and "The Officers" brought the list of toasts to a conclusion. During the proceedings Bros. Hammond, Hurst, Jessett, Wales, Knowles, and others entertained the brethren, who separated at a comparatively early hour until the third Thursday in the ensuing month.

INSTRUCTION.

ELEANOR LODGE (No. 1707).—At a meeting held at the Angel Hotel, Edmonton, on Wednesday, the 20th ult., the Fifteen Sections were worked at this lodge of instruction by the following brethren:—Bros. Turquand, P.M. 1556, W.M.; Pinder, P.M. 15 and 1662, S.W.; Christian, W.M. 1662, J.W.; Tanner, W.M. 1707, I.P.M.; Garnett, J.D.; Rumsey, I.G. First Lecture: First Section, Bro. Hunt, 1662; Second Section, Bro. Pringle, 781; Third Section, Bro. Francis, S.D. 1685; Fourth Section, Bro. Christian, W.M. 1662; Fifth Section, Bro. Killick, W.M. 1693; Sixth Section, Bro. The working throughout was marked by the proficiency of each brother who took part on this occasion. At the close, Bro. Turquand was complimented (and that deservedly), for the efficient manner in which he had conducted the lectures, and as a mark of respect was elected an honorary member, as also was Bros. Pinder and Christian, who ably assisted him, and a vote of thanks was recorded to the remainder of the brethren. There was a good attendance, and several brethren present expressed the pleasure they had experienced in being present, thus terminating a most enjoyable evening.

LONDON MASONIC CLUB LODGE OF INSTRUCTION held their usual fortnightly meeting at (the club) 101, Queen Victoria-street, E.C., on Monday, 11th ult., at 6 o'clock p.m. The next meeting will be Monday, March 11th, when arrangements will be made for working the Fifteen Sections (at an early date), for the first time at the club. Members desirous of assisting in the work are requested to communicate with the Preceptor, Bro. W. Smallpeice, (who will act as W.M.) or to the Secretary, Bro. J. E. Shand.

Kenning's Masonic Cyclopædia is now ready, and may be obtained at the office of this paper (198, Fleet-street.) Price 10s. 6d.—ADVT.

Comp. Verry was presented with a P.Z.'s jewel, which had been subscribed for by the companions. The companions afterwards dined together, when a very pleasant evening was spent.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Chapter (No. 41).—The regular meeting of this chapter was held on Tuesday Feb. 19, at the Masonic Hall, Bath, and in the unavoidable absence of the M.E.Z. Robert Carey, Ex. Comp. Dr. H. Hopkins P.Z., kindly took the first chair; the second chair was taken by Ex. Comp. Hill, and that of J. by Ex. Comp. Hearne. The Board of Installed Principals was opened at 7.50. The companions were admitted, being F. J. Brown as E.; Hill, H.; Hearne, J.; Moutrie, P.Z. as Treas., Dutton, Walls, B. Packer. Comp. Williamson took his collar as P. Soj.; appointing Comp. L. Howes as 1st. A. Soj.; William Hunt 2nd. A. Soj. The chapter was then duly opened, the minutes of the last chapter read and confirmed. A donation of £5 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution from Ex. Comp. Thompson, P.Z., was ordered to be acknowledged, and a further grant of £5 from the funds of the chapter was confirmed to secure votes in perpetuity for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. A ballot was taken for the exaltation of Bros. F. Wilkinson and C. W. Radway, which proved unanimous. Bros. Jesse Hayward and James Stuckey were then duly exalted in the most impressive manner by P.Z. Dr. H. Hopkins, after which on their re-admission he kindly gave the Three Lectures connected with this Sublime Degree, in the most clear and solemn manner, to which the newly exalted and the whole of the companions paid marked attention, and thanked the Dr. for his kindness, especially as he was labouring under severe indisposition all the evening. He then begged the chapter to release him from further duties, and Ex. Comp. Moutrie, P.Z., took the M.E.Z. chair, presented the new companions with copies of the bye-laws, and closed the chapter in solemn form at 9.50.

BURY.—Edmund Plantagenet Preceptory. —This new encampment was opened on Tuesday, the 21st ult., at the Co-operative Hall. About three o'clock in the afternoon, the encampment was opened under the command of Sir Knight Clement Robert Nuttall Beswick-Royds, the Provincial Grand Prior of Lancashire, assisted by Lieut.-Colonel Birchall, Provincial Grand Sub-Prior, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers. The installation of Sir Knight W. O. Walker as the Eminent Commander took place, by Lieut.-Colonel Shadwell Clarke, the Great Sub-Prior of England, assisted by other Grand Officers. There were present representatives from many of the Provincial Grand Lodges of England, about eighty Sir Knights being in attendance. At the completion of the imposing ceremony, which occupied nearly three hours, the Grand Officers, Provincial Grand Officers, and Sir Knights adjourned to the Knowsley Hotel to a grand banquet.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The final meeting of the Stewards for the Festival of this Institution for 1878, was held on Tuesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Edward Cox, Treasurer, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Joseph Smith, President, presided. There were also present Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C.; G. Ward Verry; C. J. Perceval; J. E. Walford; R. B. Webster; C. W. Noehmer; Edward Terry; Thos. Huntley; T. S. Taylor; W. Hicks; F. C. White; R. Y. Barton; J. Newton; C. A. Merton; J. M. Klenck; H. Massey (Freemason), and Jas. Terry, Secretary.

Bro. Terry, after reading the minutes of the last meeting said that the Festival had been a great success, and that a much larger number of brethren and ladies attended than he at first expected. At first he gave orders to Bro. Best, proprietor of the Freemasons' Tavern to prepare for 350 gentlemen and 160 ladies; but applications for tickets came in so much in excess of what he expected, that he got Bro. Best to be prepared for 400 gentlemen and 200 ladies. In the end he found that his anticipations were correct, for 364 gentlemen attended, and 182 ladies. The total collections announced at the festival was £11,126 13s. 6d., with nine lists to come in. Since then seven of these outstanding lists had reached him, with a total of £230 additional to what had already been announced, making the sum realized by the festival above £11,350. He did not think the remaining two lists would produce very much, but if they were anything like the others, he might expect a total result of the festival something like £11,500. Last year the amount announced at the festival was £12,836, with five lists to come in, and when they had come in, the total was £13,320; but it must be remembered that this year they had but 225 Stewards, to last year's 272, or nearly 50 less. (Cheers.)

The Chairman said the first duty of the meeting would be to pass a vote of thanks to his Grace the Duke of Manchester.

Bro. Terry said that at the last meeting of the Committee of the Institution on the 14th inst., a similar vote had been carried, as well as a vote of thanks to the President of the Board of Stewards, to the Treasurer, and to the Board of Stewards. At that meeting the votes were carried by acclamation.

Bro. G. W. Verry moved, and Bro. R. B. Webster seconded,

"That the cordial thanks of this Board are due and are hereby given to his Grace the Duke of Manchester, Prov. G.M. for Norths and Hunts, for his great exertions in promoting the interests of this Institution by his powerful advocacy of its claims whilst acting as Chairman of the annual Festival held on the 13th inst., in which he was nobly supported by the brethren from all parts of the country, resulting in the magnificent sum of £11,126 13s. 6d., being announced on the occasion. That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to his Grace."

The motion was carried unanimously.

The Chairman said that perhaps the brethren would allow him to state that he knew his Grace the Duke of Manchester felt himself highly complimented by being asked to preside as Chairman at the late Festival, and he worked indefatigably in his province on behalf of the Institution. He believed that these efforts would tend very much to the benefit of the other Masonic Institutions.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., then moved, "That the best thanks of the Board of Stewards be given to the W. Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., the President of the Board, for the very admirable manner in which he has discharged the duties of the office, and for the kind courtesy he has evinced towards the brethren when presiding at their various meetings." He said he was sure no words of his were necessary to commend this motion to the brethren, and he was very happy to find that it had been placed in his hands to propose it. They all knew Bro. Joseph Smith, and were all witnesses of his kindness, courtesy, and assiduity on all occasions. He would, therefore, simply move the resolution he had just read.

Bro. White seconded the motion, which was then put and carried unanimously.

Bro. R. B. Webster moved: "That a vote of thanks of the Board of Stewards be given to W. Bro. Edward Cox, Past Provincial Grand Senior Warden Norths and Hunts, Treasurer to the Board, for the admirable manner in which he had discharged the duties of the office, and for the courtesy he has evinced towards the brethren."

Bro. C. J. Perceval seconded the motion.

Carried unanimously.

The Chairman said he felt highly complimented by the vote which had been passed, and he begged to thank the

Bro. C. J. Perceval said there was one motion which did not appear on the agenda paper which he wished to move. He thought they would not be doing justice to the host of the Freemasons' Tavern if they did not convey to him a mark of their appreciation of the very admirable manner in which he had provided for the ladies and gentlemen who attended the Festival. As a ladies' Steward he could himself speak of the excellent way in which the ladies were provided for. Everything provided was very good, and the attendance was all that could be wished or desired. He had been asked to express these views by several ladies who were at the Festival.

Bro. R. B. Webster, in seconding the motion said the festival was, in the way in which everything was done by the Tavern, a great improvement upon any previous festival.

The motion was carried nem. dis.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C., said there was another motion which did not appear on the agenda paper, but he thought that the sense of justice of every Steward would prompt them to agree with him that they ought not to separate before they put on their books, not as a mere matter of form, but as the sincere feeling of them all, a vote of thanks to all those connected with the Institution, who had shewn the greatest care, zeal, and assiduity in carrying out the wishes of the Stewards and furthering the success of the Festival. He would, therefore, without any additional remarks, move "That the thanks of the Board of Stewards be offered to Bro. Terry and the employés in the office, for the great zeal, courtesy, kindness, and assiduity with which all the needful arrangements for the late Festival have been carried out."

The motion having been seconded,

The Chairman said he agreed most heartily with Bro. Woodford's remarks, which embodied his own feelings, though they expressed them much more forcibly than he could have expressed them himself. It was a source of immense gratification to the Stewards that they had such officers to assist them.

The motion was then put and carried.

Bro. Terry said it was very kind of the brethren to have passed this resolution, which had come quite unexpectedly upon him. He certainly could say of his collector and of the clerk in the office that they had worked very hard, very zealously and assiduously in assisting him. It had not mattered to him what time he had asked them to attend at the office; he had only had to ask them, and they attended and gave him their services ungrudgingly and willingly. For himself he could only add that it was his duty to do the best he could to further the success of the Festival and the interests of the Institution, besides endeavouring to second the efforts of the Stewards. How zealously the Stewards had worked was evidenced by the result of the festival. It had produced £200 more than he would have contemplated, and he thanked the Stewards very heartily and sincerely for the efforts which they had made, and which had been so successful, as well as for the kindness and courtesy which they had ever displayed towards himself.

The following balance sheet was then read, received and adopted:—

The balance of £8 was unanimously voted to Bro. Terry, "To be disposed of as he thought fit."

Bro. Terry remarked that the item of £10 to Bro. Wills for decorating the large hall with shrubs and flowers was for the conveyance by waggon of these articles to the hall, and for the men's labour and time in arranging them, but Bro. Wills generously gave the use of the decorations free of expense, and everybody admitted that the hall never looked so well before.

Cheques were then given for the different accounts named in the balance sheet, and the final act of the Festival of 1878 was brought to a close with a cordial vote of thanks to the Chairman of this Stewards' meeting for presiding.

SWEDENBORGIAN RITE.

The Supreme Grand Council has approved and the Supreme Grand Secretary has issued proper forms for making occasional and annual returns of members in this Rite, which is steadily increasing. Bro. Samuel Beswick, whose work on Swedenborgian Freemasonry is familiar to most Masonic students, has been elected an honorary member of the Hermes Lodge, No. 8, London, and appointed Grand Representative at the Supreme Grand Lodge and Temple of Canada, of which Bro. Col. McLeod Moore is the Supreme Grand Master. We understand that Bro. Beswick has an important work in the press in connection with the true length of the Egyptian cubit and the proportions of the Great Pyramid.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

Herr Schütt, who has been dispatched by the Deutsche Afrikaische Gesellschaft to Equatorial Africa, has safely arrived in San Paul de Loandó, and starts at once for the interior to complete the work of exploration commenced by Edward Mohr, whose untimely fate was lately recorded.

The late George Cruikshank had, we are informed, made considerable progress with an autobiography, comprising his recollections of many literary men, commencing from a date of nearly 80 years ago. He had also executed a number of illustrations, in his well-known style, expressly for this work. We understand that arrangements have already been made for its publication, and that it will appear under the editorship of his widow, Mrs. Eliza Cruikshank, who had been assisting him before his death in the preparation of the book.—Academy.

The scientific world have been deprived of a most valuable servant by the death of Mr. John Mabey, to whom as a special compositor is owing the creation of a fount of type by means of which the results of the researches of coniform scholars can be conveyed to the general public. Mr. Mabey was also celebrated for the publication of the famous "Harris Papyrus" for the trustees of the British Museum, as well as for the manufacture of a fount of type by which the Cypriote writing was made known.

An expedition recently organised for exploration in the northern territory of South Australia has returned to Port Darwin, after tracing a portion of the course of the Victoria River, which runs into the sea in Queen's Channel, on the west coast of the territory. Mr. Sergison, the leader of the party, reports that on this river, as well as near the Fitzmaurice River, flowing further north, and on the banks of the Daly River—or Daly waters—which runs into Anson Bay, a fine country exists, well watered with the peculiar "creeks" so characteristic of Central Australia, and possessing very rich soil and a comparatively cool climate. The district explored lies principally between 130 deg. and 135 deg. E. and 12 deg. and 17 deg. S.—The Colonies and India.

The British Archaeological Association is expected to visit Wisbeach in the summer, and the Prince of Wales will probably be the President on the occasion.

GROSVENOR GALLERY.—We are informed that, in compliance with a very general request, Sir Coutts Lindsay has obtained the consent of the contributors to retain their drawings until March 15, and that the Exhibition will in consequence remain open until that day.

The French African traveller and missionary, the Abbé Debès, is about to undertake a journey across Africa, from Zanzibar, via the Congo, and a grant of 100,000 francs (4,000) has been made by the French Chamber in aid of the undertaking. The two German African Exploration societies have amalgamated, and the united body is about to despatch another expedition to the interior of Africa. It has resolved to devote its attention to the development of commercial enterprise in that continent, and calls on German merchants, manufacturers, and others to aid in opening up the country to German trade. The German Government has promised the sum of £5000 in aid of the objects thus indicated by the society.

M. de Flotow has brought two new operas to Paris for production this year. "The Enchantress" is to be brought out during the Exhibition, and "Rosellana" will be produced in the winter.

The Annual Exhibition of the Royal Scottish Academy opened on Saturday week. The exhibition contains 1082 works, and is considerably above the average. The productions of local artists show a noticeable improvement, and there are numerous contributions from London painters.

Wagner's "Rheingold," the first part of the "Nibelungen Ring," has been produced at the Vienna Opera with great success.

An Industrial Exhibition has been opened at Ballarat by the Governor of Victoria.

The fine reception rooms of the Government House at Bruges were completely consumed on the 20th ult. by fire, which is supposed to have originated from the over-heating of flues preparatory to a magnificent ball which was to have been given by the recently-appointed Governor of West Flanders, and which was to have been attended by the elite from all parts of Belgium and by the principal English residents at Bruges. The destruction of property is very great, including all the splendid furniture, plate, library, and paintings, which have been entirely destroyed with the building.

The Atkinson Free Library and Art Gallery at Southport has been opened by the Mayor, and the event was celebrated by a popular demonstration. The new building has been erected at the sole expense of Mr. W. Atkinson, D.L., at a cost of over £8000. In the evening there was a banquet.

The St. Gothard Tunnel is getting on very slowly as the work is just now very difficult. "For the last three months," says Engineering, "the boring has passed through serpentine rock on the north side and broken rock on the south, which has required the greatest possible precaution. The mean progress lately has not exceeded thirteen feet per diem, and up to the 1st inst., 321,108 feet had been perforated."

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E. Philpots, M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. Sent post free from the office of this paper on receipt of stamps or post-office order value 3s. 2d.—ADVT.

THE LANGTHORNE MASONIC CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION.

The second annual meeting of this association was held on Wednesday evening at the Swan Hotel, Stratford. Bro. Thorp presided, and there were present besides, Bros. F. Binckes, J. Terry, G. Jones, T. S. Taylor, R. W. Biggs, Bright, Medwin, Anning, H. Massey (Freemason), W. W. Morgan, Land, Cassleton, Mole, Dix, Tucker, Doulton, Claridge, Hollington, Proctor, H. W. Taylor, J. Hunt, Hobbs, Triggs, and Allaway. The report of the association for the year stated that the amount of subscriptions, £288 11s. 6d., had enabled the committee to have 26 appropriations of life governorships to the different charities as enumerated in the balance sheet, against 24 of the previous year, making a total of 50 since the establishment of the association. The following is the balance sheet:—

Bros. R. E. Baugh, W. E. Farrington, and E. Williams were the winners of the three ballots, and after these had been declared, the following brethren were elected as officers of the association for the year:—Bros. J. G. Stevens, P.M. 554, 933, P.Z. 933, President; W. A. Sharp, P.M. 49, 1228, Z. 55, Vice-President; Charles Lacey, P.P.G.D. Herts., P.M. 174, 1327, 1421, Treasurer; E. J. Anning, 1464; C. Ashdown, P.M. 1076; J. J. Berry, P.M. 554; R. W. Biggs, I.G. 1421; J. Boulton, I.G. 1056; W. G. Durrant, J.W. 1056; J. H. Guernsey, 749; H. B. Holliday, P.M. 1076; G. Levick, P.M. 1227; J. F. Proctor, J.D. 1421; H. N. Taylor, J.W. 1421; and R. J. Tucker, W.M. 933, Committee; and Bro. T. S. Taylor, S.W. 1421, Hon. Sec. Votes of thanks were passed to all these officers, and a special vote of thanks to Bro. T. S. Taylor. The brethren afterwards sat down to an excellent supper, after which the customary toasts were proposed. A letter was first read from Bro. J. G. Stevens, who was unable to be present on account of illness, but wishing the Association every success, and the brethren a happy evening. Bro. W. A. Sharp presided in his absence, and in proposing "Success to the Langthorne Masonic Charitable Association," said the Association was originally suggested and brought into due form by Bro. T. S. Taylor for the purpose of enabling brethren to become life governors of the various Masonic Charities. Two of these institutions were, he was happy to say, represented that evening by Bros. Binckes and Terry, and he was sorry that the Secretary of the other institution was not also present; more especially was he sorry that illness was the cause of his absence. He (Bro. Sharp) remembered that some ten or eleven years ago, when he was a member of a Lodge of Instruction, under the Charter of the Victoria Lodge, and meeting at the George, Aldermanbury, when he suggested to some few of its members the propriety of forming an association identical with the present; the idea was supported strongly, and his motion to that effect carried at one meeting; but at a subsequent result, it was coughed and laughed down and ridiculed. Some of the brethren designated it a goose club; but from the success of this association he was able to say now that those brethren who opposed his proposition were the geese. After some years the present association was brought forward by Bro. Taylor, and it had met with very great success. To his unwearied exertions that success was due. Had they not had a man who was not to be put down, ridiculed, and coughed down, and laughed at, this association might have been treated in the same way as the association which he (Bro. Sharp) had suggested. In Bro. Taylor they had had a most indefatigable man, who had been able to gather round him a lot of friends, who had assisted him in making this association a success. In two years over £500 had been voted; and he ventured to say that but for an association like this not a fifth, perhaps not a tenth of that sum would ever have been given to the Masonic Charities. It was very well for people in the higher walks of life to say they could afford to give their five or ten guineas to this or that Institution; they did it sometimes, but by the aid of societies like this, members involuntarily parted with their money, and found themselves at the end of four years—sometimes much earlier—life-governors of some of the Institutions. The Langthorne Masonic Charitable Association spoke for itself, and saved him the trouble of explaining its objects. Its Secretary was deserving of the brethren's utmost thanks, and therefore he should couple his name with the toast. Bro. T. S. Taylor in reply rejoiced to see so many brethren present. As the chairman had referred to what he had done he might inform the brethren that certainly with 114 or 115 members it would be no light task to do the work of the association. Fortunately he had at his elbow a great many brethren to assist him. He then narrated how the association was suggested one night as he and some other brethren were coming home from the Doric Lodge, and went on to say that down in the East End of London such a society as this was very successful. There had been fifty ballots in this association, and they had £37 in hand. Next meeting he expected they would have three more ballots. Last month they had six, so that the association was going on well. The brethren had stuck to the society well, and they deserved hearty thanks. He was very glad to see two of the Secretaries of the Institutions present: the brethren were all pleased to see them, but they knew, these secretaries, brethren, did not come for nothing. For what their institution had benefited by this association they would presently say a few words. They came to support their respective charities, and why should they not? On behalf of himself he begged to thank the brethren, but for what he had done he took no praise to himself. He was well pleased to do what he could for the cause of Masonic charity. He had been Steward at the last Festival of the Benevolent Institution. That was his maiden attempt at a stewardship, but he took up £50 more than any steward at the East End of London ever did; besides which he was the highest of all the London lists. Bro. Hollington proposed "The Health of the Chairman." Bro. Sharp in replying, regretted the absence of Bro. J. G. Stevens, but thanked the brethren for having proposed his health. He then proposed "The Vice-Chairman," who he said had been a supporter of the various Masonic Institutions, and was now the W.M. of the Langthorne Lodge. He had condescended on the present occasion to take the vice chair: he had worked hard in the different offices he had held in lodge, and now that he had obtained the highest position he graced and adorned it. Bro. Hollington replied, and said that whenever the chairman commanded his services they were always at his disposal. He was the first life governor elected by this association, and he selected the Boys' School. He had, however, endeavoured to make it up to the Benevolent Institution by subscriptions.

The Chairman then proposed "The Masonic Charitable Institutions." These Institutions offered the best apology to a man who wanted an apology for being a Mason; The Institutions were represented by most efficient officers, two of whom, as he had said, were present. Bro. Morgan, however, would reply for Bro. Little. Bro. W. W. Morgan, replying for the Girls' School, said, that institution was well known, and when he said that it was founded for the education and support of decayed or deceased Freemasons, he thought that was a sufficient claim on the benevolence of the Craft in its behalf. He hoped that the brethren would rally round the Girls' School at its next Festival, and not allow it to suffer because Bro. Little was afflicted with ill health.

Bro. Binckes replied for the Boys' School, and remarked that for twenty-five years it had been his lot to travel over England to induce brethren to organise themselves to give a more general support to the Masonic Institutions. They were now enjoying an enormous amount of success contrasted with what they did when he first took the matter in hand. Associations like the Langthorne were enjoying great success. The Institution could now justifiably point with pride to 700 or 800 persons whom they were benefiting, and they had to thank the Charitable Associations of Masons for what they were able to do. Though he had endeavoured to bring about these organisations, by some extraordinary twist he was looked upon as an opponent of them. He did not know by what unfortunate misunderstanding of anything he had said or done that this charge was laid to him, for he had over and over again said that it was the best thing that could be done. These Associations were the means of doing a large amount of good, and he, as one of the Secretaries, was grateful for what they did. He wished them every success, for Freemasonry was increasing, and great strains were put on the Institutions. Those who were charged with the executive duties of the Institutions well knew how great the claims on those Institutions were. Speaking of the Girls' School, and thanking the brethren who had so gracefully alluded to the ill-health of Bro. Little, he said that the new wing of the Girls' School would shortly be inaugurated by the Prince and Princess of Wales, and he had no doubt it would be a very successful meeting. When the wing was opened they would have 199 girls in the School. By August the Boys' School will have 220 boys in it. This was a great work, but the brethren were not to think that the Secretaries sought any self aggrandisement when they appealed urgently for support. It was not on behalf of themselves but for the relief of distress. After alluding to an opinion held by a Past Grand Officer that it should not be considered part of the Secretaries' duties to go round to lodges and press the claims of their Institutions, he said that if they did not there might be some young members present who would know nothing about the Institutions. For himself he would be exceedingly pleased if instead of having to go so often to lodge he could have a quiet evening at home; but he felt it his duty to attend and to thank the brethren for what these organisations had done. These meetings were always pleasant, and nothing was more delightful than a mutual interchange of friendly feelings, and the knowledge that at the same time great efforts were being made to relieve distress. Bro. James Terry also responded, and referred to the fact that Bro. Taylor took up over £260 at the last Festival of the Benevolent Institution. He would leave it to the brethren to imagine how hard Bro. Taylor must have worked to produce this result. Tracing the large amounts given by this association, according to the balance sheet above set out, he said this showed that the association was a most deserving one. The Institutions had very much to thank this association for. He knew what the work was, having for eleven years been Secretary of three of them. In four years one of these associations paid in £4,080. In seven years £7,000 had been paid by these associations to one Institution, and if it had not been for them, not £1,000 of this amount would have come into the coffers of the Institution. It was all very well to say that you could go to a man and say you wanted ten guineas or £10; they could not afford to pay that sum all at once, but they would not mind giving it in small sums, spread over a long period. Bro. Terry expressed the great pleasure he had in coming to these friendly meetings, and believed that if the Secretaries did not do so the very brethren who objected now would be the first to find fault with them for not letting them know how the Institutions were progressing. Referring to the remarks of Bro. Binckes as to his constantly having to visit lodges, he (Bro. Terry) said that from the 1st Oct. last till now, with the exception of Sundays, and the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in Christmas week, he had not had an opportunity of spending an evening at home. He ventured to say that the Secretaries of no other Institutions could say the same thing. The Secretaries of the Masonic Institutions had to travel hundreds and hundreds of miles to their own inconvenience in discharge of their duties. Their attendance at their offices from ten to four every day was the minor portion of the time they devoted to the interests of the Institutions. The major part was given after the official duties had ended for the day, but if they had been successful in bringing the Institutions before the brethren they were amply rewarded. He was sure that when they were invited to lodges the brethren would very much regret to receive for answer that the Secretaries considered their duties were over at four o'clock in the afternoon, and that they must decline the invitation. He believed that if such a course were adopted the Institutions would suffer, and that the subscriptions would fall off at least one half. It was not their own comfort and convenience the Secretaries sought in attending these meetings, but the good cause which they supported, and he hoped and trusted that there were but few members of the Craft who thought the presence of the Secretaries was undesirable at these meetings. When he came to the East-end of London, he came among a body of large-hearted men who appreciated the services the Secretaries rendered, and he well knew that when the hour of distress arrived, if it ever did, he would be sure to find the warmest sympathy at the East-end of London. If there was any objection to the administration of the Institutions, it only required a representation to that effect to be made to the Committee, and it would receive the best consideration. The toast of "The Visitors" was responded to by Bros. Alloway, Triggs and Hobbs. Bro. Tucker, W.M. 933, replied for "The Committee of Management," and the toast of "The Press" brought the proceedings to a close.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of the subscribers to this Institution met on Thursday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Joshua Nunn, in the chair. There were also present Bros. John Boyd, Col. Peters, H. Massey (Freemason), T. W. White, R. B. Webster, Thos. Massa, Griffiths, Smith, Thos. Francis Peacock, J. A. Rucker, H. A. Dubois.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, a motion of Bro. Col. Creaton for raising the salary of the Junior Clerk of the Institution from £50 to £60 was carried.

A letter from Grand Secretary was read, replying to an application for the use of the Temple for the elections to this school. In it Grand Secretary conveyed the resolution of the Board of General Purposes, in which they stated they were unable to comply with the request of the Committee.

Two candidates were placed on the list for the October election, and the Committee then adjourned.

At the weekly meeting of the School Board for London held on Wednesday last, Sir Charles Reed presiding, Mr. Freeman, Chairman of the Finance Committee, presented the estimate of expenditure from March 25th, 1878, to March 25th, 1879, and gave an explanation of the principal items. The estimate for the year to be ended next month was £506,353 4s. 8d., and the estimate for next year is £506,305 18s. 9d., showing a decrease of £47 5s. 11d. The rate for next year is something less than it was during the year just ending. After a discussion, recommendations of the Finance Committee in keeping with Mr. Freeman's statement were agreed to nem. con.

MASONIC THINKERS.

By W. W. HIBBEN.

An intelligent member of the Masonic Fraternity, who ranks among the first of the Craft in the Queen City, said to us a few weeks ago: "Masons, as a body, are not a reading people." The expression was sincere, and was evidently uttered with reluctant regret.

We passed from his presence with the reflection that his assertion was probably true, notwithstanding the general intelligence of the body in business affairs, and in the general interests of the country. The conviction is doubtless too common, that the communication of the degrees in the lodge rooms of the Craft, is the chief thing necessary to make one a Mason. But however common this conception, the very idea is erroneous, because it tends to the building up of communities of mere Masonic automatons, who never know anything more of the Craft than that it is an old secret society. It is a pity that any such Masons are ever made and turned out upon the world as the representatives of the Fraternity. They misrepresent the true animus of its philosophic antiquity, and never learn the great mystic fact that no better foundation of fraternal and intelligent society has ever been laid than is comprehended in the moral teachings and philosophic principles of Ancient Craft Masonry. To them ignorance and indifference are most unfortunate, for these hold all such in the outer courts, where even Masters compare only with Entered Apprentices, and where they are never able to work, save where more competent Masters prepare the trestle-board.

To teach them to think, to act, and to feel, not for themselves alone, but for their fellow men, is the true Masonic philosophy, which makes known to the Craft the higher trestle-board—the grander and more noble work of the moral and social men, where intelligence distinguishes the good from the bad among the sons of humanity, and where the rewards of virtue add to the distinctions of life and give happier sunsets to its dying scenes. All men may not read, yet they should all think, for thought makes the great differences between man and man, and distinguishes him from the brute and from all lower animals. This, indeed, is an obligation which is imposed on us by nature itself, and we cannot ignore it without driving from our presence our higher manhood, and sacrificing the lifetime luxury of delightful travel through the mystic regions of what may be truly termed the Masonic heaven of light and knowledge.

If man had not been a thinking being, then it would not have been necessary to have placed in his hands any revelation of God or of himself. The primitive elements of his nature might have served him for all time, and he could have been left to run the race of his generation without an effort of thought or an act of morality. But this is not the animus of our endowment or the order of our being. We were constituted in the beginning creation's capstone—nature's lords—and to us have been committed the oracles of God, which obligate us to "read, think and inwardly digest" the Word of Life, and best basis of human civilisation the world has yet received.

To the intelligent Mason this book is the more valuable because he remembers that when he received his first ray of Masonic light the sacred writings were before him. The book was open for him to read, and the compass and square pointed him to the significant passages of truth which constituted his first lesson in the mystic philosophy of life. Here is where every Mason must meet us and have his memory refreshed; but, alas, how many stop just there! They go no further, only as they are led, as it were, by a cable-tow. They never learn to walk alone, and the obstacles in their way appear to be of their own erection. They bear on their persons the insignia of the Craft, while the inner man knows nothing, comparatively, of that higher life, where thought kindles its fires and throws the bright glare of its mystic effulgence everywhere along the corridors of the future.

To think, to reflect and to investigate are the manly duties which alone can elevate us in the world of intellectual life, and he who never enters there may bear physical affinity with our race; but he knows nothing of that sun that makes the higher, broader and more beautiful sphere where philosophy strews its flowers, and where moral and social activities find the true basis of their enjoyment. Ignorance and Masonry can never travel together; the one is light and the other is darkness. This lives by progression, while that finds its home only in the dullness of stagnation. The one demands the elevations of intelligence while the other is pleased to sit down anywhere and listen to the songs of idle pantomimes.

Every element of ignorance is anti-Masonic. The bigotry that breathes intolerance—the pride that makes distinctions—the tyranny that is cruel and oppresses the poor—the arrogance that inaugurates its own monopolies, and the selfishness that plants itself within the narrow confines of sectarianism, as well as the devilish nature that lives and dies ignorant of humanity and charity, are all anti-Masonic. The Craft cannot recognize them in any shape or form, and if any of them ever show their heads in a lodge-room, the spirit of Masonry vanishes like ember fires before the destructive avalanche. No, the very first element of Masonry is light, and he that will comprehend it and enjoy its beauties must become a Masonic thinker.—La. Advocate

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Dropsical Swellings.—Whatever may be the remote cause of collections of water in the human body, it must be prudent to disperse them as soon as possible. The readiest means of accomplishing this end are supplied by using Holloway's Ointment, to increase the activity of the absorbents. When this Ointment is well rubbed upon the skin, it removes all venous congestion, overcomes all mechanical obstruction to the free return of the blood and prevents the deposit of serum and water. Holloway's Pills likewise augment that absorbing power; they act powerfully on the capillaries through the circulation, while this Ointment acts directly through the skin. Both should be employed in dropsies and diseases of the kidneys.—ADVT.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The report of the North London Railway Company, adopted at the meeting held on Friday week, at Euston Station, Bro. J. Bancroft in the chair, stated that after payment of interest on the debenture capital, a net balance remains to the credit of revenue of £94,343 6s. 11d., from which the directors recommend the declaration of dividends for the half-year as under: First preference stock, 1866 (created 1861), 2½ per cent., making the dividend for the twelve months at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum; second preference stock, 1875 (created 1871), 2½ per cent., making the dividend for the twelve months at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum; ordinary stock, 3½ per cent., making the dividend for the twelve months at the rate of 6½ per cent. per annum, leaving a balance of £2812 1s. 11d. to be carried forward to the current half-year.

The annual assembly of the General Grand Conclave of the Red Cross of Constantine will be held at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Monday next, at half-past five o'clock. The banquet, at which Col. Burdett, Grand Sovereign, will preside, will be provided at half-past six.

Bro. Arthur Swanborough (Lodges 189 and 1319), will preside at the Twenty-Second Anniversary Festival of the Dramatic, Equestrian and Musical Sick Fund Association, which will take place at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's, on the 6th inst. (Ash-Wednesday.)

Bro. H.R.H. Prince Leopold, attended by the Hon. A. Yorke, Bro. Collins, Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Royle and suite, left the Victoria terminus of the London, Chatham and Dover Railway on Wednesday morning at 7.40 for Dover, and embarked at 9.30 on board the company's special mailpacket Samphire, Captain Pittcock, en route for Paris.

An appeal is about to be made on behalf of the family of that admirable official and much respected brother, Superintendent Mott, who died suddenly a short time ago. A provisional committee, comprising Lieut.-Col. C. H. Gregory, C.M.G., Mr. F. West, Mr. G. E. Collette, Mr. A. C. Simmons, Mr. A. Austin, and Mr. Wentworth L. Cole, has been formed, and it is decided to give a concert at the Royal Albert Hall, on the 1st of May. So many artists have volunteered their assistance in this good cause, that the committee have been compelled to inform several of those who had generously proffered their assistance that their kindly offers of help must necessarily be declined. Mr. Wentworth Cole and Mr. A. C. Simmons have consented to act respectively as honorary secretary and honorary treasurer; a working sub-committee has been formed, and the following gentlemen, among others, have been requested, and will doubtless consent to join the committee:—Col. Fraser, Dr. T. Bond (the well-known Metropolitan Police Surgeon), Sir James M'Garel Hogg, Bart., M.P., Mr. Walter Clifford, Mr. Arthur Chappell, Mr. Frederick Cowen, Sir Julius Benedict, and Sir Michael Costa. The Council of the Albert Hall have offered the use of the building free of cost, and that offer has been accepted.—Whitehall Review

Bro. F. B. Chatterton's complimentary benefit will take place on Monday morning next at the Theatre Royal Drury Lane. As the present lease of this noble theatre shortly expires, it has been thought by an influential committee, a fitting opportunity for professionally and publicly marking the estimation in which this popular lessee and manager is held. Many of the most distinguished members of the theatrical profession have offered their services, and we doubt not a most successful result will ensue.

The Medical Society of Antwerp has established a "black book" in which the members are invited to enter the names of patients, who, without sufficient reason, such as poverty or the like, fail to pay their bills. Doubtless there are not a few English towns in which a similar book would form a very useful guide to general practitioners.—Medical Examiner.

We deeply regret to learn that Mr. Chapman, for many years associated with Mitchell's Library, whose courtesy was well known and widely appreciated, has been struck with paralysis, whereby he has lost the use of his limbs and the power of speech. It has been felt that, under this severe affliction, the opportunity suggests itself for offering him a testimonial purse. Contributions, which are earnestly solicited, will be thankfully received by Mr. Mitchell, of 33, Old Bond-street; or Mr. Burrage, 45, Tregunter-road, S.W.—Morning Post.

At a meeting at the Mansion House on Wednesday last a resolution, recommending the raising of a fund of £25,000, for the erection of new premises on a central site, suitable to the growing requirements of the Birkbeck Institution, was adopted on the motion of the Earl of Northbrook. A committee was formed to solicit subscriptions.

The Stock Markets on Thursday were heavy at the close, and prices showed a fall all round ranging from ¼ to ½ per cent., chiefly upon the unfavourable Bank return, showing a fall in the proportion of reserve to liabilities of 5 per cent., to 42½. Consols closed ½ per cent. lower, at 95 to 95½ for money and the account, after being quoted 94½ to 95. At the Bank £16,000 in gold was withdrawn for South America.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. Major George Barlow, which sad event occurred on Tuesday last at his residence, 76, Colchill-street, Eaton-square. The deceased brother was a P.M. of Lodge 321, Past Grand Mark Master Overseer, a member of the 33°, of the Studholme Mark Lodge, No. 197, and a Comp. of the Royal Arch.

Reform in the length of ladies' dresses is being attempted in Vienna, where some of the principal ladies of the Court recently organised a ball at which short costumes were compulsory. Extravagance being another object of reform, all the toilettes were of calico, and the ball proved the most successful of the season. Calico balls are familiar features in England, but the innovation of short dresses for dancing might well be introduced into our ball-rooms, where the absurdly long trains of the present day are damaging alike to tempers, comfort, and pockets.

The study of cookery in Scotland was taken up with great vigour last year. According to the report of the Edinburgh School of Cookery, the classes held in the capital, Leith, and other towns for demonstration and practice, were almost universally successful, particularly the evening classes for cheap cookery, where in many towns the attendance varied from 500 to 700, and in three cities reached 1000. Branch classes were established in forty-one places, and applications for similar institutions have been received from all parts of Scotland, while considerable improvement in cookery and economy in the homes of the working people is reported from the district where these classes have been held.

The Newspapers published in the United Kingdom now number 1744—of which England claims 1352; Scotland, 173; Ireland, 141; and the Isles 19. Of these London alone publishes 336 journals, while the daily papers amount to 112, in England, 21 in Scotland, 19 in Ireland, 3 in Wales, and 3 in the smaller islands. The Press of the country has more than doubled in the past twenty years, according to the "Newspaper Press Directory for 1878," which notes that only 868 journals were issued in 1858, while the increase is specially notable in the daily papers, which now number 158 against 37 in 1858. There are now 839 Magazines and Quarterly Reviews published in the year, and of these 264 are of a decidedly religious character.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The following is the agenda for Wednesday next, the 6th March, 1878:—

The regulations for the government of Grand Lodge during the time of public business will be read.

The minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 5th December, 1877, will be read and put for confirmation.

The M.W. Grand Master will move:—

"That this Grand Lodge do grant the sum of one hundred pounds to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes for the assistance of the members of the Iguualdad Lodge, No. 653, in the Island of Curaçoa, West Indies, who have suffered from the hurricane which occurred there on the 23rd September, 1877."

The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master, will present the Report of the Committee appointed at the Quarterly Communication of the 5th December last, to enquire into the circumstances relative to the elimination of the name of the Great Architect of the Universe from its ritual by the Grand Orient of France for the consideration of Grand Lodge, and will move its adoption.

Election of a M.W. Grand Master.

Election of a Grand Treasurer.

Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz.:—

The widow of a brother of the Old Union Lodge, No. 46, London	£50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Mechanics Lodge, 245, Jersey	50 0 0
The widow of a brother of the Royal Athelstan Lodge, No. 19, London	50 0 0
A brother of the Strawberry Hill Lodge, No. 946, Twickenham	100 0 0

Report of the Board of General Purposes:—

The Board of General Purposes beg to report as follows:—
1. In the month of September last a complaint was preferred by the Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1558, Camberwell, against Bro. William ———, the Treasurer of the lodge, for falsifying the accounts, and detaining the books and papers of the lodge. Bro. ——— was summoned to attend the Board to answer that complaint. Not attending to such summons, a peremptory summons was directed to be sent to Bro. ———. At the meeting of the Board in November, in his continued absence, the adjudication was further adjourned, and Bro. ——— required to hand in his books and papers to the Grand Secretary forthwith. This order not being complied with, the Board ordered Bro. ——— to be peremptorily summoned to attend the next meeting of the Board. Brother ——— failed to attend this peremptory summons, or to satisfactorily account for his absence, and it was resolved, "That Bro. ——— be suspended, in accordance with the Constitutions, and the suspension notified to Grand Lodge."

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON, President.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 15th day of February, 1878, shewing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £4628 2s 8d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary for petty cash £75; and for servants' wages, £96 15s.

Report of Bro. R. P. Harding, Auditor of Grand Lodge accounts of receipts and disbursements during the year 1877.

Adjourned debate on so much of the Report of the Board of General Purposes of the 21st August, 1877, as relates to the Lodge of Benevolence, viz.:—

1. The "Lodge of Benevolence" to be in future designated the "Board of Benevolence."
2. The Board of Benevolence to consist of the Grand Master, Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, a President, and forty-five other members. The President and fifteen of such members to be annually nominated by the Grand Master at the Quarterly Communication in December, and the remaining thirty members to be elected by Grand Lodge from amongst the actual Masters and Past Masters of lodges, such election to be conducted in the same manner as that of the Board of General Purposes, but it should not in our opinion be a regulation that one-third or any other proportion of the members should retire annually.
3. The Board to elect one of its members to be Vice-President.
4. Five members to form a quorum.

Notices of Motions.

1. By Bro. Rev. William Tebbs, P.M. No. 285, Shepton Mallet.

Proposed amendments on the Report of the Board of General Purposes, in reference to alterations in the constitution of the Lodge of Benevolence:—

- (1) The title; the mode of working; and the nomination and election respectively, of officers of the Lodge of Benevolence to remain as now.
- (2) The Lodge of Benevolence from and after the end of this present year of office to be constituted as follows:—
a. All present Grand Officers.
b. One representative (W.M. or P.M.) to be elected by the W.M.'s of the lodges comprising each Provincial Grand Lodge.
c. As many representatives (W.M.'s or P.M.'s) of London lodges to be elected by the W.M.'s of such lodges as shall be in twice the proportion of the number of London lodges to the number of Provincial lodges.
d. As many Past Grand Officers to be nominated by the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, in December, as shall make up the number of "c" to that of "b."

2. By Bro. Robert F. Gould, P.M., No. 92, London. On the President of the Board of General Purposes moving—That Grand Lodge do adopt the recommendation of the Board of General Purposes with reference to reconstitution of the Lodge of Benevolence.

To propose, as an amendment, the addition of the following words, viz.:—

"That fifteen of the thirty members to be elected by Grand Lodge (as recommended in Paragraph 2 of the Report of the Board of General Purposes) shall be actual or Past Masters of country lodges, in all cases where such number of qualified brethren shall be duly nominated for election."

Letters and papers from Lord de Tabley, R.W. Provincial Grand Master for Cheshire, recommending the crasure of the Southam Lodge, No. 1054, Wilmslow, from the roll of lodges. Letters from the Secretary of the Southam Lodge, No. 1054, praying, on behalf of the members, for a respite for twelve months.

Application from the Royal Lodge, No. 207, Kingston, Jamaica, for assistance to enable them to build a Masonic Temple.

NEW LODGES.

The following is a List of Lodges for which Warrants have been granted by the M.W. Grand Master since the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge:—

- 1733. Sunbury Lodge, Sunbury, Middlesex.
- 1734. Trinity Lodge, Rayleigh, Essex.
- 1735. Carnarvon Lodge, Cape Town, Cape of Good Hope.
- 1736. St. John's Lodge, Halifax, Yorkshire.
- 1737. Winchester Lodge, Winchester, Canterbury, New Zealand.
- 1738. Lodge Excelsior in Khandeish, Bhosawul, in Khandeish, Bombay.
- 1739. Carnarvon Lodge, Gresley, Derbyshire.

A Special General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution was held last Saturday at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creton, J.P., Vice-Patron and Trustee, Chairman of the Building Committee, presided, and there were also present Bros. A. H. Tattershall, H. Browne, Major E. H. Finney, Griffiths Smith, H. A. Dubois, Col. James Peters, E. Spooner, H. Massey (Freemason), Thomas Massa, H. F. Thompson, Dr. F. W. Ramsay, and F. R. W. Hedges (for Secretary.)

The following notice, previously issued, explains the object of the meeting:—

In compliance with a requisition delivered to me, and signed by Lieut.-Colonel John Creton, J.P., Vice-Patron and Trustee, Chairman of the Building Committee, a Special General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, on Saturday, the 23rd February, 1878, at twelve o'clock precisely, when the following recommendation of the Building Committee will be submitted for adoption:—

"To sanction a necessary expenditure for the inauguration of the new buildings by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales."

R. WENTWORTH LITTLE, V.P.,
D. Prov. G.M. Middlesex, Secretary.

February 16th, 1878.

The Chairman said the brethren were all aware that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales had graciously consented to inaugurate the new buildings next month (March). The day was not yet fixed, but that remained with their Royal Highnesses. It would, however, probably be the third week in March, and it was necessary to make some preparation, though it would only be in a small way, for an entertainment. The space at the disposal of the Institution was very limited, and consequently no great expense would be required to be incurred. But there would be a certain sum expended, and as it was necessary to have the sanction of a Special General Court, this was the object of the present meeting, whom he would ask for authority for spending a sum of about £300. He would, therefore, ask "That a sum of about £300 be granted for that purpose."

Bro. Dr. F. W. Ramsay seconded the motion.

Bro. H. A. Dubois said he would rather as an amendment move in terms of the notice—"To sanction a necessary expenditure."

The Chairman said he thought it might be left to the Building Committee: it might come only to £100; but the Committee would take care that not a shilling was spent unnecessarily.

Col. Peters thought there should be no amendment.

Bro. H. A. Dubois assented.

The Chairman said he would move it in the words of the notice of motion:

"To sanction a necessary expenditure for the inauguration of the New Buildings by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales."

It was impossible to make an estimate at this moment as the Committee did not know the number of persons they might have present; that would depend upon circumstances; but he would be glad to hear anything that any brother might have to say.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously, and a vote of thanks to the Chairman brought the proceedings to a close.

Bro. Thomas Brassey, M.P., has kindly consented to preside at the Railway Guards' Universal Friendly Society's dinner at Cannon-street Hotel on Wednesday next.

Reviews.

"Freemasonry: the Three Masonic Graces, Faith, Hope, and Charity." By Bro. CHAMBERS I. PATON.—Booves and Turner, 196, Strand.

We have been favoured with a copy of this new work, and think it right to call attention to it. It is undoubtedly written, and clearly expressed, with a good deal of force in some parts, and of eloquence in others. If those of us who have studied Masonic dialectic writing are reminded necessarily, here and there of older Masonic expositors—yet for us in this nineteenth century the work has a good deal of interest, and we think that to a numerous school amongst us it will afford a good deal of pleasure and contentment. But when we say this we think it right to point out also one or two honest objections to the aim and scope of the writer, as we understand him. The substance and general bearing of this work may be fairly said to represent the Christian teaching of Freemasonry, and although there is, and always has been, a large Christian School in Freemasonry, and we are quite prepared to uphold it, under certain limitations, yet it must never be shut out that such teaching can only be subjective to the Mason, and can in no sense rightly claim to be objective. The actual teaching of Freemasonry is universal, as opposed to "limited" exposition, theistic as opposed to denominational; and while we have a right to recommend a certain school of teaching, as our understanding of the whole effect of Masonic ritualism and dogma, we have no possible right to claim for it the name of general Masonic teaching. That is the little fault we have to find with Bro. Paton's expositions. He puts a part for the whole, and asks for what is his individual view of Masonic declaration and practice, the assent and concrete embodiment of Freemasonry as a system.

Bro. Paton has been brought up mainly under the Scottish system, which has always retained a great element of Christian teaching, but in England, since 1813, the general outcome of Masonic teaching, whether in lodge or "ex cathedra," whether by lectures or lessons, has been on the basis of the best of all prayers, to accept an universal Theistic platform!

We may be right or wrong in such a view of the case, but we think it only fair to give a note of friendly warning, as we see a disposition among some to confound two things essentially distinct, the actual teaching by our avowed formularies, and the hopes and reasons and belief of a school.

We welcome, however, always free discussion, and are not insensible to the advantage to Masonic literature by the publication of this last work of Bro. Chambers I. Paton. No doubt it will be read by many of our brethren.

"Disappeared from her Home." By Mrs. FRED. G. PERKINS; Pennington and Co., 5, Arundel-street, Strand.

We have read this work with some little interest, as giving us an idea of the aim of a promising writer, and the tastes of the novel reading public, and while we can undoubtedly speak in tones of encouragement and approbation in respect of the general teaching, the word-painting and the descriptive powers of the author, we feel it to be our duty as honest reviewers, (and how worthless is a dishonest review) to offer a few humble remarks of deprecation and doubt.

We do not think, in the first place, that the "moral idea" of the story is a good one per se. Whatever may have been the wrongs of Mr. Warden, his deceit as regards his daughter is inexcusable, and the "tour de force," by which "horror crowds upon horror," is to our taste a great deal too sensational in every way. The very rigid teacher and mentor might ask further what is the actual moral of such a story? We fear that the reply must be very "nihilistic" indeed. All that we have before us is a life of deceit, a succession of deaths, a love story, and the faithful devotion of a servant, but under circumstances which are questionable as to prudence, and with associations which are unsafe, as examples to the young especially.

We think, as we said just now, that the episode of the faithful servant is very touching, but we are not quite sure that the young lady, charming as she is, ought to have left her home as she did. We think that the introduction of the first and erring wife a questionable proceeding, and the deaths of the two quite unnecessary, and far too sentimental. At the same time, in this day of small things, we must be content, as it appears to us, with the limited and the microscopical. We cannot expect first principles or sound theories. Ours is a very sensational age, and all we read, and all we have to run through seems with the marvellous, the weird, the grotesque. We therefore, while we seek in all kindness to point out to the writer her little faults, think it also well to commend her good points. The work is a work of much promise, and more readability. Its style is simple and effective; its language terse and true. When the writer has eschewed a little of her luxuriance of sentiment, her exuberance of fancy, we may expect a work of greater power, and more enduring effect. We are inclined to believe that the book will be a good deal read.

The date of the Oxford and Cambridge Boat-race is now definitely fixed for Saturday, April 13th.

Bro. John Derby Allcroft, P.M. 1659, will preside at the festival to be held at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate Street, on Thursday, May 9th, in aid of the funds of the Benevolent Society of Blues.

The next meeting of the Original or Primitive Red Cross Conclave will be held on Monday next at ten o'clock, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street.

NOTICE.

To prevent delay or miscarriage, it is particularly requested that ALL communications for the FREEMASON, may be addressed to the Office, 198, Fleet-street, London.

ADVERTISEMENTS to ensure insertion in current week's issue should reach the Office, 198, Fleet-street, by 12 o'clock on Wednesdays.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The FREEMASON has a large circulation in all parts of the Globe, its advantages as an advertising medium can herefore scarcely be overrated.

Answers to Correspondents.

Letters from the following will appear next week:—"Disappointed," C. Pulaski, "Truth," "John Yarker."

In the Freemason of January 5th, 1878, page 4, the letter headed "The Landmarks of Freemasonry" should have been signed Robert Laing, of Copenhagen, and not Verti.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

COLONIAL and FOREIGN SUBSCRIBERS are informed that acknowledgments of remittances received are published in the first number of every month.

It is very necessary for our readers to advise us of all money orders they remit, more especially those from the United States of America and India; otherwise we cannot tell where to credit them.

Several P.O.O. are now in hand, but having received no advice we cannot credit them.

THE NEXT QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

Few more important "Agenda Papers" have ever been submitted to the notice of Grand Lodge than that which we print elsewhere to-day. In the first place the Pro Grand Master will submit the report of the Special Committee with reference to the change in the Constitutions of the French Grand Orient. Without knowing anything about its purport, or recommendations, we feel satisfied of this, that it will be alike worthy the attention and above all the support of Grand Lodge. The adjourned debate on the proposed modification of the Board of Benevolence will attract, as it demands, the attention of the brethren. We say at once that we are among those who now are of opinion, honestly, that the present system is unworkable and liable to great abuses. What we mean is, that under the present arrangement the distribution of our Masonic charity is not made on principle, and with the best effect, or the soundest results. It is too often the case that a principle decided at one lodge is upset at another; nay we have known of a meeting where the same principle was upset the same evening, owing to the florid eloquence of a pleading brother. Hence our administration of charity becomes haphazard, so to say, is affected by the personal influence or the special eloquence of the pleader. Whereas, the true principle of administration of our charity would appear to be this, that we should have certain "standing orders" or bye-laws for our guidance, with a large margin of liberal interpretation, so as to avoid anything like red tape or a hard-and-fast line. But having said all this, we do not deny that there are some difficulties in the way of a change. We felt them once ourselves strongly, we cannot therefore conscientiously deny or overlook their existence in others. One of the main difficulties is the surrender of the privileges of the W. Masters. It is no doubt very great, and it is a good deal to ask of them, but as Freemasons we should enquire, is it or is it not for the welfare of the Order, for the improvement of our system of charitable relief? We would, therefore, impress upon our readers, not to vote against the change, simply because it takes away a privilege from the W.M., but to look at the question broadly and liberally, for the good of the Craft and for the better administration of charity. We venture to think, that any change should be alike modest and moderate, merely a modification, not an uprooting of the old system. We would keep the old form of the Lodge of Benevolence, and have the President and two Vice-Presidents nominated by the Grand Master annually. We would form a Board of fifty-two members, of whom thirteen should be W. Masters of the London lodges, thirteen should be W. Masters of the provincial lodges, thirteen should be Present or Past Grand Officers, thirteen should be Present or Past Provincial Grand Officers, being Past Masters. Thus, with the President and two Vice-Presidents, and fifty-two actual members, we should have a workable Board, with a certainty of a good margin of present members. This Board would have the power to draw up bye-laws, to be approved by Grand Lodge, laying down certain conditions of grants, and the like. It has been suggested that perhaps the W. Masters would be more satisfied if they were elected directly to the Board, so saving their existing rights. We could see no reason or practical difficulty, why the W. Masters should not meet once a year under the presidency of the Grand Registrar, and elect the proportion of W. Masters, metropolitan and provincial, to the Board. Grand Lodge would only elect the Present and Past Grand Officers, and Present and Past Provincial Grand Officers, being Past Masters. We note the amendments of Bros. Tebbs and Gould. We fear that the suggestions of our esteemed Bro. Tebbs are a little intricate, and involve a principle which there will be some difficulty in applying practically, as leading to an "imperium in imperio." We are in accord with Bro. Gould on principle. But we have said enough to show the importance and delicacy, and, we will add, difficulty of the subjects to be brought before Grand Lodge. We have no doubt that there will be a good attendance. All will be glad to hear of the flourishing state of the Grand Lodge finances.

BRO. THEVENOT AND THE "FREEMASON."

We published last week a long letter from Bro. Thévenot, with its translation, and we think it well to day, according to our promise, to make a few remarks upon it, leaving to Bro. Maskelyne to send his own reply, if he deems it needful, to Bro. Thévenot's letter. 1. With regard to Bro. Hubert, we have already given his own explanation, why he declined the unanimous re-election to the Masters' Chair, and do not profess to understand in what way Bro. Thévenot could find fault with our remarks. We have merely re-echoed Bro. Hubert's own words, if you like, paraphrastically, in saying that, disapproving of the past, uneasy for the present, and fearful of the future, he declines to be the W. Master of his lodge. We have never said that he has left the Grand Orient of France, or that any lodge has yet done so, and therefore Bro. Thévenot is fighting with shadows. We have simply asserted what Bro. Hubert himself has asserted, and nothing more. If Bro. Thévenot thinks Bro. Hubert's refusal to accept the chair of his old lodge is a matter of no moment, we entirely disagree with him. It is an act of much significance and importance, and cannot be passed over "sub silentio." 2. With respect to Bro. Marchal, we took the statement from the "Bulletin du Grand Orient," edited by Bro. Thévenot himself. The incident is mentioned, both in the Chaine d'Union, and in the Monde Maçonnique, as a fact, and no hint is given that Bro. Marchal has reconsidered his decision. He may have done so, as Bro. Thévenot asserts, but we could not be aware of the fact, which was apparently not known to Bro. Hubert, or Bro. Caubet, or even to Bro. Thévenot himself! We could only properly draw our facts from official documents. We may add, that in the meeting of the Council of the 24th December, it was also said that the Lodge of Nancy only continued in obedience to the Grand Orient on condition that the rituals were not modified. Is this condition also withdrawn? Perhaps Bro. Thévenot will kindly tell us when Bro. Marchal agreed to return to the duties of the chair. We need hardly observe that the whole matter of the recent proceedings in the French Grand Orient has been the cause of deep regret to all Freemasons in England. While there always has been manifested, on our part, the greatest good feeling towards French Freemasons, and while we have made the most charitable allowances for the difficult position of the Grand Orient itself, we had a right to expect that the Grand Orient of France would continue loyal to the sound traditions of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, and not, as Bro. Hubert so well puts it, degrade French Freemasonry to the "ruck" of a sect, in order to please a noisy and intolerant faction. As English Freemasons, we are, as all the world knows, earnestly and passionately attached to the honour and fair fame, zealous for the orderly and religious character of Freemasonry, and we should deserve the name of moral cowards or abject apostates, were we ashamed to acknowledge our unchanged and unchanging belief in T.G.A.O.T.U. Let us all hope that more peaceful times and a happier future are yet in store for French Freemasonry. We recommend all our brethren to read and to study Bro. Hubert's thoughtful and guarded words, as given in our last, if they wish to realize what is the present crisis, what the eventual condition may be of French Freemasonry.

THE ELECTION OF A NEW POPE.

The good old Pope has been consigned to his niche in St. Peter's, and a new Pope wears the Fisherman's ring and sits in Cathedra Petri. The new Pope is Cardinal Joachim Pecci. He was born in the town of Carpineto, in the Papal States, on the 2nd March, 1810, so that in a few days he will have completed his 68th year. He was educated at a college in Rome, and was admitted deacon and ordained a priest at the usual age. In 1843, when only 33 years of age, he was made Bishop of Damietta, and afterwards sent as Papal Nuncio to Brussels. Three or four years later he was translated to the archiepiscopal see of Perugia, which he has held to the present time. He was appointed "Camerlengo of the Holy Roman Church" in September last. His baptismal name he received from his parents after St. Joachim, who is traditionally said to have been the father of the Blessed Virgin. In the "Catholic Directory" for the present year his name stands eleventh upon the list of "Cardinals," and fifth upon that of "Cardinal Priests." The Cardinal Bishops are:—1, San Filippo e Sorso; 2, Di Pietro; 3, Sacconi; 4, Guidi; 5, Bilio; and 6, Morichini. The Cardinal Priests senior to Pecci are:—1, Von Schwartzberg; 2, Asquini; 3, Di Traetto; and 4, Donnet, Archbishop of Bordeaux. Two out of the ten cardinals above Pecci in the list of the members of the Sacred College are his juniors in point of years. The new Pope, we may observe, has four brothers, the eldest of whom is 86. The second has four sons, two of them volunteers in the Italian army. The third brother of the Pope is a Divinity Professor, formerly a Jesuit, but now he has quitted the Order. The Pope has also two married sisters. He seems to have been an able ruler, a zealous archbishop, and a good man, but not favoured by Antonelli, or the Ultramontane party. After the death of Antonelli, Pius IX. recalled him from Perugia and made him "Camerlengo," and he is now Leo XIII. The Italians seem to have hailed his election with much satisfaction, and everything seems to point to a "regime" of religious earnestness and common sense. It is said that the Ultramontane party are displeased, and wished for the election of Cardinal Bilio—not a bad name, by the way, for an unhealthy-minded Ultramontane—but we congratulate the Roman Catholic Church on their selecting the "right man" clearly for the time and for religion. We have always deplored the unwise and abnormal struggle going on between the Roman Catholic Church and civil authority and legislative enactments. It would seem, that Leo XIII. is wishful to make the situation calmer, and easier, and happier in every way. Two little facts are noted by the Times which seem to indicate a salutary change for the better. The one is—that "The Voce della Verità, a Clerical organ, in an article evidently inspired, highly eulogises the Italian Government and nation for the faithful observance of the laws of Papal guarantees, insuring the perfect security and independence of the Conclave. The nation and Government, it says, have worthily acquitted themselves of their duties to the Church. In another article, even more significant, the same journal moderates and reproves the excessive zeal of the Ultramontane Party. Such utterances from the Voce reveal an altogether new spirit prevailing in the Vatican. The other is, that a programme of the new Pope, bearing the date of the 10th inst., just three days after the death of Pius IX., and published at Rome, is addressed to the people of Perugia as a Lent Pastoral, and entitled "La Chiesa, e la Civiltà." It is a perfectly Christian enumeration of the titles the Church is entitled to put forward as a promoter of civilization, and the founder of a moral society based on the sacredness of the family, on the meekness, purity, and self-denial of the Christian character, and on the authority exercised by a Church modelled on the faultless type of her Divine founder. There is nothing aggressive in this homily, no allusion to the Temporal Power as a necessary basis of Papal independence, nothing whatever to which an English or German divine of the Reformed Churches could not freely subscribe." All this is very hopeful. There is one good story of the Pope as delegate which we must give to our readers, on the authority, as before, of the Times. He was twenty-seven years old when he was sent a delegate, or, as we should now say, sub-prefect, to Benevento, a Papal enclave on the frontier within the Neapolitan territory, at that time infested by a brigandage exhibiting all the features it now has in the provinces of Palermo and Girgenti, flourishing under the patronage of the petty nobles and landowners of the district. The Cardinals Pacca, Pedicini, and De Simone, who belonged to Benevento, appealed to the Pope, condemning the too severe and resolute measures by which the delegate was providing for the public security. Pecci fought the brigands tooth and nail, pursued them in their mountain fastnesses, and stormed them regardless of the complaints of the landowners, who stood upon the inviolability of their domiciles and domains. One of these, the most powerful, called upon the delegate, telling him he was going to Rome, where he had interest enough to remove him from his office. "It is very well, my lord marquis," quoth Pecci, "but meanwhile I will shut you up in gaol for three months, where I will keep you on bread and water with your friends the brigands." And he was as good as his word, and during the nobleman's imprisonment his castle was taken by storm, the brigands were all killed or taken, and the people blessed the brave delegate. We are not among those Freemasons, happily few, who think it a proof of good Masonry, to be always attacking the Church of Rome qua the Church of Rome. As Freemasons we have nothing to do with the Church of Rome, and if left alone, would treat it, as a great religious body, with proper respect on all occasions. We, therefore, trust that under Leo XIII. the ceaseless and childish "anathemata" against Freemasons and Freemasonry may cease, and that Freemasonry may do its work, and the Church of Rome do its work, without perpetual contests and angry censures. Hopeful for the future, we are glad to note the election of Joachim Pecci, Leo XIII.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

We congratulate Bro. Terry on the result of the proceedings of the last meeting of the Board of Stewards, of which we give a report elsewhere. Bro. Terry, as it will be seen, reports that £679 has been received, and £671 expended, and the small balance of £8 was voted with hearty unanimity to Bro. Terry to dispose of as he thought best. This seems to us to be the fitting sequel of a successful Stewardship. We only regret that the balance was not larger, and we beg to offer Bro. Terry our hearty good wishes, and we hope for an equally successful meeting on the next occasion. We are happy to announce that £11,300, in round numbers, has been received for the festival.

THE PRESENT POSITION OF THE FRENCH GRAND ORIENT.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

Having had my attention called to Bro. Thévenot's letter in your last, and his remarks on my humble words in the Freemason, I think it well to send you a few lines to-day, though I shall be chary both of your space—very valuable just now—and of your readers' patience. Though I note that Bro. Thévenot terms my view of the present position of the French Grand Orient "fantastic," he carefully avoids pointing out how it is so. I am afraid that my real offence in good Bro. Thévenot's eyes is that I have spoken the truth. It was not likely, a priori, that the Grand Secretary of the Grand Orient would approve of my letter, and I am only very sorry to find that so estimable and educated a Freemason as Bro. Thévenot is, does not yet see the position in which the Grand Orient of France is placed, "envers" Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, and where French Freemasonry is drifting to. Bro. Thévenot uses some words to which I feel bound to object strongly. He says that all "educated" Masons will realise the "fantastic" character of my words. I do not know who they are whom Bro. Thévenot terms "educated" Masons, but if Bro. Thévenot means that educated men will reject the fantastic assertions of an uneducated person, (as would seem to be the inference), then such a remark is altogether unworthy of Bro. Thévenot as a man or a Mason. But I forbear saying more, as I detest personalities and always avoid them myself.

I wish Bro. Thévenot would be correct in his quotations. I have used no words which he can fairly translate "sanglant injury," nor have I asked the question he gives as a distinct quotation of my words. The only passage approaching to it is as follows, which your readers will see is quite a different matter: "I am now simply arguing as a French Freemason on the 'dicta' of the Grand Orient itself, and I leave out of the case 'pour le moment' the heavy blow inflicted by the recent decision of the French Grand Orient on French Freemasonry." Where Bro. Thévenot finds many of the words he alleges I used in my letter in the Freemason I know not. Though I may be wrong, I see no ambiguity or absurdity in the words "inflicted by the recent decision of the French Grand Orient on French Freemasonry." Bro. Thévenot's argument that the French Grand Orient is a convertible term for French Freemasonry does not affect the "gist" of my contention, that by its recent decision the French Grand Orient has inflicted a heavy blow on French Freemasonry in the eyes of the Cosmopolitan Order, in that it has undermined its very foundation and placed it in entire isolation, with respect to the great majority of the Masonic world.

I do not see the use of saying any more to-day, except to observe that, as our old English proverb has it, "hard words butter no parsnips," so I, for one, am not to be deterred from expressing my opinion, though Bro. Thévenot may not consider me educated or reasonable, because I venture to speak openly and manfully, as every loyal and educated English Freemason ought to do.

Time will show whether Bro. Thévenot or I be right as to our estimate of the present position of French Freemasonry, and there I leave the matter as far as I am concerned.

I am, dear Bro. Kenning, yours fraternally,

MASKELYNE.

PROVINCIAL EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Your correspondent "P.M. Linc.," assumes to endorse my views when he advocates the institution of schools that are to receive the orphans of "one, two, or three provinces." I must, however, trespass upon your good nature to permit me to point out that a very wide difference holds between his proposal and my suggestion. While a movement that would satisfy the former partakes of an almost national character, the latter merely seeks to graft a little branch on to our own provincial tree, that has borne hitherto such abundant and good fruit, and which appears flourishing enough to afford support to another little cause. Before briefly stating the object in view, and the modus operandi, I must most earnestly repudiate any intention of interfering with the existing charitable agencies. I must also deprecate any allusion to the powers above alluded to in last week's letter, if by such term our provincial superiors are meant; for the scheme proposed has merely been presented to their notice in a crude form, and that so recently as to render it impossible for them to have expressed any decided opinion upon its merits. Their offhand support is not expected; their consideration only is now requested, and it must leave events to work out their own course.

The present idea emanated at that time when an important discussion was going on as to the best mode of showing our appreciation of the character and works of our late worthy neighbour, Bro. Dr. Oliver, who was, as the majority of old Masons know, the most prolific of Masonic authors, and a Lincolnshire rector. It was eventually decided to raise a sum of one thousand guineas to secure the constant attendance in the Boys' School of a Lincolnshire boy, who was to be known as the "Oliver Memorial Boy." The amount is now, or shortly will be, wholly collected, with a surplus to go to the Girls' School.

An amount of £200 was at that time in hand, and amongst the suggestions as to its appropriation was one to the effect that it should be set apart as a nucleus of a fund to perpetuate the memory of such a worthy Mason within the province where he had so ardently and so lovingly bestowed the result of his learned researches. In every community there are constantly recurring instances of the presence of the grim hand of death, and in the natural course of things we have frequently to call to mind the charitable intentions of our Craft that are so forcibly impressed upon us at our initiation. No more appropriate means of practically carrying out this object appeared adapted to the circumstances of the case than a provision for the orphan children in the province who were not successful in obtaining admission to the Schools. We as a province are proud to be able to enjoy the benefits of those Institutions and anxious to secure them, but it is not possible that our candidates can be invariably successful, nor is it well that advantages shall be confined to particular provinces, and with that view it was considered within the bounds of practicability to afford immediate assistance to orphans of a somewhat similar nature to that already rendered to widows or indigent brethren by the provincial benevolent funds, with this exception, that this relief should be permanent and increasing, instead of being casual. Thus, if a fund were raised sufficient to defray the annual cost of education of orphans at schools near their own homes they would in after life have reason to remember the good works of the brotherhood, whereas at present Masonry is merely a name to many. Several children might in this manner receive benefits who at present experience none, and the same chance of admission to the schools would be available as is now open to candidates whose friends are disposed to interest themselves on their behalf. Even if unable through age or insufficient canvassing to secure admission to one school or the other, they would be recognised protégés to the Craft equally with those who have received the superior advantages of the great charities, and would be the additional proofs of the goodness inherent in our principles. A very small annual contribution per member would suffice to provide this education, so small that I feel convinced the central charities would sustain no diminution of support, while for the sake of getting one of the orphans in, the liberality of the brethren would then, as it ever has been, be assuredly relied upon. So that the intention may be stated to be a contribution by brethren of a small sum per annum towards a provincial fund, to provide for the education of orphan children of the province at schools in the immediate neighbourhood of their homes until their election to the schools, or the time when an opportunity shall occur for enabling them to earn their own living. In this there is nothing antagonistic to existing institutions, nothing subversive of the landmarks of Masonry. Neither novelty nor originality is claimed for the idea, as the similar machinery is at work in other provinces. Priority was yielded to the Oliver Memorial. I now venture to think, that the suggestion thrown out in your leader of January 12th may reasonably be acted upon in our province, and with that view I pen these lines in the hope that our brethren will, as P.M. says, be "stirred up," not only in this matter, but in all others where their zeal may be flagging.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
A LINCOLNSHIRE W.M.

THE GRAND MASTER OF SWEDEN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

Referring to the communication to the Sunday Times, quoted in your most valued journal of the 10th of Jan., may I be permitted to observe that our Most Worshipful Grand Master, H.R.H. the Crown Prince of Denmark was not re-elected on the 7th of January, for the simple reason that, in accordance with the Swedish Rite, which is the system strictly observed in Denmark, the Grand Master, being once elected, retains his throne in the Orient, until the Grand Architect of the Universe calls him to enter that lodge where the light of truth shineth for ever.

Fraternally yours,

ROBERT D. L. LAING.

Representative of the Grand Lodge of England in the Grand Lodge of Denmark.

OUR CHARITIES.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your last week's paper I see a letter signed "Vice-President." My opinion is that every lodge, both town and country, should subscribe every year to the three Charities—there surely cannot be any difficulty in an arrangement of this kind being carried out; the Charities would not then require to be benefitted by the very questionable mode of lotteries, which we have heard so much about lately.

Yours faithfully,

M.M.

DR. MOON'S WORK FOR THE BLIND.

Dear Sir,—

Enclosed is a summary of our labour for the Blind during the year 1877. You will see that I have now adapted my type to 131 languages, and we expect demands will be made during the present year for many of our specimens not yet brought into use.

We have lately sent away a large number of books in the Armenian language, and are preparing a quantity to send to Japan as a present from Sir Charles Lowther. They will form the first Free Lending Library for the Blind of Japan, that has yet been initiated. We have commenced stereotyping Isaiah in the Swedish language, and the Pilgrims Progress in the Arabic language.

A large order for books has just come from Australia, where we sent a great quantity last year.

I remain, yours very truly,

W. MOON.

[We are much pleased in being permitted to publish this truly interesting letter. The Summary alluded to will appear in the Masonic Magazine for April.—Ed.]

COINCIDENCE OR DESIGN—WHICH?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Was Raffaele d'Urbino a Freemason? Had he passed the chair? Was there an analogous degree to the present one of I.M. conferred in his day? If so, were the s's and g's similar to those now communicated?

I must be very guarded in raising the question, remembering that I am an I.M., but the point, I venture to think, will prove not uninteresting to those who love to examine the history and antiquities of the traditions of the Order.

I have recently had occasion to make a close examination of the celebrated cartoons by Raffaele in the Museum of South Kensington—at least I believe they are there; they were formerly at Hampton Court. My investigation was made by the aid of good engravings, which are numerous and pretty generally diffused, and I wish, if you would kindly afford me the opportunity, to appeal to the brethren of the degree of I.M. who love researches in Masonic antiquarian lore, to inspect these cartoons, either in themselves or their well-known reproductions (there are seven of them preserved out of the eleven originally executed), and let your readers know, if you will courteously lend yourself to the promulgation of the speculations of the enquirers, whether anything in any one of the designs (for the reason I have alluded to above I dare not be more explicit, and, therefore, shall not indicate the particular one that has suggested this communication) recalls the impressive ceremonial when any one individual enquirer among the worshipful brethren was first qualified to "pass the chair."

The well-known dialogue recorded by Elias Ashmole as having been current in the reign of Henry VI.—"Are Freemasons gadder (sic) than other men?" is now generally regarded as spurious, but it is at least curious, if only as a coincidence, to trace within half a century of the assumed date of this concoction—a—something that exactly resembles—a—something else—if it be something else—in the degree every P.M. has taken.

The field of investigation is narrowed in point of date. Leo X. succeeded Julius II. in 1513 (tem. Hen. VIII. Ang.) This Pope commissioned the then already eminent artist, Raffaele d'Urbino, to design eleven sketches of subjects from sacred history, to be worked up and completed in tapestry, for the purpose of decorating the lower walls of the Sistine Chapel. The work was completed and the tapestry itself hung in its appointed place on St. Stephen's Day, December 26th, 1519. But previously to this the completed pictures, as cartoons, had been for about two years in the hands of the Dutch artist Bernard Van Orley, a pupil of the designer, for the purpose of reproduction in needlework. Assuming then that the commission was given one year from the accession of the holy patron, we get a limit to our enquiry of three years, or may formulate the question thus: Between 1514 and 1517 were the aporetta of an I.M. the same as those in use at present? Was, in short, what I allude to (and I hope that any brother whose views and conclusions of his investigations into the subject you may be courteous enough to allow to appear in your columns will be as cautious in his communication as I have endeavoured to be) the result of an accidental coincidence or of a design to manifest the possession of occult knowledge? Verbum sap.

Yours fraternally, S.P., P.M. No. 902 and 1491.

KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPEDIA.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I rejoice to think that your gallant literary venture is now fairly launched on the somewhat uneasy sea of Masonic criticism, and can only congratulate you on the completion of the undertaking, which has required alike time and labour on the part of the Writer, and patience and forbearance on the part of the Subscribers.

All will agree, I think, how well the work is printed and "got up," but I must apologise for many unavoidable errata, especially in the German words, which are an almost insurmountable "crux" to English printers to-day.

I am annoyed by reading that at page 428, under "Literature of Masonry," the reference to "Masonic Literature" is in vain. That is one of those errors which will occur in a work, especially when the "text" is arranged by letters. I also see that at page 311, under "Hiram" are the words, "see supplement." It was intended to have a "supplement" when those words were written, but the advisability of publishing the work made me at the last moment, (to save time, and to soothe the complaints of subscribers), give the idea of a supplement.

I shall be happy to receive friendly information of any slips of the pen or actual errata, and shall hope to amend them in a second edition.

In the meanwhile, I beg to anticipate, by this frank confession, all complaints as to possible mistakes and special shortcomings.

I am, dear Bro. Kenning, yours fraternally,

A. F. A. WOODFORD.

BRO. DESMONS' REPORT.

As many allusions have been made to this report, we think it well to give a careful translation of it, for the information of our brethren:—

My Brethren,—Your commission before studying the "Vœu," which has been submitted to its appreciation has pre-occupied itself with a precedent question.

It has asked this question:—If the study of the "Vœu" was altogether opportune in this year's Convent?

It has heard successively the delegates of the nine "Bureaux," who, by six voices against three, have pronounced the affirmative.

Each of these members has recalled the different objections which had been presented in his separate bureau. Permit me, my brethren, to make them pass rapidly under your eyes, and to follow them with the observations which they have raised in the body of the commission.

Take care, it has been said to us, if you actually suppress the article of your Constitution, you are about to separate the Grand Orient of France from all the Masonic powers in the world. You are about to isolate it in the midst of Universal Freemasonry. If you suppress this article,—it was added,—you will cause a mournful agitation to spring up in our lodges, and provoke even in the Grand Orient of France itself, a regrettable situation.

Lastly, if you suppress this article, are you not afraid that the declared enemies of our Order will profit by our decision to spread calumnies on all Masons, denouncing them to the profane world, as Materialists or Atheists?

And under present circumstances, must not this denunciation be injurious to Masonry itself; and above all to these noble and generous ideas which are its mission to defend and propagate.

Such are, my brethren, if I do not deceive myself, the principal objections which the partisans of the adjournment of the discussion have addressed to us. There is no need, my brethren, for us to say how unanimously the members of the commission have recognized not only the incontestable sincerity of these objections which have been submitted to us, but also the importance of each of them.

There is no need to say, above all, with what legitimate defence the commission has received the altogether fraternal objections of him, who for so many years represented the Grand Orient of France, and to whose indefatigable devotion the Assembly again this year has just rendered so striking and so legitimate an acknowledgment. Nevertheless, my brethren, in virtue of that adage which is our device for all

"Amicus Plato, sed magis amica veritas,"

Your commission, with a sentiment of respectful independence has successively studied each of these objections, and here is the reply, which it has thought its duty conscientiously to give to them. You fear, you say, if we actually suppress this article, the isolation of the Grand Orient in the midst of universal Freemasonry. But is not this argument the same which was invoked scarcely seven years ago, against the suppression of the Grand Mastership, which was made use of formerly against the admission in our lodges of men of colour, and against the representation of the High Grades in our annual Convent? Well, what has arrived nevertheless? Our Masonic Assemblies have not allowed themselves to be stopped by this obstacle which they were made to anticipate, and to-day our relations with other Masonic powers are, as far as I know, neither less cordial nor less extended.*

Besides, my brethren, I would say to those who from an excessive prudence, perhaps, or from the fear of seeing the Grand Orient of France too much isolated, reject this innovation as dangerous, I would say to them, I repeat; we are not either the only ones, nor the first to enter into the way we propose. Already in the Grand Lodge of Buenos Ayres, the reform has been effected. Already, the lodge which has been formed in Hungary has adopted a Constitution which is based on ours, but from which it has taken care to banish the article which occupies us at this hour; and nearer to us, lastly, the Grand Orient of Italy has adopted a like resolution.†

Therefore, be reassured, my brethren. Do not fear for our Order its isolation in the Masonic world. There are already intrepid pioneers who have advanced before us on this path. Be assured that we shall soon have numerous imitators.‡

Again, my brethren, you who think, perhaps, that this formula has been printed on the frontispiece of our Constitution for all time, you will not be, perhaps, slightly astonished to hear that it is on the contrary of very recent date. I had the opportunity only yesterday of running through the different Constitutions which have ruled our Order.

Well, do you know at what epoch it was introduced? There is no need of any kind to ask for that of the prehistoric times, or even to go back to the deluge. It was only in 1849 that we see it for the first time make its appearance in the bosom of our Constitution.¶

You see then, my brethren, that that which we ask of you is not a dangerous innovation, but purely and simply a return to a previous situation. But it has been said to us, in addition, do we not risk, in voting the suppression of this article, casting trouble and division in the midst of our lodges? It appears to your commission that this fear is chimerical.

If, indeed, the Convent of this year was occupied for the first time with this question; if without having previously considered it, this assembly, by an act of authority, and as if by a kind of "coup d'état," if this assembly, I say, suddenly decreed its suppression, I understand that we might be stayed by the fear of seeing trouble and agitation introduced into our lodges, but you all know that this is not so. You are not ignorant, that this question has been, as an order of the day for some ten years. You are not ignorant, above all, that this year each of our lodges has been invited specially to study this question, and that of the 211 lodges which have remitted the result of their deliberations, to the Grand Orient, two-thirds are favourable to the adoption of the "Vœu." Again, my brethren, that which could cause trouble and agitation to arise amongst our lodges, was the fear not so much to see this "Formula" suppressed as to see it replaced by a Materialistic or Atheistic Formula. Who does not know, now, that no one among us, by proposing this suppression understands making a profession of Materialism or Atheism?

In this respect is not every misconception dispelled from our minds?

And if in some lodges there still can remain some doubt on the subject, let them know that your Commission declares loudly, that in adhering to Vœu IX., it proposes no other end, but that of proclaiming absolute liberty of conscience.

How then, my brethren, I ask you, can the proclamation of such a principle, which is altogether that of the whole of Masonry, agitate and trouble our lodges? No, we have more confidence in them, and we think that, better informed of the true end to which we are going, those who still feel some scruples, and some hesitation, will finish by ranging themselves around that magnificent flag, whose tutelary shadow is capable of protecting equally all opinions and all beliefs.

As to the calumnies which clericalism is about to hurl against us, my brethren, we must expect them.

But do you think that you would escape from them, even if you did not accept the Vœu, or that you referred its consideration to the next Convent?

Ah! I fear much my brethren, that you only deceive yourselves on this point.

No, no. Our adversaries are implacable, and the fresh delay which we give to resolve the question which has been submitted to us, would have no result, be convinced, but to make them accuse us of joining fear and hypocrisy to impiety.
